—— covered their heads.] See note on chap. ii. 37.

4. Because the ground is chapt,] See note at Ps. cxliii. 6. The Prophet, by speaking of ploughmen, shews that he is speaking of the autumnal state of those countries: and if the cracks are so deep from the common dryness of their summers, what must they be when the rains are withheld, as in the present case, beyond the usual time? Sir J. Chardin.

6. — they snuffed up the wind like dragons;] They sucked in the air for want of water to cool their internal heat. Bochart observes, that the comparison to dragons or great serpents is very just; for Ælian describes these animals as standing daily for some hours with their heads erect and their mouths wide open towards the sky, and drawing in the air. Bochart adds, that the eyes of the wild asses are properly noticed, as being by nature extremely sharpsighted. But for want of nourishment these must fail and be exhausted. Dr. Blayney.

7. — do thou it for thy name's sake:] Deal not with us according to our deservings, but so as not to give occasion to strangers to speak evil of Thy name, to question Thy power, wisdom, or goodness. So God says, Ezek. xx. 9, 14, 22, 44, that amidst the various provocations He had received, He had still acted uniformly upon that principle. Dr. Blayney.

8. — why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land,] Thou that wert wont to dwell and continue among Thy people, why shouldest Thou now be as a stranger that passes through the land, and lodges there a night, and away? Bp. Hall. As one who, having no permanent interest in the land, is little concerned for its welfare. Dr. Blayney.

10 ¶ Thus saith the LORD unto this people, Thus have they loved to wander, they have not refrained their feet, therefore the LORD doth not accept them; he will now remember their iniquity, and visit their sins.

11 Then said the LORD unto me, [a] Pray not for this people for their good.

12 [b] When they fast, I will not hear their cry; and when they offer burnt offering and an oblation, I will not accept them: but I will consume them by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence.

13 ¶ Then said I, Ah, Lord GOD! behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you † assured peace in this place.

14 Then the LORD said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name: [c] I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.

16 And the people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem because of the famine and the sword; and they shall have none to bury them, them, their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters: for I will pour their wickedness upon them.

17 ¶ Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them; [d] Let mine eyes run down with tears night and day, and let them not cease: for the virgin daughter of my people is broken with a great breach, with a very grievous blow.

18 If I go forth into the field, then behold the slain with the sword! and if I enter into the city, then behold them that are sick with famine! yea, both the prophet and the priest ‖ go about into a land that they know not.

19 Hast thou utterly rejected Judah? hath thy soul lothed Zion? why hast thou smitten us, and there is no healing for us? [e] we looked for peace, and there is no good; and for the time of healing, and behold trouble!

20 We acknowledge, O LORD, our wickedness, and the iniquity of our fathers: for [f] we have sinned against thee.

21 Do not abhor us, for thy name's sake, do not disgrace the throne of thy glory: remember, break not thy covenant with us.

22 Are there any among the vanities of the Gentiles that can cause rain? or can the heavens give showers? art not thou he, O LORD our God? therefore we will wait upon thee: for thou hast made all these things.

15. Therefore thus saith the Lord concerning the prophets &c.] The ministers of the Lord ought seriously to reflect upon what is here said of the crime and punishment of those false prophets, who promised peace to the Jews at the very time their ruin was approaching; that it may be a warning to them never to flatter sinners, nor lull them into security; but to speak always with zeal and sincerity what God has commanded. And the people ought likewise to learn from hence to hearken diligently to those who declare the truth to them sincerely and without flattery. Calvin.

17. — the virgin daughter of my people] Those cities are called "virgins" which never came into a conqueror's hands. In the same sense the Prophet here calls Jerusalem "a virgin," because she had been hitherto under God's immediate protection, and preserved by Him from all attempts of her enemies: compare Amos v. 2. The dissolution of a government or body politick is called a "breach," by way of allusion to the breaking or disjointing of the limbs of an human body: see chap. viii. 21; Lam. ii. 13. W. Lowth.

18. — both the prophet and the priest go about] Or, wander "into a land that they know not." The priests and prophets confirmed the people in their corruptions and impenitence, thereby seeking to advance their own interest and authority: see chap. ii. 8; v. 31. To which sense the marginal reading renders the former part of the sentence thus, "The prophet and the priest make merchandise against a land;" and now they receive the reward of their prevarications, by going into captivity with those they have misled. See ver. 15. W. Lowth.

21. — do not disgrace the throne of thy glory:] Jerusalem is called the "city of God," Ps. xlviii. 1; lxxxvii. 3; as He was in a peculiar manner the King of the Jews, and this was His royal city, or chief seat of His kingdom: see chap. iii. 17. But the words are chiefly to be understood of the temple; and the Prophet beseeches God not to give that up to be profaned by infidels; the place which He had chosen for His peculiar residence; where He sat between the cherubims as upon a throne: see the note upon Is. lxvi. 1. W. Lowth.

Chap. XV. To the supplication at the close of the preceding chapter God replies by declaring, that not even the intercession of His favoured servants Moses and Samuel should divert Him from executing His purpose of vengeance against Judah, which is denounced in terms of great severity, ver. 1—9. At ver. 10, Jeremiah breaks out into a passionate exclamation, on account of the odium and persecution that was brought upon him. God reproves him for speaking slightingly of the Divine aid, the benefit of which he had already experienced; and threatens him with the loss of his fortunes, as a punishment for his sins, ver. 11—14. The Prophet deprecates the ill effects of God's displeasure, representing the cheerful readiness with which he had obeyed the Divine call, and the continual uneasiness he had felt in contemplating the melancholy subject of his commission, ver. 15—18. surances of protection and security are renewed to him, on condition of obedience and fidelity on his part, ver. 19 to the end. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, &c.] Moses obtained pardon for the people after their sin of making the golden calf, Exod. xxxii. 34; and again, after their despising the promised land, Numb. xiv. 20: Samuel's intercession prevailed for their deliverance out of the hands of the Philistines, 1 Sam. vii. 9: and these two persons are mentioned together, as remarkably prevalent by their prayers, Psal. xcix. 6, 8. But here God saith, that, if these very persons were alive, and in that near attendance to Him, which they formerly enjoyed, (for that is the import of the phrase "to stand before Him," see ver. 19; chap. xviii. 20; Deut. x. 8; 1 Kings xvii. 1;) yet even their prayers should not avert His judgments from His people: compare Ezek. xiv. 14. W. Lowth.

2. — for death,] It is obvious from the foregoing enumeration, that death here means the pestilence. See chap. xiv. 12. Dr. Blayney.

4. And I will cause them to be removed into all kingdoms of the earth.] Several Jews were carried captive into other countries, besides Chaldea; see note on chap. xxi. 14: others turned voluntary exiles, to avoid the miseries they saw coming upon their country; see chap. xl. 11. The words here are taken out of Deut. xxviii. 25; where Moses threatens them with a general dispersion over the world, which received its utmost completion after the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. W. Lowth.

6. — I am weary with repenting.] When God suspends the execution of His judgments, He is said to "repent of the evil" He had threatened; see chap. xviii. 8. This He had done so often, that He is represented as a man whose patience is at last quite tired out, it being to no purpose to withhold His hand any longer from striking. Compare Is. xliii. 24; Hos. xiii. 14; Mal. ii. 17. W. Lowth.

7. And I will fan them with a fan in the gates of the land;] I will toss and scatter them in all the defenced cities of the land, as corn is shaken and dispersed in the winnowing. Bp. Hall.

8. — against the mother of the young men] The nation in general is called "the mother" of each Jew in particular; Isaiah l. 1; Hosea ii. 2—5; or, as Lowth thinks, Jerusalem. Abp. Secker.

—— a spoiler] Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon is undoubtedly here designed. In the margin, the preceding word is rendered "a young man;" this would very properly characterize the same person. For Josephus cites from Berosus, the Chaldean historian, a passage to the following purport; "that Nabopolassar king of Babylon, hearing that the provinces of Egypt, Cœle-Syria, and Phœnice had revolted, and being himself infirm from age, sent a part of his forces under his son Nebuchadnezzar, then in the prime of youth, by whom these provinces were again reduced." This was the expedition said to have been undertaken by him in the third year of Jehoiakim king of Judah: in the course of which, after having defeated the Egyptian army at Carchemish, he laid siege to Jerusalem, took, and plundered it, carrying away much spoil and many captives to Babylon. See chap. xlvi. 2; Dan. i. 1—3; 2 Kings xxiv. 1. Dr. Blayney.

9. She that hath borne seven] "Seven" is put for many: and the multitude of the inhabitants or children of Jerusalem, the mother city, is here alluded to. Dr. Blayney.

10. — that thou hast borne me a man of strife &c.] The Prophet here complains of the opposition he met with from his countrymen, for speaking unwelcome truths, which had occasioned him so much uneasiness, as if he had engaged in the most invidious of all occupations, and the most likely to engender strife, that of lending and borrowing upon usury. Dr. Blayney.

The Jews were forbidden to take usury of their brethren, Deut. xxiii. 19; especially of the poor, Exod. xxii. 25; which was thought so great an oppression, that it made the man who was guilty of it hated and cursed by every one. The Prophet saith, this was just his own case, every body was his enemy for delivering those messages which he had received from God. W. Lowth.

should escape the evils coming upon the Jewish nation when the "residue of them should be delivered to the sword," ver. 9. W. Lowth.

12. Shall iron break the northern iron and the steel?] The meaning probably is, Shall the enemy crush or overpower one whom I have made like the hardest iron or brass? alluding to what God said to the Prophet when He first engaged him in His service, chap. i. 18. "Iron from the north" is perhaps justly supposed to denote, in a primary sense, that species of hardened iron, or steel, called in Greek Chalybs, from the Chalybes, a people bordering on the Euxine sea, and consequently lying to the north of Judea, by whom the art of tempering steel is said to have been discovered. Strabo speaks of this people as being known in former times by the name of the Chalybes, but afterwards called Chaldæi; and mentions their iron mines. These however were a different people from the Chaldeans, who were united with the Babylonians. Dr. Blayney.

13. — without price,] That is, not making thee any compensation, but inflicting these losses upon thee as a punishment for thy sins. Dr. Blayney.

15. — take me not away in thy longsuffering:] The sense may be, according to our old version, "take me not away in the continuance of Thine anger:" the Prophet seeming to think, that, during a long course of God's anger against His people, he himself, however innocent, might naturally be involved in those sufferings, which were intended for the punishment of the guilty. Dr. Blayney.

16. Thy words were found, and I did eat them;] As soon as I received or understood Thy word, and the messages Thou didst deliver to me, I treasured them up in my memory; I meditated upon them, and did inwardly digest them. It was a pleasure to me to think, I should be an instrument of conveying Thy commands to my brethren, and that I should have the honour of being called Thy prophet or messenger. The receiving of God's word, by which the soul is nourished, is elsewhere compared to corporeal food: see Ezek. iii. 1, 3; Rev. x, 9; Is. lv. 1, 2; Amos viii. 11; John vi. 27. W. Lowth.

17. I sat not in the assembly of the mockers,] The word translated "mockers" is more properly rendered "them that make merry," chap. xxx. 19; xxxi. 4. In the preceding verse the Prophet had declared, that he had felt great satisfaction at first on being appointed to the office of God's messenger. But his joy was not of long continuance; the tenour of his commission was such as to affect him, like St. Paul, and much upon the same account, with "great heaviness and continual sorrow of heart," Rom. ix. 1. so that, renouncing all cheerful society, he indulged a solitary melancholy, in prospect of the dire effects of God's indignation against his unhappy country. Dr. Blayney.

God's judgments, as they were represented to the Prophet often raised such dreadful ideas in their mind, as to affect them on an extraordinary manner, especially if their threatenings concerned their own country, or the church of God: see chap. xxiii. 9. Ezek. iii. 14; Dan. vii. 28; Hab. iii. 2, 16. W. Lowth.

—— because of thy hand.] God's hand may be understood either of His judgments, which, being denounced by the Prophet, might be compared to a "hand" stretched out, and just ready to strike: or else of the prophetical impulse, which was strong upon Jeremiah, and in a manner forced him to be the messenger of evil tidings: compare 2 Kings iii. 15; Is. viii. 11; Ezek. i. 3; iii. 14. W. Lowth.

18. — wilt thou be altogether unto me as a liar,] The words might be better translated, "Wilt Thou be altogether unto me as a disappointment, and as waters that fail?" namely, that dry up and disappoint the thirsty traveller. The Prophet means, that God had in a manner deserted him for a time, had left him to struggle with difficulties unforeseen or unexpected, thereby disappointing in some measure his hopes of better success. Presently however, as if he had said too much, he corrects himself, and expresses his entire confidence in the Divine promises to support and strengthen him. See ver. 19—21. Dr. Waterland.

—— as waters that fail?] Compare Job vi. 15.

19. — If thou return, then will I bring thee again, &c.] If thou bethink thyself of this thine impatience, and of thy too great regard to this murmuring and disobedient people, I will so confirm thee that they shall be forced to acknowledge thee My faithful servant: and, if thou do wisely make difference betwixt erroneous doctrine and the truth, and betwixt godly and profane persons, then will I admit thee to be My mouth unto My people: do not thou give way to them in their vicious courses; but let them, if it may be, come in to thee. Bp. Hall.

Chap. XVI. The prophecy, which begins here, is continued to the end of the 18th verse of the next chapter. It may have been delivered, as well as those of the preceding chapters, towards the beginning of Jehoiakim's evil reign.

The Prophet is forbidden to marry or beget children, because of the judgments that were about to fall upon all the inhabitants of the land, both old and young, ver. 1—4. For the like reasons he is desired not to join with any of his neighbours either in their mourning or in their convivial mirth, ver. 5—9. He shews, that their calamities were the effect of their apostacy and disobedience, for which God would drive them into exile, and give them no quarter, till He had fully requited their wickedness, ver. 10—13. But their future restoration is immediately foretold, ver. 14, 15; as is also the conversion of the Gentiles, ver. 19—21. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 6. — neither shall men lament for them,] The thoughts of men shall be wholly taken up with bewailing themselves: their own calamities shall be so great, they shall be unconcerned for the misfortunes of others. W. Lowth.

—— nor cut themselves, nor make themselves bald] See the notes on the places referred to in the margin.

7. Neither shall men tear themselves for them in mourning,] If this translation be correct, it is only a repetition of what went before. The translation in the margin, "neither shall men break bread for them," is much to be preferred. As to the custom alluded to, see the note on 2 Sam. iii. 35. To this custom the writer of the book of Tobit refers, when, amongst other good exhortations to his son, he directs him to "pour out his bread on the burial of the just," Tobit iv. 17. Sir J. Chardin tells us, that "the oriental Christians still make banquets of the same kind, by a custom derived from the Jews; and that healths were also drunk to the survivors of the family." These latter meant, no doubt, or were taken from, "the cup of consolation." In like manner he explains (as many other commentators have also done) "the bread of men," mentioned Ezek. xxiv. 17, as signifying "the bread of others;" the bread sent to mourners; the bread that the neighbours, friends, and relations sent. Dr. Blayney.

13. —there shall ye serve other gods] The opportunities of frequenting the publick worship of the true God shall be taken from you, as a just judgment for your neglect of His service in your own country; and you shall be exposed to the peril of committing idolatry, and being seduced by the Chaldeans to the worship of their idols. Compare Deut. iv. 28; xxviii. 36; 1 Sam. xxvi. 19. W. Lowth.

14. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord,] The particle, rendered "therefore," sometimes signifies "nevertheless;" (W. Lowth.) here it seems more properly to signify, "after this." Dr. Blayney.

God here gives the people notice of a future restoration, on purpose to guard them during their exile from falling into idolatry through despair, by letting them see they had still a prospect of recovering God's wonted favour and protection. Dr. Blayney.

—— it shall no more be said, The Lord liveth"&c.] The days come, wherein God shall not be celebrated so much by the memory of His deliverance of His people out of Egypt, which was long since done; as by the fresh remembrance of the great mercy, which He hath wrought for them, in bringing them back from their captivity in Babylon, and in all those lands whither they were driven. Bp. Hall.

3 O my mountain in the field, [c] I will give thy substance and all thy treasures to [c] Chap. 15. 13.

16. Behold, I will send for many fishers, &c.] But, in the mean time, their desolation shall be grievous and universal: I will call for the Chaldeans, who shall be as so many fishers, to drag them out of their good land; and as so many hunters, to chase them from their houses, and to drive them from all their refuges. Bp. Hall.

Enemies and oppressors are elsewhere represented under the metaphors of "fishers" and "hunters:" see Gen. x. 9; Amos iv. 2; Hab. i. 14, 15: because they use all the methods of open force and secret wiles, frequently compared to nets, in order to make men their prey: see Ezek. xii. 13; Hos. v. 1. These two similitudes imply, that the Chaldeans shall make an entire conquest and booty of the whole land, of its inhabitants and their riches; and what shall escape one party, shall fall into the hands of another. W. Lowth.

18. — I will recompense their iniquity — double;] Not double of what they deserved, but double of what, that is, much greater than, would have been inflicted on the heathen for the like offences. Compare Rev. xviii. 6. Parkhurst. See the note on Is. xl. 2.

—— with the carcases of their detestable and abominable things.] With the carcases of their abominable sacrifices, which they have made to their idols; and with those very shameful idols, to which they have sacrificed. Bp. Holt. Idols are elsewhere called "carcases," not only because they are without life, but also because of their filthiness and hatefulness in the eyes of God: see Lev. xxvi. 30; Ezek. xliii. 7, 9. W. Lowth.

19. O Lord, — the Gentils shall come unto thee &c.] The more emphatically to demonstrate the absurdity of forsaking the true God, and apostatizing to idolatry, the Prophet foretells, that the time will come when the Gentiles shall be ashamed of the idolatry of which they and their forefathers have been so long guilty, shall humbly confess this their sin, and address themselves in all their wants to the true God, as their only refuge and protection. W. Lowth.

20. Shall a man make gods unto himself, and they are no gods?] This seems to be a reply from God, accounting for what was said before, that the heathens had no benefit from the objects in which they placed their religious confidence, by asking whether it was likely that men could create gods, giving them power and perfections, which they had not in themselves? Dr. Blayney.

21. Therefore, behold, I will this once cause them to know,] The phrase, which our translation renders "this once," may be translated "at this time," as it is 2 Sam. xvii. 7. If we understand the verse of the Gentiles, mentioned in the foregoing verse, the sense is, that God will, at the time foretold, ver. 19, exert His power in an extraordinary manner for their conversion: compare Isai. lii. 10. If we apply the words to the Jews, they import, that He will manifest His power, in bringing upon them all the evils already threatened against them, and they should know that He is the LORD, the fulfiller of all His threatenings, as well as a performer of His promises. Compare Ezek. vi. 7; xii. 20; xxiv. 24, 27. W. Lowth. See the note on Exod. vi. 3.

Chap. XVII. In this chapter the Prophet describes in the first verses the attachment of Judah to idolatry, and foretelleth the fatal consequences. He contrasteth the accursed condition of him, who resteth his trust on man, with the blessedness of one, that trusteth in God; and illustrates both by apt comparisons, ver. 5—8. He sheweth, that, be the human heart ever so wily, God can detect, and will finally punish, its double-dealing, ver. 9—11. He acknowledgeth, that sure salvation cometh from God and from Him only, ver. 12—14. And, complaining of those that scoffed at his predictions, he prayeth for the Divine countenance and support against them, ver. 15—18.

The remaining part of the chapter is taken up with a distinct prophecy relative to the strict observance of the sabbath day; which the Prophet was sent, most probably immediately after the delivery of the foregoing, to proclaim aloud, in all the gates of Jerusalem, as a matter which concerned the conduct of every individual, and the general happiness of the whole. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — with a pen of iron, and with the point of a diamond.] This is spoken metaphorically, and is meant to denote that idolatry was indelibly fixed in their affections and memory, as much as if it had been engraved with instruments, capable of making the strongest and most durable impression, upon their hearts, as upon a writing tables, and upon their altars, so as to be for ever present before their eyes. Compare Deut. xi. 18—20; Prov. iii. 3; vii. 3. Dr. Blayney.

3. O my mountain in the field, I will give thy substance &c.] Rather, "O My mountain, I will give thy substance in the field," &c. Nations and princes of great power and eminence are figuratively called "mountains," in regard to their strength and elevation: see chap. li. 25; Isa. xli. 15; Zech. iv. 7. Judah is there-

6. — he shall be like the heath &c.] That man shall be like the heath in a dry wilderness, that shall not partake of the sweet showers when they fall. Bp. Hall.

—— in a salt land] Saltness in Hebrew expresses barren ground; see Deut. xxix 23; Ps. cvii. 34; Zeph. ii. 9. W. Lowth.

The borders of the Dead sea, and of the Red sea, and part of Arabia Petræa, were barren from containing a quantity of various salts. Calmet.

9. The heart is deceitful above all things, &c.] The words were spoken by Jeremiah concerning his own countrymen, not all of them, probably, but the more corrupted part of the nation, who to their other vices had added a consummate hypocrisy; and of the hearts of these men he draws a most hideous picture, and describes them under three bad characters. The first is fraud and treachery: "the heart is deceitful above all things." The second is excessive malice: it is "desperately wicked." The third is deep dissimulation and hypocrisy, expressed in the way of question, "who can know it?" A worse representation than this can hardly be made of any creature: and therefore it must not be supposed that this was intended to be a description of human nature, or of the heart of man in general, but rather of the most habitual and depraved sort of sinners. Dr. Jortin.

—— who can know it?] The meaning is, that the wicked intentions of bad men are so covered over with fair appearances, that none but God can see through the disguise, as it follows in the next verse, "I the Lord search the heart." Abp. Sharp.

10. I the Lord search the heart, I try the reins,] Signifying, the most secret thoughts and motions of the soul: these God is said to "search" and "try," not as if it were a work of labour and difficulty to the Divine knowledge to penetrate the hearts of men, and to dive into their thoughts, but to signify to us the perfection and exactness of the Divine knowledge: as, when men would know a thing exactly, they search into every part of it, and examine every thing narrowly. On the same account He is elsewhere said "to weigh the spirits" of men, Prov. xvi. 2; intimating that He has that perfect knowledge of the secrets of men's hearts, which men have of those things that they weigh in a balance with the greatest exactness. Abp. Tillotson.

11. As the partridge sitteth on eggs, &c.] It is here said of the partridge, rather than of any other bird, that it "sitteth and hatcheth not," because, the partridge's nest being made on the ground, the eggs are frequently broken by men or other animals, and the bird is often obliged to quit them for fear of cattle, dogs, or sportsmen, which chills the eggs, and makes them unfruitful. Rain and moisture also may spoil them. Calmet, Parkhurst.

—— and at his end shall be a fool.] In the end shall find that he hath been a fool. Bp. Hall. So God calls the rich man, Luke xii. 20; who was cut off in the midst of his life, when he promised himself the enjoyment of many years. W. Lowth.

12. A glorious high throne from the beginning &c.] As in the preceding verses was set forth the vain dependence of him who seeks to advance himself by indirect methods; so here we are taught the solid foundation, which he builds upon, who has recourse to the Divine blessing, and seeks to recommend himself to the favour of that Being, to whom Israel was taught to look up for support, and whose kingdom from all eternity ruleth over all. Dr. Blayney.

13. — they that depart from me shall be written in the earth,] They that forsake My laws, saith God, and their reliance upon Me, shall not be registered among My people, nor shall their names be written in heaven, or in the book of life: compare Ezek. xiii. 9; Ps. lxix. 28; Luke x. 20; Phil. iv. 3; Ezra ii. 59. W. Lowth.

14. Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; &c.] It is from Thee only that I expect comfort and relief in all my troubles and afflictions: see ver. 15, 16, 17. And as I acknowledge that all the blessings I enjoy come from Thee, so it is to Thee that I return all thanks and praise: compare Ps. cix. 1; cxlviii. 14; Deut. x. 21. The expression, "Save me, and I shall be saved," is much the same with that in chap. xxxi. 18, "Turn Thou me, and I shall be turned;" and both of them import, that it is the Divine assistance and blessing alone which can crown human endeavours with success. See the note there. W. Lowth.

15. Behold, they say unto me, Where is the word of the Lord ?] This is an objection common in the mouths of infidels and libertines, that God doth not speedily fulfil His promises and threatenings, so as to give them ocular demonstration of their certainty: see Is. v. 19; Amos v. 18; 2 Pet. iii. 4. This was objected against the truth of Jeremiah's prophecy by the unprincipled persons of the age. W. Lowth.

27 But if ye will not hearken unto me to hallow the sabbath day, and not to bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath day; then will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.

THE word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying. about 607.

2 Arise, and go down to the potter's house, and there I will cause thee to hear my words.

3 Then I went down to the potter's house, and, behold, he wrought a work on the ‖ wheels.

‖ Or, frames, or seats.

16. As for me, I have not hastened from being a pastor &c.] It is Thou, O Lord, that hast called me; and I have not dared to be averse from following Thee in that charge which Thou hast laid upon me; neither have I been ambitious and desirous of this sad and busy task, as Thou well knowest, and that which I have spoken is Thy true message, and no other. Bp. Hall.

19. — the gate of the children of the people,] This probably means the gate most frequented by the people, being that nearest the palace, where the kings of Judah held their most solemn courts of judicature. Dr. Blayney.

20. — Hear ye the word of the Lord, ye kings of Judah,] Compare chap. xix. 3. The words are directed both to the king himself, and likewise to the princes, or those of the blood royal: see ver. 25. The word "king," in the Hebrew language, signifies any person in authority: see chap. xxv. 20, &c; l. 41; li. 28. W. Lowth.

25. Then shall there enter into the gates of this city &c.] Compare chap. xxii. 4. Hence it appears, that the judgments denounced against Jerusalem, at least as far as they threatened the city with utter destruction, were not irreversible. And from the Prophet's advice to Zedekiah, chap. xxxviii. 17, it may be concluded, that if the king had listened to that counsel, the city would not have been destroyed, and he himself might have continued a tributary king under Nebuchadnezzar. It is true, that in several other chapters of this prophecy, God, upon foresight of the Jews' impenitence, pronounces a peremptory sentence upon them: see the note on chap. iv. 28. W. Lowth.

——' riding in chariots and on horses,] This is plainly a description of a state of peace and security, compare ver. 27: taken in any other sense, it must stand in contradiction to the law in Deut. xvii. 16, and to many other texts in Scripture. Bp. Sherlock.

26. — from the plain, and from the mountains, and from the south,] These divisions of the country, belonging to the tribe of Judah, may be found Josh. xv. 21, 33, 48; and these, together with the tribe of Benjamin, make up the whole kingdom of Judah, when taken separate from the kingdom of Israel, or of the ten tribes. See the same enumeration, chap. xxxii. 44. Dr Blayney.

Chap. XVIII. The prophecies and transactions, contained in this and the two following chapters successively, hang together, and must be referred to some part of the three first years of the reign of Jehoiakim. The Prophet is shewn, first, under the type of the potter, God's absolute authority over nations and kingdoms to regulate and alter their condition at His own discretion, ver. 1—10. He is then directed to exhort the people to avert the evil designed them by repentance and amendment; and upon their refusal to charge them with the guilt of unprecedented revolt, and to foretell their destruction, ver. 11—17. They conspire against him: he protesteth against their unmerited and ungrateful persecution of him, and calleth for justice against them. Dr. Blayney.

17 I will scatter them as with an east wind before the enemy; I will shew them the back, and not the face, in the day of their calamity.

Ver. 6. — cannot I do with you as this potter?] The comparison of a potter, here proposed, does not signify that God has created men to destroy them, or render them unhappy, by the mere effect of His will; but the design of it was, to teach the Jews that they were in the hands of God, and that He was able to punish them, and afterwards to restore them: in the same manner as a potter, who, thinking to make a good vessel and not succeeding, might break it, and make another with the same clay. Thus God Himself explains it, when He says, that if a nation, which He had purposed to destroy, turned from its iniquity, He would not destroy it; and on the contrary, if a nation, which He had determined to bless, did not hearken to His voice, He would withdraw His favour from that nation. Osterwald.

7. At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, &c.] God does not threaten evil, because He is resolved to inflict it; rather, He threatens it, that we may by our repentance prevent it, and so He may not inflict it. "He foretelleth," saith St. Chrysostom, "what He will bring upon us, for this very purpose, that He may not bring it upon us; and warneth before He striketh, to make us careful to avoid the stroke." God sends His servants, the Prophets, to threaten vengeance against sinners, not thereby to drive them from hope of mercy, but to draw them to repentance and humiliation. Nor is it to be accounted among the least of God's mercies, that, when He might in His just displeasure overwhelm us in the very act of sin, yet He forbeareth and forewarneth, and foretelleth and threateneth us, before He punish; that, if we will take any warning, He may do better to us than He hath said, and not bring upon us what He hath threatened. Bp. Sanderson.

8. — I will repent of the evil] See the notes on Gen. vi. 6.

10. — I will repent of the good, &c.] From this and the foregoing verse we may infer, that God's promises in Scripture, however uttered in general terms, are yet for the most part to be understood conditionally, according as men behave themselves, especially when applied to particular persons: see Numb. xiv. 34. And as God did justly reject those Jews who refused to embrace the Gospel, notwithstanding the general promises He had made to that people; so neither can particular Christians, nor Churches, lay any claim to God's general promise of preserving His Church, any further than as they adhere to that rule of faith and manners, which He hath prescribed to them in His holy word. W. Lomth.

11. — return ye now every one from his evil way,] See the note on chap. xvii. 23.

14. Will a man leave the snow of Lebanon which cometh from the rock of the field?] It is as strange and incredible for men to forsake the true God for idols, as it would be, for a thirsty traveller to forego the cold refreshing streams that come in his way. See Prov. xxv. 25. Lebanon derives its name from the whiteness of the snow which, even in the heat of summer, covers its top. W. Lomth.

By its exceeding height it proves a conservatory for abundance of snow, which thawing in the heat of summer affords supplies of water to the rivers and fountains in the valleys below. Maundrell.

It appears also, that the snow of mount Lebanon is used in the summer to mix with wine, for the purpose of cooling it: and it may have been employed in the same way in the time of Jeremiah. See note at Prov. xxv. 13. Harmer.

— or shall the cold flowing waters that come from another place be forsaken?] The passage may be translated, "Shall the running waters be forsaken for the muddy waters?" and so it is parallel to chap. ii. 13, 18. Or, the sense is much the same if translated, "Shall the running waters be forsaken for strange waters, or waters that come from another place?" that is, waters conveyed in pipes or conduits. See the margin. W. Lomth.

15. — have caused them to stumble in their ways &c.] The worship of idols hath perverted them from following the old beaten track, plainly set forth in the law of Moses, and in the examples and practice of former ages; see chap. vi. 16; and hath engaged them in such new and untried ways of worship, as will end in their utter ruin, ver. 16. W. Lomth.

17. I will scatter them as with an east wind] The calamities of war and the like wasting judgments are elsewhere compared to an east wind, which is dry and blasting. See Is. xxvii. 8; Ezek. xvii. 10; xix. 12; Hos. xiii. 15. W. Lomth.

I will shew them the back, and not the face,] I will not so much as look upon them in their distress. Bp. Hall.

THUS saith the LORD, Go and get a potter's earthen bottle, and take of the ancients of the people, and of the ancients of the priests;

Before CHRIST about 606.

2 And go forth unto the valley of the son of Hinnom, which is by the entry of † the east gate, and proclaim there the words that I shall tell thee,

3 And say, Hear ye the word of the LORD, O kings of Judah, and inhabitants of Jerusalem; Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, the which whosoever heareth, his ears shall [a] tingle.

[a] 1 Sam. 3. 11. 2 Kings 21. 12.

4 Because they have forsaken me, and have estranged this place, and have burned incense in it unto other gods, whom neither they nor their fathers have known, nor the kings of Judah, and have filled this place with the blood of innocents;

5 They have built also the high places of Baal, to burn their sons with fire for burnt offerings unto Baal, [b] which I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into my mind:

6 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that this place shall no more be called Tophet, nor the valley of the son of Hinnom, but the valley of slaughter.

18. Then said they, Come, and let us devise devices &c.] The people to whom Jeremiah had delivered his message from God, seem to have been incensed against him on much the same ground as the Jews were in aftertimes against our Saviour and His apostles. They had persuaded themselves, that God had intended for them a perpetual establishment; and would accordingly provide them with a constant succession of men in all departments to preserve and maintain the general welfare; namely, priests to direct all matters of law and religion; wise statesmen to manage their civil concerns; and Prophets to make known to them the immediate will of God on all important and extraordinary occasions. Upon this presumption they inferred, that Jeremiah, who foretold the contrary, was a false prophet, and as such they determined to punish him. Dr. Blayney.

—— let us smite him with the tongue,] Let us raise slanders and accusations against him. Bp. Hall.

20. — they have digged a pit for my soul.] To entrap and destroy me; as men dig pits to ensnare wolves, bears, and other wild beasts. Calmet.

21. Therefore deliver up their children to the famine, &c.] Since they are thus incorrigible, I shall not any more intercede for them; but let them be overtaken by those calamities of fire and sword, with which Thou hast threatened them. See chap. xvi. 4; and the note on chap. xi. 20. W. Lowth.

Chap. XIX. Under the type of breaking a potter's vessel, Jeremiah, in the presence of the elders of the priests and people, foresheweth the ruin and desolation of Judah and Jerusalem for their sins, ver. 1—13; and repeateth the like denunciations in the court of the temple, ver. 14, 15: for which being beaten and imprisoned by Pashur, captain of the temple, on his release he pronounceth a terrible sentence against Pashur and his friends, foretelling their being carried away captives with all Judah unto Babylon, where Pashur and all that belonged to him should die in exile, chap. xx. 1—6. Jeremiah complaineth of the mockery of his enemies, and their malicious attempts to hurt him, but professeth his trust, that God would still defeat their purposes, and avenge his wrongs; and celebrateth his deliverance with a song of praise, ver. 7—13. He bitterly lamenteth his being born to a life of so much sorrow and uneasiness, ver. 14 to the end. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — a potter's earthen bottle,] An earthen pitcher, with a narrow neck, made to drink from. W. Lowth.

2. — which is by the entry of the east gate,] The valley of Hinnom lay south of the temple. In the Hebrew it is the gate Harsith, which some interpret the dung gate, mentioned Nehem. ii. 13; others the potter's gate; the potter's field being near the temple. See Zech. xi. 13; Matt. xxvii. 10. W. Lowth.

[e] Chap. 32. 29.

14 Then came Jeremiah from Tophet, whither the LORD had sent him to prophesy; and he stood in the court of the LORD's house; and said to all the people,

CHAP. XX.

1 Pashur, smiting Jeremiah, receiveth a new name, and a fearful doom. 7 Jeremiah complaineth of contempt, 10 of treachery, 14 and of his birth.

NOW Pashur the son of [a] Immer the priest, who was also chief governor in the house of the LORD, heard that Jeremiah prophesied these things.

2 Then Pashur smote Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks that were in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the LORD.

3 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Pashur brought forth Jeremiah out of the stocks. Then said Jeremiah unto him, The LORD hath not called thy name Pashur, but ‖ Magor-missabib.

4 For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends: and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thine eyes shall behold it: and I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall carry them captive into Babylon, and shall slay them with the sword.

5 Moreover I [b] will deliver all the strength of this city, and all the labours thereof, and all the precious things thereof, and all the treasures of the kings of Judah will I give into the hand of their enemies, which shall spoil them, and take them, and carry them to Babylon.

[b] 2 Kings 20. 17.

8. — an hissing.] "Hissing" seems to mean here an inarticulate sound, expressing not so much contempt, as astonishment mixed with horrour. See chap. xviii. 16. Dr. Blayney.

9. — I will cause them to eat the flesh &c.] See particularly Deut. xxviii. 53, with the note upon it.

12. — and even make this city as Tophet:] A place of slaughter and burial for the inhabitants. Bp. Hall.

13. — upon whose roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven,] The Jews having their houses with flat roofs, (see Deut. xxii. 8,) there dedicated altars to the host of heaven, where they could have the fullest view of them: see 2 Kings xxiii. 12; Zephan. i. 5. W. Lowth.

14. — he stood in the court of the Lord's house;] The great court of the temple, which is called the "outer court," Ezek. xlvi. 21. W. Lowth.

15. — upon all her towns] All the cities of Judah and Benjamin are meant, which acknowledged Jerusalem for their metropolis, and were subordinate to her. Dr. Blayney.

Chap. XX. ver. 1. Now Pashur the son of Immer the priest, &c.] The family of Immer was the sixteenth in order of the four and twenty courses of the priests: see 1 Chron. xxiv. 14: and this Pashur, by being head of his family, had a principal authority in directing matters relating to the temple, and keeping good order there. He is therefore called "chief governour," or "a chief governour in the house of the Lord:" see 1 Chron. xxiv. 5. So Hilkiah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, are called "rulers of the house of God," 2 Chron. xxxv. 8; because the first of them was chief priest, and the other two probably heads of their courses. W. Lowth.

2. — the stocks] More properly "the house of correction." The original word occurs twice besides; chap. xxix. 26, and 2 Chron. xvi. 10; in both which places it is rendered simply a "prison;" and is mentioned as a punishment due to or inflicted on one, who assumed the character of a prophet without a proper call; or was presumed to have behaved unbecomingly as such. It is probable, that Pashur, having caused Jeremiah to be beaten or scourged, ordered him into confinement afterwards; whence he released him the next day. Dr. Blayney.

—— the high gate of Benjamin,] This gate was probably on the north side of the city, (Ezek. ix. 2,) and so named from its situation towards the tribe of Benjamin. Dr. Wells.

3. — Magor-missabib.] See the margin. God's calling him by that name implies, that He would render him such as He called him. So when God called Abram by the new name of Abraham, He assigns the reason, "for a father of many nations have I made thee." Gen. xvii. 5. Dr. Blayney.

5. — all the strength of this city, &c.] All its wealth, and all that the inhabitants have gotten by their industry. The word rendered "strength" is elsewhere translated "treasure;" Prov. xv. 6; Ezek. xxii. 25. W. Lowth. Or, the word rendered "strength" means the men of war, who constitute the strength of a city or state. Dr. Blayney.

8 For since I spake, I cried out, I cried violence and spoil; because the word of the LORD was made a reproach unto me, and a derision, daily.

9 Then I said, I will not make mention of him, nor speak any more in his name. But his word was in mine heart as a [c] burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and [d] I could not stay.

7. O Lord, thou hast deceived me, &c.] The original word here may signify to "persuade" or "allure," and that by fair, as well as by indirect, means. The passage alludes to that encouragement, which the Prophet received from God, either at his first appointment, chap. i. 7, 8, 17—19; or afterwards, when he began to complain of hardships, chap. xv. 19—21. The meaning therefore of the Prophet's words in this place is consistent with the most perfect piety and reverence toward God: who, he says, had prevailed on him to undertake an honourable, though painful, employment; and had encouraged him to go on with it by assurances, which he acknowledges to have been made good, ver. 11—13; notwithstanding the unmerited scorn and reproaches of his countrymen had often tempted him to wish that he could withdraw himself out of the way, ver. 8, 9. Dr. Blayney.

8. For since I spake, I cried out, I cried violence and spoil;] Or, "I cried out of violence, and complained aloud of spoil." Since I began to prophesy, I have reason to complain of the hardships which I have undergone upon that account: see chap. xi. 19, &c; xv. 15; xviii. 18. This verse may also be thus explained: Since I began to prophesy as God commanded me, I have freely expostulated with my countrymen of the violence and oppression of which they have been guilty; see chap. vi. 7; and therefore all the requital that I have had for the faithful discharge of my office, has been contempt and ill usage. W. Lowth.

9. — was in mine heart as a burning fire] What is here meant probably is, that the conscience of the Prophet would not let him be easy in suppressing that which he knew it was his duty to speak out. In like manner St. Paul says of himself, that "necessity was laid upon him, so that woe would be to him if he preached not the Gospel, the dispensation of which was committed unto him," 1 Cor. ix. 16, 17. The Psalmist makes use of the like expression, "the fire burned," to denote the inward agitation he felt, whilst he endeavoured to stifle the sentiments which laboured for utterance, Ps. xxxix. 3. Dr. Blayney.

There is no heat so raging and insupportable, as that in the bosom of an honest man on doing any thing which he ought not to have done, or refraining from that which his conscience informs him he ought to do. Lord Clarendon.

10. For I heard the defaming of many, fear on every side.] Or, Magor-missabib. Many upbraided me with the ill usage I received from Pashur, and with my prophecy against him, by the name of Magor-missabib. If we follow the received translation, as the expression is the same with Psalm xxxi. 13, so the sense seems to be much the same in both places; namely, From the slanderous reports raised about me, I had reason to apprehend some evil design against my life, as well from treacherous friends, as from open enemies. W. Lowth.

— — Report, say they, and we will report it. All my familiars &c.] My pretended friends encourage one another in spreading false reports of me; or desire to hear from my mouth more prophecies, in hopes to find some matter of accusation against me, whereby they might take away my life, and so satisfy their desire of revenge. W. Lowth.

12. But, O Lord of hosts, that triest the righteous,] Who makes trial of his faith and patience by affliction. See Ps. xi. 5. W. Lowth.

14. Cursed be the day &c.] What we here read is a lamentation written in a poetical strain, like the dirges which the mourning women used to sing; wherein strong poetical figures are used, and all the circumstances brought in, that are proper to raise the passions, but which it would be extremely wrong to interpret in a strict and literal sense; and therefore the imprecations of the Prophet are not to be looked upon as so many expressions of indignation and malice, but rather of mourning and sorrow. Divested of this poetical heightening, all that the Prophet says amounts only to this; that the man, who had brought his father the tidings of his birth, had been in reality the messenger of ill news instead of good; for that, as things had turned out with him, it would have been a kinder and more charitable office to have strangled him in the womb, than to have assisted in bringing him into the world, to lead a life of so much bitterness and disquietude. W. Lowth, Dr. Blayney. Compare Job iii. 1.

15. — the man who brought tidings to my father,] It is the custom in Persia, to announce to the father the birth of his male children with particular ceremonies. Sir J. Chardin. And something of this kind appears to have prevailed among the Jews. Hottinger. See Job iii. 3; and the note there.

16. — let him hear the cry in the morning, and the shouting at noontide;] The alarm of war, or such a rejoicing as the enemies make over the vanquished. The verse signifies the being perpetually beset with terrours of hostile invasion. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 605. 17 Because he slew me not from the womb; or that my mother might have been my grave, and her womb to be always great with me.

CHAP. XXI.

1 Zedekiah sendeth to Jeremiah to enquire the event of Nebuchadrezzar's war. 3 Jeremiah foretelleth a hard siege and miserable captivity. 8 He counselleth the people to fall to the Chaldeans, 11 and upbraideth the king's house.

about 589. THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, when king Zedekiah sent unto him Pashur the son of Melchiah, and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, saying,

2 Enquire, I pray thee, of the LORD for us; for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon maketh war against us; if so be that the LORD will deal with us according to all his wondrous works, that he may go up from us.

3 ¶ Then said Jeremiah unto them, Thus shall ye say to Zedekiah:

4 Thus saith the LORD God of Israel; Behold, I will turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands, wherewith ye fight against the king of Babylon, and against the Chaldeans, which besiege you without the walls, and I will assemble them into the midst of this city. Before CHRIST about 589.

5 And I myself will fight against you with an [k] outstretched hand and with a strong arm, even in anger, and in fury, and in great wrath. [k] Exod. 6. 6.

6 And I will smite the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast: they shall die of a great pestilence.

7 And afterward, saith the LORD, I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, and his servants, and the people, and such as are left in the city from the pestilence, from the sword, and from the famine, into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of those that seek their life: and he shall smite them with the edge of the sword; he shall not spare them, neither have pity, nor have mercy.

8 ¶ And unto this people thou shalt say, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death.

9 He that [l] abideth in this city shall die by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth out, and falleth to the Chaldeans that besiege you, he shall live, and [c] his life shall be unto him for a prey. [l] Chap. 38. 2. [c] Chap. 39. 18. & 45. 5.

Chap. XXI. From the two first verses of this chapter we learn, that it was delivered in answer to a message sent by king Zedekiah, when Nebuchadnezzar was coming to make war against him: that is, about the ninth year of his reign. All the intermediate prophecies therefore of Jehoiakim's reign, and of the eight first years of Zedekiah's, ought properly to precede this.

This chapter contains the first of those prophecies, which were delivered by Jeremiah subsequent to the revolt of Zedekiah, and the breaking out of the war thereupon; and which are continued on to the taking of Jerusalem, related in chap. xxxix, in the following order: chap. xxi, xxxiv, xxxvii, xxxii, xxxiii, xxxviii, xxxix.

The message in this chapter has by some been confounded with that in chap. xxxvii: but they appear to be clearly distinct from each other. From the reply given to that in chap. xxxvii, it is manifest, that the Chaldeans, who had been besieging Jerusalem for some time, had already raised the siege, and were gone to meet the Egyptian army, leaving the Jews in great hopes that they would never return again. But the terms of this message seem to imply, that the king of Babylon had but just commenced his hostilities against Judah, of which Zedekiah informs the Prophet, as of a matter that might not have come to his certain knowledge; and desires him to intercede with God, that He would divert the storm by some such extraordinary interposition, as He had been wont to manifest in favour of His people, ver. 1, 2. The answer likewise takes no notice of any siege or operations past, but simply regards the future, which it is declared should end unfortunately, because God would take an active part against the inhabitants of Judah, and would deliver both their city, and also the king and his people into the hands of their merciless enemies, ver. 3—7. It is further shewn, that the only resource of the people for safety was to surrender to the Chaldeans, ver. 8—10. And for the royal house, they are warned to prevent the effects of God's indignation by doing justice and right, and not to trust to their strong hold, which would stand them in no stead when God was bent on their destruction, ver. 11 to the end. The time of this transaction therefore, I conceive to be in the ninth year of Zedekiah, previous to the siege of Jerusalem, which began in the tenth month of that year. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 2. — Nebuchadrezzar] Dr. Kennicott has observed, that in the printed copies the name of the king of Babylon is thus spelt in twenty-six other places of this book; and in ten places, Nebuchadnezzar. There is a great variation in the manuscripts. Dr. Blayney.

—— if so be that the Lord will deal with us according to all his wondrous works,] If He will shew His wonderful power, in giving us a total deliverance from the hands of our enemies the Chaldeans. W. Lowth.

4. — Behold, I will turn back the weapons of war &c.] I will utterly disable all your forces, and your weapons that are in your hands, from hurting or opposing your enemies, or helping yourselves. Bp. Hall.

5. And I myself will fight against you &c.] By the executioners of My wrath, the sword, the famine, and the pestilence. I will plainly appear on your enemies' side, by the success I will give to their arms. W. Lowth.

7. — he shall smite them with the edge of the sword;] Zedekiah himself was not put to death, but was carried to Babylon, where he died: see chap. xxiv. 5. But his sons and his great men were slain by the command of Nebuchadnezzar; see 2 Kings xxv. 7, 8. It is common with all writers to express that indefinitely, which is true of the greater part of the persons concerned. W. Lowth.

9. — he that goeth out,— shall live,] God had declared His purpose of giving up the Jews and the neighbouring countries to the dominion of the Chaldeans, chap. xxv. 9; xxvii. 6. So they, who would comply with his declared will, should preserve their lives; the rest should be destroyed, as fighting against God. W. Lowth.

—— his life shall be unto him for a prey.] Or, "as spoil." This is a proverbial expression, found also in chap. xxxviii. 2; xxxix.

Before CHRIST about 588.

11 ¶ And touching the house of the king of Judah, say, Hear ye the word of the LORD;

12 O house of David, thus saith the LORD; [a] † Execute judgment in the morning, and deliver him that is spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury go out like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

CHAP. XXII.

1 He exhorteth to repentance, with promises and threats. 10 The judgment of Shallum, 13 of Jehoiakim, 20 and of Coniah.

THUS saith the LORD; Go down to the house of the king of Judah, and speak there this word,

Before CHRIST about 609.

2 And say, Hear the word of the LORD, O king of Judah, that sittest upon the throne of David, thou, and thy servants, and thy people that enter in by these gates:

3 Thus saith the LORD; [a] Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor: and do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place.

[a] Chap. 21. 12.

4 For if ye do this thing indeed, [b] then shall there enter in by the gates of this house kings sitting † upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, he, and his servants, and his people.

5 But if ye will not hear these words, I swear by myself, saith the LORD, that this house shall become a desolation.

6 For thus saith the LORD unto the king's house of Judah; Thou art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon: yet surely I will make thee a wilderness, and cities which are not inhabited.

18: xlv. 5. The meaning is, that his life shall be saved under such circumstances, that he shall have reason to look upon himself as extremely fortunate, or to speak more properly, as indebted to the favour of Divine providence for a singular and extraordinary benefit. Dr. Blayney.

12. — Execute judgment in the morning.] The king was supreme judge in all causes and controversies; see 2 Sam. viii. 15. The courts of judicature usually sat in the morning; see note at Ps. ci. 8. W. Lowth.

13. — O inhabitant of the valley, and rock of the plain.] A description of Jerusalem. The former expression denoting the lower part of the city, which was surrounded with hills; see Ps. cxxv. 2: the latter describing mount Zion; compare chap. xvii. 3. W. Lowth.

14. — I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof.] The word "forest" is often metaphorically taken for a city in the prophetical writings: because its stately buildings, or its principal inhabitants, resemble tall cedars standing in their several ranks. See chap. xxii. 7; Is. xxxvii. 24; Ezek. xx. 46; Zech. xi. 1. W. Lowth.

The Prophet in this chapter declares, that if the people would submit themselves to the Chaldeans, and obey the voice of God, they should be spared; but if not, they should perish. Thus God gave proofs of His goodness, at the same time that He exercised His justice. This shews very plainly, that the perdition of sinners is not so determined, but that they may prevent it. God is always inclined to pardon and spare them, even when He chastises them; and if at last He overwhelms them with His judgments, it is because He is forced to it by their impenitence. Osterwald.

Chap. XXII. The prophecy which follows to chap. xxiii. ver. 9, was evidently delivered in the reign of Jehoiakim; for it speaks of his immediate predecessor as already gone into captivity, and foretells the death of Jehoiakim himself. It is likewise probable, that it followed immediately after what is said, in the 19th and 20th chapters, to have passed in the temple precincts; from whence, as from higher ground, the Prophet is ordered to "go down to the house of the king of Judah." Compare chap. xxxvi. 12.

The beginning of this prophecy is an address to the king of Judah, his servants, and people, recommending an inviolable adherence to right and justice, as the only means of establishing the throne, and preventing the ruin of both prince and people, ver. 1—9. The captivity of Shallum is declared to be irreversible, ver. 10—12. Jehoiakim is severely reproved for his tyrannical oppressions, and his miserable end foretold, ver. 13—19. His family is threatened with a continuance of the like calamities; the fall and captivity of his son Jeconiah are explicitly set forth, and the perpetual exclusion of his seed from the throne, ver. 20—30. The name of Zedekiah is not mentioned for obvious reasons; but he is no doubt principally intended in the two verses of chap. xxiii, under the general character of those evil shepherds, who should be punished for dispersing, instead of feeding, the flock. In the six following verses, with which the prophecy concludes, the people are consoled with gracious promises of future blessings; of their return from captivity, and of happier times under better governours; of the glorious establishment of the Messiah's kingdom; and, it may be, of the subsequent restoration of all the dispersed Israelites to dwell once more in their own land. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 3. Thus saith the Lord; Execute ye judgment &c.] Kings and magistrates are God's vicegerents; their principal business is to "execute judgment" and justice in the earth. If they pervert or neglect this, they abuse the authority they have received of God; they rebel against their own liege Lord and Sovereign, and violate the great end and design of their office; at the same time that they sap and weaken by degrees the foundation of their own power. Wogan.

4. — then shall there enter in by the gates of this house.] See the note on chap. xvii. 25. Instead of "the gates of this house," the text there reads, "the gates of this city:" and the context here shews, that the prophecy is directed, not only to the king's court in particular, but likewise to the whole city of Jerusalem, one part of which was called the city of David; and the whole looked upon as a royal city, and the place of their king's residence. Compare ver. 2, and 8. W. Lowth.

apt emblem of the reigning family, advanced to the highest rank and dignity in the state. Gilead was the richest and most fertile part of the country. The meaning then is plainly this, By My providence thou art not only supreme in rank, but hast been rendered exceedingly wealthy and flourishing: but the same power, that raised thee, will likewise be exerted in reducing thee to the lowest state of indigence and distress. Dr. Blayney.

Hence we are taught, that the greater privileges any church or nation enjoys, the sorer will prove its punishment, if it abuses the favour and goodness of God. Wogan.

7. — they shall cut down thy choice cedars,] The Prophet, having compared the king's palace or the city of Jerusalem to Lebanon, (ver. 6,) here pursues the metaphor, and threatens to destroy both houses and inhabitants by the Chaldean army: see the note on chap. xxi. 14. W. Lowth.

8. And many nations shall pass by this city, &c.] They who had heard that this city had been called the city of God, and the place of His especial residence, would be astonished to find it the scene of His judgments and vengeance. Thus was fulfilled that threatening of Moses, that God would make the Jews "an astonishment" to other nations; Deut. xxviii. 37. See likewise 1 Kings ix. 8. W. Lowth.

10. Weep ye not for the dead, &c.] "Weep not for the dead;" that is, for the good Josiah, who, though dead, was happy, and in peace; but weep rather for his wicked son Shallum, or Jehoahaz; who, after a very short and impious reign, was carried captive into Egypt, and was never to return or see his native country any more. Wogan.

11. — Shallum the son of Josiah] The son of Josiah, who immediately succeeded his father on the throne, was Jehoahaz, whom Pharaoh-necho deposed after a reign of three months, and carried captive to Egypt, where he died, 2 Kings xxiii. 30—34. It is therefore probable, that, before he ascended the throne, his name was Shallum, which he changed for Jehoahaz, as his brothers Eliakim and Mattaniah also assumed the names of Jehoiakim and Zedekiah on the like occasion, 2 Kings xxiii. 34; xxiv. 17. Dr. Blayney.

13. Woe unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, &c.] The Prophet proceeds to denounce God's judgments against Jehoiakim, who succeeded Shallum; but taking no warning by his brother's fall, nor forsaking the sins that had caused it, becomes also a monument of Divine vengeance, and a fearful example to warn others. Wogan.

14. — large chambers,] Several modern travellers give accounts of the large and lofty halls, and of different contrivances for letting in fresh air into the eastern houses; and Sir J. Chardin speaks of the great size of the eastern windows. Harmer.

—— it is ceiled with cedar, &c.] In houses of better fashion in Barbary, the chambers are hung with velvet or damask from the middle of the wall downwards; the rest is adorned with the most ingenious wreathings and devices in stucco and fret-work. The ceiling is generally of wainscot, either very artfully painted, or else thrown into a variety of pannels, with gilded mouldings, and scrolls of the Koran intermixed. The Prophet Jeremiah exclaims against some of the eastern houses, that were "ceiled with cedar, and painted with vermilion." Dr. Shaw. At Aleppo, the walls and ceilings of the state apartments are adorned with flowers, fruits, or other fancy ornaments, painted in lively colours, intermixed with gilding, and richly varnished. Dr. Russell.

15. Shalt thou reign, because thou closest thyself in cedar? &c.] Dost thou think to reign ever the more happily and securely, because thou hast closed up thyself in cedar? Thy father, good king Josiah, lived in much content and happiness, by doing justice and right unto his subjects, and prospered in so doing. Bp. Hall.

—— did not thy father eat and drink,] That is, did not he live in a state suitable to his character? But at the same time governing with impartial justice and equity, he enjoyed in consequence thereof that solid and true felicity, which nothing but the practice of virtue and religion, emphatically called "the knowledge of God," can bestow. W. Lowth. Dr. Blayney.

18. — They shall not lament for him, &c.] The Prophet repeats part of the funeral dirge, which the publick mourners used at such solemnities; see the note on chap. ix. 17; xx. 14; and compare 1 Kings xiii. 30; signifying that Jehoiakim should not be buried with those solemn lamentations, with which the memory of his predecessors, particularly that of his father, had been honoured: see 2 Chron. xxxv. 25. W. Lowth.

19. He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, &c.] His carcase shall be shamefully left unburied; exposed to the fowls of the air, or to ravenous beasts; even as the carcase of an ass, which is left to rot in a ditch. Bp. Hall.

And so it came to pass. For being taken by the Chaldeans, as they were carrying him captive to Babylon, he died by the way, and they would not stay to bury him, but threw his body into a ditch, where it lay exposed "in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost," as the Prophet had foreseen in his Divine vision. See chap. xxxvi. 30. Reading.

20. Go up to Lebanon, and cry; &c.] This is an ironical expression, addressed to Jerusalem, or more probably to the royal house or family of Judah; the whole chapter being a prophecy concerning it and its several branches. She is styled "inhabitant of Lebanon," (ver. 23,) for the same reason as her state and dignity is denoted by "the head (or summit) of Lebanon," (ver. 6,) as being highest of all. See the note there. Here she is called upon ironically to go to the tops of the highest mountains, and to the frontiers of the country, and cry aloud for help to the neighbouring powers, but in vain; since all those who had any inclination to favour her, the Egyptians in particular, were themselves crushed and disabled by the arms of the king of Babylon. Dr. Blayney.

—— cry from the passages:] From the borders or rivers, which are the bounds of your country. W. Lowth.

21. I spake unto thee in thy prosperity; but thou saidst, I will not hear.] The common infirmity of mankind, who, being elated with prosperity, think themselves too wise to need good advice, and therefore put off all attention to it till they are in extremities, when it will do them little or no benefit. W. Lowth.

22. The wind shall eat up all thy pastors,] God's judgments are compared to a scorching and blasting wind. See chap. iv. 12; Isai. xli. 16; lvii. 13. This, it is here said, should consume all the heads and governours of the family; as it happened to the four last kings of it in succession. Dr. Blayney.

23. O inhabitant of Lebanon, &c.] See the notes on chap. xxi. 14, and ver. 20 of this chapter.

—— how gracious shalt thou be] That is, from having been obstinate and inflexible in prosperity, thou wilt be changed by adversity, and be made courteous and condescending, ready to comply with and follow admonition and good advice. Dr. Blayney.

24 — though Coniah — were the signet upon my right hand, &c.] Though he were never so near and dear to Me, continuing always under My eye and superintendance; (compare Cant. viii. 6; Hag. ii. 23;) yet his wickedness would make him forfeit all My favour towards him: see 2 Kings xxiv. 9. W. Lowth. Coniah appears to have been another name for Jeconiah.

26. And I will cast thee out, and thy mother that bare thee,] See this fulfilled in 2 Kings xxiv. 15.

28. Is this man Coniah a despised broken idol?] An interrogation by way of admiration. The meaning is, Would any one have thought that this man, who was invested with royal dignity, should come to be no better than a broken image of royalty, divested of all power and authority, and an object of scorn and reproach? Nothing can be more contemptible than a broken idol, which can be put to no further use, and is no longer an object of worship, but of derision. W. Lowth.

—— wherefore are they cast out, he and his seed,] The children, which he probably had after he was carried to Babylon, where he lived many years a captive; see 2 Kings xxv. 27; though none of them lived to succeed to the royal authority. W. Lowth. See below, note on ver. 30.

30. — Write ye this man childless,] Not that Jeconiah died absolutely childless. Other parts of Scripture positively assert him to have had children, 1 Chron. iii. 17, 18; Matt. i. 12. And both verse 28, and the subsequent part of this verse, imply that he either had, or should have, seed. But the historians and chroniclers of the times are called upon and directed to set him down "childless;" because he should have no child to succeed him on the throne. Dr. Blayney.

It is no improper reflexion which may be drawn from the denunciations contained in this chapter, and from the subsequent accomplishment of them, that if the crimes here threatened with special judgments, such as oppression and violence, fraud and extortion, covetousness and injustice, have destroyed the thrones and families of the mightiest princes; how shall sinners and oppressors of inferiour quality expect to escape the punishments denounced against all such violations of the Divine law? Wogan.

Chap. XXIII. ver. 2. — the pastors that feed my people;] That undertake the care of My people, though they do not faithfully execute their trust. W. Lowth.

—— have not visited them: behold, I will visit upon you &c.] In Scripture language, to "visit" any one is to take such notice of him, and treat him in such a manner, as his condition requires. "The day of God's visitation" therefore, when wicked persons or nations are the subject, is the day of His vengeance, Is. x. 3; but that "the Lord hath visited and redeemed His people," is the highest expression of His love, Luke i. 68. In this passage of Jeremiah these different senses of the word are found together in a beautiful opposition. Abp. Secker. "To visit," in scriptural language, signifies to send good or evil judicially. Dr. Johnson.

3. And I will gather the remnant &c.] In that happy time of restoration, I will gather the remnant of Mine elect people out of all countries, both them of Judah and of Israel, into the bosom of My Church; where they shall be fruitful of all good works. Bp. Hall.

4. And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them:] I will set over them holy, conscientious, able pastors, which shall feed them with the bread of life. Bp. Hall.

5. Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, &c.] It hath been universally agreed by Christian, and allowed by several of the most eminent Jewish, interpreters, that this is a prophecy of the coming of Christ, and the glorious state of God's Church consequent thereupon. Nor is it possible to think of any other person or event, to which the characters here mentioned agree; whilst they all evidently conspire to point out the Messiah and His kingdom. Dean Stanhope.

—— I will raise unto David a righteous Branch,] It is an usual figure, for the head of a family, and the descendants from him, to be represented by the root or body of a tree, and the branches growing out of that tree. God therefore having frequently declared, that the Messiah should be born of the house and lineage of David, the Prophet, here and in chap. xxxiii. 15, with allusion to this figure, mentions it as an act of Divine power and mercy, that "God would raise unto David a righteous Branch." Dean Stanhope. The Messiah is often called "the Branch," to denote His descent from the stock of David: see Isai. iv. 2; Zech. iii. 8; vi. 12: and compare Isaiah xi. 1. W. Lowth.

—— and a King shall reign and prosper,] The Messiah was, continually from the time of David, foretold under this character; and, as such, He was expected by the Jews. Accordingly the New Testament abounds in affirmations concerning the regal character of Jesus; in conformity with which, though His kingly authority be not so visibly and powerfully exerted, as it shall one day be, yet we are not left under any reasonable doubt, whether our blessed Lord be the promised Messiah. The amazing vengeance taken on His murderers, in destroying their city and their constitution; and the no less wonderful success of His Gospel, propagated and preserved in opposition to all its enemies, are instances of His unlimited "power in heaven and in earth," Matt. xxviii. 18. The enlightening of Jews and Gentiles, by bringing such multitudes of the one, and so many nations of the other, to the acknowledgment of the truth, are a partial completion of the prophecies, though there be still a nobler in reserve, when the fulness of both shall come in. He reigns now actually in the hearts of men, and subdues the most formidable of our enemies by the holiness of His law, and the mighty operations of His grace. His dominion and conquest indeed will be much more absolute, when the time shall come for every enemy to be utterly destroyed. In the mean time we may be well assured, that what remains shall certainly come to pass, because nothing has hitherto failed of what was seasonable and expedient to be done, as an evidence of Christ's regal authority. Dean Stanhope.

—— and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.] This character is elsewhere given of the kingdom of Christ; see Ps. lxxii. 2; Is. xi. 5; xxxii. 1; His laws being the most perfect rule of righteousness, and He Himself the most impartial Rewarder of every man according to his works, Rev. xxii. 12. W. Lowth.

6. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely:] The laws which Christ has enacted are so holy, so wise, so good, that, if duly observed, the effect of them must be such exact justice, such uninterrupted order and peace, such gentleness and good-will, and universal charity, as would make even an heaven upon earth. Thus would the true Judah, the Israel of God, they that believe and practise His blessed doctrine, dwell in profound safety. Dean Stanhope.

Or we may understand this prophecy to be in part fulfilled in all true believers, the mystical Israel; and that it will probably receive its utmost completion when the Jewish nation shall be restored; a blessing foretold by most of the ancient Prophets, who generally join Judah and Israel together, as equally sharers in the blessings, and forming no more two, but one kingdom. See note on chap. iii. 18. W. Lowth.

—— and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.] He shall really be what the title imports; (see the note on Is. vii. 14;) He shall be "JEHOVAH," or the true God, and "our Righteousness," or the means of our justification: compare Is. xlv. 24, 25; 1 Cor. i. 30. The title of Jehovah is elsewhere given to the Messiah by the Prophets; see Is. xl. 10; xlviii. 17; Hos. i. 7; Zech. ii. 10, 11; Mal. iii. 1; and being that name which denotes the essence and immutability of God, and acknowledged by the Jews as incommunicable to any creature, intimates to us the Divinity of Christ. By the personal union of this to the human nature, and by the invaluable merit which His sufferings thence derived, He expiated the sins of the whole world, and so became "our Righteousness." W. Lowth, Dean Stanhope.

We seldom find the kingdom of Christ mentioned, but Righteousness is immediately mentioned as the first fruits of it. Righteousness left the earth at the fall of Adam, and returned again to visit and to bless it, at the birth of Christ. He was conceived without stain, lived without sin, and died without guilt. He conversed in the world, yet contracted none of its pollution. His bitterest enemies, Jews and Gentiles, joined to attest His uprightness. See Matt. xxvii. 19; Luke xxiii. 4; Matt. xxvii. 4; Luke xxiii. 47. The kingdom which He came to establish was a kingdom of righteousness. He called men from the way of sin by His sermons; He allured them from its pleasures by His example; He cleansed them from its guilt by His blood; and rescued them from its power by His Spirit. Thus did Jesus of Nazareth answer His title of "the Just One;" and evince Himself to be the true Melchisedek, or "King of Righteousness." Bp. Horne.

7, 8. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, &c.] This wonderful work of God's, in restoring the Jewish nation after their dispersions all the world over, together with the bringing in of the fulness of the Gentiles, which will be also effected by these means, will so far exceed the miracles which He wrought in their deliverance out of Egypt, that this latter will not deserve to be compared or mentioned with the former. W. Lowth.

Meanwhile, the deliverance of Israel after the flesh is infinitely surpassed by the rescue of Israel after the Spirit from a tyranny and bondage, with which the Egyptian is not worthy of being named. And the remembrance of the former is in great measure swallowed up and defaced by the abolition of those ceremonial rites and festivals; in the place of which have succeeded the two Christian sacraments, and our seasons of publick thanksgiving, as commemorations and perpetual monuments of this latter and better redemption. Dran Stanhope.

9. Mine heart within me is broken because of the prophets;] The following head of prophecy, though probably delivered at the same time with the foregoing one, treats of a subject entirely different. Jeremiah testifies the horrour he felt within him on contemplating the wickedness of the priests and prophets of Judah, and the vengeance which God was about to execute upon them for the corruption which had been diffused through the whole land, by the influence of their evil doctrines and example, ver. 9—15. He exhorts the people in the name of God, not to listen to the words of the prophets, who prophesied of peace when evil was determined, and would infallibly take place, as would in time appear; and charges those prophets with speaking of themselves, and not from the Divine commission, ver. 16—22. God asserts His omnipresence and omniscience; and reproveth the audaciousness of the false prophets, who affected to place their own idle dreams on a level with the all-powerful and efficacious word of Divine revelation; declaring Himself against the several species of those impostors, ver. 23—32. In fine, He requireth all sorts of persons to desist from an indecency in common use, of styling His word "a burden;" and threatens severely to punish those, who, in defiance of this command, should continue to cast such a slur upon it. Dr. Playfair.

— all my bones shake; I am like a drunken man, &c.] The Prophets were sometimes struck with a dreadful apprehension of those judgments which they denounced upon others. See the note on chap. xv. 18; Is. xv. 5; Hab. iii. 6. W. Lowth.

10. — for because of swearing the land mourneth;] However slightly some may think of taking God's name in vain, it is a notorious fact, that all manner of crimes grow common and barefaced along with it: and therefore, in proportion as that increases among any people, they gradually ripen for destruction. Accordingly we find the Prophet here declaring expressly, that, "because of swearing the land mourneth." And Hosea puts that down in the first place, as the leading sin of those many, for which "the Lord had a controversy with the children of Israel. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood. Therefore shall the land mourn, and every one that dwelleth therein shall languish," Hos. iv. 1, 2, 3. Abp. Secker.

— and their course is evil, and their force is not right.] Or, "And their violence is evil," as in the margin. Men abuse their power to the wronging and oppressing of their brethren, and add violence to the power they are possessed of, in order to compass their wicked designs. W. Lowth.

11. — in my house have I found their wickedness,] See the note on chap. vii. 30.

13, 14. — I have seen folly in the prophets of Samaria; &c.] He compares the sins of the prophets of Samaria and of those of Jerusalem together, and pronounces the latter to be more enormous; because the prophets of Jerusalem pronounced their false prophecies in the name of the true God, and made Him responsible for all their impostures: the wickedness of their lives also reflected dishonour upon His name and religion. 25 I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in my name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed.

18. For who hath stood in the counsel of the Lord, &c.] As if the Prophet had said, Who among these false prophets can pretend to have the secret counsels of the Almighty communicated to him? Compare 1 Cor. ii. 16. W. Lowth.

19. Behold, a whirlwind of the Lord &c.] This is spoken metaphorically. See chap. iv. 11, 12.

20. The anger of the Lord shall not return, &c.] "It shall not return unto Me void," as we read in Is. lv. 11. The expression is taken from a messenger, who comes back without executing his commission. W. Lowth.

—— in the latter days ye shall consider] At last ye shall by woeful experience find all this verified, and shall then be deeply affected by it. Bp. Hall.

22. But if they had stood in my counsel, &c.] If they had received a commission and directions from Me, and had delivered them accordingly to My people, they would have laboured to turn them back from their vicious courses. Bp. Hall.

23. Am I a God at hand, saith the Lord, and not a God afar off?] Can these false prophets think to impose upon Me, or vent their own dreams in My name, and I not discover them? As if either distance or secrecy could place any thing out of the reach of My power and knowledge. W. Lowth.

In these words are set forth three Divine perfections, to expose the folly of those wicked men who thought, or who acted as if they thought, that they could sin securely, and that God had no knowledge of, and took no notice, of their ways. God therefore, by the mouth of His Prophet, declares that He is present in all places: "Do not I fill heaven and earth? saith the Lord." He declares, that no transactions can escape His inspection: "Can any hide himself in secret places, that I shall not see him? saith the Lord." These two perfections are mentioned expressly. A third is plainly implied, namely, His irresistible power: for if a sinner, who thinks to conceal himself from his Maker, is not only mistaken, but pursues his own ruin, the reason is, because God, who is present every where, and who beholds every thing, hath also a power to deal with every one as His wisdom shall direct Him. His presence is infinite, His knowledge is unlimited, and His power is irresistible. Dr. Jortin.

28. The prophet that hath a dream, &c.] Away with all fraud in this holy service: that prophet, which hath but dreamed, let him confess it is but a dream; and he, that hath indeed a vision and word from Me, let him deliver it as My message faithfully: for what hath this "chaff" of idle dreams to do with the pure grain of My visions and revelations? Bp. Hall. The difference between true prophecies and counterfeits is as evident as that between "the chaff" and "the wheat." W. Lowth.

29. Is not my word like as a fire? saith the Lord: and like a hammer?] Like a "fire," to dissolve and melt the hearts of relenting sinners; but like a strong "hammer," to batter and break in pieces the rocky and flinty consciences of obstinate and hardened offenders. Witness Saul submitting to the reproof of Samuel, 1 Sam. xv. 24; the Ninevites repenting at the menaces of Jonas, Jonah iii. 5; Felix trembling at the reasoning of St. Paul, Acts xxiv. 25; and Ahab mourning, when Elijah telleth him of his sin, and forewarns him of his punishment, 1 Kings xxi. 29. That, which in the Epistle to the Hebrews is spoken, if I mistake not, of the essential WORD of GOD, the second Person in the ever blessed Trinity, is also in an analogy true of the revealed word of God, the Scriptures of the Prophets and Apostles; that it is "quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow," Heb. iv. 12. Bp. Sanderson.

30. —the prophets, —that steal my words] That fraudulently keep back the word of the Lord from the people; and that take from each other, by compact and agreement, those prophecies, which themselves have falsely devised, and unjustly ascribed to God. Bp. Hall.

31. —that use their tongues, and say, &c.] Who, by their smooth tongues, persuade the people it is the word of the Lord which they deliver, when it is nothing but their own fancy. Bp. Hall.

Before CHRIST 599. their lies, and by their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them: therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the LORD.

33 ¶ And when this people, or the prophet, or a priest, shall ask thee, saying, What is the burden of the LORD? thou shalt then say unto them, What burden? I will even forsake you, saith the LORD.

34 And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people, that shall say, The burden of the LORD, I will even † punish that man and his house.

† Heb. visit upon.

35 Thus shall ye say every one to his neighbour, and every one to his brother, What hath the LORD answered? and, What hath the LORD spoken?

36 And the burden of the LORD shall ye mention no more: for every man's word shall be his burden; for ye have perverted the words of the living God, of the LORD of hosts our God.

37 Thus shalt thou say to the prophet, What hath the LORD answered thee? and, What hath the LORD spoken?

38 But since ye say, The burden of the LORD; therefore thus saith the LORD; Because ye say this word, The burden of the LORD, and I have sent unto you, saying, Ye shall not say, The burden of the LORD;

39 Therefore, behold, I, even I, will utterly forget you, and I will forsake you, and the city that I gave you and your fathers, and cast you out of my presence:

CHAP. XXIV.

1 Under the type of good and bad figs, 4 he foreshoweth the restoration of them that were in captivity, 6 and the desolation of Zedekiah and the rest.

THE LORD shewed me, and, behold, two about 598. baskets of figs were set before the temple of the LORD, after that Nebuchadrezzar [a] king of Babylon had carried away captive Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, and the princes of Judah, with the carpenters and smiths, from Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon.

[a] 2 Kings 24. 12. 2 Chron. 36. 10.

2 One basket had very good figs, even like the figs that are first ripe: and the other basket had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, † they were so bad.

3 Then said the LORD unto me, What seest thou, Jeremiah? And I said, Figs; the good figs, very good; and the evil, very evil, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

4 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

5 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; Like these good figs, so will I acknowledge † them that are carried away captive of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good.

6 For I will set mine eyes upon them for good, and I will bring them again to this land: and I will build them, and not pull them down; and I will plant them, and not pluck them up.

33. And when this people, &c.] The remaining part of this chapter is directed against those, who called the word of God, spoken by the true Prophets, "a burden," by way of reproach; meaning, that it always portended evil, and never good; a burden signifying a calamitous prophecy. Ahab intended to cast the same slur on the prophet Micaiah, when he represented him as one that "never prophesied good concerning him, but evil," 1 Kings xxii. 8. Dr. Blayney. The Jews quibbled on the word, which in the original has different senses. See the note on Is. xiii. 1.

36. — every man's word shall be his burden; &c.] You shall be severely accountable for your loose and profane speeches, wherewith you deride and pervert the words and messages of God Himself. W. Lowth. The words of God were delivered with a salutary tendency to warn sinners of the danger of their situation, and to call them to repentance. Those therefore, who make a right use of them, will have no cause to complain; but those, who despise and reject them, pervert that, which should have been for their wealth, into an occasion of falling. Dr. Blayney.

39. — I will utterly forget you,] Rather, "I will take you up altogether:" "I will carry you away, or remove you," as a burden; with a more striking and pertinent allusion to what was said in the foregoing verses. W. Lowth, Dr. Blayney.

Chap. XXIV. This is one of those prophecies, which were delivered after the reign of Jehoiakim, and in the former or peaceable part of Zedekiah's reign, before he renounced his allegiance to the king of Babylon: of those prophecies the following appears to be the most proper arrangement: chap. xxiv, xxix, xxx, xxi, xxvii, xxviii.

We cannot be mistaken in placing this chapter at the very beginning of Zedekiah's reign, within the first year at least, since the vision is dated from after the carrying away of Jeconiah and the people with him into captivity, as from an event which happened but a little before.

Under the type of good and bad figs, God representeth to Jeremiah the different manner in which He should deal with the people that were carried away captive, and with those that were left behind; shewing His favour and kindness to the former in their restoration and reestablishment; but pursuing the latter with unrelenting judgments unto utter destruction. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — two baskets of figs were set before the temple of the Lord,] The vision represented two such baskets of figs, as used to be offered up for firstfruits at the temple. See Deut. xxvi. 2. W. Lowth.

— the carpenters and smiths,] The former is a general name for any handicraftsman, whether working in wood or in metal: it is probable that the latter word means properly the "armourers." And it is reasonable to presume, that the king of Babylon would be solicitous to carry off all these, with intent not only to employ them in his own service, but to prevent the Jews, who were left behind, from furnishing themselves with arms in case of a revolt. Dr. Blayney.

6. — I will build them, and not pull them down;] This may be understood both of the prosperous estate, which God would give

Before CHRIST about 598.

7 And I will give them [b] an heart to know me, that I am the LORD: and they shall be [c] my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me with their whole heart.

8 ¶ And as the evil [d] figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely thus saith the LORD, So will I give Zedekiah the king of Judah, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem, that remain in this land, and them that dwell in the land of Egypt:

9 And I will deliver them [f] to [e] be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt, to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse, in all places whither I shall drive them.

10 And I will send the sword, the famine, and the pestilence, among them, till they be consumed from off the land that I gave unto them and to their fathers.

them in the land of their captivity, and likewise contains a promise of restoring them and their posterity to their own country, chap. xxix. 10. W. Lowth.

7. And I will give them an heart to know me, &c.] Compare chap. xxix. 12, 13. To these first captives chiefly belong those blessings, which are promised to the Jews upon their return from captivity; such as were the knowledge and fear of God, and grace to live in obedience to His commandments: compare chap. xxx. 22; xxxi. 33; xxxii. 38, 39. These were accomplished in the times after the captivity, when the Jews adhered constantly to their religion, and were very careful not to fall into idolatry. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXV. This chapter seems to come next in succession to chap. xxii, xxiii. It is dated in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, and most probably belonged to the earliest part of that year. For the defeat of the Egyptians at Carchemish, and the subsequent taking of Jerusalem, are both placed in the same year. But from ver. 9, I think it may be concluded, that Nebuchadnezzar had but just entered upon his expedition, and had not yet carried into execution any of those designs, for which God there says He would "send and take" him.

The Prophet reproveth the Jews for their disregard of the Divine calls to repentance, ver. 1—7. He foretelleth their subjugation, together with that of the neighbouring nations, to the king of Babylon for seventy years, and the fall of the Babylonish empire at that period, ver. 8—14. The same is foreshewn under the symbol of the cup of God's wrath, with which Jeremiah is sent, perhaps in a vision, unto all the nations, which are enumerated at large, to make them drink of it to their utter subversion, ver. 15—29. And the like prophecy is the third time repeated in a strain of sublime and poetick imagery, ver. 30 to the end. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — that was the first year of Nebuchadrezzar] That is, according to the Jewish mode of computing his reign from the time of his being associated with his father in the empire, before he set out on his Syrian expedition. But the Babylonians do not reckon his reign to have begun till two years after, upon his father's death. Dr. Blayney. Daniel, writing in Chaldee, follows the computation in use among the Chaldeans, Dan. ii. 1. W. Lowth.

3. From the thirteenth year of Josiah — unto this day, that is the three and twentieth year,] For Jeremiah prophesied nineteen years under Josiah, who reigned thirty-one years; and this was the beginning of Jehoiakim's fourth year. W. Lowth.

4. — all his servants the prophets,] There were several Prophets contemporary with Jeremiah; two of whom are mentioned in Scripture, the prophet Zephaniah, and Urijah the son of Shemaiah, concerning whom see chap. xxvi. 20. W. Lowth.

9. — Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant,] Kings and princes are the great instruments of Providence with respect to human affairs. Some of them God raises up to be executioners of His judgments upon sinful people; such was he of whom God saith, Hos. xiii. 11, "I gave thee a king in Mine anger." Such was Nebuchadnezzar here spoken of, whom God calls His "servant," because he "wrought for Him," as God speaks concerning him, Ezek. xxix. 20; that is, he executed God's judgments upon Tyre; God making use of his ambition and desire of conquest, and prospering his arms, in order to the punishment of the neighbouring countries for their sins: see a like instance in the king of Assyria, whom God calls "the rod of His anger," Is. x. 5. W. Lowth.

Almighty God so orders the devices of men by His overruling providence, as to make them subservient to His everlasting counsels: for "all things serve Him:" Ps. cxix. 91. Happy, thrice happy they, that do Him voluntary service; that can say with David, and in his sense, "Behold, O Lord, how that I am Thy servant;" Ps. cxvi. 16; that have devoted themselves faithfully, and accordingly exert their endeavours to do Him true and laudable service, by obeying His revealed will. But certainly, whether they will or not, though they think of nothing less, they shall serve Him to the furthering and accomplishing of His secret will. As we find "My servant David" often, as His servant in one respect, so we sometimes meet with "My servant Nebuchadnezzar," as His servant in the other. Bp. Sanderson.

—— perpetual desolations.] It is a common observation, that the Hebrew word, rendered "perpetual," does not always signify eternity or perpetuity in a strict sense. Here the sense of the word is to be restrained to the period of seventy years, mentioned ver. 11. See the note on chap. xxxii. 40. W. Lowth.

10. — the sound of the milstones, and the light of the candle.] In the East the people grind their corn at break of day; and on going out in a morning, one hears every where the noise of the mill, accompanied with the voice and songs of those that grind. Sir J. Chardin. There is an affecting contrast in the text. Gloomy shall be the silence of the morning, melancholy the shadows of the evening: no cheerful noise to animate the one, no enlivening ray to brighten the darkness of the other. Desolation shall every where reign. Harmer.

—— the light of the candle.] Jeremiah here makes the taking away of the light of the candle, and a total desolation, the same thing. The houses of Egypt at this time are never without lights. Maillet assures us, they burn lamps, not only all the night long, but in all inhabited apartments in a house: and that the poor would rather retrench part of their food than neglect it. Harmer.

11. — shall serve the king of Babylon.] That is, Nebuchadnezzar and his successors. The word "king" is elsewhere used collectively for a succession of kings in the same family or kingdom. See the note on Is. xxiii. 15. W. Lowth.

—— seventy years.] This period of the servitude of the "nations" must be computed from the defeat of the Egyptians at Carchemish, in the same year that this prophecy was given, when Nebuchadnezzar reduced the neighbouring nations of Syria and Palestine, as well as Jerusalem, under his subjection. At the end of seventy years, (see the notes on 2 Kings xxiv. 1; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21; Ezra i. 1,) on the accession of Cyrus, an end was put to the Babylonish monarchy; Babylon itself became a subject and dependent province, and began to experience those Divine visitations, which terminated at length in what is so justly called in the next verse "perpetual desolations." Dr. Blayney.

12. — I will punish the king of Babylon, &c.] God often punishes the persons whom He makes instruments of His vengeance upon others, for those very things which they did by His appointment; because their intent was purely to carry on their own ambitious and cruel purposes, and not to fulfil God's will, or advance His glory. So that the evil they did was altogether their own, and the good that was produced out of it was to be ascribed to God. See a remarkable passage to this purpose, relating to Sennacherib, Is. x. 5—16. W. Lowth.

—— and will make it perpetual desolations.] See the notes on chap. l. 3, &c.

13. — all that is written in this book.] Those prophecies are meant which are to be found all together from chap. xlvi. to li. inclusively; and which the Greek version has introduced in this place. W. Lowth, Dr. Blayney.

14. For many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of them also.] Or, "shall exact service of them," or "make use of their service." Dr. Blayney. Those proud and imperious Chaldees, which held My people in servitude for many years, will I give to be a prey to other great kings and nations, and they shall share their dominions among them. Bp. Hall.

15. — Take the wine cup of this fury at my hand.] Those circumstances which constitute the good and evil of human life are often represented in Scripture as the ingredients of a cup, which God, as Master of a feast, mixes up, and distributes to the several guests as He thinks fit. See Matt. xx. 22; xxvi. 39. Accordingly, by this image of "the cup of the wine of God's wrath," we are to understand those dreadful and afflictive judgments which an incensed God was about to inflict on the objects of His displeasure. And Jeremiah the Prophet, who announced them, is considered as acting the part of a cupbearer, carrying the cup round to those who were appointed to drink of it; the effects of which were to appear in the intoxication, that is, the terrour and astonishment, the confusion and desolation, which should prevail amongst them. See Bp. Lowth's note on Is. li. 21; and compare Rev. xiv. 10; xvi. 19. Dr. Blayney.

—— cause all the nations,— to drink it.] This must be either a vision, or perhaps only a course of figurative expressions, signifying that Jeremiah was to foretell, that these nations should drink of the cup of God's anger, just as he is said, in chap. i. 10, to be set over nations, to root out, &c; when the meaning was only to foretell that they should be rooted out. Abp. Secker. See the note on chap. xiii. 4.

16. — be moved, and be mad.] That astonishment, and those unsettled counsels and resolutions, which are here mentioned as the effects of God's judgments, are elsewhere compared to drunkenness: see chap. li. 57; Lament. iv. 21; Is. xix. 14; Nahum iii. 11; Hab. ii. 16. W. Lowth.

is, be publickly denounced the judgments of God severally against these nations. It is most likely that this narrative was either written by the Prophet himself, or dictated by him to Baruch, who wrote for him, after the destruction of Jerusalem, when a compilation was made of all his prophecies: this supposition will account for the words, "as it is this day," found at the close of the 18th verse. Dr. Blayney.

Lowth.* Or, the words may be joined with the preceding, and may denote all the foreigners resident in Egypt, who had by intermarriages formed connexions with the Egyptians. In Exod. xii. 38, we read of "a mixed multitude," distinct from the children of Israel, that went up with them out of Egypt. Dr. Blayney.

—— all the kings of the land of Uz,] This was the country of Job: concerning its situation see the note on Job i. 1.

The kings mentioned here and in the following verses were petty princes of several clans or colonies. See the note on chap. xvii. 20. W. Lowth.

—— the remnant of Ashdod,] Or, Azotus; which had been greatly injured by two sieges, in which it was taken, the one by Tartan, the Assyrian general, mentioned Is. xx. 1; the other by Psammitichus, king of Egypt, who, as Herodotus relates, retook it after the longest siege that had ever been known in those times. Dr. Blayney.

22. —the kings of the isles which are beyond the sea,] Or rather, "the region by the sea side," as in the margin: meaning the people upon the coast of the Mediterranean sea. The word "island" in the Hebrew signifies any region or country: see the note on Is. xx. 6. W. Lowth. See also the note on Gen. x. 5.

23. Dedan, and Tema, and Buz,] Dedan was descended from Abraham by Keturah, Gen. xxv. 3. It was probably he that founded the city Dedan, which however in process of time seems to have been annexed to Edom. See chap. xlix. 8; Ezek. xxv. 13. Tema was one of the sons of Ishmael, Gen. xxv. 15; and a city or district called after him was situate near the mountains which separate Arabia from Chaldea. Buz was the brother of Huz, Gen. xxii. 21; and settled most probably in his neighbourhood. Elihu, the most discreet of Job's friends, was a Buzite, Job xxxii. 2. Dr. Blayney.

—— all that are in the utmost corners,] Probably the inhabitants of the peninsula of Arabia. Dr. Blayney. See the note on chap. ix. 26.

24. —the mingled people that dwell in the desert,] Meaning such as inhabited the great desert country lying between Mesopotamia and Palestine. These may have been called "mingled" either from their manner of inhabiting the desert promiscuously, and in common, without any fixed property or abode, but settling for a time where they found pasture, and then removing with their flocks to another place: or else, more probably, from their being made up of people of different descents. Dr. Blayney.

25. —Zimri,] A people of Arabia, descended from Zimran, Abraham's son by Keturah, Gen. xxv. 2. W. Lowth.

—— Elam, and— the Medes,] See the note on chap. xlix. 34. The Medes and Persians were commonly confederates, and partakers of the same good or ill fortune. W. Lowth.

26. —all the kings of the north, far and near,] By the kings of the north that were "near," the kings of Syria were probably meant; see chap. xlix. 23. Those that are "far off" may mean the Hyrcanians and Bactrians, who are reckoned by Xenophon among those, that were subjected or oppressed by the king of Babylon; and perhaps others besides of the neighbouring nations, that were compelled to submit to the Babylonish yoke. All these lay to the north of Judea, and at a great distance. Dr. Blayney.

—— all the kingdoms of the world, &c.] This must be understood with a limitation to that part of the continent which the Jews had any correspondence or acquaintance with; just as "all the world" stands for the whole Roman empire, Luke ii. 1. The ambition of a prince like Nebuchadnezzar, who aimed at universal monarchy, could not help occasioning great distress and confusion, both among those who felt, and among those who dreaded, the power of his arms. Dr. Blayney.

—— and the king of Sheshach shall drink after them.] Sheshach means Babylon, as appears from chap. li. 41. Dr. Blayney. It is thought that Babylon was so called from one of its idols, named Shach, which was worshipped there, and to which a festival was kept for five days together; and that the term is used by way of reproach. It is said that during this festival Cyrus took Babylon. See chap. li. 41. Burder.

28. And it shall be, if they refuse to take the cup &c.] If they either do not believe thy threatenings, or else disregard them, as thinking themselves sufficiently provided against hostile invasion, you shall let them know, that the judgments denounced against them are God's irreversible decree. W. Lowth.

29. For, lo, I begin to bring evil on the city &c.] Judgment often begins at the house of God, for the correction of God's people, and for a warning to others; but the heaviest strokes of it are

610. Ending. 609. Beginning.

2 Thus saith the LORD; Stand in the court of the LORD'S house, and speak unto all the cities of Judah, which come to worship in the LORD'S house, all the words that I command thee to speak unto them; [a] diminish not a word:

[a] Acts 20. 27.

30. — The Lord shall roar from on high, &c.] The Lord shall declare from heaven His great fury and indignation against the wicked: He shall roar like a fierce lion, and shout out aloud, and call up the Babylonians to their task of slaughter, as they, that tread the grapes, by their loud cries encourage each other to the work. Bp. Hall.

34. Howl, ye shepherds, &c.] Shepherds are here the same with princes or generals, chap. ii. 8; vi. 3. In pursuance of the same metaphor, by the "principal of the flock" are meant the great and rich men of each nation that is here prophesied against. Of them it is foretold, that they shall "wallow themselves in the ashes," as a token of mourning and lamenting over their misfortunes: see chap. vi. 26. W. Lowth.

—— and ye shall fall like a pleasant vessel.] That is, Ye who are esteemed above the common rank shall undergo the fate of a precious vessel, made of a crystal or gem, which being let fall is shattered to pieces; its original value being no security against such disasters. Dr. Blayney.

38. He hath forsaken his covert, as the lion:] That is, to desolate the land, as a lion forsakes his covert to go in quest of prey. Poole.

Chap. XXVI. This, as well as the preceding chapter, was delivered in the early part of the reign of Jehoiakim. Jeremiah is directed to foretell the destruction of the temple and city of Jerusalem, without a speedy repentance and reformation, ver. 1—6. On this account he is apprehended and accused before the council of a capital offence; he enters on his defence, and is acquitted; his advocates urging the precedent of Micah in the reign of Hezekiah, ver. 7—19. But from a contrary precedent it appears, that his life would have been in great danger, had he not met with a powerful protector. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 2. — Stand in the court of the Lord's house,] The great court was the place, where both men and women ordinarily worshipped when they brought no sacrifice: for when they offered a sacrifice, they were to bring it into the inner court, otherwise called the court of Israel, or of the priests. Dr. Lightfoot.

—— unto all the cities of Judah,] This was probably at the feast of tabernacles, when all the males were obliged to appear before the Lord. Abp. Usher. It is evident that "the cities" here are put for their inhabitants. Dr. Blayney.

6. — like Shiloh,] See the note on chap. vii. 12.

—— and will make this city a curse &c.] Men shall use this phrase as a form of execration, God make thee like Jerusalem: compare chap. xxiv. 9: on the contrary, to make one a blessing implies that his name should be mentioned as a signal instance of God's favour. W. Lowth. See the note on Gen. xlviii. 20.

7. — the prophets] See the note on chap. xxv. 4.

8 ¶ Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that the priests and the prophets and all the people took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die.

9 Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.

10 ¶ When the princes of Judah heard these things, then they came up from the king's house unto the house of the LORD, and sat down ‖ in the entry of the new gate of the LORD's house.

The Septuagint rightly understand the word of the false prophets, such as was Hananiah, mentioned chap. xxviii. Compare xxix. 1; xxxvii. 19. So the word "prophet" is taken Hos. ix. 8. W. Lomth.

—— in the house of the Lord.] That is, in the court before the house of the Lord, ver. 2; compare ch. vii. 10. The outer courts being holy ground, and dedicated to God's worship, are called by the name of the temple. So the treasury, where Christ preached, is called "the temple," John viii. 20; though it stood in the outer court of the temple. St. Paul is said to have entered "into the temple," that is, into the court before the temple, and the Jews to have laid hold on him there, Acts xxi. 26, 27. W. Lomth.

10. —the princes of Judah] These are the same who are called "the elders of the land," ver. 17. The kings counsellors, or chief officers of state, who were likewise members of the great Sanhedrim. It is uncertain when the great council, called the Sanhedrim, was instituted. Selden, and most other writers from the Jewish authors, date the rise of it from Moses's appointing the seventy elders, Numb. xi. 16. After several intermissions of the authority, which was sometimes laid aside by the calamities or corruptions of the times, or else superseded by that sovereign power, which was invested in the judges and kings, Jehoshaphat, when he set about a general reformation, restored this ancient tribunal: see 2 Chron. xix. 8. This being the supreme court of the nation, the persons that sat in it are called here the "princes of Judah;" compare chap. xxix. 2; xxxiv. 19; and "the elders of the land," ver. 17 of this chapter; and the "elders of the people," chap. xix. 1, and by the Evangelists; see Matt. xxvii. 1; Luke xxii. 66; and "the senate of the children of Israel," Acts v. 21. The same are probably meant by the "seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel," mentioned Ezek. viii. 11. The word Sanhedrim is without doubt of Greek original, derived from a word, which in the Greek Testament often signifies this great council; and from thence is adopted into the Jewish language, by Rabbinical writers, as many other Greek words are; but the council may still have been of much more ancient date, and expressed in the Old Testament by "rulers, princes, or elders, or the senate of the people." W. Lomth.

—— sat down in the entry of the new gate &c.] They sat down in that new gate of the temple, which king Jotham had built, to appease the tumult, and to hear the cause of Jeremiah. Bp. Hall.

14. As for me, behold, I am in your hand: &c.] Compare chap. xxxviii. 5. It was the proper business of the Sanhedrim to pass sentence upon prophets; and, if they found them guilty of making false pretences to prophecy, to put them to death, the punishment which the law had provided in that case, Deut. xviii. 20. W. Lomth.

18. — Zion shall be plowed like a field, &c.] See the note on Mic. iii. 12.

20. And there was also a man that prophesied &c.] According to the opinion of many commentators, the words that follow may be ascribed to an opposite party, who, by a contrary precedent to the foregoing, urged the condemnation of Jeremiah. But it is more probable that the elders concluded their speeches, ver. 19; and that the writer of the narrative goes on to observe in his own person, that, notwithstanding the precedent of Micah, there had been a later precedent in the present reign, which might have operated very unfavourably to Jeremiah, but for the influence

Before CHRIST abt. 606. prophesied against this city and against this land according to all the words of Jeremiah:

21 And when Jehoiakim the king, with all his mighty men, and all the princes, heard his words, the king sought to put him to death: but when Urijah heard it, he was afraid, and fled, and went into Egypt;

22 And Jehoiakim the king sent men into Egypt, namely, Elnathan the son of Achbor, and certain men with him into Egypt.

about 609. 23 And they fetched forth Urijah out of Egypt, and brought him unto Jehoiakim the king; who slew him with the sword, and cast his dead body into the graves of the † common people.

24 Nevertheless the hand of Ahikam the son of Shaphan was with Jeremiah, that they should not give him into the hand of the people to put him to death.

CHAP. XXVII.

1 Under the type of bonds and yokes he prophesieth the subduing of the neighbour kings unto Nebuchadnezzar. 8 He exhorteth them to yield, and not to believe the false prophets. 12 The like he doth to Zedekiah. 19 He foretelleth, the remnant of the vessels shall be carried to Babylon, and there continue until the day of visitation.

Before CHRIST about 598. IN the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah came this word unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, about 598. 2 Thus saith the LORD to me; Make thee bonds and yokes, and put them upon thy neck,

3 And send them to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king of Judah;

4 And command them ‖ to say unto their masters, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Thus shall ye say unto your masters;

5 I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and by my outstretched arm, and authority of Ahikam, which were exerted to save him. Dr. Blayney.

23. — cast his dead body into the graves of the common people.] Or, "the sons of the people," as in the margin: by whom are meant the populace of the lowest order, who are buried in a publick place of burial, having no distinct sepulchre to themselves, as all persons of rank and character, and especially of so honourable an order as that of the Prophets, used to have. But the king's design was to brand his memory as far as he could by such an ignominious treatment of his remains. Dr. Blayney.

24. Nevertheless the hand of Ahikam &c.] Both he and his father Shaphan were chief ministers under Josiah, 2 Kings xxii. 12, 14. And the brothers of Ahikam, Gemariah, Elasah, and Jazaniah, were considerable men in those days with Ahikam, and members of the great council: chap. xxix. 3; Ezek. viii. 11. So Ahikam made use of his interest with them to deliver Jeremiah from the danger that threatened him. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXVII. It is evident (see the note on ver. 1) that the prophecies, contained both in this and the following chapter, belong to the fourth year of Zedekiah's reign. About this time ambassadours came to Zedekiah from the kings of Edom, Moab, and other neighbouring nations, to solicit him, as it should seem, to join with them in a confederacy against the king of Babylon. On this occasion Jeremiah is ordered to put bands and yokes about his neck, and to send them afterwards to the beforementioned kings, declaring the sovereignty of Nebuchadnezzar and his successors to be of Divine appointment, and promising peace and protection to those who submitted quietly, but menacing evil in case of resistance, ver. 1—11. A like admonition is delivered to Zedekiah, advising him not to expose himself and his people to certain ruin by listening to the suggestions of false prophets, and revolting from the service of the king of Babylon, ver. 12—15. The priests and all the people are also warned not to give credit to the false prophets, who taught them to expect a speedy restoration of the vessels, which had been carried away to Babylon together with Jeconiah. Instead of which it is foretold, that the remaining vessels in the house of God, and in the king's house at Jerusalem, should be carried after the other, and should not be brought back till the appointed time of Judah's captivity was at an end, ver. 16 to the end. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — Jehoiakim] There is a difficulty in the date of this prophecy, because it plainly relates to the times of Zedekiah: see ver. 3, 12, 16. The least forced way of solving the difficulty is to say, that Jehoiakim is crept into the text instead of Zedekiah, by the negligence of the scribes, who might have their eyes upon the beginning of the last chapter or section. This emendation is confirmed by comparing this verse with the 3d, 12th, and 20th of this chapter, and with the beginning of the next. W. Lowth. Dr. Blayney.

2. — Make thee bonds and yokes, &c.] The Prophets foreshewed things by actions as well as by words. So Isaiah went "naked and barefoot," Isa. xx. 3. Ezekiel prophesied in like manner by signs, chap. iv. 1, &c; xii. 3; xxiv. 17—19. W. Lowth. And even in the New Testament we have a similar instance in the case of Agabus, Acts xxi. 11. Dr. Waterland. See note on Gen. xxxii. 25.

St. Jerome is of opinion, that the second term signifies wooden forks, or collars, such as criminals were sometimes forced to wear. This fork was fastened on their neck, and their arms were bound to it. Slaves were often treated in this manner. Thus Jeremiah, laden with this sort of "yoke," represented in a very lively manner the servitude of the nations under Nebuchadnezzar. Calmet.

3. And send them to the king of Edom, &c.] Jeremiah probably made several yokes, and put one of them upon his own neck, when he delivered his errand: and his so delivering his prophecy was "sending the yokes" to the princes mentioned: for we cannot reasonably suppose, that the ambassadours took the yoke at his hands, and carried them to their respective masters. Deluded as they were by the blandishments of their diviners, (ver. 9,) it is not to be supposed that they would have either chosen, or dared, to carry to their masters the yokes presented to them by Jeremiah. God revealed His design to the Prophet in such figurative, metaphorical language; and the Prophet reported the same as he had received it: these affecting images making the message more awful and solemn in the delivery, and giving it the advantage of a deeper and more durable impression. Dr. Waterland.

—— the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah] Ambassadours, who came from the kings before mentioned, either to congratulate Zedekiah on his accession to the throne, or to engage him in a confederacy against the king of Babylon. W. Lowth.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Before CHRIST about 596.

1 Hananiah prophesieth falsely the return of the vessels, and of Jeconiah. 5 Jeremiah, wishing it to be true, sheweth that the event will declare who are true prophets. 10 Hananiah breaketh Jeremiah's yoke. 12 Jeremiah telleth of an iron yoke, 15 and foretelleth Hananiah's death.

about 596. AND it came to pass the same year, in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth year, and in the fifth month, that Hananiah the son of Azur the prophet, which was of Gibeon, spake unto me in the house of the LORD, in the presence of the priests and of all the people, saying,

2 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon.

† Heb. two years of days. 3 Within † two full years will I bring again into this place all the vessels of the LORD's house, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon took away from this place, and carried them to Babylon:

4 And I will bring again to this place Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, with all the † captives of Judah, that went into Babylon, saith the LORD: for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.

5 ¶ Then the prophet Jeremiah said unto the prophet Hananiah in the presence of the priests, and in the presence of all the people that stood in the house of the LORD,

6 Even the prophet Jeremiah said, Amen: the LORD do so: the LORD perform thy words which thou hast prophesied, to bring again the vessels of the LORD's house, and all that is carried away captive, from Babylon into this place.

7 Nevertheless hear thou now this word that I speak in thine ears, and in the ears of all the people;

8 The prophets that have been before me and before thee of old prophesied both against many countries, and against great kingdoms, of war, and of evil, and of pestilence. Before CHRIST about 596.

9 The prophet which prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the LORD hath truly sent him.

10 ¶ Then Hananiah the prophet took the [a] yoke from off the prophet Jeremiah's neck, and brake it. [a] Chap. 27. 2.

11 And Hananiah spake in the presence of all the people, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Even so will I break the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon from the neck of all nations within the space of two full years. And the prophet Jeremiah went his way.

12 ¶ Then the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the prophet, after that Hananiah the prophet had broken the yoke from off the neck of the prophet Jeremiah, saying,

13 Go and tell Hananiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Thou hast broken the yokes of wood; but thou shalt make for them yokes of iron.

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; I have put a yoke of iron upon the neck of all these nations, that they may serve Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and they shall serve him: and I have given him the beasts of the field also.

15 ¶ Then said the prophet Jeremiah unto Hananiah the prophet, Hear now, Hananiah; The LORD hath not sent thee; but thou makest this people to trust in a lie.

16 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will cast thee from off the face of the earth: this year thou shalt die, because thou hast taught [b] † rebellion against the LORD. [b] Deut. 13. 5. chap. 29. 32. † Heb. revolt. about 595.

17 So Hananiah the prophet died the same year in the seventh month.

Chap. XXVIII. ver. 1. — the same year, in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah.] This plainly refers to the time specified at the beginning of the last chapter, and confirms the conjecture there made, that Jehoiakim is put there by a mistake of the copies for Zedekiah. W. Lowth.

"The fourth year" may be called "the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah," not absolutely, but with reference to the middle and latter parts of it. Dr. Blayney.

2. — I have broken the yoke of the king of Babylon.] I will deliver and free My people from the captivity and bondage of the king of Babylon. Bp. Hall.

5. — the prophet Hananiah.] In what sense Hananiah was a prophet, see the note on chap. xxvi. 7. Dr. Blayney.

6. Even the prophet Jeremiah said, Amen: &c.] Thereby expressing his hearty concern for the good of his nation, and wishing that God would repent Him of the evil, wherewith He had threatened them by Jeremiah's ministry. W. Lowth.

13. — yokes of iron.] This emblem of national slavery is not unexampled in Scripture. Moses threatens the Hebrews on the part of God, to give them up to their enemies, who shall put on them "a yoke of iron," Deut. xxviii. 48. Calmet.

16. — this year thou shalt die.] As Hananiah limited the accomplishment of his prophecy to two years, to gain credit with the people by such a punctual prediction; so Jeremiah confines the trial of his veracity to a much shorter time. The event exactly corresponding to the prophecy, evidently shewed the falsehood of Hananiah's pretences. W. Lowth.

— because thou hast taught rebellion against the Lord.] Thou hast taught the people to disbelieve His word, and to act contrary to His decrees. W. Lowth. See note on chap. xxix. 22.

CHAP. XXIX.

Before CHRIST about 599. 1 Jeremiah sendeth a letter to the captives in Babylon, to be quiet there, 8 and not to believe the dreams of their prophets, 10 and that they shall return with grace after seventy years. 15 He foretelleth the destruction of the rest for their disobedience. 20 He sheweth the fearful end of Ahab and Zedekiah, two lying prophets. 24 Shemaiah writeth a letter against Jeremiah. 30 Jeremiah readeth his doom.

about 599. NOW these are the words of the letter that Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem unto the residue of the elders which were carried away captives, and to the priests, and to the prophets, and to all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar had carried away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon;

7 And seek the peace of the city whither I have caused you to be carried away captives, and pray unto the LORD for it: for in the peace thereof shall ye have peace.

Chap. XXIX. According to the proper arrangement, this chapter appears to follow the 24th; being the second of those which were delivered in the early part of Zedekiah's reign. See the note at the beginning of chap. xxiv.

Some embarrassment and incoherence are to be perceived in particular parts of this chapter, which are removed by transposing ver. 15, and placing it immediately before ver. 21, where it stands in the version of the Septuagint. By this emendation a due order and connexion is restored, both in the place from whence the verse is removed, and that to which it is restored.

This chapter contains the substance of two letters written at different times, as is evident from comparing ver. 28 with ver. 4, 5; although the title at the beginning announces only one, and there is no mark of distinction to be found afterwards. The distinction however is certainly to be made at the end of ver. 20. For in the first letter the Prophet exhorts the captives to accommodate themselves to their present circumstances, under an assurance that their captivity would last to the end of seventy years; after which period, and not before, God would visit and restore them. And, to prevent their listening to any false suggestions that might flatter them with hopes of a speedy return, he informs them of what would happen to their brethren that were left behind at Jerusalem, for whom a harder fate was reserved, than for those that had been carried away. After this, finding, as it should seem, upon the return of the messengers, the little credit his first message had met with, he sends a second to the same persons, denouncing the Divine judgments against three of their false prophets, by whose influence chiefly the people had been prevented from hearkening to his good advice. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — to the prophets,] Ezekiel and Daniel were then in captivity; Daniel in Babylon, and Ezekiel in Mesopotamia, on the river Chebar. Ezekiel did not begin prophesying till the fifth year of the captivity of Jeconiah; but Daniel was already acknowledged as a Prophet of the Lord. There were probably other Prophets also in that country, to whom Jeremiah addresses this letter; nor is it at all singular, that one Prophet should advise and instruct others. David received instructions from Nathan: and St. Peter informs us, that the Prophets applied themselves to the study of the writings of the more ancient Prophets. Daniel read and studied Jeremiah. The Chaldee under the name of "prophets" understands the scribes, or doctors of the law: the Seventy translate the Hebrew by "false prophets." Calmet.

2. — and the queen,] By "the queen" is meant Jeconiah's mother: see 2 Kings xxiv. 12, 15, 15; where an account is given of this captivity: and compare chap. xxii. 26; xxvii. 10; xxviii. 4, of this prophecy. W. Lowth.

—— the eunuchs,] The officers belonging to the court. W. Lowth.

3. — whom Zedekiah — sent unto Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar] To renew his promises of fidelity to him: see the note on chap. xxvii. 12. W. Lowth.

5. Build ye houses, and dwell in them;] Establish yourselves in Babylon, as in a place where ye shall abide a long time. Look upon it as your country. The Lord, meaning to point out to the Jews, that in a short time they should be carried away from their own land, told Jeremiah not to marry, nor to form any settlement in the land, chap. xvi. 2. Jonadab, the son of Rechab, commanded his posterity not to build houses, nor to cultivate fields, but to dwell all their life in tents, in order to denote a more complete estrangement from the things of the earth. On the contrary, to prove to the Jews of the captivity, that their banishment should be of long duration, they are told to build houses, to acquire possessions, to form marriages, in a word, to establish themselves at Babylon. Calmet.

7. — seek the peace of the city &c.] This shews us, that God would have us live in submission to the kings, under whose government we are placed, and pray for the prosperity of their dominions. Osterwald.

8. — neither hearken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed.] The passage should rather be rendered, "Neither hearken to your dreamers, or dealers in dreams, whom ye cause to dream:" the original word is used for persons that dream, chap. xxvii. 9, and should be taken in the same sense here. These dreamers might be said to be made, or encouraged, to dream by the easy credit given to their impostures, and the reputation and respect they thereby acquired. Dr. Blayney.

10. — after seventy years be accomplished at Babylon] This prophecy was first delivered in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, and

14 And I will be found of you, saith the LORD: and I will turn away your captivity, and I will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you, saith the LORD; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive.

15 ¶ Because ye have said, The LORD hath raised us up prophets in Babylon;

16 Know that thus saith the LORD of the king that sitteth upon the throne of David, and of all the people that dwelleth in this city, and of your brethren that are not gone forth with you into captivity;

20 ¶ Hear ye therefore the word of the LORD, all ye of the captivity, whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon:

22 And of them shall be taken up a curse by all the captivity of Judah which are in Babylon, saying, The LORD make thee like Zedekiah and like Ahab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in the fire;

23 Because they have committed villany in Israel, and have committed adultery with their neighbours' wives, and have spoken lying words in my name, which I have not commanded them; even I know, and am a witness, saith the LORD.

24 ¶ Thus shalt thou also speak to Shemaiah the ‖ Nehelamite, saying,

25 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Because thou hast sent letters in thy name unto all the people that are at Jerusalem, and to Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, and to all the priests, saying, the same year it began to be put in execution: seventy years from which time will bring us down to the first year of Cyrus, when he made proclamation for the restoration of the Jews, and the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem. (See the note on chap. xxv. 11.) This computation of the seventy years' captivity appears the truest and most agreeable to Scripture. But if we fix the commencement of the seventy years at the time when Jerusalem was burnt and destroyed, their conclusion will fall about the time when Darius issued his decree for rebuilding the temple, after the work had been suspended. Or if we fix their commencement at the time when Nebuzar-adan carried away the last remainder of the people, and completed the desolation of the land, their conclusion will fall about the time when the temple was finished and dedicated, and the first passover was solemnized in it. "So that," as Dean Prideaux says, "taking it which way you will, and at what stage you please, the prophecy of Jeremiah will be fully and exactly accomplished concerning this matter." It may be said to have been accomplished at three different times, and in three different manners; and therefore, possibly, all might have been intended, though the first, without doubt, was the principal object of the prophecy. Bp. Newton.

—— I will visit you,] There were but few of these captives, in comparison, who returned in person to their own country: see Ezra iii. 12. So this promise was chiefly fulfilled in their posterity; and it is common in Scripture to speak of blessings bestowed upon the children, as if they had been actually made good to their progenitors. See chap. xxxii. 5; and Exod. vi. 4; Mic. vii. 20. W. Lowth.

11. For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, &c.] I know what I have decreed concerning you; even favour and deliverance in My appointed time, and not extirpation and destruction: so that ye shall at the last have that happy issue which ye desire and expect. Bp. Hall.

16. Know that thus saith the Lord &c.] The many and grievous calamities which were to fall upon those who were left in their own land, are here noticed by the Prophet as affording a fresh argument to those of the captivity for composing themselves to that quietness and peace which he recommended, considering the comparatively easier lot which Providence had assigned to them. Dr. Blayney.

23. — have committed adultery with their neighbours' wives,] The Jewish rabbies, as Grotius here observes, have a traditionary notion, that these were the two elders who attempted the chastity of Susannah: the story of which they think to be true in part, though not altogether such as is represented in one of the books of the Apocrypha. Dr. Blayney, W. Lowth.

—— I know, and am a witness,] That is, I am not an inattentive witness of such enormities. Dr. Blayney.

24. — the Nehelamite,] We find such a place as Helam mentioned in 2 Sam. x. 16, 17. Dr. Blayney.

26. The Lord hath made thee priest in the stead of Jehoiada] Seraiah is said to have been the chief priest, and Zephaniah the the stead of Jehoiada the priest, that ye should be officers in the house of the LORD, for every man that is [b] mad, and maketh himself a prophet, that thou shouldest put him in prison, and in the stocks.

[b] 2 Kings 9. 11. Acts 26. 24.

27 Now therefore why hast thou not reproved Jeremiah of Anathoth, which maketh himself a prophet to you?

28 For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, This captivity is long: build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

29 And Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

30 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

31 Send to all them of the captivity, saying, Thus saith the LORD concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite; Because that Shemaiah hath prophesied unto you, and I sent him not, and he caused you to trust in a lie:

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will punish Shemaiah the Nehelamite, and his seed: he shall not have a man to dwell among this people; neither shall he behold the good that I will do for my people, saith the LORD; [i] because he hath taught † rebellion against the LORD.

CHAP. XXX.

1 God sheweth Jeremiah the return of the Jews. 4 After their trouble they shall have deliverance. 10 He comforteth Jacob. 18 Their return shall be gracious. 20 Wrath shall fall on the wicked.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

Before CHRIST about 606.

2 Thus speaketh the LORD God of Israel, saying, Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book.

3 For, lo, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the LORD: and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

4 ¶ And these are the words that the LORD spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah.

5 For thus saith the LORD; We have heard a voice of trembling, ‖ of fear, and not of peace.

‖ Or, there is fear, and not peace.

second priest, when Jerusalem was taken, chap. lii. 24. Who then was Jehoiada? perhaps he was one that had been superseded in his office of second priest for being remiss in his duty; and therefore Zephaniah may have been reminded of him by way of intimation, that, as they had been both appointed for the same purposes, so Zephaniah might expect the same fate as his predecessor, if he copied the example of his negligence. The second priest officiated as substitute of the high priest, in case of absence or indisposition, and perhaps was always invested with subordinate authority. Dr. Blayney.

—— for every man that is mad, and maketh himself a prophet,] For every one that in a frantick humour takes upon him to be a prophet, and delivers his own distracted fancies for visions from God. Bp. Hall. See notes on chap. xx. 1, 2.

28. For therefore he sent unto us &c.] Or, "because he sent unto us, &c." W. Lowth.

32. — he shall not have a man to dwell among this people; &c.] None of his posterity shall remain to see My people restored again to their own land. W. Lowth.

—— rebellion] The original word properly signifies a declining or turning aside from the strait path, the path of truth and right. Here, and in chap. xxviii. 16, it means the presumption of uttering as a revelation from God what a man knew not to be so. Dr. Blayney.

Chap. XXX. There is no particular date annexed to this prophecy, whereby to ascertain the precise time of its delivery. But it may not be unreasonably presumed to have followed immediately after the preceding one, in which the restoration of the people from the Babylonish captivity is in direct terms foretold. From hence the transition is natural and easy to the more glorious and general restoration, that was to take place in a more distant period, and was designed for the ultimate object of the national hopes and expectations.

Both events are frequently thus connected together in the prophetick writings, and perhaps with this design, that when tha which was nearest at hand, should be accomplished, it might afford the strongest and most satisfactory kind of evidence; that the latter, how remote soever its period, would in like manner be brought about by the interposition of Providence in its due season. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 6. Ask ye now, and see whether a man &c.] All men seem to carry that concern in their looks, and discover such an uneasiness in their behaviour, under the apprehension of approaching evils, as women do when the time of their travail draweth near. Compare chap. vi. 24: and Nahum ii. 10. W. Lowth.

8. — I will break his yoke from off thy neck,] Rather, "I will break his yoke from off his neck, and will burst his bonds:" for the yoke and the bonds of Jacob are spoken of; there being no other person spoken of in the sentence, nor is Jacob directly addressed till afterwards in ver. 10. Dr. Blayney.

9. — David their king,] That is, the Messiah, who is often called by the name of David in the Prophets, as the Person, in whom all the promises made to David were to be fulfilled. See Isaiah lv. 3, 4; Ezek. xxxiv. 23; xxxvii. 24; Hos. iii. 5. W. Lowth.

11. — though I make a full end of all nations, — yet will I not make a full end of thee:] We have here ocular proof of prophecy accomplished in an instance without a parallel. It was repeatedly foretold, both in the Old and New Testament, that, for the rejection and murder of their Messiah, the Jews should be dispersed into all countries; yet that they should not be swallowed up and lost among their conquerors, but should still subsist, to latest times, a distinct people. By Jeremiah God declared, "He would make an end of the nations," their oppressors, "but He would not make an end of them." It cannot be said this prediction was written since the event: and certainly an occurrence more singular, or improbable, could not have been predicted. In the course of human affairs, who hath heard such a thing? Yet, so it is. The mighty monarchies of Assyria, Persia, Greece, and Rome, are vanished like the shadows of the evening, or the phantoms of the night. Their places know them no more. Nothing remains of them but their names: whilst this little despised people, strangely secure, without a friend or protector, amidst the wreck of empires, oppressed, persecuted, harrassed always, by edicts and executioners, by murders and massacres, hath outlived the very ruins of them all. "Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe." Behold then a sign and a wonder: the accomplishment of prophecy in a standing miracle. Contemplate the sight as it deserves; and be not faithless, but believing. Bp. Horne. See the note on Deut. xxx. 1.

—— and will not leave thee altogether unpunished.] Some render this clause, "and will not utterly destroy thee." This sense both suits very well with the present passage, and also agrees with the scope of those two texts in the Pentateuch, where we first find it, Exod. xxxiv. 7, and Numb. xiv. 18, much better than the common translation.

The sense, here given by our translators, agrees very well with the context of some other places, where the phrase is used: as particularly, chap. xxv. 29; xlix. 12; Nahum i. 3. W. Lowth.

12. — Thy bruise is incurable.] Thy affliction, in regard of any human help, is utterly remediless. Bp. Hall.

14. — with the wound of an enemy,] With such severity, that looks like cruelty, and as if I had declared Myself an utter enemy to thee. W. Lowth.

15. Why criest thou for thine affliction?] Why shouldest thou expostulate with Me, as if I had dealt unjustly with thee? Thy condition seems desperate, it is due to thine own iniquities, which have still been increased with new aggravations of guilt. Lowth.

16. Therefore] Rather, "yet surely," or "afterwards." See the note on chap. xvi. 14. W. Lowth, Dr. Blayney.

17. — because they called thee an Outcast, &c.] Because they have insulted upon thy misery, and despised thee, as an outcast and forlorn people, saying, This is that goodly hill of Zion; and the pride, now the scorn of the world. Bp. Hall.

18. — the city shall be builded upon her own heap, &c.] Or "hill," as in the margin, as that part of Jerusalem particularly was, which was called mount Zion. There was generally a castle or citadel in the middle of the ancient cities on a rising ground, for greater strength and security. See Josh. xi. 13. W. Lowth.

By "the city" Jerusalem is commonly understood, and by "the palace," either the temple or the king's house. Probably they are designed not for any particular city or palace, but for the cities and palaces of Jacob in general. Nouns in the singular number are often thus used. Dr. Blayney.

21. — their nobles shall be of themselves,] Or, "his prince shall be of his own race:" the meaning is plain, that they should not be governed by foreigners, but by those of their own nation and family. Dr. Blayney.

The Hebrew word is in the singular number, and literally signifies their "mighty one;" a title given to God Himself, Ps. xcix. 4; and to a mighty angel, Is. x. 34; probably the Word, or Son of God. The sense is, they shall no more be governed by strangers, but shall have a ruler of their own nation: such was Zorobabel, a figure of Christ. W. Lowth.

as a king, according to that prophecy concerning the Messiah, Ps. cx. 4. This phrase of "coming," or "drawing near to God," is particularly applied to the office of the Priests and Levites, Numb. xvi. 5. W. Lowth.

—— for who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me?] For who is there but the Messiah, that is so entirely devoted to My service? See Ps. xl. 8; John iv. 34; xiv. 31. W. Lowth.

24. — in the latter days] "The latter" or "last days," may signify in general the time to come: and so perhaps it is to be understood, Gen xlix. 1; Deut. iv. 30; xxxi. 29: but it commonly signifies the times under the Gospel, as being the last dispensation, and such as should continue to the end of the world. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXXI. ver. 2. — in the wilderness;] Though God, on the passage of the Israelites from Egypt, cut off many of them by the sword for their iniquities; some by the Amalekites, Exod. xvii. 8; some by the hands of their brethren, Exod. xxxii. 28; yet the survivors found grace, and were conducted by Him into the land of rest. God here parallels His future gracious purposes with His former merciful providences. Poole.

3. The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, &c.] These words are spoken in the person of the Jewish nation. W. Lowth.

They acknowledge God's mercies in former times, that the Lord had indeed appeared of old unto her, but that now she seemed to be forgotten and despised. Wogan.

4. Again I will build thee, &c.] O Jerusalem, thou shalt be built again, and shalt have again minstrelsy and mirth within thy walls. O My Church, thou shalt be happily restored, and filled with true spiritual joy. Bp. Hall.

—— thou shalt again be adorned with thy tabrets,] That it was usual for the women of Israel to go forth with tabrets and dancing in times of publick rejoicing and festivity, see Exod. xv. 20; Judg. xi. 34; 1 Sam. xviii. 6. These times were now to be renewed. Dr. Blayney.

5. — plant vines upon the mountains of Samaria:] The mountains of Samaria were productive of good wines, as we see in the history of Abimelech, Judg. ix. 27, and in the reproofs which the Prophets frequently address to the men of Ephraim, for being too much addicted to wine, Is. xxviii. 1; Hos. x. 1, &c. Josephus and later travellers confirm the fact. Calmet.

—— shall eat them as common things.] After they have planted them, they shall eat the fruits thereof; according to the promise contained in the parallel texts, Is. lxv. 21; Amos ix. 14: whereas God had threatened them as a curse, that when they had planted their vines, another should eat of the fruit, Deut. xxviii. 30. The original verb, translated, "eat them as common things," alludes to that law, that forbade the fruit of any young trees to be eaten till the fifth year of their bearing, when the fruit was lawful or "common" for every one to eat: see the margin of the Bible upon Deut. xx. 6; xxviii. 30. W. Lowth.

7. — the chief of the nations:] This term appears to be synonymous with Jacob or Israel, who, being the peculiar people of God, was thereby exalted to a preeminence above other nations. The privileges of primogeniture are asserted to belong to him, ver. 9; which is equivalent to calling him "the chief or head of the nations;" the firstborn being commonly entitled to the rank of chief, or head, among many brethren, Rom. viii. 29. Dr. Blayney.

8. — the blind and the lame, &c.] God will conduct them with all imaginable tenderness, and furnish the most feeble and indigent with suitable accommodations. W. Lowth.

9. They shall come with weeping, &c.] Implying, that the Jews at the time of their general restoration shall have their joy tempered with tears of repentance for their former miscarriages. The same thing is more fully expressed, Zech. xii. 10, where God promises to "pour upon them the spirit of grace and of supplications." W. Lowth.

An emblem of that redemption which Christ will obtain for us by vanquishing the devil, called the "strong man" in Scripture. See Matt. xii. 29; Luke xi. 21, 22. W. Lowth.

12. Therefore they shall come and sing &c.] There shall they come and sing in the great congregation and most eminent assemblies; and shall meet cheerfully together, to enjoy the holy things of God, His word and sacraments; and their soul shall be refreshed as a new watered garden in a drought; and they shall have no more cause of dejection and hopeless sorrow. Bp. Hall. Spiritual blessings are elsewhere described under the emblems of fruitfulness and plenty; and the grace of God is often compared to waters that refresh and enrich a dry ground. See Is. iv. 2; lviii. 11; xliv. 3. W. Lowth.

—— for wheat, and for wine, &c.] The land of Canaan is every where described, as "a land flowing with milk and honey, a land of wheat, vines, and milk." The Prophets therefore, to give an idea of their new state, represent it as another Canaan, such as Canaan was painted to the Jews, at their coming out of Egypt. Bp. Chandler.

15. — A voice was heard in Ramah, &c.] Ramah was a city of Benjamin, near which Rachel, the mother of Joseph and Benjamin, was buried: who is here, in a beautiful figure of poetry, represented as come forth out of her grave, and lamenting bitterly for the loss of her children, none of whom presented themselves to her view, being all either slain or gone into exile. The Evangelist applies these words to Herod's massacre of the infants at Bethlehem, and in its environs. Matt. ii. 17, 18. Dr. Blayney.

—— because they were not.] An expression denoting those who were dead, Gen. xlii. 13; Lam. v. 7. This was literally the case, according to St. Matthew's application of the text; but only metaphorically so in the sense first intended: being spoken of those, who were removed into a foreign country, and for ever deprived of the conversation of their relations, as if they were naturally dead. W. Lowth.

16. — for thy work shall be rewarded.] That is, thou shalt not bring forth children in vain, nor shalt thou be deprived of that satisfaction in seeing the welfare of thy children, which is the parent's reward for her care and attention in bringing them into the world, and providing for their support and education. "They shall come again from the land of the enemy." Dr. Blayney.

The words of the Prophet, or rather those of the Almighty this consolatory address to Rachel, were in the fullest import m good to her. Within seventy years it came to pass, that the p terity of Benjamin returned, with Judah, into the land of prom and inhabited Jerusalem, Bethlehem, and other bordering ci promiscuously with the royal tribe. "Her work was rewarde her patient expectation, in faith and hope, of the promises m her, failed not of its fruit in the appointed season: her "child came again from the land of the enemy to their own border," the Lord had foretold by His Prophet; they "returned, and ru to Zion with songs; joy was upon their heads," and in their hea "and sorrow and sighing flew away." Bp. Horne.

18. I have surely heard Ephraim &c.] I have heard thee the ten tribes bemoaning themselves, after their captivity, th Thou hast afflicted me, O Lord, and I am humbled; I was a wild young bullock, unaccustomed to the yoke: but now Th hast caused me to stoop unto it. Bp. Hall.

—— turn thou me, and I shall be turned;] Do Thou turn heart by Thy preventing grace, and then I shall be effectually formed; compare Lam. v. 21. Sometimes the Scripture ascrib the whole work of man's conversion to God, because His grac the first and principal cause of it. But yet to make it effectu man's concurrence is necessary, as appears from those words (Is li. 9) of this prophecy, where God saith, "We would have heal Babylon, but she is not healed;" that is, God did what was r quisite on His part for her conversion, but she refused to comp with His call. To the same purpose He speaks to Jerusale Ezek. xxiv. 13, "I have purged thee, and thou wast not purge W. Lowth.

19. — I smote upon my thigh:] "Smiting upon the thigh" w an indication of extreme astonishment and sorrow. See Ezek xxi. 12. So also it is represented by many heathen author Calmet.

—— because I did bear the reproach of my youth.] The burde of my former sins, lay heavy upon my mind, and I became sen sible, that all the calamities and reproaches which I have under gone were the due deserts of my offences. The Prophet, repre senting the whole nation as a single person, speaks of their former sins, as if they were the extravagancies of their younger year W. Lowth.

upon a child in whom he delights? God proceeds to say, Ever since I have so severely reproved and chastised him, I have still retained for him a fatherly kindness; I am moved with compassion towards him, and will in due time pardon and receive him into favour. W. Lowth.

21. Set thee up waymarks, &c.] These words are a call to Israel to prepare for their return. The "waymarks" and "high heaps," are stone pillars and tall poles set up in the roads at certain distances for the traveller's direction, and extremely necessary for those who have to pass wild and spacious deserts. Dr. Blayney.

22. How long wilt thou go about, &c.] According to the first Evangelical promise concerning "the Seed of the woman," followed this prediction of the Prophet, "The Lord hath created a new thing in the earth, A woman shall compass a man." That new creation of a man is therefore "new," and therefore "a creation," because wrought in a woman only, without a man, compassing a man. This interpretation is ancient, literal, and clear. The words import a miraculous conception: and the ancient Jews acknowledged this sense, and applied it determinately to the Messiah. This prophecy is illustrated by that of Isaiah, chap. vii. 14. Bp. Pearson.

24. — husbandmen, and they that go forth with flocks.] These words are descriptive of the circumstances, in which the ancestors of the Jews were placed upon their first introduction into the land of Canaan; when every citizen was literally a "husbandman," and a shepherd, or "feeder of flocks," in consequence of the allotment of land, which he was forbidden to alienate. Dr. Blayney. They denote the state of the people after their return, that they should live innocently and peaceably. So chap. xxxiii. 12. Poole.

27. Behold, the days come, &c.] Under the captivity the land lay "desolate, without man and without beast;" chap. xxxiii. 12: but now it shall be inhabited and replenished with both. W. Lowth.

29. In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten &c.] God hath often declared, that "He will visit the sins of the fathers upon the children;" and particularly threatened to execute judgment upon the present generations, for the idolatries and other sins of their forefathers: see chap. xv. 4. This gave occasion to the proverb mentioned in this verse, which they that were in captivity applied to their own case; as if the miseries they endured were chiefly owing to their fathers' sins: see Lam. v. 7; Ezek. xviii. 2. But when this judgment should be removed, then there would be no farther occasion to use this proverb, as Ezekiel speaks in the before-mentioned place. W. Lowth.

30. But every one shall die for his own iniquity:] These national judgments ceasing, every one should suffer only for his own faults. This prophecy will be remarkably verified, when God shall cease to visit upon the Jewish nation that imprecation, which they laid upon themselves for the death of Christ; "His blood be on us, and on our children," Matt. xxvii. 25. W. Lowth.

"Every one shall die for his own iniquity:" see also Ezek. xviii. 20. Yet Jeremiah elsewhere complains, "Our fathers have sinned, and are not; and we have borne their iniquities," Lam. v. 7. To reconcile such places of Scripture, which seem to be at variance with each other, let it be observed, that, where the Scripture ascribes one man's punishment to another man's sin, it points us to God's wisdom and providence; who for good and just ends sometimes makes choice of these occasions, rather than others, to inflict upon men those punishments, which their own sins have otherwise abundantly deserved. On the contrary, where the Scripture attributes all punishments to the personal sins of the sufferer, it points us to God's justice: which looks still to the desert, and does not upon any occasion whatsoever inflict punishments, but where there are personal sins to deserve them: so that every man, who is punished in any manner or upon any occasion, may join in David's confession, "Against Thee have I sinned, and done evil in Thy sight: that Thou mightest be justified in Thy saying, and clear when Thou art judged," Ps. li. 4. Bp. Sanderson.

31. — I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel,] Behold, the days of the Messiah are coming, wherein I will make a new covenant with My Church. Bp. Hall.

To what time or person the promises, made here by Jeremiah, and by Ezekiel, chap. xxxiv. 23, 26; xxxvi. 26, related, might be uncertain before Malachi prophesied; though they have internal marks which point to the Messiah. But Malachi, by his prophecy concerning "the Messenger of the covenant," chap. iii. 1, put it out of all doubt. This was to say in other words, that Messiah should be the declarer, the publisher, the mediator of that better covenant, as Moses was of the old covenant; and that a law should be given by Him. Bp. Chandler.

old covenant, as opposed to the new, signifies that system of laws and ordinances which were the condition of the covenant made with the Jews on mount Sinai. In this sense the word "law" is usually taken in the New Testament, when it is opposed to the "Gospel." See Acts xv. 5; Rom. iii. 19; Gal. iii. 17. W. Lowth.

—— although I was an husband unto them,] See the note on chap. ii. 2.

33. — I will put my law in their inward parts, &c.] Though all people have some natural sense of their duty left them, yet generally it is so little, that it does not excite them to the practice of their duty. Hence it is, that God promises, in the new covenant, to quicken and actuate it, saying, "I will put My law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts:" that is, He will write His law in our hearts, as He did at first, by giving us so quick and strong a sense of our duty to Him, as shall excite and stir us up to the sincere performance of it. This He does, by expounding to us our duty in the Old and New Testament, and by His Holy Spirit cooperating with the means of grace, which for that purpose He hath settled in His Church. Bp. Beveridge.

—— and will be their God, &c.] Together with the promise of giving us such a measure of His grace and Holy Spirit, to influence and direct our hearts, that we shall be inclined of our own accord to do whatever He commands; God further promises, that then "He will be our God," to bless, preserve, and keep us; and we "shall be His people," His peculiar people, zealous of good works, of all such works as He hath set us to do: which that we may, He will give us a right knowledge of Himself and His holy will, so that we "shall all know Him, from the least to the greatest," and all that He requires of us. And then He promises in the last place, that we being thus qualified by Him for it, He will forgive us all our sins, that He will look upon us no longer as guilty, but as just and righteous persons, and therefore fit to live with Him in glory: "for whom He justifieth, them He also glorifieth," Rom. viii. 30. Ep. Beveridge.

34. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, &c.] This privilege is to be understood of that greater degree of light which the Gospel of Christ would bring into the world; not only a fuller discovery of Divine truth than the Gentiles were able by natural reason to acquire; but a clearer knowledge of God and heavenly things, than the ancient people of God had ever attained to under the dispensation of the law. Wogan.

35. — and the ordinances of the moon &c.] Who hath ordained a due, constant, and regular motion of the moon and stars for a light by night. Bp. Hall.

36. If those ordinances depart from before me, &c.] If that course which I have set in nature for the motions of the heavens may be altered, then may it be possible for My Church to fall upon earth. Bp. Hall.

God preserved a remnant of "the seed of Israel," that were led captive, and restored them to their own country and government. He preserved another remnant at the beginning of the Gospel, called "the saved," Luke xiii. 23; Acts ii. 47; who, by embracing the faith of Christ, escaped those terrible judgments that were inflicted on the main body of the nation. And Providence still continues them in a distinct body from all other people in the world, in order to their conversion in God's due time. W. Lowth.

38. — the days come, — that the city shall be built] The days shall come that this city of Jerusalem, which yet stands in her full glory, shall, after the rasing and destruction of it, be fully built up again, in all the whole compass of it, from the one end to the other; and, which is thereby typified, My evangelical Church shall be built upon the ruins of the Jewish, in a complete form, and be wholly consecrated to the Lord. Bp. Hall.

This prophecy might in some sense be fulfilled in the rebuilding of the city after the captivity: but the mystical sense of the words probably relates to a more perfect state of the Church, which is elsewhere called "the city of God," and the "new Jerusalem;" and whose dimensions are figuratively described, Ezek. xlviii. 30, &c.; Rev. xxi. 10, &c. W. Lowth.

2 For then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem: and Jeremiah the prophet was shut up in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's house.

3 For Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, Wherefore dost thou prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD, [a] Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it;

4 And Zedekiah king of Judah shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, [b] but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes;

5 And he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be until I visit him, saith the LORD: though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper.

6 ¶ And Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

7 Behold, Hanameel the son of Shallum thine uncle shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in Anathoth: for the [c] right of redemption is thine to buy it.

8 So Hanameel mine uncle's son came to me in the court of the prison according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself. Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD.

9 And I bought the field of Hanameel my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and weighed him the money, even ‖ seventeen shekels of silver.

10 And I † subscribed the evidence, and sealed it, and took witnesses, and weighed him the money in the balances.

11 So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed according to the law and custom, and that which was open:

12 And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, and in the presence of the witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.

13 ¶ And I charged Baruch before them, saying,

14 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open; and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days.

15 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Houses and fields and vineyards shall be possessed again in this land.

16 ¶ Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, I prayed unto the LORD, saying,

17 Ah Lord GOD! behold, thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched out arm, and there is nothing ‖ too hard for thee:

5. — there shall he be until I visit him,] There shall he be until the time that I put an end to his captivity by death. Bp. Hall. Or, till I visit him in his posterity, whom I will restore to their own country. So God tells Jacob, "I will go down with thee into Egypt, and I will also surely bring thee up again," Gen. xlvi. 4; which promise was made good to his posterity. W. Lowth.

7. Behold, Hanameel — shall come unto thee, saying, &c.] See Exod. iv. 14, and the last note there.

9. — seventeen shekels of silver.] Not much above forty shillings in our money: a small price for a field or piece of ground. But the quantity of land is uncertain: and the circumstances of the time must have greatly lessened its value; the field being then in the enemy's possession, and the purchaser knowing that neither he nor his heirs should enter on it till after seventy years. W. Lowth, Dr. Blayney.

11. — both that which was sealed — and that which was open:] The open or unsealed writing was probably either a copy of the sealed deed, or else a certificate of the witnesses, in whose presence the deed of purchase was signed and sealed. W. Lowth.

Sir J. Chardin thinks this ancient story is illustrated by the modern management in the conveyance of Eastern property: "After a contract is made, the deed is kept by the party himself, not the notary: and a copy of it is made, signed by the notary alone, which is shewn upon proper occasions, whereas the other is never exhibited." According to this account, the two writings mentioned in the text were to the same effect: the one being sealed up with solemnity, not to be used on common occasions; the other being open, to be perused at pleasure, upon all occasions. The sealed one answered to a record with us; the other a writing for common use. Harmer.

12. And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch] Baruch was a scribe by profession; and it may be supposed, that the attendance of such an one, skilled in the forms of the law, was necessary on those occasions, both to draw up the writings, and to officiate in the capacity of a notary publick with us. And to his custody, as being a publick officer, the custody of the title-deeds was intrusted. Dr. Blayney.

14. — put them in an earthen vessel, &c.] Lay up these evidences sure in an earthen vessel, where they may be kept from rotting, for a long time; as those, whereof I shall have most certain use hereafter: for this land shall be in due time repossessed. Bp. Hall.

24. Behold the mounts,] The ramparts raised against the walls, for the siege of Jerusalem: for placing "engines of shot," (as in the margin,) in order to assault and take the city. Compare chap. xxxiii. 4. W. Lowth. The "mount," as used by the Greeks, is thus described by Archbishop Potter: "It was raised so high, as to equal, if not exceed, the top of the besieged walls. The sides were walled in with bricks or stones, or secured with strong rafters to hinder it from falling; the fore part only, being by degrees to be advanced near the walls, remained bare. The pile itself consisted of all sorts of materials, as earth, timber, boughs, stones, &c.: into the middle were cast only wickers and twigs of trees, to fasten, and, as it were, cement, the other parts. Moveable towers of wood were usually placed upon the mount. They were formed of several stories, which were able to carry, not soldiers only, but all sorts of portable engines." Hence we may perceive in what sense "the mounts came unto," or approached, "the city," as in the text: and how a "mount" or "bank" might even "stand in the ditch," or "trench," 2 Sam. xx. 15: as likewise of what use "trees" were in constructing them, Jer. vi. 6; and how they might be said to "throw down the houses," chap. xxxiii. 4. Parkhurst.

35. — to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech,] The words "through the fire" are not in the Hebrew; but in other places which speak of the same thing, the words are expressed at full length; see Deut. xviii. 10; 2 Kings xxiii. 10. Elsewhere the same thing is expressed by "burning their sons and their daughters in the fire, and offering them for burnt offerings:" see chap. vii. 31; xix. 5; Deut. xii. 31. The idolatrous Jews are often upbraided with the practice of this inhuman rite; see Ps. cvi. 37; Is. lvii. 5. And the phrase of "making children pass through" the fire is certainly taken in this sense, Ezek. xvi. 20, 21; and xxiii. 37; where it is explained by "slaying them," "sacrificing them," and "giving them to be devoured."

Some criticks are of opinion, that the exposition is taken in a milder sense, in other texts, particularly 2 Kings xvi. 3; and that it only denotes holding the children over the fire, or making them pass through the flame, by way of lustration or dedication to some idol. To confirm this interpretation they observe, that the Hebrew verb used in the text signifies to dedicate or consecrate; see Exod. xiii. 12. W. Lowth.

The fact in all probability was, that the more tenderhearted parents were content simply to dedicate their children, waving them perhaps over the fire that was burning before the idol, without doing them any corporal hurt; whilst the gloomy superstition of others prompted them to go greater lengths, and to perpetrate the most inhuman barbarities under the notion of religious worship. Both however were guilty of actions highly offensive to God, and provoking His resentment. Dr. Blayney.

36. And now therefore thus saith the Lord,] In this and the following verses God gives an answer to the doubt proposed by the Prophet in ver. 25. Or the words may be thus translated, "But now, notwithstanding (all this), thus saith the Lord." See the note on chap. xvi. 14. W. Lowth.

37. — and I will cause them to dwell safely:] St. Jerome observes, that this promise, taken in its full extent, was not made good to those that returned from captivity, because they were frequently infested with wars, as well by the kings of Syria and Egypt, as by the rest of their neighbours, as appears from the history of the Maccabees; and were finally subdued and destroyed by the Romans. W. Lowth.

39. And I will give them one heart, and one way,] I will give them unity of mind and judgment, as to the things of God: they shall not be, some of superstitious and idolatrous worship, and some for My true worship. Poole.

40. And I will make an everlasting covenant with them,] The Jewish covenant, with respect to the ceremonial ordinances contained in it, is sometimes called "an everlasting covenant;" see Gen. xvii. 13; Lev. xxiv. 8; Is. xxiv. 5; because those ordinances were to last till the age of the Messiah, called the "age," or "the world to come," Heb. ii. 5; vi. 5. But when this expression is applied to the Gospel covenant, there is a peculiar emphasis in it, implying that it should never be abolished, or give way to any other dispensation. See chap. l. 5; Is. lv. 3; compared with Ps. lxxxix. 34, 35. W. Lowth.

41. Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good,] I will take pleasure in doing them good according to My promise, Deut. xxx. 9; whereas before, "the Lord rejoiced over them to destroy them," Deut. xxviii. 63 which God is never said to do, but when men have filled up the measure of their iniquities. See the notes upon Gen. vi. 6; Deut. i. 34. W. Lowth.

44. Men shall buy fields for money, &c.] There shall be an ordinary course of bargains and purchases, and all those forms of legal transactions which are usual on such occasions. Bp. Hall.

— in the land of Benjamin, &c.] For these divisions of the kingdom of Judah, see chap. xvii. 26, and the note there.

Chap. XXXIII. This chapter contains a prophecy, which, though applicable in some parts to the restoration of the Jews from Babylon, cannot however be so understood upon the whole.

God reveals His gracious purpose of healing the wounds of Jerusalem, restoring the captivity of Judah, forgiving their sins, and distinguishing them with such blessings, as to strike the astonished nations with fear and trembling, ver. 1—9. He foretells that the land, whose desolation they deplored, should again flourish with multitudes, both of men and cattle, ver. 10—13. He confirms His former promise of establishing a kingdom of righteousness in a branch of the house of David, and rendering it perpetual, together with the priesthood of the sons of Levi, ver. 14—18. He declares His covenant in this respect with David and the Levites to be as sure as the covenant of day and night, ver. 19—22. And, to remove the reproach of having cast off those families, whom He had once distinguished by His choice, He renews His protestations of infallibly restoring the seed of Jacob, and of appointing the seed of David to rule over them for ever, ver. 23 to the end. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 2. — the maker thereof,] Rather, "the doer of it," that is, of "the word," or of the thing which God says. Dr. Blayney.

Before CHRIST about 590.

8 Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and ‖ mighty things, which thou knowest not.

6 Behold, I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, and will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth.

7 And I will cause the captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel to return, and will build them, as at the first.

14 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah.

8. — which thou knowest not.] Whether this means the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, or the times of the Messiah, both had been already foretold by Jeremiah as plainly as they are expressed here. Perhaps therefore God speaks not to the Prophet, but to the people, who were backward to know what they might have known; and as some presumed on false predictions in their favour, so some despaired of the true, chap. xxxii. 36. Abp. Secker. Or, probably, it means "things which thou neither didst nor couldst know," but by revelation. Dr. Blayney.

4. — by the mounts, and by the sword;] By the battering engines, placed upon the mounts; see note on chap. xxxii. 24; and by the violence of war. W. Lowth.

8. And I will cleanse them from all their iniquity,] I will not impute their sins any longer to them, but remit the punishments I have inflicted upon them for their iniquities. The whole verse implies that general promise of pardon of sins, which is elsewhere spoken of as the peculiar blessing of the Gospel: compare chap. xxxi. 34; Ezek. xxxvi. 25. W. Lowth.

9. And it shall be to me a name of joy, &c.] God's especial providence over the Jews, in restoring their city and temple, shall be taken notice of by the heathen world, and make them give glory to that God, whom they worship: see Ezra i. 2; vi. 12. To the same sense God is said to "make Jerusalem a praise in the earth," Isai. lxii. 7; that is, the subject of men's praise and admiration, the glory of which redounds to God, who is her Protector. This promise is more signally fulfilled in the Christian Church, which the heathens resorted to, as the seat and temple of truth: see Isa. ii. 3; Zech. viii. 21, 23. W. Lowth.

11. — the voice of them that shall say, Praise the Lord &c.] We read, that those who returned from captivity used this very hymn. Ezra iii. 11. W. Lowth.

—— the sacrifice of praise] Such as was offered upon any great deliverance. See Levit. vii. 12; Psal. cvii. 22; cxvi. 17. The word here used signifies praise and thanksgiving in general; and is used for those choirs or companies, who make a solemn thanksgiving-procession upon the dedication of the new wall of Jerusalem, Nehem. xii. 31, 38, 40. This is called by St. Paul "the sacrifice of praise, that is, the fruit of our lips," Hebr. xiii. 15, to distinguish it from the oblations commanded by the law, which consisted of the fruits of the ground, or of the flock and herd. W. Lowth.

13. — under the hands of him that telleth them,] That is, of their shepherds, who number their cattle by striking with their rod every one as it comes out of the fold. See Levit. xxvii. 32. W. Lowth.

14. — I will perform that good thing which I have promised] The coming of the Messiah was that good thing which God had promised, which is therefore called in a peculiar manner, "The promise made unto the fathers," Acts xiii. 32, as being the greatest of all the promises, and that in which all the rest were comprehended. Bp. Beveridge.

15. In those days, — will I cause the Branch of righteousness &c.] See the notes on chap. xxiii. 6.

16. — and this is the name wherewith she shall be called,] The simplest interpretation of the original words is, "He that shall call her," that is, to be His peculiar people, "is the Lord our Righteousness." Bp. Pearson.

17. — David shall never want a man &c.] So long as Israel remained a kingdom, those of the line of David ruled over it: when that failed, Christ came in the flesh, who ruleth, and shall rule, over the Israel of God for ever. Poole. In a spiritual sense, the kingdom of Christ, the Son of David, has been for some time established over those whom the Apostle calls "the Israel of God," Gal. vi. 16; and the "children of Abraham," Gal. iii. 7; meaning thereby all true believers, whether of the Jews or of the Gentiles. And in the Church of Christ there hath been a constant and uninterrupted succession of persons appointed to perform the publick offices of religion in the room of, although not taken out of, the family of the priests the Levites. And the perpetuity of this kingdom and this priesthood is, in the opinion of many learned expositors, looked upon as a full and authentick completion of the intention of this prophecy. Dr. Blayney. These promises can only respect the eternal priesthood of Jesus, exercised by Himself and His ministers in the Christian Church. Calmet.

18. — to offer burnt offerings, &c.] It is not necessary to suppose, that the same sacrifices shall continue to be offered in the Christian Church, which are prescribed by the Mosaick law; but, as that law is abrogated, we may fairly understand those sacrifices figuratively to denote the offices of a more spiritual worship substituted in their stead. Dr. Blayney. See the notes on Isa. xix. 19; lxvi. 23.

24. — The two families which the Lord hath chosen,] Some suppose the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah to be intended; others the royal and sacerdotal families of David and Levi. Dr. Blayney.

25. — my covenant — the ordinances] The "covenant" is that above mentioned "of the day and of the night," (ver. 20,) which continually succeed each other without interruption: "the ordinances of heaven and earth" are the stated order of things in both, such as the system of numberless stars in the heavens, and the immeasurable sand of the sea, (ver. 22,) all which God claims to be of His ordering and appointment. Dr. Blayney.

Chap. XXXIV. This chapter contains two distinct prophecies. The first of which is dated at the time when Nebuchadnezzar was carrying on the siege of Jerusalem, and of the cities of Lachish and Azekah, most probably towards the latter end of the ninth year of Zedekiah, the siege having been begun in the tenth month of that year. The second prophecy was delivered some time afterwards, when the Chaldeans had broken up the siege, and were marched off to meet the Egyptian army, which made a shew of coming to the relief of Jerusalem. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — all the cities thereof,] See ver. 7; the lesser cities of Judea, which were subject to Jerusalem, as their metropolis; called elsewhere "the daughters of Judah," by way of distinction from the mother city. Compare chap. xlix. 2; li. 43. W. Lowth.

2. — Thus saith the Lord; Behold, I will give this city &c.] This prophecy was fulfilled in all its parts. "I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire:" so says the Prophet; the history relates, "They," that is, the forces of the king of Babylon, "burnt the house of God, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, and burnt all the palaces thereof with fire," 2 Chron. xxxvi. 19. "Thou shalt not escape out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand:" so says the Prophet; the history relates, "The men of war fled by night, and the king went the way toward the plain, and the army of the Chaldeans pursued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho; and all his army were scattered from him: so they took the king, and brought him up to the king

4 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O Zedekiah king of Judah; Thus saith the LORD of thee, Thou shalt not die by the sword:

5 But thou shalt die in peace: and with the burnings of thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee, so shall they burn odours for thee; and they will lament thee, saying, Ah lord! for I have pronounced the word, saith the LORD.

6 Then Jeremiah the prophet spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem, of Babylon, to Riblah," 2 Kings xxv. 4—6. The Prophet goes on: "Thine eyes shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth." No pleasant circumstance this to Zedekiah, who had provoked the king of Babylon, by revolting from him. The history says, "The king of Babylon gave judgment upon Zedekiah," or, as it is more literally rendered from the Hebrew, "spake judgment with him at Riblah." The Prophet concludes this part with, "and thou shalt go to Babylon;" the history says, "The king of Babylon bound him in chains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison till the day of his death," Jer. lii. 11. "Thou shalt not die by the sword." He did not die by the sword, he did not fall in battle. "But thou shalt die in peace." He did die in peace; he expired neither on the rack nor on the scaffold; was neither strangled, nor poisoned; no unusual fate of captive kings! he died peaceably in his bed, though that bed was in a prison. "And with the burnings of thy fathers shall they burn odours for thee." It cannot be proved from history, that this part of the prophecy was accomplished; though the probability is, that it was so; the probability is grounded on those two reasons, Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, to say nothing of other Jews, were men of great authority in the court of the king of Babylon, before and after the commencement of the imprisonment of Zedekiah; and Daniel continued in power till the subversion of the kingdom of Babylon by Cyrus. Now it seems very probable, that Daniel and the other Jews would have both inclination to request, and influence enough with the king of Babylon to obtain, permission to bury their deceased prince Zedekiah after the manner of his fathers. But if there had been no Jews at Babylon of consequence enough to make such a request, still it is probable that the king of Babylon would have ordered the Jews to bury and lament their departed prince after the manner of their country. Monarchs, like other men, are conscious of the instability of human condition; and when the pomp of war has ceased, when the insolence of conquest is abated, and the fury of resentment is subsided, they seldom fail to revere royalty even in its ruins, and grant without reluctance proper obsequies to the remains of captive kings.—By Watson.

7 When the king of Babylon's army fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against Lachish, and against Azekah: for these defenced cities remained of the cities of Judah.

5. — so shall they burn odours for thee;] It was customary among the Jews, at the funeral of their kings, to prepare "a bed of spices," 2 Chron. xvi. 14, of which they made a perfume by burning them, and therein to deposit the body of the deceased prince. Compare 2 Chron. xxi. 19. W. Lowth.

8. — to proclaim liberty unto them;] By the law of Moses, (Exod. xxi. 2; Deut. xv. 12,) the Israelites were not allowed to detain their brethren of the Hebrew race in perpetual bondage, but were required to let them go free after having served six years. This law had, it seems, fallen into disuse; but king Zedekiah, upon the approach of the Chaldean army, whether from religious motives, or a political view to employ the men, who were set free, in the service of the war, engaged the people to act conformably to the law; and they released their brethren accordingly. But no sooner were their fears abated by the retreat of the Chaldeans, than, in defiance of every principle of religion, honour, and humanity, they imposed the yoke of servitude anew upon those unhappy persons, ver. 11. Dr. Blayney.

14. At the end of seven years] The seventh year was the year of release, Deut. xv. 9; consequently servants were to continue in service but six years, and at the beginning of the seventh were to be let go free; see ver. 12. For this reason some critics render the phrase here, "within the term of seven years." And the words mean no more, as appears by a like form of speech, Deut. xiv. 28, where it is said, "At the end of three years thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase the same year:" which is to be explained by what is said chap. xxvi. 12, where every "third year" is called "the year of tithing." So Christ is said to "rise again after three days," Mark viii. 31; which is elsewhere explained by his rising the "third day." W. Lowth.

CHAP. XXXV.

1 By the obedience of the Rechabites, 12 Jeremiah condemneth the disobedience of the Jews. 18 God blesseth the Rechabites for their obedience.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying, about 607.

2 Go unto the house of the Rechabites, and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the LORD, into one of the chambers, and give them wine to drink.

3 Then I took Jaazaniah the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziniah, and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites;

17. — I proclaim a liberty for you, — to the sword, &c.] I give full liberty to the sword, and to the pestilence, and to the famine, to seize upon you. Bp. Hall.

18. — when they cut the calf in twain,] See the note on Gen. xv. 10.

As Zedekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, on finding themselves besieged, set at liberty their Hebrew servants, and pretended they would observe the law of God; but afterwards, imagining they had nothing to fear, changed their minds, and made slaves again of their brethren: thus sinners pretend to humble themselves, and seem disposed to repentance, while they are threatened and the danger is near; but as soon as their fears are over, they break their promises, and return to their sins. Jeremiah's reproaches and threatenings of the Jews for their impious and unjust proceedings shew, that a repentance and a reformation, which is but of short duration, instead of pacifying God, only provokes Him the more; and that those, who violate His covenant and their own promises, shall not escape the punishments which their hypocrisy and infidelity deserve. Ostervald.

Chap. XXXV. All the intermediate prophecies from chap. xxvi, belong clearly to the reign of Zedekiah; and consequently are posterior to this chapter and the next, which are dated in the reign of Jehoiakim, together with chap. xlv, which is closely connected with the latter of these two chapters. The Rechabites appear to have retired within the walls of Jerusalem, upon the hostile approach of Nebuchadnezzar and his army, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 2. Go unto the house of the Rechabites, — and give them wine to drink.] Here God trieth the Rechabites, as He also tried Abraham, Gen. xxii. 1. There appear to be two reasons why He made this trial of their obedience: the one was, for their own greater advantage and improvement; the other was, that their fidelity and firm adherence to the injunction of their ancestor might be rendered more conspicuous, and might excite the Jews to emulate their virtue. God tempts us in His justice, in order to prove the sincerity of our obedience; and in His goodness, in order to promote our own profit and the benefit of others. Wogan.

— the house of the Rechabites,] The Rechabites, as may be collected from ver. 7, were not of the children of Israel, but strangers of another race, who dwelt amongst them. From 1 Chron. ii. 55, they appear to have been Kenites, a people originally settled in that part of Arabia Petræa, which was called the land of Midian; and most probably the descendants of Jethro, who is called a Kenite, and said to have severed himself from the rest of his countrymen, and to have dwelt amongst the people of Israel. Compare Numb. x. 29—32, with Judg. i. 16; iv. 11. At what time Rechab lived, who gave his name to the family, is not certain, nor whether he was the immediate father, or more remote ancestor, of Jonadab; for the word "son" often denotes nothing more than a lineal descendant. But it is most likely, that the Jonadab here spoken of was the same person, of whom mention is made 2 Kings x. 15; (see the note there.) The institutions he left with his posterity bespeak a principal concern for the purity of their morals, which he might rightly suppose would be less liable to be corrupted, whilst they adhered to the simplicity of their ancient usages, than if they adopted the refinements of modern luxury. He therefore enjoined them, not only to abstain from the use of wine, but to live as the patriarchs did of old, and as many of their countrymen, the Scenite Arabs, continue to do at this day, without any fixed habitations or possessions, far from the society of cities, in the open country, feeding their flocks, and maintaining themselves by the produce of them. Dr. Blayney.

Before CHRIST about 607.

4 And I brought them into the house of the LORD, into the chamber of the sons of Hanan, the son of Igdaliah, a man of God, which was by the chamber of the princes, which was above the chamber of Maaseiah the son of Shallum, the keeper of the † door:

† Heb. threshold, or, vessel.

5 And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups, and I said unto them, Drink ye wine.

6 But they said, We will drink no wine: for Jonadab the son of Rechab our father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye, nor your sons for ever:

7 Neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any: but all your days ye shall dwell in tents; that ye may live many days in the land where ye be strangers.

8 Thus have we obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab our father in all that he hath charged us, to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters;

9 Nor to build houses for us to dwell in: neither have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed:

10 But we have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us.

11 But it came to pass, when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians: so we dwell at Jerusalem.

12 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Go and tell the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the LORD.

Before CHRIST about 607.

14 The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons not to drink wine, are performed; for unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment: notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; but ye hearkened not unto me.

15 I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, [a] Return ye now every man from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers: but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me.

16 Because the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them; but this people hath not hearkened unto me:

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them: because I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard; and I have called unto them, but they have not answered.

18 ¶ And Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts, and done according unto all that he hath commanded you:

19 Therefore thus saith the LORD of

4. — into the house of the Lord, into the chamber of — Hanan,] There were several chambers adjoining to the temple for the use of the priests and Levites during the time of their ministration: and as repositories for laying up the holy vestments and vessels, and whatever stores were necessary for the daily sacrifices, and the other parts of the temple service. Compare chap. xxvi. 10; 1 Kings vi. 5; 1 Chron. ix. 27—30. W. Lowth.

—— a man of God,] This name appears to be always used to denote a Prophet, one who had been employed on a Divine commission. Dr. Blayney.

—— which was by the chamber of the princes,] Where the Sanhedrim, or great council, used to assemble: see chap. xxvi. 10. The Sanhedrim always sat in some great room adjoining the temple. Dr. Lightfoot.

11. — so we dwell at Jerusalem.] Upon the Chaldean invasion we retired to Jerusalem, where, during the siege of the place, we are forced to continue. In such a case they did not think themselves obliged to a strict observance of the injunctions of Jonadab; because all human laws admit of an equitable construction, and may be superseded in cases of necessity, or when the observance of them is attended with such great inconveniences, as the lawgiver himself, if he could have foreseen, would probably have made ground of exception. W. Lowth.

15. I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, &c.] God here explains why he had commissioned the Prophet to bring the Rechabites into the temple, and commanded him to set wine before them, and invite them to drink it; namely, that by their refusing to comply with the invitation, in obedience to their father Jonadab, He might convince the Jews of their disobedience to His commands, though those commands were more obligatory than the commands of Jonadab. For, 1st, Jonadab was but an earthly parent, and so had no absolute universal sovereignty over his children; but God was "the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel." 2dly, Jonadab's commands were not for the performance of any moral duty, but the doing of a thing, which they might do or leave undone; God required of them what was but their moral duty, and for which there was the highest reason. 3dly, Jonadab's commands had no promise annexed; God's precept had a promise annexed, yet they had not yielded Him that obedience which the sons of Jonadab had yielded him. He was the Father, but where was His honour? Poyle.

1 Jeremiah causeth Baruch to write his prophecy. 5 and publickly to read it. 11 The princes, having intelligence thereof by Michaiah, send Jehudi to fetch the roll, and read it. 19 They will Baruch to hide himself and Jeremiah. 20 The king Jehoiakim, being certified thereof, heareth part of it, and burneth the roll. 27 Jeremiah denounceth his judgment. 32 Baruch writeth a new copy.

3 It may be that the house of Judah will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them; that they may return every man from his evil way; that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin.

4 Then Jeremiah called Baruch the son of Neriah: and Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the LORD, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book. Before CHRIST about 607.

5 And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am shut up; I cannot go into the house of the LORD:

6 Therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the LORD in the ears of the people in the LORD's house upon the fasting day: and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities.

9 And it came to pass in the fifth year about 606. of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they proclaimed a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem.

19. — Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to stand before me for ever.] When the main body of the Jewish nation are dispersed in their several captivities, some of the family of the Rechabites shall remain to attend upon My service, and enjoy the privileges of worshipping in My temple at Jerusalem. For to stand in the presence of a prince implies an attendance in some degree upon his person and service, 1 Kings x. 8: and therefore to "stand before God" must denote at least the privilege of treading His courts, and worshipping Him among the train of His chosen servants and followers. Some branches of this family returned from the captivity, as appears from 1 Chron. ii. 55.

The expression "for ever" is not always to be taken in a strict sense; but often means only a long continuance, and is used comparatively with respect to a shorter duration. See the notes on chap. xxv. 9; xxxii. 40. W. Lowth.

Of so great price in the sight of God is the virtue of filial duty and obedience, that it seldom fails of its reward even in this world. The law, which enjoined it, had a promise of long life annexed thereto; Exod. xx. 12; and it is distinguished by the Apostle as "the first commandment with promise," Eph. vi. 2. And by this history of the Rechabites we may learn, that the surest way to entail a blessing on our children, and to perpetuate our names and families in a numerous and virtuous issue, is to reverence and obey our own parents. Wogan.

Chap. XXXVI. ver. 2. — a roll of a book,] Compare Is. viii. 1; Ezek. ii. 9; Zech. v. 1. The ancient manner of writing was upon long scrolls of parchment, which were afterwards rolled upon sticks. W. Lowth.

—— against Israel, and against Judah,] Jeremiah prophesied against Israel as well as against Judah: see chap. ii. 4; iii. 12, 14, &c.; ix. 26; xxiii. 13; xxxii. 30, 32. The kingdom of Israel indeed had been destroyed by Shalmaneser before the time of Jeremiah: but yet the Prophet was ordered to reprove their sins, both to manifest the justice of God in punishing them so severely, and withal to warn the rest of the Jews by their example. Besides, there were some remains of the ten tribes, who joined themselves to the tribe of Judah. W. Lowth.

5. — I am shut up; I cannot go into the house of the Lord:] I must keep close, upon the command of the Lord, and not stir forth. See chap. xxxvii. 4. Bp. Hall. It is not said, that he was shut up in prison, but barely that he was "shut up," or confined; or, taken in connexion with the following context, under some such confinement or restraint, as precluded him from going to the house of the Lord. This might have been in a variety of ways, without being shut up in prison, a species of persecution which does not appear to have befallen him about this time. Dr. Blayney.

6. — in the ears of the people] The Prophets usually published their declarations in the hearing of the people; see chap. vii. 2; xi. 6; xvii. 20: and they were afterwards delivered in writing for common use. W. Lowth.

—— upon the fasting day:] Rather, "upon a fast day;" (see ver. 9,) a day which had been appointed to be observed as such by all the people, on account, it is supposed, of the city having been taken by Nebuchadnezzar the same day in the preceding year. Dr. Blayney.

10. — in the chamber &c.] Most probably from the window or balcony of it, that looked into the higher court, where the people were gathered together in crowds below. Dr. Blayney.

Before CHRIST about 606.

Shaphan the scribe, in the higher court, at the ‖ [b] entry of the new gate of the LORD's house, in the ears of all the people.

[a] Or, door. [b] Chap. 26. 10.

11 ¶ When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the LORD,

12 Then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's chamber: and, lo, all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor, and Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes.

13 Then Michaiah declared unto them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people.

14 Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came unto them.

15 And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears.

16 Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, they were afraid both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words.

17 And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words at his mouth?

18 Then Baruch answered them, He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink in the book.

Before CHRIST about 605.

19 Then said the princes unto Baruch, Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah; and let no man know where ye be.

20 ¶ And they went in to the king into the court, but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king.

21 So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll: and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber. And Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king.

22 Now the king sat in the winterhouse in the ninth month: and there was a fire on the hearth burning before him.

23 And it came to pass, that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves, he cut it with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the hearth.

24 Yet they were not afraid, nor rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words.

25 Nevertheless Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll: but he would not hear them.

26 But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son ‖ of Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to take Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet: but the LORD hid them.

—— in the higher court.] That part of the court of the people, which was in front of the inner court, was most probably that which is here called "the higher court." Dr. Blayney.

12. — all the princes sat there.] The chief officers of state, who were probably members also of the great Sanhedrim. See chap. xxvi. 10; xxxviii. 4. W. Lowth.

19. Then said the princes unto Baruch, Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah;] They thought it their duty to acquaint the king with the matter, ver. 16; yet were unwilling that Jeremiah and Baruch should feel the effects of his displeasure. W. Lowth.

20. And they went in to the king into the court,] They were before in the king's house, ver. 12; that is, in the exterior precincts of the palace, where were apartments and offices fitted up for the principal officers of state, and for the attendants of the court. But from what is here said it appears, that there was an interior range of building for the king's personal residence, disposed, as is the fashion of the great houses of the East at this day, round an open court or quadrangle, and containing apartments appropriated for summer and winter use. Dr. Blayney.

22. — in the winterhouse] There is a distinction made in the Prophets between winter and summer houses, here, and in Amos iii. 15. Probably this may be illustrated by the accounts given by Dr. Shaw of the country seats and gardens about Algiers, whither the inhabitants of better fashion retire during the heat of the summer. Harmer. Or, what the Prophets here say may be understood of the different apartments in the same house. Dr. Russell. See the preceding note.

—— in the ninth month:] Answering to the end of November, and the beginning of December. See the notes on Exod. xii. 2. Neh. xiii. 4.

—— there was a fire on the hearth burning before him.] In many parts of the East it is usual to have great brasiers of lighted coals for fires, the manner in which persons sit not allowing them to be near a chimney. This was probably the sort of fire burning before Jehoiakim. Accordingly, in the Latin Vulgate, the word which we render "hearth," is translated by one signifying a little altar. Sir J. Chardin, Dr. Blayney.

23. — three or four leaves,] Their books were made in form of a roll, see ver. 2; and were not divided into leaves or pages as ours are. By "leaves" we are probably to understand the columns, or several partitions, into which the breadth of the parchment was divided. W. Lowth. Or, the different sections of those prophecies, which being delivered at different times, and having a relation to different subjects, have each a proper beginning and ending of its own. Dr. Blayney.

—— the penknife,] The implements for writing were probably lying on the table before the king, ready for the scribe's or secretary's use, in case of there being occasion for writing orders or despatches. Dr. Blayney.

Before CHRIST about 605.

27 ¶ Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying,

28 Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned.

29 And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the LORD; Thou hast burned this roll, saying, Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast?

30 Therefore thus saith the LORD of Jehoiakim king of Judah; He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David: and his dead body shall be [c] cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost.

1 The Egyptians having raised the siege of the Chaldeans, king Zedekiah sendeth to Jeremiah to pray for the people. 6 Jeremiah prophesieth the Chaldeans' certain return and victory. 11 He is taken for a fugitive, beaten, and put in prison. 16 He assureth Zedekiah of the captivity. 18 Intreating for his liberty, he obtaineth some favour.

AND king [a] Zedekiah the son of Josiah reigned instead of Coniah the son of Jehoiakim, whom Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon made king in the land of Judah.

Before CHRIST about 599.

2 But neither he, nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the LORD, which he spake † by the prophet Jeremiah.

† Heb. by the hand of the prophet.

3 And Zedekiah the king sent Jehucal the son of Shelemiah and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest to the prophet Jeremiah, saying, Pray now unto the LORD our God for us.

Before CHRIST 590.

4 Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people: for they had not put him into prison.

5 Then Pharaoh's army was come forth out of Egypt: and when the Chaldeans that besieged Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they departed from Jerusalem.

6 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto the prophet Jeremiah, saying,

7 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; Thus shall ye say to the king of Judah, that sent you unto me to enquire of me; Behold, Pharaoh's army, which is come forth to help you, shall return to Egypt into their own land.

8 And the Chaldeans shall come again, and fight against this city, and take it, and burn it with fire.

30. — in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost.] In Syria, and in other parts of the East, it appears from the accounts of various authors, that the nights are as cold and frosty as the days are sultry. Harmer. See the note on Gen. xxxi. 40.

32. — and there were added besides unto them many like words.] And this was all that Jehoiakim got by burning the prophecy of Jeremiah. When Jeremiah and Baruch wrote the second roll, they were directed by God to add to it several things, which were not in the former; aggravations, no doubt, of Jehoiakim's punishment for his impious burning of the first roll. And very just it was, that his doom should be aggravated. For, if every abuse of temporal blessings shall be imputed, as certainly it shall, to wicked men, to augment their reckoning at the last day; much less shall spiritual wantonness and intemperance be overlooked, and escape such imputation. Reading.

Chap. XXXVII. ver. 1. — Zedekiah — whom Nebuchadrezzar — made king.] He made him a tributary king, by imposing on him an oath of homage to the king of Babylon. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13; Ezek. xvii. 13. W. Lowth.

3. — Jehucal the son of Shelemiah.] This man came in the place of Pashur, who, together with Zephaniah, brought the former message from Zedekiah. See the introductory note to chap. xxi. Dr. Blayney.

12. — to separate himself thence in the midst of the people.] He went forth from Jerusalem with the rest of his countrymen, to go into his native place, in the tribe of Benjamin, to live there apart for a time. Bp. Hall.

† Heb. falleth, or, a lie.

14 Then said Jeremiah, It is † false; I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him: so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes.

15 Wherefore the princes were wroth with Jeremiah, and smote him, and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe: for they had made that the prison.

16 ¶ When Jeremiah was entered into the dungeon, and into the ‖ cabins, and Jeremiah had remained there many days;

589. 17 Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out: and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is: for, said he, thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon.

18 Moreover Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, What have I offended against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison?

19 Where are now your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land?

20 Therefore hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: † let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there.

Before CHRIST 589.

21 Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah into the court of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street, until all the bread in the city were spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

1 Jeremiah, by a false suggestion, is put into the dungeon of Malchiah. 7 Ebed-melech, by suit, getteth him some enlargement. 14 Upon secret conference he counselleth the king by yielding to save his life. 24 By the king's instructions he concealeth the conference from the princes.

THEN Shephatiah the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and Pashur the son of Malchiah, heard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, [a] He that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live.

3 Thus saith the LORD, This city shall surely be given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it.

4 Therefore the princes said unto the king, We beseech thee, let this man be put to death: for thus he weakeneth the hands

—— Hananiah.] Probably that Hananiah, whose death Jeremiah foretold, chap. xxviii. 17. If so, this descendant of his thought to revenge his grandfather's quarrel. W. Loveth.

15. — for they had made that the prison.] There is nothing extraordinary in making the dwelling-house of a great man a prison, according to either the ancient or modern manners of the East. See Gen. xxxix. 20. Even in the royal palace itself we find there was a prison, chap. xxxii. 2. Sir John Chardin says, "The Eastern prisons are not publick buildings erected for that purpose, but a part of the house in which their criminal judges dwell. As the governour and provost of a town, or the captain of the watch, imprison such as are accused in their own houses, they set apart a canton of it for that purpose, when they are put into these offices, and choose for the jailor the most proper person they can find of their domesticks." Jonathan's house probably became a prison in consequence of his being made a royal scribe, or, as we should term him, secretary of state. Dr. Blayney, Harmer.

16. — into the dungeon, and into the cabins.] Or "cells," as in the margin. The dungeon appears to have been an underground prison with separate cells or apartments for the prisoners. Calmet.

17. — thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon.] It is a proof of the firmness and integrity of the Prophet, that he should thus predict the captivity and afflictions of his sovereign; especially at a moment when he had incurred the perilous suspicion of favouring the cause of the enemy. Richards.

20. — lest I die there.] A discretionary power is given to the keeper to treat his prisoners just as he pleases. If he receives large fees, he will treat the accused well: but if he has a greater regard for those who have imprisoned a man, he will treat the prisoner with the greatest inhumanity. This account of Eastern imprisonment gives great force to the supplication of Jeremiah, that he might not be remanded to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest he should die there. Sir J. Chardin, Harmer.

21. — into the court of the prison.] Not belonging to the house of Jonathan the scribe, where the dungeon was; but the court of the prison in the king's house, mentioned chap. xxxii. 2. Dr. Blayney.

21. — the bakers' street.] In ancient times an oven in the East was designed to serve only a single family. "The bakers' street" was perhaps a temporary regulation to supply the wants of the soldiers assembled for the defence of Jerusalem; as at Algier, according to Dr. Shaw, besides money, the soldiers receive each a number of loaves every day. If so, it was natural for the king to order Jeremiah a piece or cake of bread from thence every day after the same manner. Harmer.

It is here to be noticed, that God protected Jeremiah, and softened the heart of Zedekiah towards him, so that he not only saved him from the dungeon, but fed him likewise, while the siege lasted and the famine prevailed in Jerusalem. This Providence sets bounds to the malice of the wicked, delivers the righteous, and causes good men to meet with comfort and assistance in the worst of times. Outervald.

Chap. XXXVIII. This chapter, with which the four last verses of chap. xxxix. are obviously connected, contains the last transaction, in which Jeremiah was prophetically concerned before the taking of Jerusalem. Dr. Blayney.

Before CHRIST 589. of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them: for this man seeketh not the † welfare of this people, but the hurt.

5 Then Zedekiah the king said, Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do any thing against you.

6 Then took they Jeremiah, and cast him into the dungeon of Malchiah the son ‖ of Hammelech, that was in the court of the prison: and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire: so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.

7 ¶ Now when Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, one of the eunuchs which was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the dungeon; the king then sitting in the gate of Benjamin;

8 Ebed-melech went forth out of the king's house, and spake to the king, saying,

9 My lord the king, these men have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the dungeon; and † he is like to die for hunger in the place where he is: for there is no more bread in the city.

10 Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Take from hence thirty men † with thee, and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die.

11 So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king under the treasury, and took thence old cast clouts and old rotten rags, and let them down by cords into the dungeon to Jeremiah.

Before CHRIST 589.

12 And Ebed-melech the Ethiopian said unto Jeremiah, Put now these old cast clouts and rotten rags under thine armholes under the cords. And Jeremiah did so.

13 So they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: and Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

14 ¶ Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the ‖ third entry that is in the house of the LORD: and the king said unto Jeremiah, I will ask thee a thing; hide nothing from me.

15 Then Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, If I declare it unto thee, wilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken unto me?

16 So Zedekiah the king sware secretly unto Jeremiah, saying, As the LORD liveth, that made us this soul, I will not put thee to death, neither will I give thee into the hand of these men that seek thy life.

17 Then said Jeremiah unto Zedekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel; If thou wilt assuredly go forth unto the king of Babylon's princes, then thy soul shall live, and this city shall not be burned with fire; and thou shalt live, and thine house:

18 But if thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babylon's princes, then shall this city be given into the hand of the Chal-

Ver. 5. — for the king is not he that can do any thing against you.] The king evidently speaks this in disgust with the princes for endeavouring to frustrate his clemency. He had once rescued Jeremiah out of their hands, and taken him under his royal protection. But his prerogative, he tells them, was likely to avail but little, when opposed by their obstinate and repeated importunities. The power was in reality theirs, and not his. Dr. Blayney.

7. — Ebed-melech the Ethiopian.] Josephus mentions, that Solomon, amongst other merchandise, brought slaves from Ethiopia; which was afterwards the practice of the Greeks and Romans. Such a slave probably Ebed-melech was; called here an eunuch, or officer of the king's house. Compare chap. xxix. 2; xxxiv. 19. In the Hebrew he is called the Cushite. W. Lowth. See the note on Numb. xii. 1.

It is particularly noted that he was an Ethiopian or Cushite, to let us know that this Prophet of the Lord found more kindness from a stranger who was a native heathen, than from his own countrymen. Poole.

—— the king then sitting in the gate of Benjamin.] That is, in the publick place of judicature. Bp. Hall. See the notes on Gen. xxiii. 10; Job v. 4.

9. — these men have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah] An honourable testimony to the probity of the Prophet's character. Bp. Watson.

—— for there is no more bread in the city.] The stores are almost all spent. Poole.

14. — into the third entry.] Most probably the farthest part of the passage, leading from the king's house to the altar in the temple, and terminating with the "brasen scaffold," mentioned 2 Chron. vi. 13. To this, as the most retired place, king Zedekiah may have brought the Prophet, to confer with him with the greatest privacy. Dr. Blayney.

15. — If I declare it unto thee, wilt thou not surely put me to death?] The Prophet had so much experience of the unsteadiness of the king's temper, of his backwardness in following good counsel, and want of courage to stand by those that durst advise him well, that he might with good reason resolve not to venture his life to serve a man, that was in a manner incapable of being directed. And although God had shewed him what would be the effect of his advice, if it were followed, (ver. 17,) yet it doth not appear that He had commanded him to make this known to Zedekiah. W. Lowth.

—— wilt thou not hearken unto me?] Rather, "thou wilt not hearken to me." The Prophet might well conclude so from his former behaviour, chap. xxxvii. 2. W. Lowth, Dr. Blayney.

17. — then thy soul shall live, &c.] See the notes on chap. iv. 23; xvii. 25.

The advice of Jeremiah clearly proves, that the destruction of Zedekiah was not so determined, but that he might have prevented it. The Divine threatenings and predictions, and God's knowledge of futurity, do not deprive men of their liberty, since the evils, with which they are threatened, are brought on them by their own fault. Osterwald.

Before CHRIST 589. deans, and they shall burn it with fire, and thou shalt not escape out of their hand.

19 And Zedekiah the king said unto Jeremiah, I am afraid of the Jews that are fallen to the Chaldeans, lest they deliver me into their hand, and they mock me.

20 But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver thee. Obey, I beseech thee, the voice of the LORD, which I speak unto thee: so it shall be well unto thee, and thy soul shall live.

21 But if thou refuse to go forth, this is the word that the LORD hath shewed me:

22 And, behold, all the women that are left in the king of Judah's house shall be brought forth to the king of Babylon's princes, and those women shall say, † Thy friends have set thee on, and have prevailed against thee: thy feet are sunk in the mire, and they are turned away back.

23 So they shall bring out all thy wives and thy children to the Chaldeans: and thou shalt not escape out of their hand, but shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon: and † thou shalt cause this city to be burned with fire.

24 ¶ Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, Let no man know of these words, and thou shalt not die.

25 But if the princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say unto thee, Declare unto us now what thou hast said unto the king, hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death; also what the king said unto thee:

26 Then thou shalt say unto them, I presented my supplication before the king, that he would not cause me to return to Jonathan's house, to die there.

Before CHRIST 588.

27 Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him: and he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded. So † they left off speaking with him; for the matter was not perceived.

† Heb. the words were not heard from him.

28 So Jeremiah abode in the court of the prison until the day that Jerusalem was taken: and he was there when Jerusalem was taken.

CHAP. XXXIX.

1 Jerusalem is taken. 4 Zedekiah is made blind, and sent to Babylon. 11 Nebuchadrezzar's charge for the good usage of Jeremiah. 15 God's promise to Ebed-melech.

IN the [a] ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month, came Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and they besieged it. 589. [a] 2 Kings 25. 1. chap. 52. 4.

2 And in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up. 588.

3 And all the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate, even Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim, Rab-saris, Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, with all the residue of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, by the gate betwixt the two walls: and he went out the way of the plain.

22. And, behold, all the women &c.] Thou, that art afraid of the insultings of men that are thy subjects, shalt fall under the insultings and taunts of the women. Poole.

28. — until the day that Jerusalem was taken:] The behaviour of Zedekiah in this transaction is memorable. That prince had a regard for Jeremiah, and even wished to follow his advice: he was moved with what the Prophet had told him, and almost determined to do as he advised: but his fear of the rulers of the people prevented him. Thus do sinners act. When God speaks to them, they are sometimes affected; there are still some remains of good in them, which press them to their duty; but they are hindered from following the dictates of their conscience by a false shame, by their fear of men, and by other the like motives, so that they let slip the favourable opportunity, and, after long struggling and resistance, they take the worst side and perish. This was the cause of Zedekiah's ruin. The Scripture remarks, that he humbled not himself, when Jeremiah spake unto him in the name of God; and, notwithstanding the solicitations of the Prophet, and the conviction of his own conscience, resolved not to yield to the Chaldeans. The warnings contained in this chapter are the last that God gave him; and, as he neglected to improve them, it was afterwards too late to do so, and he drew upon himself and upon his subjects the utmost miseries, as we find related in the following chapter. Osterwald.

Chap. XXXIX. ver. 2. — the city was broken up.] Such breaches were made in the walls, that the army of the Chaldeans entered. W. Lowth.

3. — in the middle gate,] See the note on Is. xxii. 1. "The middle gate," or "the gate of the centre," seems to have been a gate of communication in the middle of the valley between the two parts of the city, sometimes called "the higher" and "the lower city." The Chaldeans entered the city on the north side by a breach in the walls, and immediately rushing forward, and posting themselves in this gate, in the very heart or entrance of the city, they thereby became masters at will of the whole. Zedekiah with his troops, perceiving this, fled out at the opposite gate on the south side. Dr. Blayney.

—— Nergal-sharezer, &c.] As Nergal-sharezer occurs twice, the next word seems to be an addition to the name by way of distinguishing the person. Probably "Samgar," "Rab-saris," and "Rab-mag," were all titles of office; as we find "Rab-tebarhim," which we render "captain of the guard," ver. 11, or it might be, "commander in chief of the forces," was the title of Nebuzaradan. Dr. Blayney.

4. — by the gate betwixt the two walls:] We find mention made of two walls, one exterior to the other, 2 Chron. xxxii. 5. Probably between these two walls might have been a private postern, through which the king and his followers might escape from the besiegers, who surrounded the city, and undoubtedly kept a strict watch at the principal gates. Dr. Blayney.

Before CHRIST 588.

5 But the Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho: and when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon to Riblah in the land of Hamath, where he † gave judgment upon him.

6 Then the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes: also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah.

7 Moreover he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him †with chains, to carry him to Babylon.

8 ¶ And the Chaldeans burned the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem.

‖ Or, chief marshal. † Heb. chief of the executioners, or, slaughtermen: And so ver. 10, 11, &c.

9 Then Nebuzar-adan the ‖ † captain of the guard carried away captive into Babylon the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained.

10 But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left of the poor of the people, which had nothing, in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields † at the same time.

11 ¶ Now Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon gave charge concerning Jeremiah † to Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, saying,

12 Take him, and † look well to him, and do him no harm; but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee.

Before CHRIST 588.

13 So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard sent, and Nebushasban, Rab-saris, and Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, and all the king of Babylon's princes;

14 Even they sent, and took Jeremiah out of the court of the prison, and committed him unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, that he should carry him home: so he dwelt among the people.

15 ¶ Now the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, while he was shut up in the court of the prison, saying,

16 Go and speak to Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring my words upon this city for evil, and not for good; and they shall be accomplished in that day before thee.

17 But I will deliver thee in that day, saith the LORD: and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid.

18 For I will surely deliver thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, but thy life shall be for a prey unto thee: because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORD.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, after that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had let him go

5. — in the plains of Jericho:] Compare Josh. v. 10. This is called "the way of the plain" or "wilderness," Josh. viii. 15; and "the plain of the wilderness," 2 Sam. xv. 28; xvii. 16; and elsewhere "the wilderness of Judea;" see Matt. iii. 1. W. Lowth.

—— Riblah] See the note on chap. xlix. 23. Most interpreters suppose this city to be the same which was called Antioch in aftertimes, when it was rebuilt by Seleucus. W. Lowth.

—— where he gave judgment upon him.] Or, "proceeded judicially against him." The Hebrew phrase is literally, "discoursed judgments with him;" and implies all the several steps of a judicial process; as the arraignment, trial, conviction, and condemnation. Zedekiah had sworn allegiance to the king of Babylon, and was therefore liable to be tried and condemned as a rebel and traitor. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13; Ezek. xvii. 16, 18. Dr. Blayney.

7. — he put out Zedekiah's eyes, &c.] See the notes on 2 Kings xxv. 7; Jer. xxxiv. 2; and Ezek. xii. 14; also on 1 Sam. xi. 2.

Among capital punishments in Abyssinia may be reckoned the plucking out of the eyes: this is generally inflicted upon rebels: it does not often prove fatal, though performed in the coarsest manner with an iron forceps, or pincers. Xenophon tells us, this was one of the punishments used by Cyrus: and Ammianus Marcellinus mentions, that Sapor king of Persia banished Arsaces, whom he had taken prisoner, to a certain castle, after having pulled out his eyes. Bruce.

9. — the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away,] Compare 2 Kings xxv. 11. He carried away the fugitives or deserters, that went over to the Chaldeans during the siege, as well as those whom he found in the city when it was taken. W. Lowth.

11. Now Nebuchadrezzar — gave charge &c.] He was informed that the Prophet had exhorted both king and people to submit to his authority; see chap. xxviii. 11; xxxviii. 17, 18: had his advice been listened to, it would have prevented the expense and labour of so long a siege, and the bloodshed which attended it. W. Lowth.

14. — committed him unto Gedaliah] After he had first been carried out of Jerusalem with the rest of the captives, as far as Ramah. See chap. xl. 1—5. W. Lowth.

It is to be observed, that Jeremiah was saved at the taking of Jerusalem; and that Ebed-melech, who had saved the life of Jeremiah, was also himself spared, as God had promised, because he had put his trust in Him. These two are instances of the protection, which God vouchsafes to good men in times of calamity. What happened to Ebed-melech shews in particular, that those, who protect the innocent, and undertake the defence of the oppressed servants of God, receive the reward of their zeal and piety. Outereaid.

Ebed-melech is here again called the Ethiopian, ver. 16, to the reproach of the Jews, that a stranger should shew more kindness to a Prophet of the Lord, than any of that nation to whom he was specially sent. Poole.

Chap. XL. The five following chapters contain a particular account of what passed in the land of Judah, from the taking of Jerusalem to the retreat of the people into Egypt: and the prophecies of Jeremiah concerning them there. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. The word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord,] This relates to the prophecy set down chap. xlii. 7; which was occa-

Before CHRIST 588. from Ramah, when he had taken him being bound in ‖ chains among all that were carried away captive of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried away captive unto Babylon.

2 And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and said unto him, The LORD thy God hath pronounced this evil upon this place.

3 Now the LORD hath brought it, and done according as he hath said: because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed his voice, therefore this thing is come upon you.

4 And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which were upon thine hand. If it seem good unto thee to come with me into Babylon, come; and † I will look well unto thee: but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me into Babylon, forbear: behold, all the land is before thee: whither it seemeth good and convenient for thee to go, thither go.

5 Now while he was not yet gone back, he said, Go back also to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people: or go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go. So the captain of the guard gave him victuals and a reward, and let him go.

6 Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.

7 ¶ Now when all the captains of the forces which were in the fields, even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon;

8 Then they came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan and Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, and Jezaniah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men.

Before CHRIST 588.

9 And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan sware unto them and to their men, saying, Fear not † to serve the Chaldeans: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

† Heb. to serve. And so ver. 10.

10 As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, to serve the Chaldeans, which will come unto us: but ye, gather ye wine, and summer fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken.

11 Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan;

12 Even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much.

13 ¶ Moreover Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah,

14 And said unto him, Dost thou certainly know that Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah † to slay thee? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not.

15 Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it: wherefore should he sioned by the narrative that here follows concerning Ishmael's conspiracy against Gedaliah. W. Lowth.

4. — behold, all the land is before thee:] Thou mayest choose through the whole land whatever place thou wilt to live in: it is at thy disposal. See the like phrase Gen. xiii. 9; xx. 15; xxiv. 51. Calmet.

6. — Mizpah;] A place of note in the times of the judges; see Judg. xx. 1; 1 Sam. vii. 5, 6; and the notes there. It was afterwards rebuilt by king Asa, 1 Kings xv. 22. W. Lowth.

7. Now when all the captains of the forces which were in the fields, &c.] By the taking of Jerusalem, the Chaldeans made a complete conquest of Judea: whereupon the Jewish army with its commanders fled, chap. xxxix. 4; and dispersed themselves into several parts of the country. But upon the news of Gedaliah's being appointed governour of the land, they all repaired to him. W. Lowth.

8. — the Netophathite,] Of Netophah, a town mentioned in Ezra ii. 22. W. Lowth.

—— Jezaniah the son of a Maachathite,] Descended probably from Maachah, Caleb's concubine, 1 Chron ii. 48. The same person is called Jezaniah the son of Hoshaiah, chap. xlii. 1. W. Lowth.

10. — behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, &c.] I keep my residence here, to be ready to obey any orders, which the king of Babylon shall send me by his servants. W. Lowth.

11. Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, &c.] See the notes on chap. xli. 14; xv. 4.

14. — Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael — to slay thee?] The king of the Ammonites had concerted this matter with Ishmael, with a view of making the Jews, who still remained in their own country, his vassals. See chap. xli. 10. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 588. slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah perish?

16 But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, Thou shalt not do this thing: for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.

CHAP. XLI.

1 Ishmael, treacherously killing Gedaliah and others, purposeth with the residue to flee unto the Ammonites. 11 Johanan recovereth the captives, and mindeth to flee into Egypt.

NOW it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and the princes of the king, even ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and there they did eat bread together in Mizpah.

2 Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan with the sword, and slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land.

3 Ishmael also slew all the Jews that were with him, even with Gedaliah, at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war.

4 And it came to pass the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man knew it,

5 That there came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria, even fourscore men, having their beards shaven, and their clothes rent, and having cut themselves, with offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them to the house of the LORD.

Before CHRIST 588.

6 And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, † weeping all along as he went: and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam.

7 And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him.

8 But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, Slay us not: for we have treasures in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey. So he forbare, and slew them not among their brethren.

9 Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain ‖ † because of Gedaliah, was it which Asa the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain.

10 Then Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah, even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, whom Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had

Chap. XLI. ver. 1. — the seventh month.] Answering partly to our September, and partly to October. The murder of Gedaliah gave occasion to the fast of the seventh month, which the Jews observed after their return from captivity. See Zech. vii. 5; viii. 19. W. Lowth.

3. Ishmael also slew all the Jews that were with him.] That is, all those that joined in opposing Ishmael, and assisting Gedaliah: for several of the commandere, as well as the greatest part of the people, were still left alive, as appears from the sequel of the story, ver. 10, 11. W. Lowth.

5. — having their beards shaven, &c.] These were tokens of great mourning, by which these persons expressed their grief for the destruction of the city and temple. Such expressions of sorrow were forbidden to be used at funeral obsequies; see Levit. xix. 27, 28; but might be lawfully used upon other mournful occasions. W. Lowth. See the note on 2 Sam. x. 4.

—— to bring them to the house of the Lord.] Though the temple was destroyed, it may be presumed that the people continued to offer up sacrifices and offerings on the spot where it stood, as long as they continued in the land; for we find this began to be their practice soon after their return, before the temple was rebuilt. See Ezra iii. 2, 3, &c. Dr. Blayney.

6. — weeping all along as he went:] Counterfeiting a mutual sorrow with them, and expressing it very passionately all the way. Bp. Hall.

8. — Slay us not: for we have treasures in the field,] Intimating, that they would make him master of what they possessed, if he would spare their lives. W. Lowth.

—— of wheat, &c.] In Barbary, when the grain is winnowed, they lodge it in subterraneous repositories: two or three hundred of which are sometimes together, the smallest holding four hundred bushels. Dr. Shaw. These are very common in other parts of the East: as, near Aleppo; Dr. Russell: in Turkey; Sir J. Chardin: in the Holy Land; Le Bruyn, and Rauwolf: and in many places the people bury in them, not their corn only, but their wine; Sir J. Chardin: and other effects that are not portable. Hist. of the Piratical States of Barbary. The "treasures in the field" which Jeremiah speaks of, were doubtless laid up in the same kind of repositories. Harmer.

—— of oil,] The modern Greeks keep their oil in large earthen jars, sunk in the ground, in the areas before their houses. Dr. Chandler. The ancient Jews appear to have had the same custom of burying their oil in the earth: this being a time of danger, it is to be supposed that they chose the most unlikely places, where such concealment would be least suspected. Harmer.

9. Now the pit — was it which Asa the king had made] The word, rendered "pit," signifies a bason, cistern, or reservoir; a large pit for receiving rain water, which Asa, who built and fortified Mizpeh at the time he was at war with Baasha king of Israel, (1 Kings xv. 22,) caused to be made in the midst of the city, in order that the people might not be in want of so necessary an article in case of a siege. Reservoirs of this kind were much in use in Palestine, as St. Jerome tells us in his commentary upon Amos iv. 7, 8. Each private family seems to have had one of these pits or reservoirs for its own use. "Drink ye every one the waters of his own cistern," his pit or reservoir, says Rabshakeh to the people of Jerusalem, Is. xxxvi. 16. Dr. Blayney.

committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed to go over to the Ammonites.

11 ¶ But when Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done,

12 Then they took all the men, and went to fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and found him by the great waters that are in Gibeon.

13 Now it came to pass, that when all the people which were with Ishmael saw Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, then they were glad.

14 So all the people that Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah cast about and returned, and went unto Johanan the son of Kareah.

15 But Ishmael the son of Nethaniah escaped from Johanan with eight men, and went to the Ammonites.

16 Then took Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, all the remnant of the people whom he had recovered from Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, from Mizpah, after that he had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, even mighty men of war, and the women, and the children, and the eunuchs, whom he had brought again from Gibeon:

17 And they departed, and dwelt in the habitation of Chimham, which is by Bethlehem, to go to enter into Egypt, 18 Because of the Chaldeans: for they were afraid of them, because Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, whom the king of Babylon made governor in the land.

CHAP. XLII.

1 Johanan desireth Jeremiah to enquire of God, promising obedience to his will. 7 Jeremiah assureth him of safety in Judea, 13 and destruction in Egypt. 19 He reproveth their hypocrisy, in requiring of the Lord that which they meant not.

THEN all the captains of the forces, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and Jezaniah the son of Hoshaiah, and all the people from the least even unto the greatest, came near,

2 And said unto Jeremiah the prophet, ‖ Let, we beseech thee, our supplication be accepted before thee, and pray for us unto the LORD thy God, even for all this remnant; (for we are left but a few of many, as thine eyes do behold us:)

3 That the LORD thy God may shew us the way wherein we may walk, and the thing that we may do.

4 Then Jeremiah the prophet said unto them, I have heard you; behold, I will pray unto the LORD your God according to your words; and it shall come to pass, that whatsoever thing the LORD shall answer you, I will declare it unto you; I will keep nothing back from you.

5 Then they said to Jeremiah, The LORD be a true and faithful witness between us, if we do not even according to all things for the which the LORD thy God shall send thee to us.

6 Whether it be good, or whether it be evil, we will obey the voice of the LORD our God, to whom we send thee; that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the LORD our God.

7 ¶ And it came to pass after ten days, that the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah.

8 Then called he Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces which were with him, and all the people from the least even to the greatest,

9 And said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto whom ye sent me to present your supplication before him;

10 If ye will still abide in this land, then will I build you, and not pull you down, and I will plant you, and not pluck you up: for I repent me of the evil that I have done unto you.

12. — the great waters that are in Gibeon.] Called "the pool" or lake of Gibeon, 2 Sam. ii. 13. Dr. Blayney.

17. — the habitation of Chimham,] A parcel of ground which David had settled upon Chimham, the son of Barzillai, 2 Sam. xix. 38, 40. W. Lowth.

18. Because of the Chaldeans:] They were afraid lest the Chaldeans should impute this insurrection to the whole body of the Jews, that were left in the land, as if they were desirous of restoring the government to the royal family, to which Ishmael belonged, ver. 1. W. Lowth.

Chap. XLII. ver. 3. That the Lord thy God may shew us the way.] It is the constant method of hypocrites to pretend a profound submission to the will of God, till it crosses their inclinations or interest. W. Lowth.

6. Whether it be good, or whether it be evil,] Whether it be pleasing to us, or whether it be grievous and displeasing, we will be sure to do it. Bp. Hall.

10. — for I repent me of the evil that I have done unto you.] God is said in Scripture to repent, when He alters the outward methods of His providence. (See the note on Gen. vi. 6.) So the expression here implies a declaration from God, that the punishments the Jews have already undergone have made satisfaction to His justice, as far as concerns this world, and that He will not continue the same severity toward them, unless they give Him a new provocation. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 588.

11 Be not afraid of the king of Babylon, of whom ye are afraid; be not afraid of him, saith the LORD: for I am with you to save you, and to deliver you from his hand.

12 And I will shew mercies unto you, that he may have mercy upon you, and cause you to return to your own land.

13 ¶ But if ye say, We will not dwell in this land, neither obey the voice of the LORD your God,

14 Saying, No; but we will go into the land of Egypt, where we shall see no war, nor hear the sound of the trumpet, nor have hunger of bread; and there will we dwell:

15 And now therefore hear the word of the LORD, ye remnant of Judah; Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; If ye wholly set your faces to enter into Egypt, and go to sojourn there;

16 Then it shall come to pass, that the sword, which ye feared, shall overtake you there in the land of Egypt, and the famine, whereof ye were afraid, † shall follow close after you there in Egypt; and there ye shall die.

17 † So shall it be with all the men that set their faces to go into Egypt to sojourn there; they shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: and none of them shall remain or escape from the evil that I will bring upon them.

18 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; As mine anger and my fury hath been poured forth upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem; so shall my fury be poured forth upon you, when ye shall enter into Egypt: and ye shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach; and ye shall see this place no more.

19 ¶ The LORD hath said concerning you, O ye remnant of Judah; Go ye not into Egypt: know certainly that I have † admonished you this day.

20 For ‖ ye dissembled in your hearts, when ye sent me unto the LORD your God, saying, Pray for us unto the LORD our God; and according unto all that the LORD our God shall say, so declare unto us, and we will do it.

21 And now I have this day declared it to you; but ye have not obeyed the voice of the LORD your God, nor any thing for the which he hath sent me unto you.

22 Now therefore know certainly that ye shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, in the place whither ye desire to go and to sojourn.

CHAP. XLIII.

1 Johanan, discrediting Jeremiah's prophecy, carrieth Jeremiah and others into Egypt. 8 Jeremiah prophesieth by a type the conquest of Egypt by the Babylonians.

AND it came to pass, that when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking unto all the people all the words of the LORD their God, for which the LORD their God had sent him to them, even all these words,

2 Then spake Azariah the son of Hoshaiah, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the proud men, saying unto Jeremiah, Thou speakest falsely: the LORD our God hath not sent thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there:

3 But Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us, for to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that they might

12. — that he may — cause you to return to your own land.] I will incline the heart of the king of Babylon to take pity on you: see Ps. cvi. 46; and so settle you in your own country, from whence you were driven during the late war and distractions: see chap. xl. 11. W. Lowth.

15. — If ye wholly set your faces to enter into Egypt,] If you are fully resolved to go thither: compare Luke ix. 51. W. Lowth.

16. — the sword, — shall overtake you there] See chap. xliv. 14, 18.

19. The Lord hath said concerning you, O ye remnant of Judah; Go ye not into Egypt:] God commanded the Jews by Moses not to have any commerce with Egypt; see Deut. xvii. 16; that they might not practise the idolatrous customs of that country: see Levit. xviii. 3: with whose idolatries they had been defiled during their sojourning there: see Josh. xxiv. 14; Ezek. xx. 8. Afterwards he often reproved them by His Prophets, for making alliances with Egypt: see Is. xxx. 2, &c; Ezek. xvii. 15. There were particular reasons at this time for so severe a prohibition, as the words here and in the context import; namely, because the Jews either learned several of their idolatrous practices from the Egyptians, or at least were confirmed in those evil customs by their example. See chap. xliv. 8, 15; Ezek. xxix. 16. Besides, it was the rival kingdom that contended for empire with the Babylonians. See chap. xxxvii. 5; xlvi. 2. So the Jews going into Egypt for protection was in effect refusing to submit themselves to the king of Babylon, to whom God had decreed the government of Judea, and all the neighbouring countries, chap. xxvii. 6. W. Lowth.

Chap. XLIII. ver. 2. — Azariah the son of Hoshaiah,] Called Jezaniah, chap. xlii. 1. We may observe many like instances in the books of Kings and Chronicles, of the same person being called by different names. W. Lowth.

— the Lord our God hath not sent thee &c.] The constant method of hypocrites and infidels, who pretend they are not satisfied of the truth of Divine revelation, when the true cause of their unbelief is, that God's commands contradict their own lusts and appetites. W. Lowth.

3. But Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on &c.] They would not directly accuse Jeremiah of partiality toward, or confederacy with, the Chaldeans, as his enemies had done formerly, chap. xxxvii. 13; but they lay the blame upon Baruch, whom

Before CHRIST about 588. put us to death, and carry us away captives into Babylon.

4 So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, and all the people, obeyed not the voice of the LORD, to dwell in the land of Judah.

5 But Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, took all the remnant of Judah, that were returned from all nations, whither they had been driven, to dwell in the land of Judah;

6 Even men, and women, and children, and the king's daughters, and every person that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch the son of Neriah.

7 So they came into the land of Egypt: for they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: thus came they even to Tahpanhes.

8 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah in Tahpanhes, saying,

588, ending. 9 Take great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the clay in the brickkiln, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men of Judah;

10 And say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will send and take Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will set his throne upon these stones that I have hid; and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them.

Before CHRIST about 588.

11 And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver [a] such as are for death to death; and such as are for captivity to captivity; and such as are for the sword to the sword.

[a] Chap. 15. 2. Zech. 11.

12 And I will kindle a fire in the houses of the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them, and carry them away captives: and he shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd putteth on his garment; and he shall go forth from thence in peace.

13 He shall break also the † images of ‖ Beth-shemesh, that is, in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire.

CHAP. XLIV.

1 Jeremiah expresseth the desolation of Judah for their idolatry. 11 He prophesieth their destruction, who commit idolatry in Egypt. 15 The obstinacy of the Jews. 20 Jeremiah threateneth them for the same, 29 and for a sign prophesieth the destruction of Egypt.

THE word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the Jews which dwell in the land of Egypt, which dwell at Migdol, and at Tahpanhes, and at Noph, and in the country of Pathros, saying, they knew to be an intimate companion of Jeremiah's, and to have been kindly used by the Chaldeans, upon Jeremiah's account. W. Lowth.

7. — Tahpanhes.] That is, Daphnæ Pelusiacæ. See note on chap. ii. 16. Dr. Blayney. It was one of the principal cities of Egypt, and a place of residence for their kings: see below, ver. 9. The word is contracted to Hanes, Is. xxx. 4; and joined to Zoan, a principal city of the kingdom. W. Lowth.

9. — in the brickkiln, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house] The bricks, in those hot and dry countries, are in general only dried in the sun, not burnt. There must therefore be many places for making bricks, where there are no kilns; and such a place probably the word, here translated "brickkiln," signifies. The smoke of the brickkiln would not have agreed well with the Egyptian cleanliness, or the magnificence of a royal palace. Harmer.

Or, the word probably means an area paved with brick or tile, a bricked area. Parkhurst.

12. And I will kindle a fire] The same phrase occurs in several other passages of this Prophet: chap. xvii. 27; xxi. 14; xlix. 27; l. 32: in all which God speaks of Himself as the Agent or prime Mover; as He does here, no doubt with design to inculcate this necessary and important lesson, that in all that is performed here below, both the plan is His, and the power of carrying it into execution, whatever other instruments He may choose to employ as the subordinate ministers of His providence. The other verbs which follow, are to be referred to Nebuchadnezzar, as acting under the Divine commission and authority. Dr. Blayney.

—— in the houses of the gods of Egypt;] When God punisheth an heathen nation, as idolatry is one of the principal sins, for which He visits, so He in a remarkable manner executes His vengeance upon their idols; who can neither save themselves nor their worshippers: see chap. xlvi. 25; xlviii. 7; l. 2; li. 44. Exod. xii. 12; Is. xix. 1; xxi. 9; xlvi. 1. W. Lowth.

—— he shall array himself with the land of Egypt,] This expression seems to denote, that he would appropriate to himself and carry off the riches of the land of Egypt; or, as we say, load himself with the spoils of it, and go off as quietly as a shepherd wraps his garment about him, and goes about his business. See Ezek. xxix. 19. Dr. Blayney.

13. — Beth-shemesh, that is in the land of Egypt;] The same as On, or Heliopolis, Gen. xli. 45. Heliopolis was the Greek translation of "Beth-shemesh," the house, or city of the sun: called by Jeremiah "Beth-shemesh in the land of Egypt," to distinguish it from another Beth-shemesh in the land of Canaan. This city was probably near the royal city Zoan, and only fifteen stadia, or something less than two miles from the sea, according to Herodotus. Dr. Hales.

Chap. XLIV. ver. 1. — Migdol, &c.] Migdol is mentioned, Exod. xiv. 2, as situate near the Red sea. But I do not take this to be the place intended. "Migdol" properly signifies a tower; and may in all probability have been given as a name to different cities in Egypt, where there was a distinguished object of that kind. The city of Magdolus is mentioned by Herodotus, Hecatæus, and others, and placed by Antoninus at the entrance of Egypt from Palestine, about twelve miles from Pelusium. This was too far distant from the Red sea to be in the route of the Israelites; but its distance from Judea favours the supposition of its being the "Migdol" here spoken of. For then, as Bochart observes, we shall find the four places mentioned exactly in the order of their respective distances from that country; first Migdol, or Magdolus; secondly, Tahpanhes, Daphnæ; thirdly, Noph, or Memphis; and lastly, the district of Pathros, or Thebais. Dr. Blayney.

Before CHRIST 587.

2 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Ye have seen all the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, and upon all the cities of Judah; and, behold, this day they are a desolation, and no man dwelleth therein,

3 Because of their wickedness which they have committed to provoke me to anger, in that they went to burn incense, and to serve other gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers.

4 Howbeit I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, saying, Oh, do not this abominable thing that I hate.

5 But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods.

6 Wherefore my fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.

7 Therefore now thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel; Wherefore commit ye this great evil against your souls, to cut off from you man and woman, child and suckling, † out of Judah, to leave you none to remain;

8 In that ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell, that ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye might be a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth?

9 Have ye forgotten the † wickedness of your fathers, and the wickedness of the kings of Judah, and the wickedness of their wives, and your own wickedness, and the wickedness of your wives, which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

12 And I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine: and they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach.

13 For I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence:

14 So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they † have a desire to return to dwell there: for none shall return but such as shall escape.

15 ¶ Then all the men which knew that their wives had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

16 As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the LORD, we will not hearken unto thee.

17 But we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the ‖ [b] queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for then had we plenty of † victuals, and were well, and saw no evil.

2. — and no man dwelleth therein,] It is not to be supposed, that the country was abandoned to such a degree, that there was not a single inhabitant left in it. But there were so few, that they might be reckoned as none. Calmet.

14. So that none of the remnant of Judah, &c.] It is evident from ver. 28, that some Jews were to escape the general destruction in Egypt, and to return into their own country, although but a few; and the same thing is implied in the latter sentence of this verse. But the former part of this verse excludes out of the number of those who escaped every individual of those that were called properly "the remnant of Judah," those that had set their faces to enter Egypt, to sojourn there, in opposition to the express command of God, upon a presumption that they knew better than God how to consult their own restoration. The few then who were destined to escape, and to return back to the land of Judah, were to be such as had come into the land of Egypt in a less offensive manner, and chanced to be there when the storm burst upon them. Dr. Blayney.

15. — in the land of Egypt, in Pathros,] The Upper Egypt, or Thebaid, seems to be called Pathros in Scripture, as distinguished from the Lower, properly called Caphtor, or Egypt. Dr. Hales.

17. — to pour out drink offerings unto her,] It is the custom in Mingrelia and Georgia, and some other Eastern countries, for people, before they begin a feast, to go out abroad, and, with eyes turned to heaven, to pour out a cup of wine on the ground. Sir J. Chardin. This may be considered as a picture of what the idolatrous Israelites did, when they poured out drink offerings to the queen of heaven. Harmer.

—— for then had we plenty of victuals, &c.] They compare their former condition before the invasion of Judea, and the siege

Before CHRIST 587. 18 But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine.

20 ¶ Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying,

21 The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, did not the LORD remember them, and came it not into his mind?

22 So that the LORD could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings, and because of the abominations which ye have committed; therefore is your land a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, as at this day.

23 Because ye have burned incense, and because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD, nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.

24 Moreover Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, Hear the word of the LORD, all Judah that are in the land of Egypt:

25 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying; Ye and your wives have both spoken with your mouths, and fulfilled with your hand, saying, We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her: ye will surely accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows. Before CHRIST 587.

26 Therefore hear ye the word of the LORD, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt; Behold, I have sworn by my great name, saith the LORD, that my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, The Lord GOD liveth.

27 Behold, I will watch over them for evil, and not for good: and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt shall be consumed by the sword and by the famine, until there be an end of them.

28 Yet a small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah, and all the remnant of Judah, that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall know whose words shall stand, † mine, or their's.

29 ¶ And this shall be a sign unto you, saith the LORD, that I will punish you in this place, that ye may know that my words shall surely stand against you for evil:

30 Thus saith the LORD; Behold, I will give Pharaoh-hophra king of Egypt into the hand of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life; as I gave Zedekiah king of Judah into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, his enemy, and that sought his life.

of Jerusalem, with their present state: and argue from the fallacious topick of worldly prosperity, that then they must needs have been in the right. W. Lowth.

19. And when we burned incense &c.] These are the words of the women, who were the most zealous promoters of this idolatry: see ver. 15. W. Lowth.

——— without our men?] By the law of Moses, the men had an independent power of binding themselves by any religious vow or obligation; but the vows of the women were not binding, without the knowledge and consent of their fathers and husbands; but, if the father or husband knew of the vow, and did not signify his dissent at the time, his consent was presumed, and the vow stood firm and irrevocable, Numb. xxx. 1—16. This appeal therefore to the concurrence of their men must be considered as coming from the female part of the assembly only, who thereby appear to declare, that, since they were thus authorized by those, who alone had a legal right to control them, they should not submit to any other restraint upon their inclination. Dr. Blayney.

22. So that the Lord could no longer bear, &c.] God's patience is elsewhere said to be wearied out by men's continued provocations: see Is. vii. 13; xliii. 24; Mal. ii. 17. W. Lowth.

26. ——— my name shall no more be named &c.] These Jews seem to have joined the worship of the true God with that of idols, as the Samaritans did before them, 2 Kings xvii. 33. Thereupon God declares, He will not receive any such polluted worship at their hands; (compare Ezek. xx. 39;) nor suffer His name any longer to be profaned by such hypocrites, but will consume them by a sudden and general destruction; or will deliver them up to impenitence and utter apostasy. W. Lowth.

30. ——— I will give Pharaoh-hophra ——— into the hand of his enemies, &c.] Pharaoh was a common name to all the kings of Egypt. As the predecessor of this king was called Pharaoh-necheh, by way of distinction, 2 Kings xxiii. 29; so this king was called Pharaoh-hophra, or Apries, as Herodotus calls him. W. Lowth. Ezekiel represents him as an arrogant impious prince, as "the great dragon" or crocodile, "that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself," Ezek. xxix. 3: and agreeably to this, Herodotus informs us that Apries proudly and wickedly boasted of "having established his kingdom so surely, that it was not in the power of any god to dispossess him of it." However, Jeremiah here foretold, that he should be taken and slain by his enemies: and accordingly he was taken and strangled by Amasis, who was by Nebuchadnezzar constituted king in his room. Bp. Newton.

3 Thou didst say, Woe is me now! for the LORD hath added grief to my sorrow; I fainted in my sighing, and I find no rest.

4 ¶ Thus shalt thou say unto him, The LORD saith thus; Behold, that which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land.

collection of all those dreadful threatenings, which God had denounced by his mouth. This seems to have alarmed his fears to such a degree, that God thought proper to reassure him by letting him know, that, though amidst the general calamities of his country, he ought not to look for any great prosperity for himself, yet in consideration of his services his own life should be preserved to him by an especial providence in all places, whither it might be his lot to go. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 3. — the Lord hath added grief to my sorrow;] The sorrow, which I felt for the threatenings denounced against my country and religion, is increased by my own troubles, being sought after by the king's command in order to be put to death. See chap. xxxvi. 26. W. Lowth.

4. — that which I have built will I break down, &c.] The land and people, which have so long flourished under the peculiar care of My providence, I resolve now to give up to utter destruction: compare chap. xxxi. 28. W. Lowth.

Chap. XLVI. ver. 1. The word of the Lord &c.] This verse is a general title to the collection of prophecies, contained in this and the five following chapters. The nations spoken of are the same as those of which an enumeration is made, chap. xxv. 19—26. These prophecies were not delivered all at the same time. To some the date is annexed: in others it is left uncertain. Dr. Blayney.

The difference of style between the following prophecies and the preceding is remarkable. Abp. Secker.

2. Against Egypt,] In this chapter are two distinct prophecies concerning Egypt. The first appears to have been delivered at the time that the Egyptian army lay along the banks of the Euphrates, waiting to oppose the entrance of Nebuchadnezzar into Syria, in the fourth year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah. The two armies came to an engagement near the city of Carchemish, the same which Pharaoh-necho was going against when he was opposed by king Josiah, 2 Chron. xxxv. 20; (see the note there.) The event of the battle proved very unfortunate to the Egyptians, who were routed with a prodigious slaughter; as is here foretold by the Prophet in a very animated style, and with great poetick energy and liveliness of colouring. In the third and fourth verses, the mighty preparations of the Egyptians for war are described; which occasions the Prophet, who foresees the defeat, to express his astonishment at an event so contrary to what might have been expected; but he accounts for it by ascribing it to the disposition of the Almighty, who had spread terrour all around, and had decreed that neither swiftness nor strength should avail the owners, so as to save them from the impending overthrow, ver. 5, 6. In the verses that follow next, the king of Egypt is represented as beginning his march with all the ostentation and insolence of presumed success. He is compared to a mighty river, the Nile or the Euphrates, when it swells above its banks, and threatens to overwhelm the country with ruin and desolation, ver. 7, 8. He is heard calling aloud to the nations of which his army is composed, giving them the signal for action, and rousing them to deeds of desperate valour, ver. 9. But all in vain; the time is come for God to avenge Himself of His ancient foes; they are doomed to slaughter, to fall a bloody sacrifice on the plains of the north, ver. 10. The whole concludes with an apostrophe to the daughter of Egypt, whose wound is pronounced incurable, and her disgrace universally known; forasmuch as the number of her warriours have served only to augment the general disorder, and more effectually to destroy each other. Dr. Blayney.

4. — the brigandines.] Their coats of mail. Dr. Johnson.

5. — for fear was round about, saith the Lord.] These words ought rather to be connected with the following, which being spoken imperatively, can only be understood as coming from the mouth of God. "Fear" seems to be put for danger. So that the words taken all together imply, that from the danger which surrounded them on all sides, it was the Divine decree, that neither the swift should escape by flight, nor the strong be able to extricate himself by any exertions of valour. Dr. Blayney.

19 O thou daughter dwelling in Egypt, † furnish thyself to go into captivity: for Noph shall be waste and desolate without an inhabitant.

20 Egypt is like a very fair heifer, but destruction cometh; it cometh out of the north.

8. — I will destroy the city] Not any particular city, perhaps, but rather indefinitely the cities of the land, which the king of Egypt, under the figure of a river, was to overflow. Dr. Blayney.

9. — the Ethiopians, — the Libyans, — the Lydians,] The original words are Cush, Phut, and Lud: and the three nations were allies of Egypt, as they are also represented, Ezek. xxx. 5. By the first are probably to be understood in this place chiefly the Arabians, who bordered on Egypt near the Red sea, and who are closely connected with the Egyptians, Is. xx. 3, 4, 5. As these lay to the east, so by Phut the Libyans were most probably intended, who lay west of Egypt. Bochart supposes the Ludim (or Lydians) to be Ethiopians: and that the Ethiopians were famous for the use of the bow, we may learn from Herodotus, who says that they had bows four cubits long. Dr. Blayney.

10. For this is the day of the Lord God of hosts,] "The day of the Lord" often signifies the day of His vengeance: see Is. xiii. 6; Joel i. 15; ii. 1; Amos v. 18; Zeph. i. 14, 15: whence it signifies in the New Testament the day of judgment, of which all other days of vengeance are the earnests and forerunners. W. Lowth.

— for the Lord — hath a sacrifice] The slaughter of men is called a sacrifice, because it makes some kind of satisfaction and atonement to God's justice, Is. xxxiv. 6; Ezek. xxxix. 17; Zeph. i. 7. W. Lowth.

11. — in vain shalt thou use many medicines;] The destruction of the state is represented as an incurable sickness, with a sarcastick allusion to the medical skill, for which the Egyptians were distinguished. W. Lowth, Bp. Warburton.

13. The word that the Lord spake &c.] There appears no ground for ascertaining the time when this second prophecy was delivered; but the desolation foretold in it is undoubtedly the same which Ezekiel has predicted, chap. xxix—xxxii. And this came to pass in the twenty-seventh year of Jehoiakim's captivity, (that is, the sixteenth after the destruction of Jerusalem,) as may be collected from Ezek. xxix. 17; where Nebuchadnezzar's army is spoken of, as having at that time suffered a great deal in the siege of Tyre; on which account the spoils of Egypt are promised them for their wages and indemnification; and the promise was made good accordingly that same year. Dr. Blayney.

For this early transaction we have the testimonies of Megasthenes and Berosus, two heathen historians, who lived about 300 years before Christ; one of whom affirms expressly, that Nebuchadnezzar conquered the greatest part of Africa; and the other affirms it in effect, by saying, that when Nebuchadnezzar heard of the death of his father, having settled his affairs in Egypt, and committed the captains, whom he took in Egypt, to the care of some of his friends to bring them after him, he hasted directly to Babylon. Josephus, we may presume, had good authorities, and was supported by earlier historians, when he asserted, that Nebuchadnezzar, having subdued Cœle-Syria, waged war against the Ammonites and Moabites, and having conquered them, he invaded Egypt, and slew the king who then reigned, and appointed another. Bp. Newton.

14. — Migdol, &c.] See the note on chap. xliv. 1.

16. — and they said, Arise, &c.] The words of the allies of the Egyptians: see ver. 9, 21. W. Lowth.

18. — Surely as Tabor is among the mountains, &c.] Some think the expression compares Nebuchadnezzar, a lofty and aspiring conqueror, to Tabor and Carmel, two of the highest mountains of Judea. Others understand it thus, He will as surely come as that part of Judea which is joined to Tabor is enclosed with mountains; and as Carmel is encompassed by the sea: see 1 Kings xviii. 42, 43. W. Lowth.

19. O thou daughter dwelling in Egypt,] Compare chap. xlviii. 18. Countries and cities are usually compared to women, such representations being very common, particularly on medals. W. Lowth.

20. Egypt is like a very fair heifer,] In the foregoing verse the Prophet compared Egypt to a delicate young woman; here he resembles her to a beautiful and well favoured heifer: compare chap. l. 11. In which comparison, as Grotius not improbably conjectures, there is an allusion to their god Apis, who was a bull remarkable for his beauty, and the fine spots or marks he had about him. W. Lowth.

The Prophet delights in that kind of imagery which marks out a people by its singularities. The worship of Isis and Osiris, under the figure of a cow and a bull, was the most celebrated in all the Egyptian ritual. Bp. Warburton.

Before CHRIST about 607.

21 Also her hired men are in the midst of her like † fatted bullocks; for they also are turned back, and are fled away together: they did not stand, because the day of their calamity was come upon them, and the time of their visitation.

23 They shall cut down her forest, saith the LORD, though it cannot be searched; because they are more than the grasshoppers, and are innumerable.

24 The daughter of Egypt shall be confounded; she shall be delivered into the hand of the people of the north.

25 The LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saith; Behold, I will punish the ‖ † multitude of No, and Pharaoh, and Egypt, with their gods, and their kings; even Pharaoh, and all them that trust in him:

26 And I will deliver them into the hand of those that seek their lives, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of his servants: and afterward it shall be inhabited, as in the days of old, saith the LORD.

27 ¶ * But fear not thou, O my servant Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel: for, behold, I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and be in rest and at ease, and none shall make him afraid.

CHAP. XLVII.

The destruction of the Philistines.

THE word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet against the Philistines, before that Pharaoh smote † Gaza.

2 Thus saith the LORD; Behold, * waters rise up out of the north, and shall be an overflowing flood, and shall overflow the land, and † all that is therein; the city, and them that dwell therein: then the men shall cry, and all the inhabitants of the land shall howl.

* Isai. 8. 7.

3 At the noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his strong horses, at the rushing of his chariots, and at the rumbling of his wheels, the fathers shall not look back to their children for feebleness of hands;

4 Because of the day that cometh to spoil all the Philistines, and to cut off from Tyrus and Zidon every helper that remain-

22. The voice thereof shall go like a serpent;] They shall not shout like conquerors, but make a feeble noise like the hissing of a serpent when it is pursued: and shall speak in a very submissive and humble tone. W. Lowth.

—— for they shall march with an army,] They, that is, the Chaldeans, to whom the Lord gave the command to go against Egypt, and cut down her forest. By "her forest" may be understood, either her people, or her cities; both of which were very numerous: the latter amounting to no less than one thousand and twenty in those times, as Grotius reckons. Dr. Blayney.

23. — though it cannot be searched;] Though the trees or cities be so many that they are past numbering. Bp. Hall.

—— because they are more than the grasshoppers,] Armies are often compared to grasshoppers, and such insects, both for their multitudes, and because they make a great consumption. See Judg. vi. 5; vii. 12; Joel ii. 4, 5. W. Lowth.

25. — the multitude of No,] The words may be literally and correctly rendered, "Amon of No." See the margin. Amon was the name by which the Egyptians called Jupiter; who had a famous temple at Thebes, and was worshipped there in a distinguished manner: on which account the city was called Diospolis. If "No" therefore be Thebes, or Diospolis, then "Amon of No" signifies the deity of the place, the Theban Jupiter, as Herodotus styles him. As, on the other hand, in Nahum iii. 8, we should read "No of Amon:" which corresponds with the Greek name Diospolis. W. Lowth, Dr. Blayney.

When an idolatrous nation is doomed to destruction, God is said to execute vengeance upon the idols of the country; see chap. xliii. 12, 13. Accordingly Amon of No, the principal deity, and Pharaoh, the principal man among the Egyptians, are marked out in the first place as the primary objects of Divine visitation; then follow in the gross Egypt and all her gods, and all her kings; which latter term is explained to include both Pharaoh and those subordinate rulers who were dependent upon him for the rank and authority they held. Dr. Blayney.

26. — afterward it shall be inhabited, as in the days of old,] At the end of forty years Egypt was to begin to recover itself, as Ezekiel foretells, chap. xxix. 13. Dr. Blayney.

28. Fear thou not, O Jacob; —for I will make a full end of all the nations: — but I will not make a full end of thee,] See the note from Bp. Horne on chap. xxx. 11.

Chap. XLVII. ver. 1. — against the Philistines,] Among the other nations doomed to suffer by the hostilities of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, the Philistines are enumerated, chap. xxv. 20: and the calamities foretold in this present chapter most probably befell them during the long siege of Tyre, when Nebuchadnezzar ravaged their country, in order, as it is said ver. 4, to cut off from Tyre and Zidon all chance of assistance from that quarter. But as no history, sacred or profane, has, to my knowledge, mentioned the taking of Gaza by the king of Egypt, there is no means of ascertaining the precise date of the delivery of this prophecy. Dr. Blayney.

2. — Behold, waters rise up out of the north,] Behold, the Chaldeans arise out of the north like mighty waters; and with their swelling flood shall overflow the land of the Philistines. Bp. Hall.

3. — the fathers shall not look back to their children &c.] They shall shew no concern for the safety of their children: but they shall be so dismayed and dispirited, as to be scarce able to save themselves. W. Lowth.

4. — to cut off from Tyrus and Zidon &c.] The siege of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar, which lasted thirteen years, was an action famous in the history of that age. See Ezek. xxvii, xxviii. Zidon partook of the same fate as Tyre, both in prosperity and in adversity: see Is. xxiii. 2, 4. And her destruction is joined with that of Tyre by Ezekiel, chap. xxviii, W. Lowth.

The judgment of Moab, 7 for their pride, 11 for their security, 14 for their carnal confidence, 26 and for their contempt of God and his people. 47 The restoration of Moab.

about 600. AGAINST Moab thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Woe unto Nebo! for it is spoiled: Kiriathaim is confounded and taken: ‖ Misgab is confounded and dismayed.

7 ¶ For because thou hast trusted in thy works and in thy treasures, thou shalt also be taken: and Chemosh shall go forth into captivity with his [c] priests and his princes together.

[c] Chap. 49. 3.

—— the remnant of the country of Caphtor:] The Caphtorim, as well as the Philistim, are said to have been descended from Mizraim, the father of the Egyptians; see Gen. x. 14. They expelled the Avim from that part of Philistia which is contiguous to Gaza, and fixed themselves there, Deut ii. 23: on which account the country was afterwards called "the country of Caphtor." "The remnant of the country of Caphtor" is therefore to be understood of the few that remained out of a great number that formerly dwelt in that part of Philistia. Dr. Blayney.

5. Baldness is come upon Gaza:] The Prophet alludes to the custom which prevailed among men in those times, of shaving their heads and cutting their flesh under great calamities. See chap. xli. 5; xlviii. 37. W. Lowth. See the notes on Lev. xix. 28; Deut. xiv. 1.

—— with the remnant of their valley:] Gaza and Ashkelon are situated about twelve miles distant from each other, near the sea, in a valley of great beauty and fertility. Dr. Blayney.

6. O thou sword of the Lord, &c.] Personification, conducted with dignity and propriety, may be justly esteemed one of the greatest efforts of the creative powers of a warm and lively imagination. Of this figure many illustrious examples may be produced from the Jewish writers, among whom every part and object of nature is animated, and endowed with sense, with passion, and with language. To say that the lightning obeyed the commands of God, would of itself be sufficiently sublime: but in the book of Job this idea is expressed with far greater energy and life; "Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go, and say unto thee, Here we are?" Job xxxviii. 35. How animated, how emphatical is this unexpected answer, "Here we are!" When Jehovah is represented as descending to punish the earth in His just anger, it is added, "Before him went the pestilence," Hab. iii. 5. When the Babylonian tyrant is destroyed, "the fir trees rejoice at his fall, and the cedars of Lebanon, saying, Since thou art laid down, no feller is come up against us," Is. xiv. 8. And at the captivity of Jerusalem, the very ramparts and the walls lament, "they languish together," Lam. ii. 8. So also it is impossible to read the address of the Prophet in the text without emotion at the perusal: "O thou sword of the Lord, how long will it be ere thou be quiet? put up thyself into thy scabbard, rest, and be still." Who can without amazement and delight behold joy, and anguish, and revenge, thus ascribed to the trees of the forest, to walls, and warlike instruments? Dr. Jos. Warton. Concerning the "sword of the Lord," figuratively denoting His vengeance, compare Deut. xxxii. 41; Is. xxxiv. 5; and see also Ezek. xxv. 16.

Chap. XLVIII. ver. 1. Against Moab] The following prophecies concerning the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, and other neighbouring nations, are supposed to have been fulfilled about the same time with that concerning the Philistines in the preceding chapter; namely, during the siege of Tyre.

Many passages and expressions will be found in this chapter, which Jeremiah hath borrowed from a prophecy of Isaiah, chap. xv, and xvi, concerning a like calamity which befell Moab, in all probability when Shalmaneser king of Assyria seized upon their cities and fortresses, and ravaged their country, on his march through it to invade the kingdom of Israel. By comparing the parallel places much light may be mutually thrown upon them. Dr. Blayney.

—— Nebo! — Kiriathaim] Two cities of Moab: see Is. xv. 2; Numb. xxxii. 37; xxxiii. 47. The latter of these was given by Moses to the Reubenites, as appears by Josh. xiii. 19; but the Moabites afterwards recovered the possession of it, as they did Dibon, Silma, and other places: compare those texts in Numbers and Joshua, with Isaiah xv. 2; xvi. 8, 9; and the twenty-first and the following verses of this chapter. W. Lowth.

—— Misgab] No such city of Moab is any where mentioned. It should probably be rendered "the high place," as in the margin, or "the high fortress:" either Kiriathaim before mentioned, or some other fortress of Moab. Dr. Blayney.

2. — in Heshbon they have devised evil against it; &c.] The like ruin shall befall the rest of the Moabitish cities, Heshbon and Madmena: the Chaldeans have resolved and threatened to cut of Moab as a nation. Bp. Hall.

5. For in the going up of Luhith &c.] In the mountains and valleys shall be nothing but howling and desolation; while the Moabites climb up the hill to the high-seated city of Luhith, and while they pass down to the plain of Horonaim. Bp. Hall. At Luhith the hill country of Moab appears to have begun; and here the people are represented as mounting the hill successively in their flight before the enemy, weeping as they follow one another. At Horonaim they descended again into the plain. Dr. Blayney.

6. — be like the heath in the wilderness.] Or, like "a blasted," or "naked tree," as in the margin: that is, a tree stripped of its foliage. A proper emblem of one robbed of all his fortune, and just able to escape with life by fleeing into the desert. Dr. Blayney.

7. — Chemosh shall go forth into captivity] The idol of the Moabites: Numb. xxi. 29. See the note on chap. xliii. 12. W. Lowth.

10. Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully,] God executes His judgments upon sinners by the ministry of men, and those oftentimes as great sinners as those that suffer. He had declared by Jeremiah His purpose of making the Chaldeans His instruments in punishing the Jews, and the neighbouring countries: see chap. xxv. 9. Their success answered the prediction, and Nebuchadnezzar seems to have looked upon Jeremiah as a Prophet, and had a particular regard to his character: see chap. xxxix. 11. Being thus assured that he had a commission from God, he might confidently proceed in his conquests, and it would have been a fault to have shewn mercy to those whom he had good reason to believe that God had marked out for destruction. Such an unreasonable act of forbearance is highly blamed in Saul, 1 Sam. xv. 11; and in Ahab, 1 Kings xx. 42. God's judgments are often denounced in the form of imprecation: see Deut. xxvii. 15; Judges v. 23; Gal. i. 8; 1 Cor. xvi. 22; 2 Tim. iv. 14. W. Lowth.

11. — he hath settled on his lees,] All wines, it is said, ought to be kept for some time upon the lees, in order to preserve their strength and flavour; on which account "the lees" are expressed by a word that signifies the preservers. Wine is apt to be damaged by being drawn off too soon into other vessels. By this allegory therefore Moab is represented as having enjoyed singular advantages from constantly remaining in his own country, ever since he became a people. See Bp. Lowth's note on Is. xxv. 6. Dr. Blayney.

12. — wanderers, that shall cause him to wander,] The Chaldean soldiers, who came out of a foreign country: these shall make a prey of him. W. Lowth.

13. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chemosh, &c.] They shall be disappointed in their expectations of succours from their tutelary idol; see Judg. xi. 24; 1 Kings xi. 7: as the ten tribes have been in the trust they reposed in the calf they worshipped at Beth-el: see Hos. viii. 5; x. 6. W. Lowth.

17. — How is the strong staff broken,] Compare Is. xiv. 5. A staff, or rod, is an emblem of authority, and thence comes to signify a kingdom, or government, especially such an one as oppresses its subjects or neighbours: see Is. ix. 4; x. 5. W. Lowth.

18. Thou daughter that dost inhabit Dibon, &c.] And thou, O Dibon, the fair city of Moab, come down from thy glory, and take up with the lot of thy neighbours; thirst, distress, destruction. Bp. Hall. See the note on chap. xlvi. 19.

19. — Aroer,] A town in the borders of Moab, Deut. ii. 36.

20. — Arnon,] A country, which took its name from the river Arnon, which was on the borders of Moab, Numb. xxi. 23. W. Lowth.

24. — Bozrah,] Called Bezer, Deut. iv. 43; Josh. xxi. 36. A different place from Bozrah, which belonged to Edom, chap. xlix. 13. W. Lowth.

25. The horn of Moab — his arm] See note at 1 Sam. ii. 1.

27. For was not Israel a derision unto thee? &c.] Was not Israel without cause a scorn unto thee? In what had he offended thee? However guilty he were in his carriage towards Me, yet to thee he was inoffensive: notwithstanding thou didst insult in his fall, and joy in his miscarriage. Bp. Hall.

45 They that fled stood under the shadow of Heshbon because of the force: but [l] a fire shall come forth out of Heshbon, and a flame from the midst of Sihon, and shall devour the corner of Moab, and the crown of the head of the † tumultuous ones.

28. — the dove that maketh her nest in the sides of the hole's mouth.] That doves build their nests in the clefts or natural hollows of a rock, see Cant. ii. 14. Dr. Shaw in his Travels mentions a city on the African coast, called Hamam-et, from the number of wild pigeons that are bred in the clefts of the adjacent mountains. Dr. Blayney.

30. I know his wrath, — but it shall not be so; his lies shall not so effect it.] I know his haughty boastings; but it shall not be so with him as he imagineth: his great words and presumptuous undertakings shall not carry it. Bp. Hall.

31. — Kir-heres.] Or, Kir-hareseth, Is. xvi. 7, appears to have been once the capital, or at least the strongest, of the cities of Moab, 2 Kings iii. 25. Dr. Blayney.

— thy plants are gone over the sea, &c.] See the note on Is. xvi. 8.

33. — their shouting shall be no shouting.] Not the cheerful shouting of the grapetreaders, but the dreadful shouting of military spoilers. Parkhurst.

34. From the cry of Heshbon &c.] See the notes on Is. xv. 5.

36. — mine heart shall sound — like pipes,] I groan inwardly for trouble and anguish. The musick of pipes was used at funerals. W. Lowth.

37. For every head shall be bald, &c.] See the note on chap. xli. 5.

— upon all the hands shall be cuttings,] See the notes on chap. xvi. 6. We often read of persons cutting themselves when in great anguish: but we are not commonly told, what part they wounded. The modern Arabs gash their arms, which are often bare: it appears from this passage the ancients wounded themselves in the same part. Harmer.

38. — upon all the housetops] Compare Is. xv. 3.

40. — he shall fly as an eagle,] That is, the Babylonian conqueror; with evident allusion to Deut. xxviii. 49. Compare chap. xlix. 22. Dr. Blayney.

In the flying of an eagle there are two circumstances especially remarkable: 1st, The rapidity with which it rushes on its prey, noticed in Hab. i. 8; 2 Sam. i. 23; Lam. iv. 19; and other places of Scripture. 2dly, Its peculiar manner of fully expanding its wings, which supplied an epithet for the eagle to the Greek poets, and which is also particularly noticed in chap. xlix. 22. Parkhurst.

43. Fear, and the pit, and the snare, &c.] See Is. xxiv. 17, 18; and the notes there.

shall begin there, shall reach to all the utmost parts of the dominions of Moab, and shall light upon the heads of those insolent undertakers that were the cause of these wars and tumults. Bp. Hall.

"The midst of Sihon" means the city of Sihon, or Heshbon: see Numb. xxi. 28. The Prophet fitly applies to the present case the words of an ancient poem, made on Sihon's conquests over Moab, and recited by Moses as above. W. Lowth.

47. Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab &c.] The Monbites were afterwards restored to their country, as appears from Josephus. W. Lowth.

Chap. XLIX. ver. 1. Concerning the Ammonites,] This downfal of the Ammonites is foretold by other Prophets. See the margin. It is uncertain when this prophecy was delivered: for the probable time of its completion, see the note on chap. xlviii. 1. Dr. Blayney.

—— why then doth their king inherit Gad,] It is probable from hence, that when the king of Assyria carried away captives the Gadites and their brethren, who dwelt beyond Jordan, 2 Kings xv. 29; 1 Chron. v. 26; the Ammonites, either by the consent or connivance of the Assyrian conqueror, took possession of their vacant country, to which they had no pretensions of right, so long as any of the ancient owners or their posterity were in being. The word, rendered "their king," might be rendered, according to most of the ancient versions, more properly "Melcom," (see the margin,) as the proper name of the chief deity of the Ammonites, who is so called, 1 Kings xi. 5. See below, ver. 3, and the note there. As Jehovah is said to have given His people Israel the lands they possessed, so the idolatrous nations considered their acquisitions as obtained by the favour of their respective idols. See Judg. xi. 24. Dr. Blayney.

2. — her daughters shall be burned with fire:] That is, the smaller cities, which are reckoned as so many daughters to their mother city. Compare Ps. xlviii. 11; xcvii. 8. W. Lowth.

—— then shall Israel be heir &c.] This is understood to have been fulfilled when Judas Maccabeus defeated the Ammonites, and took their towns, 1 Mac. v. 6, &c. Zephaniah speaks in like manner, chap. ii. 9. Dr. Blayney.

3. Howl, O Heshbon, for Ai is spoiled:] When Ai, (not the place mentioned Josh. viii, but a city of the Ammonites,) is destroyed, then is it time for Heshbon, the chief city of the Moabites, to lament her danger. W. Lowth.

—— run to and fro by the hedges;] Like persons distracted, seeking a place of concealment. Poole.

—— for their king shall go into captivity,] Rather, "Melcom shall go &c." Compare chap. xlviii. 7; and see the note on chap. xliii. 12. W. Lowth, Dr. Blayney.

7. Concerning Edom,] The destruction of Edom, or Idumea, is likewise foretold by Ezekiel, chap. xxv. 12—14; xxxv. 2, &c; Joel iii. 19; Amos i. 11, 12; and by Obadiah. Dr. Blayney.

Is wisdom no more in Teman?] The Eastern part of the world, by which is chiefly meant Arabia and the adjacent countries, was famous for the study of wisdom; see 1 Kings iv. 30. The Edomites appear to have put in their claim to this distinction. W. Lowth.

8. — dwell deep,] When the Arabs have drawn upon themselves such a general resentment of the more fixed inhabitants of those countries, that they think themselves unable to stand against them, they withdraw into the depths of the great wilderness, where none can follow them with any hopes of success. It is probable, that the "dwelling deep," which Jeremiah recommends to the Arab tribes here and at ver. 30, means this plunging far into the deserts, rather than going into caves and dens, as has been sometimes supposed. For although people, who live a settled kind of life, have practised this method of security, the Arabs, who lead a wandering life in tents, look upon caves as traps, rather than as places of defence. Harmer.

The language of modern travellers, in describing this custom of the Arabs, corresponds with the language of Scripture. Niebuhr, speaking of their conduct under certain circumstances of dissatisfaction, says, "all the tribe retires to the bottom of the desert, whither the Turks dare not follow:" and Savary says concerning the wandering or Bedouin Arabs, "Always on their guard against tyranny, on the least discontent they pack up their tents, lade their camels with them, ravage the flat country, and plunge into the burning sands, whither none can pursue them, and where they alone dare dwell." Parkhurst.

—— Dedan;] The Dedanites were Arabians, of the posterity of Dedan the grandson of Abraham, Gen. xxv. 3. They seem in later times to have been subdued by the Idumeans, and incorporated with them. W. Lowth.

20 Therefore hear the counsel of the LORD, that he hath taken against Edom;

9. If grapegatherers come to thee, &c.] The vintage can hardly be gathered so clean, but that there will be a gleaning left. Compare Is. xvii. 6. Nay, the housebreakers commonly leave something behind them. But the desolation which is coming upon thee shall be so entire, that scarcely a remnant shall be preserved: compare Obad. ver. 5. W. Lowth.

11. Leave thy fatherless children, &c.] It is doubted whether these words are a threatening or a promise. If a promise, the sense is, that though this great destruction should come upon the body of the Edomites, yet God would take care of some of their fatherless children, whose parents being carried into captivity, they had none to provide for them. If they be taken as a threatening, they imply ruin to them as well as to the rest. Poole.

12. — Behold, they whose judgment was not to drink of the cup &c.] Behold, even My people the Jews, which, in comparison of thee, had no reason to be put to these extremities of judgments, they have been plagued severely by My just hand: and shalt thou think to go unpunished? Bp. Hall.

13. — Bozrah] One of the chief cities of Idumea: see Is. xxxiv. 6; lxiii. 1. W. Lowth. "All the cities thereof:" the daughter cities, that appertain to Bozrah, the prime city. Bp. Hall.

14. I have heard a rumour from the Lord, &c.] The Prophets often represent God as summoning armies, and setting them in array of battle against those people whom He has decreed to destroy. See chap. l. 9—21; li. 11; Is. xiii. 2, 3; xviii. 3. God's stirring up men's minds to invade such countries is described here, as if He had sent an ambassadour to the Chaldeans and their confederates, to engage them in a war against the Idumeans, according to the methods in which earthly princes use to engage their allies: compare chap. li. 27, 28. W. Lowth.

16. — O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock,] Compare Obad. ver. 4; Nahûm. xxiv. 21; and see the note there. St. Jerome, who lived in the neighbourhood, tells us, in his commentary upon Obadiah, that Idumea was a rocky mountainous country. W. Lowth.

17. —shall hiss] See the note on chap. xix. 8.

18. As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah &c.] A proverbial expression denoting an utter desolation: see chap. l. 40; Is. xiii. 19. W. Lowth.

We know little more of the history of the Edomites, than as it is connected with that of the Jews: and where is the name or the nation now? They were swallowed up and lost, partly among the Nabathean Arabs, and partly among the Jews: and the very name was abolished and disused about the first century after Christ. Thus were they rewarded for insulting and oppressing their brethren the Jews, and hereby were fulfilled the prophecies of Jeremiah in this chapter; and of the other Prophets enumerated in the note on the seventh verse. Bp. Newton.

19. Behold, he shall come up like a lion &c.] A description of Nebuchadnezzar, marching with his army against Idumea. W. Lowth. Upon occasion of the inundations, to which the Jordan is subject, (see the note on chap. xii. 5,) we are told by Maundrell, that several sorts of wild beasts, which are wont to harbour among the trees and bushes by the river side, are forced out of their covert, and infest the neighbouring plains. To this circumstance the Prophet here alludes. Dr. Blayney.

—— I will suddenly make him run away from her:] The most probable sense of these words is, that they indicate the Edomites running away from Nebuchadnezzar out of their own country, which seems to be understood by "her." Poole. "Him," namely, "the son of man," of whom it was said in the preceding verse, that he should not abide or dwell there. Dr. Blayney.

—— and who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her?] That is, I will single out a man remarkable for his prowess; namely, Nebuchadnezzar, and place him at the head of the army, which shall execute My vengeance upon Edom. W. Lowth.

—— who will appoint me the time? and who is that shepherd &c.] Who will challenge Me to meet him in the field, as if we were upon equal terms? Or what leader or general can enter the lists with Me? The word "shepherd" often signifies a prince or commander: see chap. vi. 3; xxv. 34. But here it is used in opposition to the "lion," mentioned before; as if he had said, A shepherd may as well encounter a lion, as the best appointed warrior contend with God Almighty, or those whom He makes the instruments of His vengeance. W. Lowth.

29 Their tents and their flocks shall they take away: they shall take to themselves their curtains, and all their vessels, and their camels; and they shall cry unto them, Fear is on every side.

20. — Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out:] The very meanest and basest of the Chaldean army shall discomfit and overthrow the proud inhabitants of Teman. Bp. Hall.

21. The earth is moved at the noise &c.] The surrounding countries are astonished at its ruin, and the sound of it reaches even to the Red sea, which was at a considerable distance from the land of Edom. The Prophet compares the destruction of a nation to the fall of a great building: see Ezek. xxvi. 15; xxxi. 16. W. Lowth.

23. Concerning Damascus.] Damascus was the capital of the kingdom of Syria, and had seemingly at this time swallowed up all the other petty sovereignties of that country. Isaiah had before uttered a prophecy concerning it of calamitous import, chap. xvii; which had been fulfilled by Tiglath-pileser's taking it, and carrying away the people captives to Kir, 2 Kings xvi. 9. Amos also had foretold the same event, chap. i. 3—5. But it had recovered itself after the fall of the Assyrian empire, and is here doomed to suffer again the like calamities from the resentment of Nebuchadnezzar, probably about the same time with the other nations. See note on chap. xlviii. 1. Dr. Blayney.

—— Hamath — and Arpad:] See the note on Is. x. 9.

—— there is sorrow on the sea;] The word may be interpreted of the Arabians, who lay on the seacoast: or, adopting the marginal reading, "as on the sea," we may understand the sentence in the sense of Isaiah's words, "They are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest," chap. lvii. 20. W. Lowth.

25. How is the city of praise not left, &c.] How is it, that so goodly and famous a city as Damascus, so praised, so admired, hath not the favour to be spared from sackcloth and vastation? Bp. Hall.

27. — Ben-hadad.] This seems to have been a common name for the kings of Syria, as Pharaoh was for those of Egypt. Dr. Blayney. See the note on Gen. xii. 15.

28. Concerning Kedar, and concerning the kingdoms of Hazor,] The kingdoms whose metropolis is Hazor or Petra. Kedar was that part of Arabia inhabited by the posterity of Kedar, Ishmael's son, Gen. xxv. 13; called likewise "the kingdoms of Hazor;" each division having anciently a petty prince or king over it. W. Lowth.

—— the men of the east.] As the Arabians are called in the Scripture dialect. W. Lowth.

29. Their tents and their flocks &c.] Their substance consisted in their cattle, their furniture, and their tents, from whence the country itself is called "the tents of Kedar," Ps. cxx. 5: with these they removed from place to place for the convenience of pasture. See Is. xiii. 20. W. Lowth.

31. Arise, get you up unto the wealthy nation, &c.] Arise, O ye Chaldeans; get ye up to the wealthy nation of the Hazorites, that dwell without care in their tents; abounding with flocks and herds in the desert, where they dwell apart without cities or towns. Bp. Hall.

34. — against Elam] Elam was an independent and even powerful kingdom in the days of Abram, Gen. xiv. 1. When the monarchy of Persia was established under Cyrus, Elam was blended into, and formed a part of it: but before that time they were two distinct kingdoms. According to the present prophecy, Elam is spoken of as having actually become a province of the Babylonish empire, Dan. viii. 2: and Daniel appears to have presided over it, having Shushan for the seat of his government. It therefore probably was, as the name would lead us to suppose, the country called by heathen writers Elymais, which Pliny and Strabo, in conformity with Daniel, describe as separated from Su-

Before CHRIST 599.

35 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, I will break the bow of Elam, the chief of their might.

36 And upon Elam will I bring the four winds from the four quarters of heaven, and will scatter them toward all those winds; and there shall be no nation whither the outcasts of Elam shall not come.

37 For I will cause Elam to be dismayed before their enemies, and before them that seek their life: and I will bring evil upon them, even my fierce anger, saith the LORD; and I will send the sword after them, till I have consumed them:

38 And I will set my throne in Elam, and will destroy from thence the king and the princes, saith the LORD.

39 ¶ But it shall come to pass in the latter days, that I will bring again the captivity of Elam, saith the LORD.

2 Declare ye among the nations, and publish, and † set up a standard; publish, and conceal not: say, Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces; her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces.

Before CHRIST 595.

3 For out of the north there cometh up a nation against her, which shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein: they shall remove, they shall depart, both man and beast.

4 ¶ In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: they shall go, and seek the LORD their God.

5 They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us join ourselves to the LORD in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

6 My people hath been lost sheep: their shepherds have caused them to go astray, they have turned them away on the mountains: they have gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their † resting-place.

7 All that found them have devoured them: and their adversaries said, We offend not, because they have sinned against the LORD, the habitation of justice, even the LORD, the hope of their fathers.

siana by the river Eulæus, or Ulai. On the final subversion of the Babylonish monarchy, Elam was restored again, as is intimated below, ver. 39, to its former possessors, who had fought under the banners of the Medes and Persians. See Is. xxi. 2. Dr. Blayney.

35. — the bow of Elam,] Isaiah thus speaks of the Elamites, chap. xxii. 6; "And Elam bare the quiver." Strabo says, that the mountainous parts of Elymais bred chiefly archers: and Livy and other heathen writers speak of the Elymean bowmen. Dr. Blayney.

36. — four winds from the four quarters of heaven,] That is, enemies from every quarter. Wars and commotions are metaphorically denoted by winds: see chap. iv. 11, 12; li. 1; Dan. vii. 2. W. Lowth.

38. And I will set my throne in Elam,] Nebuchadnezzar acting under the commission and authority of God, the establishment of his power was in effect the setting up of the throne or dominion of His principal. Dr. Blayney, W. Lowth.

39. — I will bring again the captivity of Elam,] See note on ver. 34.

Chap. L. This chapter and the next contain a prophecy concerning the fall of Babylon, intermixed and contrasted with predictions concerning the redemption of Israel and Judah, who were not, like those oppressors, to be finally extirpated, but to survive them, and upon their repentance and conversion to be pardoned and restored. The prophecy was delivered and sent to Babylon in the fourth year of Zedekiah's reign, as appears from chap. li. 59. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 2. — set up a standard,] To call people together, and impart to them these good tidings. The destruction of Babylon would be likewise a sort of signal to the Jews, to assemble together, in order to their return home: the time of their captivity being then to expire. W. Lowth.

— Bel — Merodach] See the second note on chap. xliii. 13; and concerning "Bel," see the note from Dean Prideaux on Gen. x. 9. "Merodach" might be the name of one of their kings, that was afterwards deified by some of his subjects. W. Lowth.

3. — out of the north there cometh up a nation &c.] The Medes, who lay to the north of Babylon: see ver. 9, 41. W. Lowth.

— which shall make her land desolate,] See the note on Is. xiii. 20—22.

4. In those days, — the children of Israel &c.] In those days the children of Israel, and the children of Judah, shall, through the favour of the Persian monarchs, go up together, weeping for joy to return to their country, and to the place of God's worship and service. Bp. Hall. "In that time" will denote "during the time of Babylon's desolation:" which, being designed to be perpetual, will comprehend as well the time of the general restoration of Israel and Judah in the latter days, as that of their more immediate and partial return from Babylon. Dr. Blayney.

5. — a perpetual covenant] We find the Jews, after their return from Babylon, in Nehemiah's time, entering into a covenant to walk in God's law, and to obey Him: Neh. ix. 38; x. 1, &c. But by the "perpetual," or "everlasting covenant," may probably be understood that of the Gospel. Dr. Blayney.

6. — their shepherds have caused them to go astray,] Their pastors and governours have led them to commit idolatry, of which the mountains were a principal scene: see chap. ii. 20; iii. 6, 23; Ezek. vi. 3, 4, 13; xviii. 6, &c. And "they have gone from mountain to hill," varying the object or place of their idolatrous worship, and forgetting the sanctuary of their God, where alone they ought to have set up their rest. Dr. Blayney.

7. — the habitation of justice,] A refuge and protection for those who are good and just. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 595. 9 ¶ For, lo, I will raise and cause to come up against Babylon an assembly of great nations from the north country: and they shall set themselves in array against her; from thence she shall be taken: their arrows shall be as of a mighty ‖ expert man; none shall return in vain.

10 And Chaldea shall be a spoil: all that spoil her shall be satisfied, saith the LORD.

11 Because ye were glad, because ye rejoiced, O ye destroyers of mine heritage, because ye are grown † fat as the heifer at grass, and bellow as bulls;

12 Your mother shall be sore confounded; she that bare you shall be ashamed: behold, the hindermost of the nations shall be a wilderness, a dry land, and a desert.

13 Because of the wrath of the LORD it shall not be inhabited, but it shall be wholly desolate: [b] every one that goeth by Babylon shall be astonished, and hiss at all her plagues.

[b] Chap. 49. 17.

14 Put yourselves in array against Babylon round about: all ye that bend the bow, shoot at her, spare no arrows: for she hath sinned against the LORD.

15 Shout against her round about: she hath given her hand: her foundations are fallen, her walls are thrown down: for it is the vengeance of the LORD: take vengeance upon her: as she hath done, do unto her.

16 Cut off the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the ‖ sickle in the time of harvest: for fear of the oppressing sword they shall turn every one to his people, and they shall flee every one to his own land.

Before CHRIST 595.

17 ¶ Israel is a scattered sheep; the lions have driven him away: first the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last this Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria.

19 And I will bring Israel again to his habitation, and he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan, and his soul shall be satisfied upon mount Ephraim and Gilead.

20 In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them whom I reserve.

21 ¶ Go up against the land ‖ of Merathaim, even against it, and against the inhabitants of ‖ Pekod: waste and utterly destroy after them, saith the LORD, and do according to all that I have commanded thee.

22 A sound of battle is in the land, and of great destruction.

23 How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations!

24 I have laid a snare for thee, and thou

12. Your mother shall be sore confounded; &c.] Your mother city, Babylon, shall be sore confounded; and Chaldea, which was the queen of all nations, shall now be cast behind all the rest, and become a very wilderness and a barren desert. Bp. Hall.

15. — she hath given her hand:] In token of subjection and homage. The phrase occurs in the same sense, 1 Chron. xxix. 24; Lam. v. 6. It probably alludes to the act of the vanquished, who, throwing down his arms, and stretching forth his defenceless hands, acknowledges himself in the power of the conqueror. Dr. Blayney.

—— her foundations are fallen,] The signification of the Hebrew word, which occurs no where else, is uncertain. It probably means "the battlements," which is the rendering of the Greek version. Dr. Blayney.

16. Cut off the sower from Babylon,] Babylon resembled a country walled in, rather than a city: the walls, according to Herodotus, being sixty miles in circumference. Within this large circuit a great deal of ground was cultivated with corn: so that enough grew within the walls to support the inhabitants during a long siege. W. Lowth.

—— they shall turn every one to his people,] They, that is, the allies of Babylon. Compare chap. xlvi. 15; Is. xiii. 14. W. Lowth.

17. — first the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last &c.] After Nineveh, the metropolis of the Assyrian empire, was destroyed, Babylon became the queen of the East. They were both equally enemies to the people of God; the one subverted the kingdom of Israel, and the other the kingdom of Judah: the one carried away the ten tribes, and the other the two remaining tribes, into captivity. No wonder therefore that there are several prophecies relating to each of these cities, and that the fate of Babylon is foretold as was that of Nineveh. Bp. Newton. See the notes on Is. x; Nahum ii, iii; Zephan. ii. 13; Ezek. xxxi. 3.

18. — as I have punished the king of Assyria.] This may most probably be understood of the destruction of Nineveh, the chief seat of the Assyrian empire, by Nebuchadnezzar and Ahasuerus, or Astyages, as it is related in Tobit, chap. xiv. 15. At the taking of this great city, foretold by Jonah, Nahum, and Zephaniah, Chynaladanus the last king of the Assyrian race was killed: and the seat and title of the empire removed to Babylon, which was no longer called the Assyrian, but the Babylonian monarchy. W. Lowth.

20. — the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, &c.] Their sins shall be done away through My grace and mercy. Bp. Hall.

The promise contained in this verse seems evidently to respect the Gospel times, and "the remnant" that shall be saved "according to the election of grace." Compare chap. xxxi. 34; xxxiii. 8; Is. lix. 20; Rom. xi. 5, 26, 27. Dr. Blayney.

21. Go up against the land of Merathaim, — and — of Pekod:] Go up, ye Medes and Persians, against the territories of Babylon: even against the land of these proud "rebels," against the land of those who have "visited" My people with the sword and merciless destruction. Bp. Hall. There is no certainty, and indeed little probability, that there were any places to which belonged the names in the text. Dr. Blayney. See the margin.

23. How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken!] That oppressive empire, "which smote the people with a continual stroke," as it is described by Isaiah, chap. xiv. 6. W. Lowth.

24. I have laid a snare for thee, &c.] See the note on chap. li. 31.

Before CHRIST 595.

art also taken, O Babylon, and thou wast not aware: thou art found, and also caught, because thou hast striven against the LORD.

25 The LORD hath opened his armoury, and hath brought forth the weapons of his indignation: for this is the work of the Lord GOD of hosts in the land of the Chaldeans.

26 Come against her † from the utmost border, open her storehouses: ‖ cast her up as heaps, and destroy her utterly: let nothing of her be left.

27 Slay all her bullocks; let them go down to the slaughter: woe unto them! for their day is come, the time of their visitation.

28 The voice of them that flee and escape out of the land of Babylon, to declare in Zion the vengeance of the LORD our God, the vengeance of his temple.

29 Call together the archers against Babylon: all ye that bend the bow, camp against it round about; let none thereof escape: recompense her according to her work; according to all that she hath done, do unto her: for she hath been proud against the LORD, against the Holy One of Israel.

30 Therefore shall her young men fall in the streets, and all her men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD.

31 Behold, I am against thee, O thou † most proud, saith the Lord GOD of hosts: for thy day is come, the time that I will visit thee.

33 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts; The children of Israel and the children of Judah were oppressed together: and all that took them captives held them fast; they refused to let them go.

Before CHRIST 595.

34 Their Redeemer is strong; the LORD of hosts is his name: he shall throughly plead their cause, that he may give rest to the land, and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon.

35 ¶ A sword is upon the Chaldeans, saith the LORD, and upon the inhabitants of Babylon, and upon her princes, and upon her wise men.

36 A sword is upon the ‖ † liars; and they shall dote: a sword is upon her mighty men; and they shall be dismayed.

37 A sword is upon their horses, and upon their chariots, and upon all the mingled people that are in the midst of her; and they shall become as women: a sword is upon her treasures; and they shall be robbed.

38 A drought is upon her waters; and they shall be dried up: for it is the land of graven images, and they are mad upon their idols.

39 Therefore the wild beasts of the desert with the wild beasts of the islands shall dwell there, and the owls shall dwell therein: and it shall be no more inhabited for ever; neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation.

40 As God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD; so shall no man abide there, neither shall any son of man dwell therein. * Gen. 19. 25. chap. 49. 18.

41 Behold, a people shall come from the north, and a great nation, and many kings shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.

42 They shall hold the bow and the lance: they are cruel, and will not shew mercy: their voice shall roar like the sea, and they

28. The voice of them that flee &c.] Some of those, who were more than ordinarily zealous for the welfare of God's Church and people, were ready, upon the first news of the taking of Babylon, to bring the glad tidings thereof into Judea, how God had avenged the cause of His people, and executed His judgments on those who destroyed His temple, and profaned the holy vessels of it, that were dedicated to His service. See Dan. v. 1, 2, 3, & 30: and compare chap. li. 31. W. Lowth.

30. Therefore shall her young men fall in the streets,] Xenophon relates, that Gadatas and Gobryas with their soldiers, when they were got into the town, marched directly toward the palace, and, killing all they met, became masters of the place, and slew the king himself. W. Lowth.

32. — I will kindle a fire in his cities,] This may be meant of the destructions made in the Babylonian territories in the several expeditions which Cyrus undertook against that monarchy during the space of twenty years before the taking of Babylon; from the year before Christ 558, to the year 539. W. Lowth.

35. A sword is upon — her princes,] Who were slain together with their king Belshazzar at a feast: see chap. li. 39; Dan. v. 1—30: "and upon her wise men;" who, though famous for their skill in astrology and the other arts of divination, could not foresee or prevent the dangers coming upon themselves in the common calamity. See Is. xlvii. 13, 14. W. Lowth.

36. — upon the liars;] The false pretenders to the knowledge of future events. Compare chap. xlviii. 30; Is. xliv. 25. W. Lowth.

— upon her mighty men; &c.] See the note on chap. li. 30.

37. — upon all the mingled people that are in the midst of her;] Her auxiliaries, made up of several nations: see Ezek. xxx. 5. W. Lowth. See the note on chap. li. 27.

38. A drought is upon her waters; &c.] See the note on chap. li. 36.

39. Therefore the wild beasts of the desert &c.] See the notes on Is. xiii. 20.

42. — they are cruel, and will not shew mercy:] Upon the second capture of Babylon, as soon as Darius had made himself master of the place, he ordered three thousand of the principal men of the city to be crucified, and thereby fulfilled the prophecies of the cruelty which the Medes and Persians should use towards the Babylonians. Bp. Newton.

Before CHRIST 595. shall ride upon horses, every one put in array, like a man to the battle, against thee, O daughter of Babylon.

43 The king of Babylon hath heard the report of them, and his hands waxed feeble: anguish took hold of him, and pangs as of a woman in travail.

[d] Chap. 49. 19. 44 Behold, he shall come up [d] like a lion from the swelling of Jordan unto the habitation of the strong: but I will make them suddenly run away from her: and who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? for who is like me? and [e] who will ‖ appoint me the time? and who is that shepherd that will stand before me?

43. The king of Babylon hath heard the report of them, &c.] Belshazzar was a weak and dissolute prince, and dismayed upon the first apprehension of danger, when he understood that Cyrus's army laid siege to the city. See Dan. v. 6. W. Lowth.

44. Behold, he shall come up &c.] He, that is, the invading army. See the notes on chap. xlix. 19—21.

Chap. LI. ver. 1. — a destroying wind;] An allusion to the hot pestilential wind, as the Arabick version renders these words, which is frequent in those parts, and concerning which see the note on 2 Kings xix. 35.

7. Babylon hath been a golden cup in the Lord's hand, &c.] For what sense Babylon is called "a cup" may be seen by comparing chap. xxv. 15. She was a splendid instrument of vengeance ordained by God against the neighbouring nations; and as all these had suffered by her, all are represented as ready to glory over her, or rejoice when her turn of suffering came. Dr. Blayney.

9. We would have healed Babylon,] This is spoken in the name of God's Prophets, and the other witnesses of His truth, importing that they had sufficiently testified against her errours, and idolatries, but she was irreclaimable. And therefore it was time for all the lovers of truth to depart out of her, lest they be involved in her punishments: see ver. 6. W. Lowth. Or they are the words of the allies of Babylon, who say that they had endeavoured to support her sinking cause, but in vain; and therefore, as the case was desperate, they call one another to leave her to herself, and return every man to his own country. Poole, Dr. Blayney.

10. The Lord hath brought forth our righteousness:] He hath declared our cause to be just, (compare Ps. xxxvii. 6,) by bringing such remarkable judgments upon our enemies. And therefore we ought to give glory to Him in the assemblies of His Church, and in the most public manner imaginable. W. Lowth.

11. — the kings of the Medes:] Neriglissar king of Babylon having formed an alliance against the Medes, Cambyses sent his son Cyrus with an army of thirty thousand Persians to join the Medes commanded by Cyaxares: this Cyaxares king of Media, called Darius the Mede in Scripture, was Cyrus's uncle; and it was properly his army that made the expedition against the Babylonians, he employing Cyrus as his general. Persia was then a small part of the empire of Media, and was of little account till Cyrus made a figure in the world: and even then it was called the kingdom of the Medes and Persians, the Medes having still the preference. And in after times the Greek historians style those wars, in which their country encountered with Xerxes, by the name of the Median wars, because the Medes were the founders of that empire. W. Lowth.

15—19. These verses are repeated from chap. x. 12—16. See the notes there.

20. Thou art my battle ax and weapons of war:] God speaks here to Cyrus, and tells him, that He will make use of him as an instrument of Providence, for the destroying of the whole power of the Babylonish empire, and of all orders and degrees of men in it; as He had formerly made that empire the executioner of His judgments upon other countries: see chap. l. 23. W. Lowth. Or, the army of the Medes and Persians is intended; as elsewhere the instrument of God's vengeance is called a "sword," a "rod," a "scourge." Dr. Blayney.

25. — O destroying mountain,] Though Babylon was seated in a low watery plain, yet it is here called a "mountain," on account of its power and greatness, as well as of the vast height of its walls and towers, its palaces and temples: and Berosus, speaking of some of its buildings, says, that they appeared most like mountains. Bp. Newton, Poole. "The rocks," from whence it was to be "rolled," were its strong holds. Dr. Blayney.

27. — the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz;] The two former of these Bochart reasonably concludes to be the greater and less Armenia: and the latter to be a part of Phrygia near the Hellespont. Homer appears to speak of it by the name of Ascania. And that both the Armenians and Phrygians composed part of the army which Cyrus led against Babylon, may be seen in Xenophon. Dr. Blayney.

rage so as to face the enemy in the field again; they retired within their walls, and Cyrus could never draw them forth to try the fortune of arms. Bp. Newton.

31. One post shall run to meet another, &c.] That is, Couriers shall run from different parts, and so fall in with one another, all carrying the same intelligence to the same person, that the city was taken on the side that each came from. Dr. Blayney.

Babylon was taken by surprise, by unexpectedly draining the river Euphrates, and entering through the channel into the city, as Herodotus relates.

For the carrying on of this stratagem, Cyrus took the opportunity of a publick festival, when the whole night was usually spent in revellings, and all manner of disorders, see ver. 39. In this time of riot the gates leading down to the river, that used to be shut every night, were left open, and gave a passage to Cyrus and his army into the city, which he became master of, while they thought themselves in the utmost security, both from the height and strength of their walls, and depth of their river: Cyrus having as yet made little progress in the siege, though he had invested the city with his army two years before. This surprise caused so many messengers to run one after the other, to acquaint the king with this unexpected news. The vast compass of this city has been observed in the notes on chap. l. 16. W. Lowth.

32. — that the passages are stopped,] Or rather, "surprised." These were most probably the entrances into the city from the river side, which were secured by gates, that ought, as Herodotus observes, to have been fast barred; which, if it had been done, would have effectually frustrated the attempt of the enemy; but being left open and unguarded on account of the publick festivity, the assailants were in possession of those entrances, and in the heart of the city, before the besieged were aware of it. Dr. Blayney.

—— and the reeds they have burned with fire,] The soldiers, seeing the Euphrates nearly dry, set fire to the reeds which covered its borders, in order to facilitate the approach of the troops to the walls. The messengers reported to the king this circumstance, for the purpose of signifying to him that all the waters round about Babylon were dried up, and that there was no longer any thing to shelter the city from the enemy. These reeds are said to have been very large and high, and, together with the mud on which they stood, to have formed as it were another wall round the city. Calmet, Poole.

Lowth.*

35. — to me and to my flesh.] To me and to my children. Our nearest relations are called our flesh in Scripture: see Judg. ix. 5; 2 Sam. v. 1; Neh. v. 5. W. Lowth.

36. — I will dry up her sea, and make her springs dry.] See the notes on Is. xiv. 23; and ver. 31 of this chapter. By the means there described, Babylon was taken, as here foretold. The city would have been otherwise impregnable, as it was supplied with provisions for many years, saith Herodotus; for more than twenty years, according to Xenophon; for, as Herodotus saith, if the Babylonians had but known what the Persians were doing, by shutting the gates which opened upon the river, and by standing upon the walls which were built as banks, they might have taken and destroyed the Persians as in a net, or cage. Bp. Newton.

37. And Babylon shall become heaps, &c.] See the notes on Is. xiii. 20.

38. They shall roar together like lions:] Either for grief and anguish of mind: compare Zech. xi. 3; Is. lix. 11; or else, the Prophet describes the revels and riotous noise that they made on the night of the publick festival, on which the city was taken: see the following verse. W. Lowth.

39. In their heat I will make their feasts, &c.] See the note on ver. 31.

41. — the praise of the whole earth] Compare chap. xlix. 25; Dan. iv. 30; Is. xiii. 19. See the note there.

42. The sea is come up upon Babylon:] By "the sea" any large collection of waters is denoted, and particularly the river Euphrates, ver. 36: so that the fate of Babylon is here alluded to, concerning which see ver. 64, and Is. xiv. 23. Others by "the sea" understand metaphorically a numerous army, and by the overspreading of waters the invasion and conquest of the country. Dr. Blayney.

53. Though Babylon should mount up to heaven, &c.] Though Babylon prides herself in the glory of her empire, placed above the common height of human greatness; compare Is. xlvii. 7, 8; though she thinks herself never so secure in her high gates, ver. 58, and strength of her walls, which were three hundred and fifty feet high, according to Herodotus, yet this shall not place her out of the reach of My vengeance; compare chap. xlix. 16. W. Lowth.

55. — destroyed out of her the great voice;] When cities are populous, they are of course noisy. See Is. xxii. 2. Silence is therefore a mark of depopulation; and in this sense we are to understand God's destroying or taking away out of Babylon the great noise, which during the time of her prosperity was constantly heard there; "the busy hum of men," as the poet calls it. In this manner the mystical Babylon is threatened, Rev. xviii. 21, 23. Compare chap. vii. 34; xvi. 9; xxv. 10. Dr. Blayney.

64. — Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.] This is probably mentioned to shew that the next chapter was added by Ezra, or Baruch, or whoever collected this prophecy into one volume. W. Lowth.

Chap. LII. This chapter was confessedly added by some one after Jeremiah's time, probably by Ezra, or whoever revised the sacred writings after the return of the Jews from Babylon, and collected them into one body. It contains a brief history of the captivity, nearly the same, word for word, as it is related in the second book of Kings, chap. xxiv. 18—20, and xxv; together with some few additions. Some have supposed it placed here as a proper introduction to the Book of Lamentations. But more probably the design was, by immediately subjoining this historical narrative of the desolations of the Jewish nation to the predictions of Jeremiah concerning them, to hold forth a nearer view of the exact accomplishment of the Divine word of prophecy. Dr. Blayney.

Josephus relates this remarkable circumstance attending the burning of the temple under Nebuchadnezzar and Vespasian, that it happened both times on the same day of the year. W. Lowth.

19 And the basons, and the ‖ firepans, and the bowls, and the caldrons, and the candlesticks, and the spoons, and the cups; that which was of gold in gold, and that which was of silver in silver, took the captain of the guard away.

22 And a chapiter of brass was upon it; and the height of one chapiter was five cubits, with network and pomegranates upon the chapiters round about, all of brass. The second pillar also and the pomegranates were like unto these. Before CHRIST 588.

23 And there were ninety and six pomegranates on a side; and all the pomegranates upon the network were an hundred round about.

24 ¶ And the captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest, and Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the † door:

25 He took also out of the city an eunuch, which had the charge of the men of war; and seven men of them that † were near the king's person, which were found in the city; and the ‖ principal scribe of the host, who mustered the people of the land; and threescore men of the people of the land, that were found in the midst of the city.

26 So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard took them, and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah.

times. The first was, when Nebuchadnezzar came up against Jehoiakim, Dan. i. 2. The second time was at the captivity of Jeconiah; see chap. xxvii. 19; and 2 Kings xxiv. 13. And now at the destruction of the city and temple, they entirely stripped it of all its ornaments. W. Lowth.

19. — that which was of gold in gold, &c.] That is, the utensils above mentioned, some of which were of gold, and some of silver; he took them away of both kinds. Dr. Blayney.

20. — twelve brasen bulls that were under the bases,] Rather, "which were instead of bases," to support the brasen sea. See 1 Kings vii. 25. W. Lowth.

21. — the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits;] See 1 Kings vii. 15; but in 2 Chron. iii. 15, it is said, that both the pillars made thirty-five cubits: perhaps one cubit should be allowed for the basis. W. Lowth.

23. And there were ninety and six pomegranates on a side;] Thus the pomegranates on the four sides, together with those which may have been at the corners of the building, make up the four hundred, mentioned at 1 Kings vii. 42; 2 Chron. iv. 13. Dr. Blayney.

24. — and the three keepers of the door:] These were not the ordinary porters, who were taken from among the Levites, but were priests, who stood at the door to receive the offerings of the people, and thus were keepers of the sacred treasury; an office of high trust and consideration. See 2 Kings xii. 9; xxiii. 4. Dr. Blayney.

25. — the principal scribe of the host,] In the margin the translation is, "the scribe of the captain of the host." It appears however, that there were certain officers belonging to the Jewish armies called scribes, who were what we call mustermasters of the troops. See 1 Mac. v. 42. And the person here spoken of was probably the mustermaster or intendant general of the army: the secretary at war. Dr. Blayney.

—— and threescore men &c.] Eminent persons, who had concealed themselves, but were afterwards discovered. W. Lowth.

27. — Thus Judah was carried away captive out of his own land.] The transplanting of people or nations has been practised by more modern conquerors. Thus in the year 796, "Charlemagne transplanted the Saxons from their own country, to oblige them to remain faithful to him, into different parts of his kingdom, either Flanders, or the country of the Helvetians, &c. Their own country was repeopled by the Adrites, a Sclavonian nation." Henault. So in much later times, "It was the policy of Alva the First, who ascended the throne of Persia in 1585, to transplant the inhabitants of conquered places from one country to another, with a view, not only of preventing any danger from their disaffection, but likewise of depopulating the countries exposed to an enemy." Hanway's Revolutions of Persia, Parkhurst.

28—30. This is the people &c.] It is not to be supposed, that the whole number of the Jews, whom Nebuchadnezzar carried into captivity, was no more than four thousand six hundred. He carried away more than twice that number at one time, in the eighth year of his reign: 2 Kings xxiv. 12—16. Before that time he had carried off a number of captives from Jerusalem, in the first year of his reign, among whom were Daniel and his companions: Dan. i. 3—6. These are confessedly not taken notice of here. And as the taking and burning of Jerusalem is in this very chapter said to have been in the fourth and fifth months of the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar, those, who were carried into captivity at the date of those events, cannot possibly be the same with those that are said to be carried away, either in the eighteenth or the twenty-third year of that prince. Nor indeed is it credible, that the number carried away at the time the city was taken, and the whole country reduced, could be so few as eight hundred and thirty-two, supposing a mistake in the date of the year, which some are willing to do, though without sufficient grounds. Here then we have three deportations, and those the most considerable ones, in the first, the eighth, and the nineteenth years of Nebuchadnezzar, sufficiently distinguished from those in his seventh, eighteenth, and twenty-third years. So that it seems most reasonable to conclude with Archbishop Usher, that by the latter three the historian meant to point out deportations of a lesser kind, not elsewhere noticed in direct terms in Scripture. The first of these, said to have been in the seventh year of Nebuchadnezzar, was of those who had been picked up in several parts of Judah by the bands of Chaldeans, Syrians, and others, whom the king of Babylon sent against the land previously to his own coming; 2 Kings xxiv. 2. That in the eighteenth year corresponds with the time, when the Chaldean army broke off the siege before Jerusalem, and marched to fight the Egyptian army; at which time they might think it proper to send off the prisoners that were in camp under a guard to Babylon. And the last in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar was, when that monarch, being engaged in the siege of Tyre, sent off Nebuzar-adan against the Moabites, Ammonites, and other neighbouring nations, who at the same time carried away the last gleaning of Jews that remained in their own land, amounting in all to no more than seven hundred and forty-five. Dr. Blayney.

31. — Evil-merodach — lifted up the head of Jehoiachin] St. Jerome reports, from an ancient tradition of the Jews, that Evil-merodach, having had the government of the Babylonish empire during the distraction of his father, used his power so ill, that as soon as the old king came to himself he put him in prison for it, where he contracted a particular acquaintance with Jehoiachin, who was his fellow prisoner, and that this was the cause of the great kindness he expressed towards him. W. Lowth.

32. — set his throne above the throne of the kings] That is, he shewed him more respect and honour than he did to any other of the captive princes, by placing him nearest himself. See Esth. iii. 1. Dr. Blayney. It is probable the phrase may have proceeded from the custom of placing cushions for persons of more than ordinary distinction in the places allotted them to sit in. Harmer.

THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

INTRODUCTION.

THE Lamentations of Jeremiah are very properly distributed into five chapters, each of them containing a distinct elegy, consisting of twenty-two periods, according to the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet.

They were not composed till after the destruction of Jerusalem and its temple, and the depopulation of the country by the transmigration of all its inhabitants; which events are described not at all in the style of prophetick predictions, but alluded to and bewailed as what had been already fully accomplished and brought to pass. We cannot admire too much the full and graceful flow of pathetick eloquence, in which the author pours forth the effusions of a patriotick heart, and piously weeps over the ruins of his venerable country. Never was there a more rich and elegant variety of beautiful images ranged together within so small a compass, nor more happily chosen and applied. But it was before observed, that the Prophet's peculiar talent lay in working up and expressing the passions of grief and pity; and unhappily for him, as a man and a citizen, he met with a subject but too well calculated to give his genius its full display. Dr. Blayney.

Perhaps the most perfect and regular elegiack composition in the world, is the Lamentations of Jeremiah; as the Prophet mourns in this Book over the destruction of the temple and the holy city, and the overthrow of the whole state, he assembles all the affecting images which a subject so melancholy could suggest. The composition is uncommonly artificial. By turns, the Prophet and the city Jerusalem are introduced, as pouring forth their sorrows; and, in the end, a chorus of the people send up the most earnest and plaintive supplications to God. The lines of the original, as may in part appear from our translation, are longer than is usual in other kinds of Hebrew poetry; and the melody is rendered thereby more flowing, and better adapted to the querimonious strain of elegy. Dr Blair.

CHAP. I.

1 The miserable estate of Jerusalem by reason of her sin.
12 She complaineth of her grief, 18 and confesseth God's judgment to be righteous.

HOW doth the city sit solitary, that was full of people! how is she become as a widow! she that was great among the nations, and princess among the provinces, how is she become tributary!

2 She [a] weepeth sore in the [b] night, and her tears are on her cheeks: among all her lovers she hath none to comfort her: all her friends have dealt treacherously with her, they are become her enemies.

3 Judah is gone into captivity because of affliction, and † because of great servitude: she dwelleth among the heathen, she findeth no rest: all her persecutors overtook her between the straits.

Before CHRIST about 588.

† Heb. for the greatness of servitude.

4 The ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts: all her gates are desolate: her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.

[d] Deut. 28. 15, 45, 44. [e] Jer. 52. 28.

6 And from the daughter of Zion all her beauty is departed: her princes are become

Chap. I. ver. 1. — she that was great among the nations, &c.] See what is said of David's conquests and sovereignty over the neighbouring states, 2 Sam. viii. 1—14; x. 6—19; of the extent of his son Solomon's dominions, 1 Kings iv. 21, 24; of the power of Judah in the reign of Jehoshaphat, 2 Chron. xvii. 10, 11; and also in that of Uzziah, 2 Chron. xxvi. 6, 7, 8. Dr. Blayney.

2. — all her lovers &c.] Those, that courted her alliance in the time of her prosperity, not only universally failed and deserted her in the time of need, but most of them turned against her, and took a malignant pleasure in aggravating her misfortunes. See Jer. xlviii. 27; Ps. cxxxvii. 7; Ezek. xxv. 3, 6, 8, 12, 15; xxvi. 2; xxviii. 24; xxix. 6, 7; Obad. ver. 10—14. Dr. Blayney.

3. Judah is gone into captivity &c.] Many Jews, to avoid the miserable servitude of the Chaldeans, have betaken themselves to a voluntary transmigration to other nations, hoping there to find rest; but even there have these Babylonian persecutors overtaken them, so that they are surprised in those straits, which could no way be avoided. Bp. Hall.

5. Her adversaries are the chief,] They have got the advantage over her, and she is become their vassal: and thus the judgment, that Moses threatened the Jews upon their disobedience, is fulfilled; Deut. xxviii. 43, 44; "That their enemies should be the head, and they should be the tail." W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 588. like harts that find no pasture, and they are gone without strength before the pursuer.

7 Jerusalem remembered in the days of her affliction and of her miseries all her ‖ pleasant things that she had in the days of old, when her people fell into the hand of the enemy, and none did help her: the adversaries saw her, and did mock at her sabbaths.

8 Jerusalem hath grievously sinned; therefore she † is removed: all that honoured her despise her, because they have seen her nakedness: yea, she sigheth, and turneth backward.

9 Her filthiness is in her skirts; she remembereth not her last end; therefore she came down wonderfully: she had no comforter. O LORD, behold my affliction: for the enemy hath magnified himself.

10 The adversary hath spread out his hand upon all her ‖ pleasant things: for she hath seen that the heathen entered into her sanctuary, whom thou didst command that [a] they should not enter into thy congregation.

‖ Or, to make the soul to come again.

11 All her people sigh, they seek bread; they have given their pleasant things for meat ‖ to relieve the soul: see, O LORD, and consider; for I am become vile.

12 ¶ ‖ Is it nothing to you, all ye that † pass by? behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the LORD hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger.

13 From above hath he sent fire into my bones, and it prevaileth against them: he hath spread a net for my feet, he hath turned me back: he hath made me desolate and faint all the day.

14 The yoke of my transgressions is bound by his hand: they are wreathed, and come up upon my neck: he hath made my strength to fall, the LORD hath delivered me into their hands, from whom I am not able to rise up.

Before CHRIST about 588.

15 The LORD hath trodden under foot all my mighty men in the midst of me: he hath called an assembly against me to crush my young men: the LORD hath trodden ‖ the virgin, the daughter of Judah, as in a winepress.

16 For these things I weep; [b] mine eye, mine eye runneth down with water, because the comforter that should † relieve my soul is far from me: my children are desolate, because the enemy prevailed.

17 Zion spreadeth forth her hands, and there is none to comfort her: the LORD hath commanded concerning Jacob, that his adversaries should be round about him: Jerusalem is as a menstruous woman among them.

18 ¶ The LORD is [c] righteous; for I have rebelled against his † commandment: hear, I pray you, all people, and behold my sorrow: my virgins and my young men are gone into captivity.

19 I called for my lovers, but they deceived me: my priests and mine elders gave up the ghost in the city, while they sought their meat to relieve their souls.

20 Behold, O LORD; for I am in distress: my [d] bowels are troubled; mine heart is turned within me; for I have grievously rebelled: abroad the sword bereaveth, at home there is as death.

21 They have heard that I sigh: there is none to comfort me: all mine enemies have heard of my trouble; they are glad that thou hast done it: thou wilt bring the day that thou hast ‖ called, and they shall be like unto me.

22 Let all their wickedness come before thee; and do unto them, as thou hast done unto me for all my transgressions: for my sighs are many, and my heart is faint.

7. — did mock at her sabbaths.] The heathen writers commonly ridicule the Jewish sabbaths, as a mark of the sloth and idleness of the people; without considering the excellent uses that day was designed for, namely, to give men leisure to attend upon the service of God, and learn the duties of religion. W. Lowth.

8. — because they have seen her nakedness:] She is stripped of all her ornaments, and carried naked and bare into captivity. As she has defiled herself with idolatry, called spiritual adultery in Scripture; so God has ordered her to be exposed to shame, like a common harlot: see note on Jer. xiii. 22. W. Lowth.

9. Her filthiness is in her skirts;] The Prophet proceeds in comparing the Jewish people to a woman, whose filthiness is exposed to the publick view. But, as he continues, notwithstanding such degrees of sin, they would not believe or consider what would be the end of their wickedness. Poole.

13. From above hath he sent fire into my bones,] That is, a judgment as consuming as fire in the bones, so that the strength of the Jews was exhausted. Poole.

15. — trodden — as in a winepress.] God's vengeance is often thus compared in the prophetical writings. See Is. lxiii. 3; Rev. xiv. 19, 20; xix. 15. W. Lowth.

21. — thou wilt bring the day that thou hast called, &c.] The day, when Thou wilt execute Thy judgments upon the Babylonians, and other nations hostile to the Jews, will certainly come at Thy appointed time. W. Lowth, Poole.

The destruction of Jerusalem affords us a melancholy and alarming instance of Divine justice. The severity of this justice appears, not only in the city's being taken, and the people exposed to the fury of their enemies, and carried into captivity; but more especially in the burning of the temple, and the suppression of the Divine service. After such an example as this, no one can doubt but that God will severely revenge the contempt which men offer to His covenant, His worship, and the invitations of His mercy. Osterwald.

CHAP. II.

1 Jeremiah lamenteth the misery of Jerusalem. 20 He complaineth thereof to God.

HOW hath the Lord covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud in his anger, and cast down from heaven unto the earth the beauty of Israel, and remembered not his footstool in the day of his anger!

2 The Lord hath swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob, and hath not pitied: he hath thrown down in his wrath the strong holds of the daughter of Judah; he hath † brought them down to the ground: he hath polluted the kingdom and the princes thereof.

3 He hath cut off in his fierce anger all the horn of Israel: he hath drawn back his right hand from before the enemy, and he burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about.

4 He hath bent his bow like an enemy: he stood with his right hand as an adversary, and slew † all that were pleasant to the eye in the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion: he poured out his fury like fire.

5 The Lord was as an enemy: he hath swallowed up Israel, he hath swallowed up all her palaces: he hath destroyed his strong holds, and hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation.

6 And he hath violently [a] taken away his ‖ tabernacle, as if it were of a garden: he hath destroyed his places of the assembly: the Lord hath caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath despised in the indignation of his anger the king and the priest.

7 The Lord hath cast off his altar, he hath abhorred his sanctuary, he hath † given up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces; they have made a noise in the house of the Lord, as in the day of a solemn feast.

† Heb. shut up.

Before CHRIST about 588.

8 The Lord hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion: he hath stretched out a line, he hath not withdrawn his hand from † destroying: therefore he made the rampart and the wall to lament; they languished together.

9 Her gates are sunk into the ground; he hath destroyed and broken her bars: her king and her princes are among the Gentiles: the law is no more; her [b] prophets also find no vision from the Lord.

[b] Psal. 74. 9.

10 The elders of the daughter of Zion sit upon the ground, and keep silence: they have cast up dust upon their heads; they have girded themselves with sackcloth: the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.

11 Mine eyes do fail with tears, my bowels are troubled, my liver is poured upon the earth, for the destruction of the daughter of my people; because the children and the sucklings ‖ swoon in the streets of the city.

12 They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine? when they swooned as the wounded in the streets of the city, when their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom.

13 What thing shall I take to witness for thee? what thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? what shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? for thy breach is great like the sea: who can heal thee?

14 Thy [c] prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee: and they have not discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but have seen for thee false burdens and causes of banishment.

[c] Jer. 2. 8. & 5. 31. & 14. 14. & 23. 16.

Chap. II. ver. 1. — remembered not his footstool] See note at 1 Chron. xxviii. 2.

3. — he hath drawn back his right hand from before the enemy,] That is, the right hand of Israel himself, his exertions of strength being rendered ineffectual by God, or turned away from obstructing or opposing the progress of the enemy; just as God says, Jer. xxi. 4, That He would turn aside the weapons of war, which were in the hands of the Jews, so as to prevent their hindering the Chaldean army from entering the city. Dr. Blayney.

6. — his tabernacle, as if it were of a garden:] As if it were no better than a tent or cottage, set up in a garden or vineyard, whilst the fruit is gathering, and then to be taken away again. Compare Is. i. 8. W. Lowth.

7. — they have made a noise &c.] The enemies triumphed in the desolation of the temple with as loud a noise, as the people were wont to make there in celebrating the praises of God on a solemn festival. Compare Ps. lxxiv. 4. Dr. Blayney.

8. — he hath stretched out a line,] To mark out the extent of what was to be pulled down. Dr. Blayney. See the note on Is. xxxiv. 11; also on Jer. xlvii. 6.

9. — the law is no more;] The priests and Levites, whose office it is to instruct the people in the law, are dispersed among the heathen; and that part of the law, which regards the publick worship of God, is rendered impracticable by the temple's being destroyed. W. Lowth.

11. — my liver is poured upon the earth,] Compare Job xvi. 13. Dr. Blayney.

13. What thing shall I take to witness for thee?] With what example of like misery shall I go about to comfort thee? Bp. Hall.

—— thy breach is great like the sea:] Like the breaking in of the sea, that overflows a whole country, where no stop can be put to the inundation. W. Lowth.

14. — they have not discovered thine iniquity, &c.] They have not given the people a just sense of their iniquities, in order to avert God's judgments; but rather flatter them in their sins, with the hope of impunity. See Jer. v. 31; xiv. 14. W. Lowth.

—— false burdens] The Hebrew word is usually translated "burden," and generally signifies a burdensome prophecy: see the note on Jer. xxiii. 33. But it likewise imports prophecy in

CHAP. III.

1 The faithful bemail their calamities. 22 By the mercies of God they nourish their hope. 37 They acknowledge God's justice. 55 They pray for deliverance, 64 and vengeance on their enemies.

I AM the man that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath.

2 He hath led me, and brought me into darkness, but not into light.

3 Surely against me is he turned; he turneth his hand against me all the day.

4 My flesh and my skin hath he made old; he hath broken my bones.

5 He hath builded against me, and compassed me with gall and travel.

6 He hath set me in dark places, as they that be dead of old.

7 He hath hedged me about, that I cannot get out: he hath made my chain heavy.

8 Also when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer.

9 He hath inclosed my ways with hewn stone, he hath made my paths crooked.

10 He was unto me as a bear lying in wait, and as a lion in secret places.

general: see Prov. xxx. 1; xxxi. 1: and so it is used here; for Jeremiah complains of those impostors, who prophesied of peace, and soothed men in their sins to their final destruction. W. Lowth.

15. All that pass by clap their hands at thee;] See note at Job xxvii. 23.

17. — he hath fulfilled his word that he had commanded] God hath not surprised us by these providences; He gave us notice what He would do, and hath done no more than what He threatened long since, Lev. xxvi. 16, &c; Deut. xxviii. 15, &c. It is true He hath severely punished us, so that in His dispensation there appear no marks of pity: He hath set up our enemies, and made them to triumph over His people, but in all this He hath but justified His truth, and fulfilled His word. Poole. The word "command" is sometimes used for any part of the covenant which God had engaged Himself to perform. See Ps. cv. 8; cxi. 9. W. Lowth.

18. — O wall of the daughter of Zion, &c.] As the wall and ramparts are said to lament, ver. 8, because their ruins are objects of lamentation; so here devout persons, upon the destruction of the city, direct their prayers to God, as if the ruins themselves did entreat Him to have compassion on the miseries of that place, which He had chosen for His peculiar residence. W. Lowth.

19. — in the top of every street.] The same phrase occurs, chap. iv. 1; Is. li. 20; Nahum iii. 10; and perhaps signifies "in every street;" (W. Lowth.) or at the extremity of the streets at either end. Dr. Blayney

20. — Shall the women eat their fruit, &c.] We find by comparing this verse with chap. iv. 10, that God brought upon them that terrible judgment, which He had denounced against them, if they continued to provoke Him; namely, that they should "eat the flesh of their own sons and daughters," Levit. xxvi. 29; Deut. xxviii. 53; Jer. xix. 9. W. Lowth.

22. Thou hast called as in a solemn day my terrors round about,] Terrours came upon me on every side by Thy appointment; just as multitudes used to flock to Jerusalem at the times of the solemn feasts. The phrase "fear or terrour on every side," is elsewhere used by Jeremiah to express great misery and desolation, Jer. vi. 25; xx. 3; xlvi. 5; xlix. 29. W. Lowth.

Chap. III. ver. 2. — darkness, — light.] "Darkness" is a common emblem of distress, as "light" is of prosperity. Dr. Blayney.

46 All our enemies have opened their mouths against us.

16. He hath also broken my teeth with gravel stones, &c.] In this and the foregoing verse, the Prophet aggravates the calamities of his people by such expressions as imply, that, instead of any support or comfort, they find nothing but miseries and afflictions: see note on Jer. ix. 15. The Septuagint render the latter part of the verse, "He hath fed me with ashes," that is, We fare as hard as those who feed upon bread baked in ashes, whose teeth are in danger of being broken by grits and stones. Compare Ps. cii. 9; Joh vi. 7. W. Lowth.

17. — I forgat prosperity.] I have been a stranger to prosperity long enough to wear the remembrance of it out of my mind: so Joseph, speaking of the seven years of famine, saith, that "plenty shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt," Gen. xli. 30. By the same figure the prophet Isaiah, describing happy times, saith, "the former troubles are forgotten," chap. lxv. 16. W. Lowth.

19. — wormwood and the gall.] See note on Jer. ix. 15.

27. — that he bear the yoke in his youth.] It is good to be inured betimes to bear those useful restraints which arise from a sense of the duty we owe to God, and the obedience we ought to pay to His laws. W. Lowth.

28. He sitteth alone &c.] The discipline of affliction makes a man serious and thoughtful, it disposes him to reflect on himself and his ways, and instructs him to acquiesce in the dispensations of Providence. W. Lowth.

29. He putteth his mouth in the dust; &c.] He prostrates himself even to the ground before Almighty God, in token of the deepest humiliation of soul: see Ps. cxix. 25; if by that means he may recover the Divine favour. W. Lowth.

33. For he doth not afflict willingly &c.] God never dispenses any event to us, so much with intent to exercise His power over us, as to express His goodness towards us: He never "doth afflict or grieve" us more against our will, than against His own desire; never indeed but when goodness itself calleth for it, and even mercy doth urge thereto. Dr. Isaac Barrow.

34. To crush under his feet &c.] In this and the two next verses certain acts of tyranny, malice, and injustice are specified, which men often indulge themselves in the practice of, one towards another; but which the Divine goodness is far from countenancing or approving by any similar conduct. Dr. Blayney

36. To subvert a man in his cause,] That is, to prevent his having justice done him in a lawsuit or controversy by any undue interference: as by bearing or suborning false witness; or exerting any kind of influence in opposition to truth and right. Dr. Blayney.

38. Out of the mouth of the most High proceedeth not evil and good?] Do not calamities come from God's will and disposal, as well as prosperity? See Is. xlv. 7; Amos iii. 6. W. Lowth.

39. Wherefore doth a living man complain, &c.] If we consider God's afflictions as a just reward of our evil deeds, this will prevent all murmuring and repining against Providence: especially as long as men are on this side of the grave, they ought to be thankful for having an opportunity given them for repentance. W. Lowth.

51. Mine eye affecteth mine heart] Or, preys upon my heart: my grief wears out my health and strength. W. Lowth.

52. Mine enemies chased me sore, &c.] Here the Prophet begins to celebrate the deliverance he had experienced from former dangers and difficulties; from whence he is led to trust, that the same good Providence will again be his support, and avenge him of his present persecutors. Dr. Blayney.

53. They have cut off my life in the dungeon, &c.] I was not only sequestered from all human society like a dead man, see ver. 6; but in apparent danger of losing my life in the dungeon: see Jer. xxxvii. 20; xxxviii. 9, 10. And their laying a stone upon the entrance of that dark cavern resembled the burying me alive. Compare Dan. vi. 17; Matt. xxvii. 60. W. Lowth.

54. Waters flowed over mine head;] A metaphor taken from a person ready to be drowned, to denote imminent danger and distress. See Ps. lxix. 1, 2; cxxiv. 4, 5. Dr. Blayney.

56. — hide not thine ear at my breathing,] Or, sighing: God's answering our prayers is commonly expressed by "opening His ears:" "hiding" them denotes the contrary. W. Lowth.

59. O Lord, thou hast seen my wrong:] Here the Prophet adverts to his present sufferings and ill usage. Dr. Blayney.

63. Behold their sitting down, and their rising up; &c.] In every part of their life, (compare Ps. cxxxix. 2,) I am the object of their scorn and derision. See ver. 14. W. Lowth.

64. Render unto them a recompence,] See the note on Jer. xi. 20.

Chap. IV. ver. 1. How is the gold become dim! &c.] How is the glory of the temple obscured! The sanctuary now lies in ruins! And the stones of it are not distinguished from the common rubbish! In like manner the priests and Levites, who attended upon the service of God, and the elders of the people, the members of the great Sanhedrim, who kept their court within the precincts of the temple, (see note on Jer. xxxv. 4;) these persons, that might be resembled to the pillars or corner-stones of that sacred building, are now involved in the same common destruction with the meanest of the people. See ver. 16, and chap. ii. 20. W. Lowth.

3. Even the sea monsters draw out the breast,] They are not so unnatural as to neglect the care of their young ones; whereas the women of Jerusalem have been reduced to the miserable necessity, not only of disregarding their children, but even of feeding upon them. See ver. 10. W. Lowth.

The word here rendered "sea monsters" probably signifies one of that class of animals, called Phocæ or sea calves; which are remarkable, amongst other things, for suckling their young, and for being excessively fond of them. Script. illust.

hands of a besieging enemy, nor condemned to the lingering destruction of famine. W. Lowth.

7. Her Nazarites] By the word, rendered "Nazarites," we are in this place probably to understand, not persons, properly so called, who had set themselves apart by a religious vow, but persons of rank and distinction. Dr. Blayney. See the note from Stackhouse on Gen. xlix. 26.

—— they were more ruddy in body than rubies, their polishing was of sapphire:] Their beauty is here described under several images. Poole.

8. Their visage is blacker than a coal; &c.] Meaning, their complexion is spoiled by famine, and other hardships, so as to make them look dry and withered. W. Lowth.

14. They have wandered as blind men in the streets, &c.] When they fled for their lives, they were like blind men not knowing which way to go, because of the many carcases which lay in the way: whereby they became stained with blood, and so legally polluted: see Numb. xix. 16. Thus they carried the marks of their sin in their punishment. W. Lowth.

—— so that men could not touch their garments.] They were so defiled with innocent blood, that men could not touch their very garments without uncleanness. Bp. Hall. Some translate it, "so that they could not but touch it with their garments." W. Lowth.

15. They cried unto them, Depart ye; &c.] When they fled to save their lives they could find no safe retreat, but every body shunned them; and used the same words to express their abhorrence of this defilement of such persons, whose office it was to cleanse and purify others, as the lepers were obliged by the law to pronounce upon themselves and cry "Unclean, unclean:" see Levit. xiii. 45. The filthy garments of the priests were an emblem of their filthy minds, see Zech. iii. 4, 5; and called to remembrance the innocent blood, which had been shed by their means, see ver. 13; when people saw their sin thus retaliated upon them. W. Lowth.

—— they said among the heathen, &c.] When those priests were driven out into heathen countries, every one looked upon their banishment as a just judgment upon their wickedness, and accounted them unworthy to attend any longer upon God's worship in His temple. W. Lowth.

19. Our persecutors are swifter than the eagles &c.] God has brought upon us the judgments which He threatened by Moses, of "bringing a nation against us as swift as the eagle flieth," Deut. xxviii. 49. Such were the horsemen of the Chaldean army. See Jer. iv. 13; lii. 8. W. Lowth.

20. The breath of our nostrils, the anointed of the Lord, &c.] Zedekiah is here meant, of whom the Prophet saith, he was taken in those toils which his enemies laid to catch him with: see Jer. lii. 9; Ezek. xii. 13. As long as he was safe they had hopes of preserving some face of government, although carried away captive into a foreign land. W. Lowth.

21. Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom,] An ironical expression, like that of Solomon, Eccles. xi. 9, "Rejoice, O young man," &c. As if the Prophet had said, Rejoice while thou mayest, O Edom, over the calamities of the Jews. See Ps. cxxxvii. 7; Obad. ver. 10. But thou shalt not rejoice long, for in a little time it shall come to thy turn to feel God's afflicting hand. See Jer. xlix. 7, &c. W. Lowth.

22. The punishment of thine iniquity is accomplished.] It is usual with the Prophets, when they have denounced God's judgments against any heathen nation, at the same time to give gracious promises to Israel: thereby importing, that God will never cast off His people utterly, as He doth strangers, but in due time will extend His mercies towards them. Compare Jer. xlvi. 27, 28; l. 18, 19, 20; Ezek. xxviii. 24, 25, 26; Obad. ver. 17, &c. W. Lowth.

‖ Or, For will thou utterly reject us?

22 ‖ But thou hast utterly rejected us; thou art very wroth against us.

Chap. V. ver. 4. We have drunken our water for money:] See Numb. xx. 17, 19. It would sound strange in England, if a person, travelling, should propose to pay for drinking of the water at the wells by the road-side. But still stronger is the expression here: "We have drunk our own water for money:" we bought it of our foreign rulers, although we were the natural proprietors of the wells. Fragments to Calmet.

5. Our necks are under persecution:] We are become slaves to our enemies, "who put a yoke of iron upon our necks" according to the threatenings denounced by Moses, Deut. xxviii. 48. W. Lowth.

6. We have given the hand to the Egyptians, &c.] We have made ourselves slaves and tributaries to them: this was done by the ceremony of "giving the hand," a form used in an oath or covenant. See Ezek. xvii. 18; Gen. xxiv. 2. W. Lowth.

From Ockley's History of the Saracens it appears, that the putting of the protester's hand into the hand of him who received the protestation, which conveyed the notion of an oath between the parties, was a customary token of acknowledgment of allegiance. The mode of swearing allegiance, or doing homage for provinces, anciently used between sovereigns and vassals, in some European countries, bears considerable resemblance to this Eastern usage. The vassal put both his hands into the hands of his sovereign, repeating words to this effect: "Thus I do thee homage for such, or such, a province, &c." After which he withdrew his hands. The phrase, used to denote this customary token of allegiance and fidelity among the Orientals, is the same as that in the text; namely, to "give the hand." Fragments to Calmet. See the note from Harmer on 2 Kings x. 15.

7. Our fathers have sinned, and are not; and we have borne their iniquities.] It is not to be imagined from these words, that God, who is just and good, punishes children so as to exclude them from His mercy, for the sins which their fathers have committed: but it often happens, that God, to chastise the fathers, and for the good of the children themselves, exposes them in this life to the calamities, which their fathers by their sins have brought upon them. This the captive Jews at Babylon experienced, as God had threatened in their law, Exod. xx. 5; and this we daily see come to pass in the course of His providence. Outervald. See the notes on Jer. xxxi. 29, 30.

8. Servants have ruled over us:] Servants to the great men among the Chaldeans, and other strangers, are become our masters. See Neh. v. 15. W. Lowth.

9. We gat our bread with the peril of our lives because of the sword of the wilderness.] It may mean, that the people were exposed to the incursions of the Arabian freebooters, who might not improperly be styled "the sword of the wilderness." Dr. Blayney.

12. — by their hand:] The hand of the enemies. W. Lowth.

13. — to grind,] See Exod. xi. 5; xii. 29: and the notes there.

—— the children fell under the wood.] They were made to carry such heavy burdens of wood, that they fainted under the load. W. Lowth.

14. The elders have ceased from the gate,] That is, they no longer sit there to administer justice. Dr. Blayney.

18. — the foxes] See notes at Judg. xv. 4; Cant. ii. 15.

22. But thou hast utterly rejected us;] Thou art resolved to cast off the Jews of this generation, and wilt not shew us any favour, till the seventy years of our captivity are expired. W. Lowth.

It is to be observed, that though the Babylonians had reduced the Jews to their present deplorable condition, yet the Prophet attributes all these misfortunes to God; and says, that it was God Himself, who had cast off His people, and delivered His temple, His altars, and His city, into the hands of the idolaters. The enemies of the Jews could not have hurt them, if God had not withdrawn His protection from the people that He had chosen. God is the dispenser of afflictions to mankind: but in His Church particularly nothing happens without His will. It is also to be considered, that, when God thus exposes His Church to sufferings, He does not design to destroy it, but only to reform and purify it by His corrections. And the same judgment should be passed on all the evils, which befall men in this life. Outervald.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET EZEKIEL.

INTRODUCTION.

EZEKIEL, who was the third of the great Prophets, was, like his contemporary Jeremiah, of the sacerdotal race. He was carried away captive to Babylon with Jehoiachin, king of Judah, in the year of the world 3406, before Christ 598; and was placed with many others of his countrymen upon the banks of the river Chebar in Mesopotamia, where he was favoured with the Divine revelations contained in this Book. He began to prophesy in the fifth year of his captivity, and is supposed to have prophesied about twenty-one years. The boldness, with which he censured the idolatry and wickedness of his countrymen, is said to have cost him his life: but his memory was greatly revered, not only by the Jews, but also by the Medes and Persians.

The Divine instructions were first revealed to him in a glorious vision, in which he beheld a representation, or, as he reverently expresses it, "the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord," attended by His cherubim symbolically pourtrayed. "The word of the Lord came expressly" unto him, and he received his commission by a voice, which was followed by a forcible influence of the Spirit, and by awful directions for his conduct. He appears to have executed his high trust with great fidelity. The author of Ecclesiasticus says of him, that "he directed them who went right," chap. xlix. 9: which may be considered as a merited encomium on the industry, with which he endeavoured to guide and instruct his countrymen in righteousness.

Ezekiel represents himself as the author of this Book, in the beginning and other parts of it; and justly assumes the character and pretensions of a Prophet: as such he has been universally considered.

This Book may be considered under the five following divisions. The first three chapters contain the glorious appearance of God to the Prophet, and his solemn appointment to his office, with instructions and encouragements for the discharge of it. From the 4th to the 24th chapter inclusive, he describes, under a variety of visions and similitudes, the calamities impending over Judea, and the total destruction of the temple and city of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, occasionally predicting another period of yet greater desolation, and more general dispersion. From the beginning of the 25th to the end of the 32d chapter, the Prophet turns his attention to those nations, who had unfeelingly triumphed over the Jews in their affliction: predicting that destruction of the Ammonites, Moabites, and Philistines, which was effected by Nebuchadnezzar, that mighty instrument of God's wrath against the wickedness of man; and particularly he foretells the ruin and desolation of Tyre and Sidon, the fall of Egypt, and the base degeneracy of its future people, in a manner so forcible, in terms so accurately and minutely descriptive of their several fates and present condition, that nothing can be more interesting than to trace the accomplishment of these prophecies in the accounts of historians and travellers. From the 32d to the 40th chapter, he inveighs against the accumulated sins of the Jews collectively, and the murmuring spirit of his captive brethren; exhorts them earnestly to repent of their hypocrisy and wickedness, upon the assurance that God will accept sincere repentance; and encourages them to resignation by promises of deliverance, and by intimations of spiritual redemption. In the two last chapters of this division, under the promised victories to be obtained over Gog and Magog, he predicts the final return of the Jews from their dispersion in the latter days; with an obscurity however that can be dispelled only by the event. The last nine chapters contain a remarkable vision of the structure of a new temple and a new polity, applicable in the first instance to the return from the Babylonian captivity, but in its ultimate sense referring to the glory and prosperity of the universal Church of Christ.

St. Jerome observes, that the visions of Ezekiel are among the things in Scripture "hard to be understood." This obscurity arises, in part at least, from the nature and design of the prophecies themselves: they were delivered amidst the gloom of captivity; and though calculated to cheer the drooping spirits of the Jews, and to keep alive a watchful and submissive confidence in the mercy of God, yet they were intended to communicate only such a degree of encouragement, as was consistent with a state of punishment, and to excite an indistinct expectation of future blessings upon the condition of repentance and amendment. But, though mysterious in themselves, the predictions are related by the Prophet in a plain and historical manner. He seems to have been desirous of conveying the strong impressions, which he received, as accurately as they were capable of being described. It ought to be observed, that the last twelve chapters of this Book bear a very striking resemblance to the concluding chapters of the book of Revelation.

The style of this Prophet may be characterised as bold, vehement, and tragical; as often worked up to a kind of tremendous dignity. His book is highly parabolical, and abounds with figures and metaphorical expressions. He is employed rather in exciting our terrour than in moving our pity. He displays a rough but majestick dignity; an unpolished, though noble simplicity: excelled perhaps in other respects by most of the Prophets; but none in the whole compass of writers has ever equalled him in the manner of writing, for which he seems singularly qualified by nature, in force, impetuosity, weight, and grandeur. He sometimes emphatically and indignantly repeats his sentiments; fully dilates his pictures; and describes the adulterous manners of his countrymen under the strongest and most exaggerated representations, that the licence of the Eastern style would admit. His genius led him to amplification: and the Divine Spirit did not overrule the natural bent of his mind. This diffuseness of manner in mild and affectionate exhortation, this vehement enlarging on the guilt and consequent sufferings of his countrymen, seems wisely adapted to their capacities and circumstances; and must have had a forcible tendency to awaken them from their lethargy. Dr. Gray, Bps. Tomline and Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

Chap. I. ver. 1.— in the thirtieth year,] Usher, Prideaux, Lowth, and others, reckon the thirty years here spoken of, as well as the forty days or years mentioned in chap. iv. 6, from the covenant made by Josiah in the eighteenth year of his reign. See 2 Kings xxiii. 3. According to which computation this thirtieth year corresponds with the year of the world 3410, and the fifth year of Jehoiachin's captivity; or about 595 before Christ, as in the margin. Other chronologers conceive it to be the thirtieth year of Ezekiel's age; or the thirtieth of Nabopolassar's reign; and others the thirtieth year from the jubilee. Ezekiel usually dates his prophecies from the era of his appointment to the prophetical office. Dr. Gray.

—— fourth month,] Thammuz, which nearly corresponds to our July. Abp. Newcome. The sacred year is here understood, which began with the month Nisan. See the note on Exod. xii. 2.

—— among the captives] The margin of our Bible, and the Septuagint, express "in the midst of the captivity." It is not therefore to be imagined that Ezekiel was surrounded by a group of captives, when these visions occurred to him, but that he was in the place of his exile with the other captives who dwelt around him. Calmet.

—— Chebar.] A river in Mesopotamia, which falls into the Euphrates near Carchemish. It is mentioned by Ptolemy under the name of Chaboras. Abp. Newcome.

—— the heavens were opened,] The eyes of the Prophet were strengthened with celestial light. St. Jerome says, that the heavens were opened, not by a division of the sky, but by the faith of the believer. Calmet.

2. — the fifth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity,] This was the thirteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar's reign; for Jehoiachin was carried captive in the eighth, 2 Kings xxiv. 12. It was also the fifth year of the reign of Zedekiah in Jerusalem, and the sixth before the destruction of the city and the temple. Ezekiel was made a captive with Jehoiachin, and he computes the succeeding parts of his prophecy from that event. W. Lowth.

3. — and the hand of the Lord &c.] The efficacy of God's Spirit did shew itself in and upon him in His holy revelations. Bp. Hall.

The "hand of the Lord" marks the action, the force, the energy of the Holy Spirit. Abp. Newcome.

4. — out of the north,] This is supposed to denote the calamities which were to burst on Jerusalem from her northern enemies the Chaldeans. Abp. Newcome. See the notes on Jer. i. 13; iv. 6.

—— a fire infolding itself,] Appearing in folds like one wreath within another. W. Lowth. Embracing itself, not spreading. Moses uses the same expression when he speaks of the storm excited by him in Egypt. Exod. ix. 24. Abp. Newcome.

—— amber,] By "amber" the ancients often meant a mixed metal of gold and silver, which was much celebrated for its beautiful lustre, and which, when exposed to the fire, becomes more bright and shining. Parkhurst.

5. — four living creatures.] Compare Rev. iv. 6.

—— likeness of a man.] They had the human stature. Houbigant. The likeness might consist partly in their moving erect upon two legs, and partly in their having several members of the human form. Calmet.

7. — straight feet;] Their legs were straight up like those of a man, without any power of bending but at the knee. Bp. Hall, Abp. Newcome.

—— like the sole of a calf's foot:] And their feet were round as the circumference of a calf's foot, for the greater fitness of that turning motion which they should be put unto. Bp. Hall.

8. — hands; — wings.] Wings and hands are instruments, and natural signs, of swiftness and power. Abp. Newcome.

9. Their wings were joined] Of the two in front, and of the two behind, the right wing of one reached to the left wing of the other: the extremities of the expanded inner wings forming an arch. Abp. Newcome.

—— they turned not] This signifies that nothing ever diverted them from fulfilling God's command. W. Lowth.

10. — had the face of a man, &c.] See note at Exod. xxv. 18.

11. were joined one to another,] They touched one another as the wings of the cherubim did over the mercy seat. See 1 Kings vi. 27. W. Lowth.

12. — the spirit] That power, which was the principle of all their motions. See ver. 20. W. Lowth.

lamps: it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning.

14 And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning.

15 ¶ Now as I beheld the living creatures, behold one wheel upon the earth by the living creatures, with his four faces.

16 The appearance of the wheels and their work was like unto the colour of a beryl: and they four had one likeness: and their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel.

17 When they went, they went upon their four sides: and they turned not when they went.

18 As for their rings, they were so high that they were dreadful; and their ‖ rings were full of eyes round about them four.

19 And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them: and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up.

20 Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit ‖ of the living creature was in the wheels.

21 When those went, these went; and when those stood, these stood; and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit ‖ of the living creature was in the wheels.

22 And the likeness of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature was as the colour of the terrible crystal, stretched forth over their heads above.

Before CHRIST about 592.

23 And under the firmament were their wings straight, the one toward the other: every one had two, which covered on this side, and every one had two, which covered on that side, their bodies.

24 And when they went, I heard the noise of their wings, like the noise of great waters, as the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of an host: when they stood, they let down their wings.

25 And there was a voice from the firmament that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings.

26 ¶ And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire stone: and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man above upon it.

27 And I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness round about.

28 As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about. This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD. And when I saw it, I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake.

13. — it went up and down] That is, the fire moved itself up and down. Abp. Newcome.

15. — upon the earth] Not lifted up. See ver. 19.

—— by the living creatures, with his four faces.] That is, one wheel stood before every one of the living creatures on each face of the square figure or chariot. Dr. Lightfoot, W. Lowth.

16. — beryl:] Rather a "chrysolite," so named from its fine gold yellow colour, called by modern jewellers "the topaz," Parkhurst.

18. — their rings,] Tires or circumferences of the wheels; they were so vast as to cause a terrour in the Prophet who beheld them. W. Lowth.

—— full of eyes] The eyes denote God's all-seeing providence. That the cherubim also were full of eyes; see chap. x. 12. Abp. Newcome.

19, 20, 21. And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them, &c.] The living creatures and the wheels were animated by the same principle of understanding and motion, to signify with what readiness and alacrity all the instruments of Providence concur in carrying on its great designs and purposes, chap. x. 16, 17. W. Lowth.

20. — over against them:] Or, "beside them." W. Lowth. or, "near to them." Parkhurst. Chap. x. 19; xi. 22.

22. — the likeness of the firmament] And the colour of the firmament, which was spread over their heads, was as the colour of a glorious crystal, which had in it a kind of majestical brightness. Bp. Hall.

24. — like the noise of great waters,] To denote the terribleness of the judgments which they were to execute upon Jerusalem, and upon the whole Jewish nation. Compare chap. xliii. 2; Dan. x. 6. W. Lowth.

26. — the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire stone:] God is described in Scripture as "dwelling in light, and clothing Himself with it," Exod. xxiv. 10; Rev. iv. 2, 3; Ps. civ. 2. So the throne of God here described was made up of light, resembling the colours and brightness of a sapphire. W. Lowth.

—— of a man] The Representative of the invisible God, His ever blessed and only begotten Son, who at length assumed human nature. Bp. Hall, Abp. Newcome. When Moses and the elders saw the God of Israel, Exod. xxiv. 9—11, or the glory of God, they saw nothing but an inconceivably resplendent brightness, that they might not imagine the Deity represented by any image. Here the form of a man seems to prefigure the incarnation. W. Lowth. See the note on Jer. i. 4.

27. — within it,] Within the colour of amber. The upper part of this appearance was of an amber colour outwardly, but more flaming inwardly. W. Lowth.

28. As the appearance of the bow] As this vision was an evident representation of the Word, that was to be made flesh, whose incarnation is the foundation of God's covenant and mercy with mankind; a rainbow, the symbol and token of mercy, was a very fit attendant upon that glorious vision, Rev. x. 1. W. Lowth.

—— the glory of the Lord.] See Is. vi. 1, 2: where this glory assumed a different appearance.

6 ¶ And thou, son of man, be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though ‖ briers and thorns be with thee, and thou dost dwell among scorpions: be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house.

7 And thou shalt speak my words unto them, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear: for they are † most rebellious.

9 ¶ And when I looked, behold, an hand was sent unto me; and, lo, a roll of a book was therein;

10 And he spread it before me: and it was written within and without: and there was written therein lamentations, and mourning, and woe.

CHAP. III.

1 Ezekiel eateth the roll. 4 God encourageth him. 15 God sheweth him the rule of prophecy. 22 God shutteth and openeth the prophet's mouth.

MOREOVER he said unto me, Son of man, eat that thou findest; eat this roll, and go speak unto the house of Israel.

2 So I opened my mouth, and he caused me to eat that roll.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, cause thy belly to eat, and fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. Then did I ª eat it; and it was in my mouth as honey for sweetness.

ª Rev. 10. 9.

This august vision was a representation of God's glory, which tended to convince the Prophet of the Divine appearance. It signified likewise, that God is every where present; that His knowledge and power are infinite; that He governs all things by His providence; and as it was by His will that Jerusalem was destroyed, so He would change its condition, and bring the Jews again from their captivity by means known only to Himself. Ostervald.

Chap. II. ver. 1. — Son of man.] This expression is generally understood as applied to the Prophet, to put him in mind of his frailty and mortality, and of the infinite distance between God and man. In which sense it is supposed to be taken, when spoken of Christ in the New Testament; implying His great humility in assuming our nature, and appearing no otherwise than as an ordinary man. W. Lowth, Calmet. See the note on Dan. viii. 17.

—— stand upon thy feet.] It appears from the last verse in the first chapter, that the Prophet had fallen prostrate in the Eastern manner at the manifestation of the glory of God. Abp. Newcome.

2. — the spirit.] The Spirit of God. Bp. Hall, W. Lowth. The power of the Highest, Luke i. 35; see chap. iii. 12, 14, 24; 1 Kings xviii. 12; 2 Kings ii. 16. Abp. Newcome. See Abp. Secker's note on Nehem. ix. 30.

3. And they, whether they will hear, &c.] Whether they will hear, or will not hear, (as is more probable, for they are a stubborn people,) yet shall they feel and find by the event answering thy predictions, that they have had a Prophet amongst them; on which account, if their sins are not reformed, they shall be more deeply punished. Bp. Hall.

6. — though briers and thorns be with thee,] Though thou art likely to be torn by briers and thorns, and to be stung by scorpions; that is, though thou exposest thyself to injurious and malignant treatment. Abp. Newcome. The Prophets and messengers of God are often exhorted to take courage, and are promised a proportionable assistance in the discharge of their office, without fearing any man's person, or standing in awe of any man's greatness. See chap. iii. 8, 9; Jer. i. 8, 18. Such a presence of mind is expressed by "boldness" in the New Testament, and is spoken of as a peculiar gift bestowed upon the first preachers of the Gospel, Acts iv. 13, 29; Eph. vi. 19. And they had need of great presence of mind, who were to reprove men hardened in sin, who are always impatient of reproof, and become the enemies of those who tell them such truths as they have no mind to hear. W. Lowth.

Concerning scorpions, see the note on Deut. viii. 15.

8. — eat.] See chap. iii. 1, 2, 10. God's words were to sink into him, that he might faithfully deliver them to others. Abp. Newcome. "Take in, retain, digest." Abp. Secker.

The knowledge of Divine truths is often expressed by the metaphors of bodily food and nourishment: and therefore to "eat" the words of this prophecy, signifies to commit them to memory, to meditate upon them, and digest them. W. Lowth.

10. — within and without:] The ancient books were rolled on cylinders of wood and ivory; and usually the writing was only on the inside. Grotius, Bp. Newcome.

The writing on both sides shewed that the prophecy would be long. Calmet.

—— lamentations, and mourning, and woe.] All the prophecies contained therein consisted of God's judgments and mournful events, without any mixture of mercy, at least with respect to the Jews of the present age. W. Lowth.

Chap. III. ver. 1. — that thou findest;] That which is given to you. Houbigant.

3. — he caused me to eat that roll.] See the note on chap. iv. 1. This circumstance of Ezekiel's eating the roll plainly belongs to his first vision: during which he ate the roll; and therefore his eating was visionary, not real. Dr. Waterland.

3. — as honey for sweetness.] Perhaps it was sweet from the pleasure of being so honourably employed. Abp. Secker. So pleasing a contentment there is in a duly obedience to the commands of God. Bp. Hall.

12 Then the spirit took me up, and I heard behind me a voice of a great rushing, saying, Blessed be the glory of the LORD from his place.

6. — they would have hearkened unto thee.] And yet in all appearance these strangers would have hearkened to thy preaching, sooner than the house of Israel will, as the Ninevites did to Jonah's. Compare Matt. xii. 41; xi. 21. W. Lowth.

9. As an adamant] It is not ascertained what is properly meant by this word. Scheuchzer thinks it does not mean the adamant or diamond, but a very hard stone, called smiris, (a name nearly similar to the Hebrew word here translated,) which was used for engraving, polishing, and cutting other hard stones. Parkhurst.

12. — a voice of a great rushing.] See chap. i. 24.

—— from his place.] By us His ministering Spirits, who are now in the place where His glory dwelleth. Abp. Newcome.

13. — over against them.] See the note on chap. i. 20.

14. — in bitterness,] The joy, that I first conceived in receiving the Divine message, was quickly turned into grief and anguish of mind. W. Lowth. Because of the calamities which I was to foretell. Abp. Newcome.

—— in the heat of my spirit;] In indignation against my rebellious countrymen. Abp. Newcome.

—— strong upon me,] Urging and empowering me to execute my commission. See Jer. xx. 9. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

15. — Tel-abib.] This is generally supposed to be the name of the place which was the principal residence of the captive Israelites upon the banks of the Chebar. The meaning of the word in the original is, "a heap of corn;" and St. Jerome so translates it. The place might have been called so from its fertility. The Prophet might be said to "come to his people," not that he had ever departed actually into another place, but that by his vision he had been abstracted from his commerce with men; and that upon the conclusion of the vision he returned to it. Perhaps this is a distinct colony of captives from those that are mentioned, chap. i. 3. See Ver. 23 of this chapter. Certain it is that the king of Babylon carried away the Jews by several captivities; some in the first year of his reign, Dan. i. 1: some in the seventh, Jer. lii. 28. Then followed Jehoiachin's captivity in the eighth year of Nebuchadnezzar, 2 Kings xxiv. 12; when Ezekiel himself was carried captive. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

—— astonished] Having my spirit wholly cast down, and amazed under the apprehension of these terrible judgments which were to come upon my nation, and of which I was to be the messenger. See Jer. xxiii. 9. Seven days was the space of time appointed for mourning, Gen. l. 10; 1 Sam. xxxi. 13; Job ii. 13. W. Lowth. This appearance of silent astonishment was well calculated to excite the attention of his countrymen, and to prepare them for some important communication.

18. When I say &c.] Chap. xxxiii. 8. Compare ver. 17, 18, 19; and chap. xxxiii. 7, 8, 9. Abp. Newcome.

1 Under the type of a siege is shewed the time from the defection of Jeroboam to the captivity. 9 By the provision of the siege, is shewed the hardness of the famine.

THOU also, son of man, take thee a tile, and lay it before thee, and pourtray upon it the city, even Jerusalem:

21. — warn the righteous] Hence we may learn, that the office of pastors is twofold: to collect the sheep that are astray, and to restrain those within the bounds of innocence and safety who are collected. Calmet.

25. — they shall put bands upon thee,] Thou shalt be confined to lie so many days upon thy right side, and so many upon thy left, as if thou wast bound and not able to stir. See chap. iv. 8. W. Lowth.

26. — dumb,] Because they regarded not the word which God commanded him to speak to them, he was directed to instruct them only by signs, such as are those emblems of the siege contained in the next chapter. W. Lowth.

27. — Thus saith the Lord] The Prophet was to declare his Divine commission in these words. See chap. ii. 4; iii. 11. It is more agreeable to these passages to suppose that the following words, "he that heareth—forbear," are the words of God to Ezekiel, not part of the message which the Prophet was to deliver. Abp. Newcome. And so the passage may be paraphrased, "But when I renew My commission to thee, and bid thee speak, I will then give a freedom of speech unto thee, and thou shalt say, Thus saith the Lord, Whether they hear thee or hear thee not, it is all one to thee; do thou thy duty, and it sufficeth." Bp. Hall.

Chap. IV. ver. 1. — take thee a tile,] The tiles or bricks used for building in the East were sometimes very large, with one of the surfaces well polished, and capable of receiving the representation here described. In the cabinets of the curious are still preserved fragments of such tiles, brought from what is by some persons supposed to be the site of ancient Babylon.

It has been a question among the learned, whether the orders which God here gave were intended as real commands and figures also, or only as figures of things to come under the form of commands; signifying not what the Prophet was to perform, but what God in His wise counsels had determined to bring about. Lowth, Wells, Bochart, and the generality of commentators, combine with the authority of most of the Fathers in support of the literal interpretation. They plead in the first instance, that all which is here commanded was practicable, and that the several circumstances mentioned carry no direct repugnancy nor absurdity with them; and they farther infer, that if the Prophet did not really perform what is here related, he could not have been "a sign to the house of Israel." See chap. iv. 3. But as several judicious interpreters, namely, St. Jerome, Maimonides, and amongst ourselves Smith, Stillingfleet, and Jenkins, conceive all that is here related to be a history only of the vision itself, or a prophetical scheme; and as some difficulties will occur by the adoption in all cases of the literal interpretation, it may be proper shortly to notice the reasons they assign for this construction. It is observed then, that though we have in this Book an account of such and such commands, given in vision to Ezekiel, yet it is not said that he ever performed them: but that like as St. Peter in a vision was commanded to do what he never did, ("Arise, Peter, slay, and eat;") so Ezekiel was ordered in the same way to do several things in vision, which it was never intended that he should actually perform. And as St. Peter reports his vision for the instruction of Christians; so Ezekiel reports his for the instruction of the house of Israel. These emblematical commands so reported become signs, figures, and resemblances, of what had come or should come upon the house of Israel or Judah, and in what manner, and why: and thus they "were signs to the house of Israel," signifying things past, and prefiguring things to come; and they seem to have been delivered to him in a preceptive form, in order to imprint the things intended deeper in his mind, and make the representation of them to the Jews more lively and affecting. Dr. Waterland. Other interpreters have adopted a middle course: they suppose that some of the directions were given to the Prophet only by way of metaphorical instruction, such for instance as "eating the roll" of prophecy, where we perceive that he speaks only of a transaction in a vision; but that others were imposed upon him as commands, and actually performed; namely, the representation of the siege upon the removal of his houshold stuff, and the refraining from the customary shew of grief at the death of his wife, &c; but whatever hypothesis we may adopt, whether we suppose them to be descriptive of real or imaginary events, or of both, they are very reconcileable with the Divine intention in the employment of the Prophet. On the supposition that they were real, we may reasonably conceive a miraculous assistance to have been afforded when necessary; and if we consider them as imaginary, they might be represented equally as emblematical forewarnings revealed to the Prophet. Drs. Gray and Waterland.

2. — lay siege against it,] Make a portraiture of a siege, and of such warlike preparations as are necessary. W. Lowth.

—— a mount] The mount or terrace of earth was constructed for protecting the operations of the besiegers, for filling up the ditches, or for enabling the assailants to reach the top of the wall. Calmet. See the note on Jer. xxxii. 24.

of military engine: certain it is that they are not mentioned in Homer; although, according to Pliny, they were invented by Epeus at the siege of Troy. Vitruvius says, that they were first used by the Carthaginians at the siege of Cadiz. Calmet.

3. — an iron pan,] Or plate of iron. See the margin. Probably such as cakes were baked on. This may denote the strong trenches of the besiegers, and the invincibleness of the siege. Bp. Hall. Or, according to others, that there was an iron wall between the besieged and God, whom the Prophet represented. Abp. Newcome.

4. Lie thou] In his own house, chap. iii. 24. This was to be his posture in the exercise of his prophetical office. It may be supposed, that the Prophet did not retain it without intermission, but only during a part of each day, when the people were likely to observe his conduct. Abp. Newcome.

—— lay the iniquity] That is, declare that you thus represent the iniquity, &c. Abp. Newcome.

—— thou shalt bear] Thou shalt represent My patience under the iniquity of the house of Israel. Bp. Hall.

The words are commonly explained in this manner; but as the circumstances under which Ezekiel was placed were all of them penal, and as the other expression of "laying on iniquity," used in connexion with this verse (see ver. 4, 5) conveys the imputation of guilt; the Prophet may be better supposed in this vision to represent and prefigure the punishment due to the idolatries of Israel and Judah. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome. The original word admits of either sense.

5. — three hundred and ninety days:] The number of years corresponding with this (see ver. 6) will take us back with sufficient exactness from the year in which Jerusalem was sacked by Nebuchadnezzar, to the first year of Jeroboam's reign, when national idolatry began in Israel. The number of days was designed to signify the continuance of the siege of Jerusalem. That siege lasted, from the beginning to the ending of it, seventeen months, as appears from 2 Kings xxv. 1—4. But the king of Egypt coming to relieve the city, was the occasion of raising the siege for some time, Jer. xxxvii. 5. We may suppose therefore upon the authority of the text, as well as upon the circumstances of the story, that the actual siege lasted three hundred and ninety days. Abp. Usher, W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

6. — forty days:] Scaliger and some others begin the forty years corresponding to these days, from Jeremiah's mission as a Prophet; which was in the thirteenth year of Josiah, from which time till the last year of Zedekiah, when the city and temple were destroyed, is just forty years. W. Lowth.

—— each day for a year.] See Numb. xiv. 34; Dan. ix. 24.

7. — thine arm shall be uncovered,] Their habits were anciently contrived so that the right arm was disengaged from the upper garments, that they might be the more ready for action. Thus God is said to "make bare His arm," Is. lii. 10; where He is represented as subduing His adversaries, and bringing salvation to His people. W. Lowth.

8. — I will lay bands upon thee,] God is said to do what was done in consequence of His commands. See chap. iii. 25. This seems to shew the firmness of the Chaldeans in carrying on the siege till they took the city. Abp. Newcome.

9. — wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentiles, &c.] By this mixture, it is intended to shew the distressed situation of the city of Jerusalem, during the approaching siege. The use of mixed corn is generally a proof of scarcity, but when beans and lentiles are added, it is a mark of severe distress. W. Lowth, Calmet.

10. — twenty shekels] About nine ounces. Bp. Cumberland.

11. — the sixth part of an hin:] Which is something above a pint and a half of our measure. Bp. Cumberland.

The Prophet was to take this pittance from day to day, and in small portions from time to time, while he subjected himself to publick notice. The act denoted scarcity during the siege. Abp. Newcome.

12. — as barley cakes,] Such as people make in haste, when they have not time for preparing a set meal, Exod. xii. 39. This represents the hurry and disorder of a siege. W. Lowth.

—— dung:] To signify the scarcity of all kinds of fuel. W. Lowth. Dathius observes, that the dung of oxen and of camels was often used by the Easterns as fuel for preparing their food; but this command to use human dung for the same purpose is terribly significant of the extremities to which the Jews were to be reduced, and denotes a necessity which cannot be contemplated without horrour. Harmer.

13. — their defiled bread] The pollution here mentioned was not only in itself disgusting, but particularly odious to the Jews, as being positively condemned by the law, Lev. v. 3; vii. 21; Deut. xxiii. 12. Bp. Hall, Calmet.

Before CHRIST 595. my soul hath not been polluted: for from my youth up even till now have I not eaten of that which dieth of itself, or is torn in pieces; neither came there abominable flesh into my mouth.

15 Then he said unto me, Lo, I have given thee cow's dung for man's dung, and thou shalt prepare thy bread therewith.

16 Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, behold, I will break the [b] staff of bread in Jerusalem: and they shall eat bread by weight, and with care; and they shall drink water by measure, and with astonishment:

[b] Lev. 26. 26. chap. 5. 16. & 14. 13.

17 That they may want bread and water, and be astonied one with another, and consume away for their iniquity.

—— the siege] The typical siege. Abp. Newcome.

—— and smite] See ver. 12.

3. — bind them in thy skirts.] This denotes the remnant of the Jews that was left in the land under Gedaliah. But to shew how few were worthy to be snatched from the general destruction, the Prophet is afterwards directed to take a part even of this remnant, and to cast it into the fire, ver. 4. By these last may be understood, that part of the Jews who were destroyed in consequence of Ishmael's conspiracy against Gedaliah; see Jer. xlii, xliii, xliv. W. Lowth.

4. — a fire come forth into all the house of Israel.] The conspiracy of Ishmael was the occasion of the utter ruin of that poor remainder of the Jews which were left in their native country: after this some of them went down into Egypt, where they were all consumed according to Jeremiah's prophecy, chap. xliv. 11; and the rest were entirely carried away by Nebuzar-adan. W. Lowth.

6. — more than the nations,] More than the nations have changed their judgments. See Jer. ii. 11. Abp. Newcome.

—— for they have refused] The reason why the heathen have rejected My laws is, because they have kept constant to the religion of their forefathers; whereas the Jews have rejected that religion which their forefathers received from Me. See the next verse. W. Lowth.

7. — ye multiplied more than the nations] Because you have multiplied your sins more than the nations. Vulgate.

—— according to the judgments of the nations that are round about you;] You have not been so constant and zealous for the true religion, as they have in a false one; compare chap. xvi. 47; Jer. ii. 10, 11. W. Lowth.

9. — the like,] The destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar was a terrible example of Divine vengeance; and the calamities which the city and nation suffered from Titus and Adrian were still more signal. Calmet, Abp. Newcome.

Taking the words in their full extent, and comprehending all the marks of indignation which have already lain upon that people for so many centuries, (and how much longer they may continue we know not), it may truly be said that none of God's judgments are like it. W. Lowth.

10. — the fathers shall eat the sons &c.] A terrible judgment threatened by Moses, Lev. xxvi. 29. We are not certain from history that this extremity of horrour actually took place in Jerusalem, during the approaching siege by Nebuchadnezzar; all we know is, that the famine was extreme: but if (as there is strong reason to believe) the Lamentations of Jeremiah relate to the circumstances of this siege, we may observe the actual accomplishment of the prophecy contained in this verse, Lam. ii. 20; iv. 10. Calmet.

—— and I will draw out a sword after them.] This imports that God's anger should still pursue them, even unto the countries whither they were banished, and carried captive. This was particularly fulfilled in those that went to Egypt, see Jer. xliii. 7; and it was remarkably verified in the several persecutions and massacres they have undergone at different times, in most of the countries of Europe, in later ages. W. Lowth.

13. — and I will be comforted.] I will satisfy My anger. This and the former expression are borrowed from human passions. As men find some ease and rest in bringing offenders to condign punishment, so God is here described as feeling ease and satisfaction in executing His justice upon incorrigible sinners. Calmet, W. Lowth. See Is. i. 24; Ezek. xvi. 42.

16. — evil arrows of famine.] A grievous famine, which like unto deadly arrows shall pierce through their souls. Bp. Hall.

17. — evil beasts,] St. Jerome says, that it is by no means rare to see destructive beasts multiply in an abandoned country, and become dangerous to travellers: but the Chaldeans also may be here understood, who spread themselves over the country of Judea, like wild beasts, and committed the ravages here predicted. Nebuchadnezzar is described by the Prophets under the figure of a lion, and of an eagle. See Dan. vii. 4; Ezek. xvii. 3; Jer. xlviii. 40. Calmet.

—— pestilence and blood] "Blood" may here be equivalent to the sword, which is joined with the pestilence, ver. 17: see chap. xxxviii. 22. W. Lowth.

The Prophet tells the people in this chapter, that, because they had rejected God's ordinances, and profaned His sanctuary, and especially because they had imitated, and even exceeded the neighbouring nations in their idolatry, for this reason God would punish them in the sight of those nations: and that, as they had surpassed the other nations in wickedness, He would do to them such things as He had never done before, and would execute His judgments upon them with wrath and fury. Thus God punishes men for their rebellion, adapting their punishment to their crimes; and treating with the greatest severity those, who, having had the greatest share of His favours, ungratefully abuse them. Osterevald.

Chap. VI. ver. 2. — of Israel,] Israel being carried away captive, Judah is called Israel; and perhaps possessed a great part of the country. Abp. Secker.

3. — to the mountains, and to the hills,] See Deut. xii: 2; Jer. ii. 20; iii. 6. The altars built for idol worship were commonly placed upon mountains and hills. Abp. Newcome.

4. — images] The word used here is generally supposed to signify such images as were erected to the honour of the sun, and is therefore translated sun images in the margin of our Bible. See Is. xvii. 8. W. Lowth.

5. — before their idols;] This passage seems to imply, that God would permit the Chaldeans to slay the Jews at the feet of their idols, where they should fly for refuge. Calmet.

10 And they shall know that I am the LORD, and that I have not said in vain that I would do this evil unto them.

11 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD; Smite [b] Chap. 21. 14. [b] with thine hand, and stamp with thy foot, and say, Alas for all the evil abominations of the house of Israel! for they shall fall by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence.

12 He that is far off shall die of the pestilence; and he that is near shall fall by the sword; and he that remaineth and is besieged shall die by the famine: thus will I accomplish my fury upon them.

13 Then shall ye know that I am the LORD, when their slain men shall be among their idols round about their altars, upon every high hill, in all the tops of the mountains, and under every green tree, and under every thick oak, the place where they did offer sweet savour to all their idols. 11. — Smite with thine hand, &c.] Be vehement and passionate in expressing thy sorrow and indignation for the sins and judgments of thy people. Bp. Hall.

12. He that is far off] Out of the reach of the enemy. W. Lonth.

13. — and under every green tree, and under every thick oak,] The offering of sacrifices in groves and shady places was another ancient rite of idolatry; see Is. i. 29: upon which account groves and images are often joined together by the sacred writers. W. Lonth.

14. — toward Diblath,] Diblath was part of the desert in the borders of Moab; it occurs in several places of the Bible: Numb. xxxiii. 46; Jer. xlviii. 22. Calmet.

Chap. VII. ver. 2. — unto the land of Israel;] The whole country of Judea; see chap. vi. 2, and note. It is probable that Manasses, and his successors in the kingdom of Judah, had the dominion of the whole land of Canaan, formerly divided into the two kingdoms of Judah and Israel, as tributaries under the kings of Assyria. Dean Prideaux.

—— upon the four corners] St. Jerome says, that the iniquity of the Jews was now arrived at its height; and that the calamity, which the Prophet foretold, would not be peculiar to this or that place, or to this or that tribe, but would fall upon all the people, and all the parts of the promised land. Calmet.

4. — thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee:] The punishment of your abominable idolatries shall be manifest among you. Abp. Newcome.

5. — an only evil,] That evil is come upon thee which alone shall make a despatch of thee: there shall need no other to second it. Bp. Hall.

6. — it watcheth for thee;] Literally, "it awaketh against thee;" see the margin: see ver. 10 of this chapter, and Jer. i. 12. The anger of the Lord, which had slept, is now roused against thee. Calmet.

7. The morning is come unto thee,] The expression alludes to the time when the magistrates used to give sentence against offenders, which was in the morning. W. Lonth.

—— and not the sounding again of the mountains.] The day of thy grievous trouble is actually and really come; which thou shalt find sensibly to be no empty and vain sound of an echo among the mountains, but a true and feeling destruction. Bp. Hall.

Before CHRIST 594.

8 Now will I shortly pour out my fury upon thee, and accomplish mine anger upon thee: and I will judge thee according to thy ways, and will recompense thee for all thine abominations.

9 And mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: I will recompense † thee according to thy ways and thine abominations that are in the midst of thee; and ye shall know that I am the LORD that smiteth.

12 The time is come, the day draweth near: let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn: for wrath is upon all the multitude thereof.

13 For the seller shall not return to that which is sold, † although they were yet alive: for the vision is touching the whole multitude thereof, which shall not return; neither shall any strengthen himself ‖ in † the iniquity of his life.

Before CHRIST 594.

16 ¶ But they that escape of them shall escape, and shall be on the mountains like doves of the valleys, all of them mourning, every one for his iniquity.

22 My face will I turn also from them, and they shall pollute my secret place: for ‖ the robbers shall enter into it, and defile it.

23 ¶ Make a chain: for the land is full of bloody crimes, and the city is full of violence.

10. — the rod hath blossomed, pride hath budded.] The rod of oppression and of wickedness, ver. 11, prevails among the Jews, and their pride increases. Abp. Newcome.

11. — into a rod of wickedness:] This appears to be a continuation of the figure in the former verse; the rod had blossomed, and hath now produced the fruit of wickedness, and all is ripe for judgment. Calmet.

12. — let not the buyer rejoice, nor the seller mourn:] The buyer will have no reason to rejoice, because he will not enjoy what he hath bought; nor the seller cause to mourn for the loss of his possessions, which the approaching captivity will for ever deprive him of. W. Lowth.

13. — although they were yet alive:] By the privilege of the law, (see Lev. xxv. 13,) he who had sold his heritage had a right to reenter upon it at the year of jubilee. But here the Prophet informs the sellers, that even if they should outlive the general calamity, yet being in captivity they could not enjoy the benefit of the law, nor return any more to their possessions. Bp. Hall, W. Lowth.

—— neither shall any strengthen himself &c.] Neither shall any wicked man have cause to encourage himself in the vain confidence of impunity from sin. Bp. Hall.

14. — but none goeth to the battle:] Such is the judicial cowardice that prevails; see ver. 17. Abp. Newcome.

16. — like doves of the valleys,] Doves are found in the valleys on account of the waters they find there, in which they delight. Harmer.

—— all of them mourning,] St. Jerome renders it, "all of them trembling;" an epithet ascribed to doves, Hos. xi. 11; who are by nature timorous. W. Lowth.

19. — their gold shall be removed:] Or, shall be accounted an unclean thing; see the margin: as utterly unprofitable for their relief. Bp. Hall.

—— they shall not satisfy] Their silver and their gold shall not remove the distresses of famine during the siege, because they have employed them to adorn their idols, the iniquitous causes of their fall. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

20. As for the beauty of his ornament, he set it &c.] As for His beautiful and glorious temple, He placed it in great majesty among them, as that which might well be their best and greatest ornament; but, &c. See chap. v. 11. Bp. Hall, W. Lowth, Calmet.

—— therefore have I set it far from them.] See the margin. The Prophets, to denote the certainty of the event, speak of what is to come as if it were already done. W. Lowth.

21. — the strangers:] The Chaldeans.

22. — enter into it,] My secret place or sanctuary. Abp. Newcome.

23. Make a chain:] Jeremiah is commanded to make bonds and yokes, Jer. xxviii. 2. And Ezekiel is here directed to make a chain, to foreshew the approaching captivity, when king and people should be carried in chains to Babylon. See 2 Kings xxv. 7; Jer. xl. 1. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

Before CHRIST 594.

24 Wherefore I will bring the worst of the heathen, and they shall possess their houses: I will also make the pomp of the strong to cease; and ‖ their holy places shall be defiled.

26 Mischief shall come upon mischief, and rumour shall be upon rumour; then shall they seek a vision of the prophet; but the law shall perish from the priest, and counsel from the ancients.

27 The king shall mourn, and the prince shall be clothed with desolation, and the hands of the people of the land shall be troubled: I will do unto them after their way, and † according to their deserts will I judge them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAP. VIII.

1 Ezekiel, in a vision of God at Jerusalem, 5 is shewed the image of jealousy, 7 the chambers of imagery, 13 the mourners for Tammuz, 15 the worshippers towards the sun. 18 God's wrath for their idolatry.

594. AND it came to pass in the sixth year, in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I sat in mine house, and the elders of Judah sat before me, that the hand of the Lord GOD fell there upon me.

Before CHRIST 594.

2 Then I beheld, and lo a likeness as the appearance of fire: from the appearance of his loins even downward, fire; and from his loins even upward, as the appearance of brightness, as the colour of amber.

3 And he ᵃ put forth the form of an hand, and took me by a lock of mine head; and the spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north; where was the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy.

ᵃ Dan. 5. 5.

4 And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I ᵇ saw in the plain.

ᵇ Chap. 1. 28.

5 ¶ Then said he unto me, Son of man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north, and behold northward at the gate of the altar this image of jealousy in the entry.

6 He said furthermore unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations that the house of Israel committeth here, that I should go far off from my sanctuary? but turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations.

24. — the worst of the heathen,] The Chaldeans; see chap. xxx. 11—24. They were at that time the oppressors of the world, and a terrour to all the countries round about them. W. Lowth.

—— the pomp of the strong] Compare chap. xxiv. 21, and xx. 6; Lev. xxvi. 19. The excellency of their strength; that is, the temple. Abp. Secker.

26. — but the law shall perish from the priest, &c.] But, as a just punishment for their former neglect and security, God shall take away His gifts from their priests and prophets, so as they shall not be able to declare His will unto them for their direction and preservation. Bp. Hall.

Chap. VIII. ver. 1. — in the sixth year, in the sixth month,] This date is one year and two months after the commencement of the vision, chap. i. 1. Abps. Newcome and Secker, Dean Prideaux.

—— and the elders of Judah sat before me,] Men of note for their age or authority, perhaps such as had been members of the greater or lesser consistories before their captivity. W. Lowth.

—— sat before me.] This was the posture of those, who came to hear the instructions of any Prophet or teacher. Compare ch. xiv. 1; xx. 1; xxxiii. 31; 2 Kings iv. 38. In aftertimes the teachers sat in a chair or eminent seat, and the hearers on lower forms at the feet of their master; see Luke x. 39; Acts xxii. 3. W. Lowth. See the note on Deut. xxxiii. 3.

This chapter and the three following contain the particulars of a single vision. Calmet.

3. — the form of an hand,] Just as the form of a hand appeared writing upon the wall, Dan. v. 5. W. Lowth.

—— in the visions of God] By mental representation; as if the Prophet had been personally present. It seems most probable that every thing to chap. xi. 24 passed while the Prophet was in a trance, chap. xi. 25. Ezekiel relates his vision to the elders who sat before him. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

—— the image of jealousy,] What this image was which rivalled Jehovah with the Jews, cannot be ascertained; see 2 Chron. xxxvi. 14. St. Jerome conjectures, that it was the image of Baal, which having been erected by Manasseh, and afterward destroyed by Josiah, had been probably restored by his successors. Others think, that the expression was intended to express the false gods in general, by the worship of which the anger of God had been excited against His people; or it may be, that the false divinity was Adonis; and this conjecture is not without some appearance of reason, as the Prophet, upon his return to the northern gate, where he had first seen "the image of jealousy," beheld women sitting and weeping for Tammuz, and Tammuz was Adonis; see ver. 14. Abp. Newcome, Bp. Hall, Calmet.

By that time the sins of this wretched people were ripe for the punishment of their approaching captivity, they had polluted themselves with all kinds of Egyptian abominations, as appears from this famous vision of the Prophet, wherein their three capital idolatries are so clearly described. The Prophet represents himself as brought in a vision to Jerusalem, and at "the door of the inner gate that looked toward the north," he saw "the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy." This is a prelude to the visions, which describe the various idolatries of the house of Israel, where, in the noblest stretch of an inspired imagination, idolatry is itself personified and made an idol, and the image sublimely called "the image of jealousy," which the Prophet explains by observing, that "it was that which provoked God to jealousy." He then proceeds to the various scenery of the inspired vision. Bp. Warburton.

4. — in the plain.] See chap. iii. 22, 23.

5. — at the gate of the altar] Probably so called from the time of Ahaz, who placed the brasen altar to the north of the altar, built according to the model of that which he had seen at Damascus, 2 Kings xvi. 14. Abp. Newcome.

6. — go far off from my sanctuary?] That I should forsake it, and deliver it up to the heathen to be polluted, chap. vii. 21, 22. W. Lowth. We may suppose a reference to chap. ix. 3; x. 18; in both which texts the glory of the Lord is said to have changed its place. Michaelis.

Before CHRIST 594. 7 ¶ And he brought me to the door of the court; and when I looked, behold a hole in the wall.

8 Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door.

9 And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here.

10 So I went in and saw; and behold every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, pourtrayed upon the wall round about.

11 And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel, and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan, with every man his censer in his hand; and a thick cloud of incense went up.

12 Then said he unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? for they say, 'The LORD seeth us not; the LORD hath forsaken the earth. Before CHRIST 594.

13 ¶ He said also unto me, Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations that they do. [c] Chap. 9. 9.

14 Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the LORD's house which was toward the north; and, behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz.

15 ¶ Then said he unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these.

16 And he brought me into the inner court of the LORD's house, and, behold, at the door of the temple of the LORD, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of the LORD, and their faces toward the east; and they worshipped the sun toward the east.

17 ¶ Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? ‖ Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit ‖ Or, Is there any thing lighter than to commit?

7. — the door of the court.] The east gate of the inner court, over which was the council chamber where the Sanhedrim used to meet. Dr. Lightfoot.

8. — dig now in the wall:] We have here a very lively and circumstantial description of the celebrated mysteries of Isis and Osiris. For 1st, the rites are represented as performed in a secret subterraneous place, ver. 7, 8, 9. This secret place was, as the Prophet tells us, in the temple. And such kind of places for this use the Egyptians had in their temples, as we learn from a similitude of Plutarch. "Like the disposition," says he, "and the ordonnance of their temples, which in one place embrace and extend themselves in wings and fair and open aisles; in another, sink into dark and secret subterraneous vestries, like the adyta of the Thebans." 2dly, These rites were celebrated by the Sanhedrim, or the elders of Israel, ver. 11. Now it appears from the best accounts we have of the mysteries, that none but princes, rulers, and the wisest of the people, were admitted to their most secret celebrations. 3dly, The paintings and imagery on the walls of this subterraneous apartment answer exactly to the descriptions, which the ancients have given us, of the mystick cells of the Egyptians. Bp. Warburton.

10. — of creeping things, and abominable beasts.] This practice, so strongly reprobated here, was probably borrowed from the Egyptians. Diodorus Siculus says, "Round the room in Thebes, where the body of king Osymandyas seemed to be buried, a multitude of chambers was built, which had elegant paintings of all the beasts sacred in Egypt." Abp. Secker and Newcome. See the note from Bryant on Deut. iv. 18. Pictures were as much prohibited by the law as carved images, Numb. xxxiii. 52; Lev. xxvi. 1. W. Lowth.

11. — Jaazaniah] Probably a prince of the people. See the close of chap. xi. 1. Abp. Newcome. Shaphan was well known under the reign of king Josiah. See 2 Kings xxii. 3, 9. The "seventy "ancients," or elders with him, were probably the members of the Sanhedrim, or great council of the Jews. Bp. Hall.

12. — in the dark.] No darkness, nor secrecy, can hide the knowledge of men's sins from Him, who knoweth all things: no concealment can shelter sinners from His judgment. Osterwald.

14. — weeping for Tammuz.] The ancient expositors consider Tammuz as Adonis.

This was the Phenician superstition. It was derived from the Egyptians, and afterwards the Phenicians improved it. Bp. Warburton, W. Lowth.

The ancient Greeks used to place their dead near the doors of their houses, and to attend them there with mourning. Chandler observed the continuance of this custom when travelling in Greece. The weeping for Tammuz is described as performed near a door of the temple, perhaps with a view to such a custom. Harmer.

15. — turn thee yet again, &c.] This is a description of the Persian superstition. It is to be observed, that, when the Prophet is bid to turn from the Egyptian to the Phenician rites, he is then said to look towards the north, ver. 14, the situation of Phenicia with respect to Jerusalem; consequently, he before stood southward, the situation of Egypt with respect to the same place. And when from thence he is bid to turn into the inner court of the Lord's house, to see the Persian rites, this was east, the situation of Persia: with so much exactness of representation is the whole vision conducted. Again, as the mysterious rites of Egypt are said, agreeably to their usage, to be held in secret by their "elders" and rulers only, so the Phenician rites, for the same reason, are shown as they were celebrated by the people in open day. And the Persian worship of the same, which was performed by the Magi, is here said to be observed by the priests alone; "five and twenty men with their faces toward the east." Bp. Warburton.

16. — between the porch and the altar,] The place where the Jewish priests invoked the mercy of Jehovah for the people. See Joel ii. 17.

—— five and twenty men,] Possibly the twelve priests and twelve Levites of the weekly service, with the high priest. Calmet.

—— their backs toward the temple] They turned their backs to God Almighty, and their faces to the sun. Perhaps Hezekiah may allude to some such idolatrous practice in that confession of his, 2 Chron. xxix. 6, "Our fathers have done evil in the eyes of the Lord, and have forsaken Him, and turned away their faces from the habitation of the Lord, and turned their backs." "They turned their back unto Him, and not their face," as Jeremiah expresses their contempt towards Him, chap. ii. 27; xxxii. 33. For this reason the people were commanded to come in at the north or south gate of the outward court of the temple when they came to worship, that they might not at their return turn their backs upon God. See chap. xlvi. 9. The Jews always turned their faces towards the temple when they worshipped. W. Lowth, Dr. Spencer.

17. — the branch to their nose.] The text seems plainly to allude to the Magian fire-worshippers, who, as Strabo tells us, when they were praying before the sacred fire, held a little bunch of twigs in their hand. Dr. Hyde, in his History of the Religion of the ancient Persians, gives a more particular account of this Magian rite; and presents us with a print of a Moge, or priest, standing before the fire altar, and holding the twigs in his left hand. The idolaters mentioned by Ezekiel had their backs turned toward the temple of Jehovah, and "worshipped the sun toward the east, and lo!" while thus worshipping, "they put the branch (or twig) to their nose." Parkhurst.

Chap. IX. ver. 1. — them that have charge over the city] The angels who had the charge of executing God's judgments upon the city, 2 Kings x. 24. W. Lowth. This is prophetical of the slaughter the Babylonians were to make. Abp. Newcome.

2. — six men came from the way of the higher gate, &c.] See chap. viii. 14. And behold there appeared six men according to the number of the principal gates of Jerusalem, in representation of so many destroying angels, which came from the way of the north, which lieth towards Chaldea. Bp. Hall.

—— the higher gate, which lieth toward the north,] This was the north gate of the temple; and it is called "the higher gate," because it was higher in situation than the north gate of the court of the people; the temple being placed on a platform higher than that court. Calmet.

—— with a writer's inkhorn by his side:] To set a mark on those who were to be saved from the common destruction. *W. 3. — from the cherub,] The word "cherub" stands for cherubim, as chap. x. 2. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome We are to distinguish this appearance of the Divine glory, which had its constant residence in the temple, from that which was shewed particularly to Ezekiel, chap. i. 26; iii. 23; x. 1. *W. The Easterns used ink in sealing; whence the use of the inkhorn: see ver. 3. Harmer. They make the impression of their name with their seal, generally of cornelian, which they wear with their finger, and which is blackened, when they have occasion to seal with it. Bp. Pococke.

6 And it came to pass, that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels, from between the cherubims; then he went in, and stood beside the wheels.

Before CHRIST 594.

7 And one cherub † stretched forth his hand from between the cherubims unto the fire that was between the cherubims, and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen: who took it, and went out.

8 ¶ And there appeared in the cherubims the form of a man's hand under their wings.

9 And when I looked, behold the four wheels by the cherubims, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub: and the appearance of the wheels was as the colour of a [c] beryl stone.

[c] Chap. i. 16.

10 And as for their appearances, they four had one likeness, as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel.

11 When they went, they went upon their four sides; they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head looked they followed it; they turned not as they went.

12 And their whole † body, and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and the wheels, were full of eyes round about, even the wheels that they four had.

13 As for the wheels, ‖ it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel.

‖ Or, they were called in my hearing, wheel, or, galgal.

14 And every one had four faces: the first face was the face of a cherub, and the second face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle.

well to be observed, that when Ezekiel inquired of God, whether He would destroy His people, God answered, that the sins of the Jews were too great not to be avenged; that they had carried their impiety so far as to say, "The Lord hath forsaken the land, the Lord seeth not;" and therefore that He would no longer have any pity on them. When men have arrived at a certain degree of wickedness; when they have lost all fear of God, and every thing is in the utmost disorder; God is, as it were, obliged to execute justice, and His mercy gives way to His vengeance. Osterwald.

Chap. X. ver. 1. — in the firmament] See note on chap. i. 26.

2. — even under the cherub,] The wheels were below or beside the cherubim, and the firmament was above them; and the fire here mentioned ran up and down among the wheels and the cherubim. See chap. i. 13. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

— over the city.] A beautiful prophecy that Jerusalem should be burnt by the Babylonians. Coals of fire frequently denote the Divine vengeance. Abp. Newcome, Dr. E. Pocock.

3. Now the cherubims stood] The cherubim which were part of the vision shewed to Ezekiel.

— and the cloud filled the inner court.] This bright cloud seems to be an attendant upon that glory, which was represented in this vision to Ezekiel, chap. viii. 4; x. 1. W. Lowth.

4. — the glory of the Lord went up from the cherub,] See chap. ix. 3. To shew them that He meant to remove away from Israel; and yet not all at once, but by degrees, and therefore He removed first only to the threshold of the temple. Bp. Hall.

5. — the outer court,] The noise was heard in the court of the people; for all this passed in the sanctuary. Calmet. See the plan of the temple.

9, 10, 11, 12.] See chap. i. 16, 17, 18.

10. — had one likeness,] The works of God, however they may sometimes appear diversified to the weak sight of mortals, are always equally and uniformly directed by a consistent wisdom, and always effectual to their proper ends. Bp. Hall.

13. — O wheel.] The wheels were animated with the same principle of understanding and motion, as the living creatures, chap. i. 6—10. W. Lowth. And therefore addressed, because capable of obeying the Great Director. Milton describes them,

> —— Wheel within wheel undrawn,
> Itself instinct with spirit,

Michaelis observes, that the original word signifies a storm, or a whirlwind. Abp. Newcome. We learn from this passage, that God takes perfect notice of the events of things, and both gives and judges their motion. Bp. Hall.

14. — the first face was the face of a cherub,] That is, of an ox, as appears by comparing this verse with chap. i. 10. The word "cherub" does originally signify an ox. The several faces are here represented in a different order from the description given of them, chap. i. 10; of which difference this reason may be assigned. In the first chapter, the Prophet saw his vision coming out of the north, and advancing southward, ver. 4, where the face of a man being placed on the south side was first in view. The lion, being

Before CHRIST 594. 15 And the cherubims were lifted up. This is the living creature that I saw by the river of Chebar.

16 And when the cherubims went, the wheels went by them: and when the cherubims lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them.

17 When they stood, these stood; and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also: for the spirit ‖ of the living creature was in them.

18 Then the glory of the LORD departed from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubims.

19 And the cherubims lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight: when they went out, the wheels also were beside them, and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the LORD's house; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

20 This is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel by the river of Chebar; and I knew that they were the cherubims.

21 Every one had four faces apiece, and every one four wings; and the likeness of the hands of a man was under their wings.

22 And the likeness of their faces was the same faces which I saw by the river of Chebar, their appearances and themselves: they went every one straight forward.

CHAP. XI.

1 The presumption of the princes. 4 Their sin and judgment. 13 Ezekiel complaining, God sheweth him his purpose in saving a remnant, 21 and punishing the wicked. 22 The glory of God leaveth the city. 24 Ezekiel is returned to the captivity.

Before CHRIST 594. MOREOVER the spirit lifted me up, and brought me unto the east gate of the LORD's house, which looketh eastward: and behold at the door of the gate five and twenty men; among whom I saw Jaazaniah the son of Azur, and Pelatiah the son of Benaiah, princes of the people.

2 Then said he unto me, Son of man, these are the men that devise mischief, and give wicked counsel in this city:

3 Which say, ‖ It is not [a] near; let us build houses: this city is the caldron, and we be the flesh.

‖ Or, It is not for us to build houses near.
[a] 2 Pet. 3. 4.

4 ¶ Therefore prophesy against them, prophesy, O son of man.

5 And the Spirit of the LORD fell upon me, and said unto me, Speak; Thus saith the LORD; Thus have ye said, O house of Israel: for I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them.

6 Ye have multiplied your slain in this city, and ye have filled the streets thereof with the slain.

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Your slain whom ye have laid in the midst of it, they are the flesh, and this city is the caldron: but I will bring you forth out of the midst of it.

8 Ye have feared the sword; and I will bring a sword upon you, saith the Lord GOD.

9 And I will bring you out of the midst thereof, and deliver you into the hands of strangers, and will execute judgments among you.

in the east part, was toward his right hand; the ox, being placed toward the west, was on his left; and the eagle was toward the north. Here the Prophet is supposed to stand by the porch of the temple, (chap. viii. 16,) westward of the Shechinah, as that was moving out of the inner court eastward: see ver. 18, 19. So the ox was first in his view, as being nearest him. W. Lowth, Dr. Spencer.

The prevailing animal characteristick of the living creatures was that of the ox, of which they had not only the head but the feet. Calmet.

18. — departed from off the threshold.] Then the Lord removed the testimony of His presence from the temple, and forsook even the very threshold thereof, and stood on high over the cherubim, as signifying that, for the great abominations of Israel, He had withdrawn Himself from them. Bp. Hall.

19. — the wheels also were beside them,] See chap. i. 19—26.

—— at the — east gate] The cherubim stopped, and the glory of the Lord rested over the great eastern gate of the temple, which was the entrance from the city to the court of the people. This was a farther removal. Calmet, W. Lowth.

Chap. XI. ver. 1. — the east gate] The Divine glory had placed itself there before. See chap. x. 19.

—— princes of the people.] Probably members of the great Sanhedrim. Compare chap. viii. 11. W. Lowth.

3. Which say, It is not near; let us build houses: &c.] This image seems first to have been suggested by Jeremiah, chap. i. 13. Jerusalem is there represented as a seething pot, and the fire that should consume its contents was threatened from the north. The fulfilment of this prophecy was then imminent, but the Jews seem to have disregarded it. The twenty-five are represented as teaching the people a false security; as instructing them to build houses in perfect confidence that their generation would at least be safe; that Jerusalem was indeed the caldron, and they the flesh: but that the fire would not consume them, who were only to be prepared and perfected by the process, and would remain in safety to a mature old age. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

5. — Thus have ye said, &c.] Ye have advanced the assertion maintained ver. 3. You have rightly said what you say: "The city is the caldron, and we are the flesh," shall be fulfilled, but not as you understand it; many of you will perish in the city. For those it will be the caldron, and they will be the flesh boiled in it. But yourselves shall not be the flesh in the caldron; but you shall be taken out, and elsewhere cut in pieces. Michaelis, Bp. Hall.

6. Ye have multiplied your slain] See chap. xxii. 3, 4.

7. — but I will bring you forth out of the midst of it.] You shall not die there, but I will reserve you for further punishment. W. Lowth.

9, 10. — I will bring you out of the midst thereof, &c.] See Jer. xxxix. 5; 2 Kings xxv. 19—21.

Before CHRIST 594.

10 Ye shall fall by the sword; I will judge you in the border of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

11 This city shall not be your caldron, neither shall ye be the flesh in the midst thereof; but I will judge you in the border of Israel:

12 And ye shall know that I am the LORD: ‖ for ye have not walked in my statutes, neither executed my judgments, but have done after the manners of the heathen that are round about you.

‖ Or, which have not walked.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, when I prophesied, that Pelatiah the son of Benaiah died. Then fell I down upon my face, and cried with a loud voice, and said, Ah Lord GOD! wilt thou make a full end of the remnant of Israel?

14 Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

15 Son of man, thy brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the house of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Get you far from the LORD: unto us is this land given in possession.

16 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come.

17 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will even gather you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel.

18 And they shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence.

Before CHRIST 594.

19 And [b] I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh:

[b] Jer. 32. 39. chap. 36. 2.

20 That they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

21 But as for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, I will recompense their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord GOD.

22 ¶ Then did the cherubims lift up their wings, and the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

23 And the glory of the LORD went up from the midst of the city, and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side of the city.

24 ¶ Afterwards the spirit took me up, and brought me in a vision by the Spirit of God into Chaldea, to them of the captivity. So the vision that I had seen went up from me.

25 Then I spake unto them of the captivity all the things that the LORD had shewed me.

CHAP. XII.

1 The type of Ezekiel's removing. 8 It shewed the captivity of Zedekiah. 17 Ezekiel's trembling sheweth the Jews' desolation. 21 The Jews' presumptuous proverb is reproved. 26 The speediness of the vision.

10 — the border of Israel.] Called "the entering in of Hamath," 1 Kings viii. 65; 2 Kings xiv. 25, because it was just upon the borders of Judea. W. Lowth.

13. — Then fell I down upon my face, &c.] The Prophet thought this an earnest of the common destruction which was coming upon the inhabitants of the city, and thereupon he earnestly deprecated so severe a judgment. W. Lowth, Bp. Hall.

15. — thy brethren.] Thy fellow captives. St. Jerome remarks upon this passage, that we should never insult those whom God appears to have abandoned; and who suffer under His afflicting hand. The sorrowful and humbled sinner is often more acceptable in the sight of God, than those who live in apparent prosperity, and feel no repentance. Calmet.

16. — a little sanctuary.] They could no longer worship God in the holy temple of Jerusalem: but God here promises to serve them as a temple in their exile; to be their refuge and protection; and to give them gracious testimonies of His presence with them. Calmet, Bp. Hall.

17. — I will even gather you from the people,] This may be in some degree fulfilled in those that returned from the captivity; but the utmost completion of this and the following verses may probably be expected at the general restoration of the Jewish nation. Compare chap. xx. 4; xxviii. 25. W. Lowth.

18. — detestable things.] The idols, which had been the cause of God's anger. The Jews who returned from the captivity did not relapse into idolatry. Calmet.

19. And I will give them one heart, &c.] And I will give them a holy and happy accordance in My truth; and will renew a right spirit in them; and will take away that perverse and obstinate indisposition which is naturally in them to that which is good; and will give them a tenderness of heart, such as may make them capable of the impressions of My Spirit. Bp. Holl.

We read throughout the Prophets, that the time of the Messiah is all along represented as a time of universal love, and peace, and godliness; wherein as the natures of people shall be changed, and all malice and ill nature rooted out, (Isa. xi,) so God would give them a heart to do His will, and "He would be their God, and they should be His people," ver. 20. Dr. T. Burnett.

23. — went up from the midst of the city,] This was emblematical that God would desert Jerusalem, as well as the temple. Abp. Newcome.

—— and stood upon the mountain which is on the east side] The mount of Olives. W. Lowth. This was the last spot upon which the glory of the Lord rested, before He quitted the devoted city; and it is remarkable, that it was the spot from which the Saviour of the world afterwards ascended up to heaven in the sight of His disciples. Calmet.

24. — in a vision by the Spirit of God into Chaldea,] Returned me back into Chaldea in the same manner as it carried me away from thence, being still under the power of a Divine ecstasy, and the immediate influence of God's Spirit. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 594. THE word of the LORD also came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house, which have eyes to see, and see not; they have ears to hear, and hear not: for they are a rebellious house.

3 Therefore, thou son of man, prepare thee ‖ stuff for removing, and remove by day in their sight; and thou shalt remove from thy place to another place in their sight: it may be they will consider, though they be a rebellious house.

* Chap. 17. 20.

Chap. XII. ver. 2. — thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house.] He was among them of the captivity in Chaldea, ver. 10; chap. xi. 24; xiv. 22; and these seem to have disbelieved the prophecies that Jerusalem should be smitten and burnt, and its inhabitants scattered abroad, chap. iv. 2; ix. 5; x. 2; xi. 9. Abp. Newcome.

St. Jerome remarks upon this place, that the words of this chapter were addressed to the Jews of the captivity, who were then regretting that they had listened to the prophecies of Jeremiah, since Jerusalem was still standing, of which he had predicted the fall; and the object of it seems to have been to shew that they, who were left behind to endure the miseries of a siege, and the insults of a conqueror, would be in a worse condition than those who were already captives. Calmet.

3. — prepare thee stuff for removing.] Instruments, furniture, goods, whatever is fitting for a long journey. Abp. Newcome.

—— by day.] Do this openly, and at noonday, that they may all see and take notice of it. W. Lowth. See the note on chap. iv. 1. There appears no reason for thinking that the Prophet might not really perform all that is mentioned in this chapter, without forfeiting either his discretion or gravity. The manner and circumstances of the whole narrative plead strongly for the strict and literal interpretation. It is no less than seven times repeated, that the Prophet was to do, or did, thus and thus, "in the sight" of the people: and he did it in the "evening," in the "twilight," ver. 7: and "in the morning" after, ver. 8, 9, God came to ask him whether the house of Israel had taken notice of such his uncommon behaviour, and had inquired what it meant. These and other circumstances appear to be very urgent proofs of real fact, and that it is more than a narration of a vision, or a recital of a parable. Dr. Waterland.

4. — thou shalt go forth at even in their sight, &c.] This is as they do in the caravans: they carry out their baggage in the daytime, and the caravan loads in the evening; for in the morning it is too hot to set out in a journey for that day, and they cannot well see in the night. Sir J. Chardin.

6. — thou shalt cover thy face,] The actions of the Prophet were intended for prophetical instruction, and sometimes conveyed it with more force and efficacy than words. Covering the face was a token of shame and grief. Persons condemned to death had their faces covered. David had his head covered when he fled from Absalom, 2 Sam. xv. 30. Calmet.

—— for I have set thee for a sign] Language by signs is common in the East: so that when the Prophets in the Old Testament were divinely directed to act a portion of the information, which they were to communicate to the people, they did little or nothing more than what was done every day in the countries where they resided. When Isaiah says, he and his children were for signs; when Jeremiah found his girdle marred as a sign; when Ezekiel was a sign to the people in not mourning for the dead, chap. xxiv, and in his removing into captivity, and digging through the wall; these and similar actions were not only well understood, but they were one customary manner of conveying information, and they had the advantage of being in daily use among the people to whom they were addressed. Fragments to Calmet.

9. — hath not the house of Israel — said] The meaning is, I know that they have said. As, "Are they not written in the book of the Acts of Solomon, &c." Houbigant.

—— What doest thou?] The actions of the Prophet would naturally produce an anxiety in the minds of the Jews who witnessed them, to know their object and intention. Or, it is probable that the question was asked in pure derision, and therefore they are termed a rebellious house. W. Lowth.

10. — This burden concerneth the prince &c.] Or, "This prophecy is against the prince, against Jerusalem, and against all, &c." Houbigant. By "the prince," king Zedekiah is meant. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

—— among them.] In the midst of Jerusalem. Michaelis.

11. Say, I am your sign: &c.] Say, God hath appointed to prefigure and foresignify in me what He means to do unto you. Bp. Hall.

12. — they shall dig] For the fact, see Jer. xxxix. 4; lii. 7; 2 Kings xxv. 4. In the passages referred to, the king and his party are said to have escaped through the gate between two walls, by the way of the garden. They might have fled through a breach made by themselves in the wall, or, as Michaelis suggests, the gate through which they fled might have been walled up during the siege, and broken down in their flight. Abp. Newcome.

20 And the cities that are inhabited shall be laid waste, and the land shall be desolate; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

21 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

22 Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel, saying, The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth?

23 Tell them therefore, Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will make this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel; but say unto them, The days are at hand, and the effect of every vision. Before CHRIST 594.

24 For there shall be no more any vain vision nor flattering divination within the house of Israel.

25 For I am the LORD: I will speak, and the word that I shall speak shall come to pass; it shall be no more prolonged: for in your days, O rebellious house, will I say the word, and will perform it, saith the Lord GOD.

26 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

27 Son of man, behold, they of the house of Israel say, The vision that he seeth is [b] for many days to come, and he prophesieth of the times that are far off. [b] 2 Pet. 3.

—— yet shall he not see it, though he shall die there.] Having his eyes put out before he came thither. Josephus tells us, that Zedekiah thought this prophecy inconsistent with that of Jeremiah, chap. xxxiv. 3, that Zedekiah's "eyes should behold the eyes of the king of Babylon;" and therefore believed neither: but they both actually came to pass, as the sacred story assures us. W. Lowth. See note at 2 Kings xxv. 7.

22. — The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth?] Words of the same import with those at ver. 27; and chap. xi. 3. Both of them the words of infidels, who turn the grace of God to wantonness, and take encouragement from His patience and long-suffering to despise His threatenings, as if they would never be fulfilled. Compare Is. v. 19; Amos v. 18: (W. Lowth, Dr. Waterland:) and to deride His Prophets, as if they had prophesied in vain. Calmet.

23. — and the effect of every vision.] The word or matter of every vision draweth near. Perhaps, "and every vision shall be fact:" and so, perhaps, ver. 25 should be translated, "When I the Lord speak, what I speak shall be fact, and it shall be done: it shall no more be prolonged." Abp. Secker.

24. For there shall be no more any vain vision] The false prophets, who foretold peace and safety, shall see their prophecies so confuted by the events quite contrary to what they foretold, that they will never pretend any more to publish new prophecies. Compare chap. xiii. 23. W. Lowth.

Chap. XIII. ver. 2. — that prophesy,] The true Prophets often denounce God's judgments against the false ones; laying to their charge many misdemeanours in their private conversation, and upbraiding them for unfaithfulness in the office they undertook, of guiding and directing men's consciences, chap. xxii. 25—28; Jer. vi. 14; xxiii. 11; Mic. iii. 5. W. Lowth.

—— out of their own hearts,] Without being inspired or called to the office of prophecy. The fickle and credulous people of the Jews always found persons who were ready to flatter them in their disorders, and who deceived and misled them by false prophecies. Calmet.

9 And mine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies: they shall not be in the ‖ assembly of my people, neither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israel, neither shall they enter into the land of Israel; and ye shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

10 ¶ Because, even because they have seduced my people, saying, [b] Peace; and there was no peace; and one built up ‖ a wall, and, lo, others daubed it with untempered morter:

[b] Jer. 6. 14.

11 Say unto them which daub it with untempered morter, that it shall fall: there shall be an overflowing shower; and ye, O great hailstones, shall fall; and a stormy wind shall rend it.

Before CHRIST 594.

12 Lo, when the wall is fallen, shall it not be said unto you, Where is the daubing wherewith ye have daubed it?

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; I will even rend it with a stormy wind in my fury; and there shall be an overflowing shower in mine anger, and great hailstones in my fury to consume it.

14 So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered morter, and bring it down to the ground, so that the foundation thereof shall be discovered, and it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof: and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

15 Thus will I accomplish my wrath upon the wall, and upon them that have daubed it with untempered morter, and will say unto you, The wall is no more, neither they that daubed it;

16 To wit, the prophets of Israel which prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and which see visions of peace for her, and there is no peace, saith the Lord GOD.

17 ¶ Likewise, thou son of man, set thy face against the daughters of thy people, which prophesy out of their own heart; and prophesy thou against them,

8. — and have seen nothing!] Who give their own vain imaginations for prophecies, and boast of visions which they have not seen. Calmet.

4. — foxes in the deserts.] Cowardly, unprofitable, and deceitful, they seek only to seize upon their prey, and to gratify their rapacity and sensuality. Calmet.

5. Ye have not gone up into the gaps,] Or, stood in the gap, or breach, as it is expressed, chap. xxii. 30; Ps. cvi. 23.

The phrase is taken from those that put a stop to the enemy when he is just entering in at a breach. In like manner it was the office and duty of those prophets, if they had truly been what they pretended, by their prayers and intercessions to put a stop to God's vengeance when it was just ready to be poured out upon a sinful people. W. Lowth.

—— neither made up the hedge for the house of Israel] "Nor made up a wall," as the Latin Vulgate translates it. Another expression taken from those that are besieged, who, if a breach be made in a wall, presently make it up, or build up a new one within it, to prevent the enemy from entering, and becoming masters of the city. The original word, here rendered "hedge," signifies any other sort of fortification, Ps. lxii. 3. W. Lowth.

6. — they have made others to hope &c.] Their speaking with so much assurance made others confidently expect that the event should answer their predictions. W. Lowth.

9. — written in the writing of the house of Israel,] Registered in the roll of the house of Israel. Bp. Hall.

The expressions being an allusion to the registers that used to be kept of the members of any city or corporation, the privileges of which society none can pretend to but they whose names are entered into such registers. Compare Ezra ii. 62; Ps. lxix. 28; Luke x. 20; Heb. xii. 23. W. Lowth.

10. — and one built up a wall, and, lo, others daubed it &c.] One laid false grounds of comfort, and the other flourished them over with unsound and plausible pretences. Bp. Hall.

Instead of providing such a fence and bulwark as might secure the people against the judgments that threatened them, (see ver. 5,) they have made a slight wall without any morter or cement to bind and strengthen it; that is, they have applied slight and palliating remedies to publick calamities, which will never give true peace to men's consciences, nor stand them in any stead when God visits for their iniquities: just as if an unskilful builder should undertake to set up a wall, and his fellow workmen should daub it with untempered morter. W. Lowth.

11. — there shall be an overflowing shower;] "When I was at Tozer in December, 1727, we had a small drizzling shower, that continued for the space of two hours; and so little provision was made against accidents of this kind, that several of the houses, which are built only as usual with palm branches, mud, and tiles baked in the sun, corresponding perhaps to, and explanatory of, the 'untempered morter' in Ezekiel, fell down by imbibing the moisture of the shower. Nay, provided the drops had been larger, or the shower of a longer continuance, or 'overflowing,' in the Prophet's expression, the whole city would have undoubtedly dissolved and dropt to pieces." Dr. Shaw.

13. — I will even rend it with a stormy wind &c.] Under these metaphors is foretold the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldean army. Thus the Chaldee Paraphrase expounds it: I will bring a mighty king with the force of a whirlwind, and destroying people as it were an overflowing storm, and powerful princes like great hailstones. W. Lowth.

17. — the daughters of thy people,] As there were occasionally true Prophetesses amongst the Jews, such for instance as Mi-

The prophetesses reproved,

19 And will ye pollute me among my people for handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread, to slay the souls that should not die, and to save the souls alive that should not live, by your lying to my people that hear your lies?

20 Wherefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against your pillows, wherewith ye there hunt the souls ‖ to make them fly, and I will tear them from your arms, and will let the souls go, even the souls that ye hunt to make them fly.

21 Your kerchiefs also will I tear, and deliver my people out of your hand, and they shall be no more in your hand to be hunted; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

22 Because with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad; and strengthened the hands of the wicked, that he should not return from his wicked way, ‖ † by promising him life:

sian, the sister of Moses, Exod. xv. 20; Deborah, Judges iv. 4; Huldah, 2 Kings xxii. 14: so it appears from this, as well as other places of Scripture, that there were others of the same sex who pretended to this gift without Divine authority. Calmet.

18. — that sew pillows to all armholes, &c.] That speak pleasing and plausible words to all hearers, and fit every man's humour with their flattering divinations. Bp. Hall. This figurative language may be designed to express, that men were taught by the artifices of those female seducers, to recline at ease on their couches, and to partake of banquets in security. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth. Sir J. Chardin mentions, that people of quality in Asia cause carpets and cushions to be carried wherever they like, in order to repose upon them more agreeably. Harmer. "For their further ease likewise and convenience, there is a row of damask or velvet bolsters, ranged along each side of the floor; an indulgence which seems to be alluded to, by the sewing of pillows to all armholes,' as we have it expressed by the Prophet Ezekiel." Dr. Shaw.

—— and make kerchiefs upon the head of every stature] They did this to persons of every age and stature, without distinction. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome. We are told by some Oriental travellers, that the Eastern women bind on their other ornaments with a rich or embroidered handkerchief, and which is described as completing the headdress of the ladies, and falling without order upon the hair behind. This figurative expression, therefore, may, like the former, relate to those whom the false prophetesses flattered into ease by their allurements. See chap. xxiv. 16, 17, 22, &c. Harmer.

—— to hunt souls] That they may drive them into those nets and snares that they have laid for them, and make them their prey. W. Lowth.

—— and will ye save the souls alive] Dare you promise that they shall live, when I promise no such thing? Or can you preserve them alive, whom you deceive by your promises? Are you not at all afraid thus to profane My name, and to ensnare My people? Poole. This verse should seem to mean, that these women made every body easy to his ruin for their own profit. Abp. Secker.

19. And will ye pollute me] Will ye profane My name by making use of it to give credit to your own dreams and lies? W. Lowth.

—— pieces of bread,] For the meanest reward, Prov. xxviii. 21. W. Lowth.

—— to slay the souls] By pronouncing the sentence of death on the righteous, and by assuring the wicked that they should live; see ver. 22. Abp. Newcome.

"To slay" and "to save alive," signify here, to promise men life, or to threaten them with death. W. Lowth.

20. — to make them fly.] To make them run into those nets and snares that you have laid for them, ver. 18. The metaphor is continued from the manner of hunting and pursuing living creatures, by that means to drive them into the toils prepared for them. W. Lowth.

22. — with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, &c.] In terrifying them with those evils, which shall not come; and encouraged wicked men, by pretending to secure them against those evils which shall surely fall upon them. Bp. Hall.

The faithful minister makes the word of God his only rule, both of faith and of doctrine: he converts it into nourishment for his own soul's health and salvation, and then he administers "the sincere milk of the word" to his hearers. Whereas the seducers and false teachers either withhold the Scriptures from the people, and substitute inventions of their own, which, like "walls built and daubed with untempered morter," can yield no security or defence. Or they pretend to a particular light within, which is no other than a "vain vision," a "lying divination." Or else they set up unfounded interpretations of Scripture, and say, "The Lord saith, albeit the Lord hath not spoken." Scripture, when applied to deceive, and to establish error, is no Scripture: it changes its nature, ceases to be Divine truth, and becomes a lie. God's word in the mouth of a false teacher is not the word of God. Wogan.

Chap. XIV. ver. 3. — have set up their idols in their heart, &c.] Have given up their hearts to idolatry. Bp. Hall.

—— and put the stumblingblock of their iniquity before their face:] And have actually placed before them idols which they worship. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

They are not only inclined to idolatry in their hearts, but have actually set up idols and worshipped them. However, the Prophet shews plainly, that their idolatries consisted, not in entirely deserting, but in polluting with foreign worship, the religion of Moses. Bp. Warburton.

—— should I be enquired of at all by them?] Is it fit that such miscreants should come, as these hypocritically do, to inquire aught from me? Bp. Hall.

Before CHRIST about 594.

4 Therefore speak unto them, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Every man of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to the prophet; I the LORD will answer him that cometh according to the multitude of his idols;

5 That I may take the house of Israel in their own heart, because they are all estranged from me through their idols.

6 ¶ Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Repent, and turn ‖ yourselves from your idols; and turn away your faces from all your abominations.

‖ Or, others.

7 For every one of the house of Israel, or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel, which separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to a prophet to enquire of him concerning me; I the LORD will answer him by myself:

8 And I will set my face against that man, and will make him a [a] sign and a proverb, and I will cut him off from the midst of my people; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

[a] Deut. 28. 37. chap. 5. 15.

9 And if the prophet be deceived, when he hath spoken a thing, I the LORD [b] have deceived that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel.

Before CHRIST about 594. [b] 1 Kings 22. 23.

10 And they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity: the punishment of the prophet shall be even as the punishment of him that seeketh unto him;

11 That the house of Israel may go no more astray from me, neither be polluted any more with all their transgressions; but that they may be my people, and I may be their God, saith the Lord GOD.

12 ¶ The word of the LORD came again to me, saying,

13 Son of man, when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously, then will I stretch out mine hand upon it, and will break the [c] staff of the bread thereof, and will send famine upon it, and will cut off man and beast from it:

[c] Lev. 26. 26. chap. 4. 16. & 5. 16.

14 [d] Though these three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, they should deliver but their own souls by their righteousness, saith the Lord GOD.

[d] Jer. 15. 1.

15 ¶ If I cause noisome beasts to pass through the land, and they ‖ spoil it, so

5. That I may take the house of Israel in their own heart,] That I may convince them; catch, surprise them in their own consciences; when they perceive that I am acquainted with their secret idolatries. Abp. Newcome.

7. — or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel,] "The stranger within thy gates," as it is expressed in the fourth commandment. These devoted themselves to the one true God, although they were not all of them circumcised, for which reason they are styled the worshippers of God, Acts xvi. 14; xviii. 7. W. Lowth.

8. — a sign and a proverb,] A fearful example of My just revenge in every man's mouth. Bp. Hall.

9. — I the Lord have deceived that prophet,] That is, permitted him to be deceived and to deceive the people, as a just judgment upon them for their infidelity, with respect to His true Prophets. This He threatens at the 5th verse; "I will take the house of Israel &c." because they have chosen to themselves false gods, I will suffer them to be deceived with false prophets: and that this is the meaning appears by the threatening added, "and I will stretch out My hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of My people." Now God will not punish that whereof He is the author. Abp. Tillotson.

10. And they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity:] When God has sufficiently made known His will to men, and they notwithstanding err from the right way, obstinately following their own wills and imaginations, He in His just judgment forsakes them, and then, meeting with seducers, they give ear to lies rather than to the truth. Thus it happened to the Jews, who in consequence perished with their seducers, as Ezekiel here threatens them. It is a dangerous thing to hearken to any other voice than that of God. Osterwald.

13. — when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously,] The design of this and the following verses is to shew, that when the inhabitants of a land have filled up the measure of their iniquities, and God ariseth to execute judgment upon them, the few righteous that are left among them shall not be able by their prayers and intercessions to deliver the nation from the judgment decreed against it, "they shall but deliver their own souls;" as we see in the case of Sodom, where there were none righteous but Lot and his family; those just persons were saved themselves, but no intercession could avail to save the city. W. Lowth.

As there is a time of mercy, when the righteousness of one or a few may reprieve a whole nation from destruction; see Gen. xviii. 32; Ps. cvi. 20; Jer. v. 1: so when the appointed time of their fatal stroke is come, though Noah, Daniel, and Job should be in the midst of it, they could prevail no further than the delivery of their own souls. Bp. Sanderson.

— and will break the staff of the bread thereof,] See chap. iv. 16.

14. Though these three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it,] Daniel was then in captivity; he was taken in the third year of Jehoiakim, Dan. i. 1; after this, Jehoiakim reigned eight years, 2 Kings xxiii. 36; and this prophecy, as appears from chap. viii. 1, was uttered in the sixth year of Jehoiachin's captivity, who succeeded Jehoiakim, and reigned only three months, 2 Kings xxiv. 6, 8; therefore at this time Daniel had been fourteen years in captivity, and was little more than thirty years of age. It is observable how early the fame of his piety had spread over Chaldea. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

All these persons were eminent for their piety. Noah and his family were saved from the universal deluge, and obtained a promise from the Most High, that He would never again destroy the world by an inundation of water. Daniel interceded with the Almighty for the whole nation of the Jews, and obtained a promise of their restoration, Dan. ix. And Job was appointed by God Himself to make intercession for his three friends. But when the Almighty's irreversible decree is gone out against a nation, even the prayers of such favourites of Heaven would be ineffectual to procure their deliverance. The Prophet, in this allusion to Abraham's intercession for Sodom, declares from God, that when His judgments come out against the land of Judea, the righteous found in it should only save themselves: which plainly shews a Providence extending to particulars. Bp. Warburton.

Before CHRIST about 594. that it be desolate, that no man may pass through because of the beasts:

16 Though these three men were † in it, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters; they only shall be delivered, but the land shall be desolate.

† Heb. in the midst of it.

17 ¶ Or if I bring a sword upon that land, and say, Sword, go through the land; so that I cut off man and beast from it:

18 Though these three men were in it, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters, but they only shall be delivered themselves.

19 ¶ Or if I send a pestilence into that land, and pour out my fury upon it in blood, to cut off from it man and beast:

20 Though Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, they shall deliver neither son nor daughter; they shall but deliver their own souls by their righteousness.

21 For thus saith the Lord GOD; ‖ How much more when I send my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem, the sword, and the famine, and the noisome beast, and the pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast?

‖ Or, Also when.

22 ¶ Yet, behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters: behold, they shall come forth unto you, and ye shall see their way and their doings: and ye shall be comforted concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon it. Before CHRIST about 594.

23 And they shall comfort you, when ye see their ways and their doings: and ye shall know that I have not done without cause all that I have done in it, saith the Lord GOD.

CHAP. XV.

1 By the unfitness of the vine branch for any work 6 is shewed the rejection of Jerusalem.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, about 594

2 Son of man, What is the vine tree more than any tree, or than a branch which is among the trees of the forest?

3 Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon?

4 Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel; the fire devoureth both the ends of it, and the midst of it is burned. † Is it meet for any work?

† Heb. Will it prosper?

5 Behold, when it was whole, it was † meet for no work: how much less shall it be meet yet for any work, when the fire hath devoured it, and it is burned?

6 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; As the vine tree among the trees of the forest, which I have given to the fire for

19. — in blood,] "Blood," says Grotius, "denotes every kind of premature death." In conformity to this the Chaldee Paraphrase explains it, "with great destruction of men's lives." Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

21. — How much more when I send my four &c.] How much more should there be an utter destruction, when I send, &c. &c. W. Lowth. If it is just with respect to other countries that the good alone should escape punishment, how much more with respect to Jerusalem, after such repeated instructions and admonitions? Abp. Newcome.

22. Yet, behold, therein shall be left a remnant] Notwithstanding these four sore judgments, some shall escape and be brought into Chaldea to be your companions in captivity; compare chap. vi. 8; Jer. lii. 29, 30. W. Lowth.

—— both sons and daughters:] See ver. 16, 18, 20, of this chapter.

—— and ye shall see their way and their doings:] Ye shall be made sensible of their guilt and reformation. Abp. Newcome. Those very persons whom I have reserved from destruction, and who shall come here into captivity with you, shall suffice to justify My rigour; you shall witness what their conduct is, and shall acknowledge that destruction has been justly brought upon a nation so perverse and so corrupted. Calmet, Bp. Hall.

23. And they shall comfort you,] This will compose your minds, and make you give glory to God, and acknowledge His judgments to be righteous, though they touch you very nearly in the destruction of your friends and country. W. Lowth.

From the latter part of this chapter we learn, that the sword, famine, pestilence, and other the like calamities, are the punishments inflicted by God upon countries and nations. Especially we are called upon to consider what is here said of Noah, Daniel, and Job, those holy men, so acceptable in the sight of God, that if they were among a nation, which God had determined to destroy, they could not prevent its destruction. The intercession of good men prevaileth much, but is not always effectual for others: nevertheless God takes care of His faithful servants, and exempts them from those punishments and miseries, to which the wicked and sinners are exposed. Osterwald.

Chap. XV. ver. 2. Son of man, What is the vine tree &c.] The vine is a noble plant in respect to the fruit it bears; but in regard of its wood, no shrub is so mean; it is so far from affording any useful timber, that not even a pin can be made from it, on which any vessel may be hung. Lo, such is Israel! if it bore good fruit, it would be dear and precious to Me, but in itself it is but mean and base in comparison of other nations, and unfit for any service: it is only meet to be cast into the fire for fuel. Bp. Hall.

The chief excellence of a parable is, that it contains an image, which is known and proper to the subject, and the use of which was plain, and determined by custom: the necessary consequence of which is perspicuity, wherein the chief beauty of an allegory consists. The Prophets frequently make use of these kinds of images by way of comparison or illustration: and such is this of the useless vine, by which these ungrateful people are more than once described. Bp. Lowth.

4. Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel;] Wood is very rare in the East: they are reduced therefore to adopt twigs, leaves, &c. Amongst these D'Arvieux notices vine twigs as used for the purpose of fuel. Fragments to Calmet.

—— the fire devoureth both the ends of it, &c.] A fit representation of the present state of Judea, when both its extremities were consumed by the ravages of a foreign enemy, and the midst of it, where the capital city stood, is ready to be destroyed; just as a fire spreads toward the middle part of a stick when both ends of it are lighted. W. Lowth.

594. AGAIN the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, cause Jerusalem to know her abominations,

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord GOD unto Jerusalem; Thy † birth and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan; thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite.

9 Then washed I thee with water; yea,

7. — another fire shall devour them;] Some of the inhabitants of Jerusalem were destroyed in their own country, and others in Egypt. Abp. Newcome. How dreadful the effects of the raging element of fire are in devouring and consuming any combustible matter on which it seizeth, is a thing so well known, that to compare any thing and the effects of it thereto, is the strongest expression of extensive mischief, and utter destruction, that can be used; see Amos i. 4; Jer. vii. 20. Dr. E. Pocock.

Chap. XVI. ver. 2. — cause Jerusalem to know her abominations,] Declare to them that are with thee, and to them that are at Jerusalem; to these declare by letter, to those by word of mouth, what state was theirs in their infancy, what I did for them, namely, for the whole nation of the Jews. Poole.

3. — Thy birth and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan; &c.] Jerusalem is here represented under the image of an exposed infant, whom God preserved from destruction, brought up, espoused, and exalted to sovereignty: but she proved faithless and abandoned; and therefore God threatens her with severe vengeance, but graciously promises that hereafter He will fulfil His early covenant with her. The allegory is easily understood; and as Mr. Lowth observes, has much force, liveliness, and vehemence of eloquent amplification. The images are adapted to a people immersed in sensuality. Abp. Newcome, Bp. Lowth.

—— of the land of Canaan;] As your fathers sojourned in the land of Canaan before they came to have any right or property in it; so you, their posterity, have all along resembled the manners of Canaan, more than those of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, your ancestors. W. Lowth.

—— thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite.] Those are said to be our parents, in the Scripture dialect, whose manners we resemble: see ver. 45 of this chapter; John viii. 44. There is an expression of the same import in the History of Susanna, ver. 56, that seems to be copied from this text, "O thou seed of Canaan, and not of Juda, beauty hath deceived thee, and lust hath perverted thine heart." W. Lowth. It is the language of indignation and reproof. Abp. Newcome. See the note on Job xxx. 29.

6. — in the day thou wast born] The forlorn condition of the Israelites in Egypt is here described under the similitude of a newborn infant, exposed in its native filthiness, without any friend to pity its condition, or to take the least care of it. W. Lowth, Bp. Hall.

—— not salted at all,] Galen says, that by rubbing a small quantity of salt upon a newborn infant, the skin is rendered thicker and more solid. Abp. Newcome.

5. — but thou wast cast out in the open field,] Every one knows the barbarous custom which prevailed among the ancients, of exposing their children on account of poverty, or some natural defect. This inhuman practice was not permitted among the Hebrews: but Ezekiel alludes to it here, as a thing common and well known amongst other nations. Calmet.

6. — when thou wast in thy blood,] Whilst as yet nobody took so much care of thee, as to wash thee from thy native filthiness, ver. 4, I took pity on thee, as a traveller that passes by and sees an infant lie exposed; and I provided all things necessary for thy support. W. Lowth.

7. I have caused thee to multiply &c.] For multitude the people are compared to the numberless buds of the herb; for flourishing they are like the bud in the beauty of its spring: and both include the goodness and richness of the land they dwelt in. Poole.

—— and thou art come to excellent ornaments:] As jewels and rich vestments set off a beautiful person, so the successes in enterprises, rich returns in merchandise, and fruitfulness of the country itself, were the lustre of thy beauty, which all thy neighbours courted: thou wast adorned with the choicest blessings of Divine Providence. Poole.

8. — thy time was the time of love;] When I rejoiced in thee, and espoused thee to be My wife. Poole.

—— I spread my skirt over thee,] See Ruth iii. 9. I took thee under My protection, as a husband doth the wife. W. Lowth.

9. Then washed I thee with water; &c.] The allegory is here continued, and declares what more was done to prepare this virgin for advancement by this marriage covenant. The Prophet

Before CHRIST 594.

I throughly washed away thy † blood from thee, and I anointed thee with oil.

10 I clothed thee also with broidered work, and shod thee with badgers' skin, and I girded thee about with fine linen, and I covered thee with silk.

11 I decked thee also with ornaments, and I put bracelets upon thy hands, and a chain on thy neck.

12 And I put a jewel on thy forehead, and earrings in thine ears, and a beautiful crown upon thine head.

13 Thus wast thou decked with gold and silver; and thy raiment was of fine linen, and silk, and broidered work; thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oil: and thou wast exceeding beautiful, and thou didst prosper into a kingdom.

14 And thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty: for it was perfect through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord GOD.

15 ¶ But thou didst trust in thine own beauty, and playedst the harlot because of thy renown, and pouredst out thy fornications on every one that passed by; his it was.

16 And of thy garments thou didst take, and deckedst thy high places with divers colours, and playedst the harlot thereupon: the like things shall not come, neither shall it be so.

17 Thou hast also taken thy fair jewels of my gold and of my silver, which I had given thee, and madest to thyself images † of men, and didst commit whoredom with them,

Before CHRIST 594.

18 And tookest thy broidered garments, and coveredst them: and thou hast set mine oil and mine incense before them.

† Heb. of a male.

19 My meat also which I gave thee, fine flour, and oil, and honey, wherewith I fed thee, thou hast even set it before them for † a sweet savour: and thus it was, saith the Lord GOD.

20 Moreover thou hast taken thy sons and thy daughters, whom thou hast borne unto me, and these hast thou sacrificed unto them † to be devoured. Is this of thy whoredoms a small matter,

21 That thou hast slain my children, and delivered them to cause them to pass through the fire for them?

22 And in all thine abominations and thy whoredoms thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, when thou wast naked and bare, and wast polluted in thy blood.

23 And it came to pass after all thy wickedness, (woe, woe unto thee! saith the Lord GOD;)

24 That thou hast also built unto thee an ‖ eminent place, and hast made thee an high place in every street.

25 Thou hast built thy high place at every head of the way, and hast made thy beauty to be abhorred, and hast opened thy feet to every one that passed by, and multiplied thy whoredoms.

probably alludes to a very ancient custom among the Eastern people, of purifying virgins who were soon to be espoused: see Esth. ii. 12. Poole. I added every thing that could contribute to thy beauty and ornament. The anointing with oil was an essential part in a festival dress, Ruth iii. 3; Isai. lxi. 3; Matt. vi. 17. W. Lowth.

10. — and shod thee with badgers' skin, &c.] This and the following verses allude to those parts of women's dress, which serve not only for use, but for ornament; and represent the varieties of wealth, luxury, and honour, which were bestowed by God upon the Jewish people. W. Lowth.

—— badgers' skin,] See note at Exod. xxv. 5: and respecting the shoes worn, see note at Cant. vii. 1.

12. — a jewel on thy forehead,] The same which is called a "nose jewel," Is. iii. 21. See note at Gen. xxiv. 22.

—— and a beautiful crown upon thine head.] Crowns or garlands were used in times of publick rejoicing; from whence is derived that expression of St. Paul, a "crown of rejoicing," 1 Thess. ii. 19. Virgins were sometimes adorned with crowns: see Baruch vi. 9: and such ornaments were commonly put on the heads of persons newly married. W. Lowth.

13. — thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oil:] Thy country afforded all manner of plenty and delicacies. W. Lowth.

14. And thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty:] Thy name was great and honoured among the most distant nations, for the prosperity of thy country, the riches of thy merchants, the abundance of thy peace, the excellent form of thy civil government and its laws, and the holiness, purity, and truth of thy religion. Poole.

15. — and playedst the harlot &c.] Hast yielded over thyself to the spiritual fornications of all the nations round about thee. Bp. Hall.

16. And of thy garments thou didst take, &c.] Those ornaments of wit, of strength, of wealth, which I had bestowed upon thee, thou hast turned to the countenancing and furtherance of gross idolatries. Bp. Hall.

—— the like things shall not come,] Such things have never before been, and shall never be again, without bringing down My vengeance upon the authors of them. Calmet.

17. — images of men,] Images of deified heroes. W. Lowth. See chap. xxiii. 14, 15. Probably the Prophet might have intended in this passage an allusion to those obscene figures which were carried in the ceremonies of Tammuz or Adonis. Calmet.

20. — thy sons and thy daughters,] See notes at Lev. xviii. 21; Deut. xviii. 10.

25. Thou hast built thy high place at every head of the way, &c.] These and the following expressions allude to the practices of common harlots, who used to frequent the most publick places to allure passengers to them: see Prov. ix. 14, 15: idolatry being in this chapter and elsewhere compared to fornication. W. Lowth. See Is. lvii. 5; Jer. ii. 23, 24. See notes at Deut. xii. 2.

28 Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, because thou wast unsatiable; yea, thou hast played the harlot with them, and yet couldest not be satisfied.

35 ¶ Wherefore, O harlot, hear the word of the LORD:

36 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thy filthiness was poured out, and thy nakedness discovered through thy whoredoms with thy lovers, and with all the idols of thy abominations, and by the blood of thy children, which thou didst give unto them;

37 Behold, therefore I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou hast taken pleasure, and all them that thou hast loved, with all them that thou hast hated; I will even gather them round about against thee, and will discover thy nakedness unto them, that they may see all thy nakedness.

26. — the Egyptians] They were remarkable for many gross idolatries; and the Jews had learnt to practise them. See chap. xx. 7, 8; Lev. xx. 3; Deut. xxix. 16, 17; Josh. xxiv. 14. Of all the idolatrous nations the Egyptians have exercised the greatest indecencies in their worship. Calmet.

27. — have diminished thine ordinary food,] I will abandon you like an adulteress. The law commanded that certain things should be given by husbands to their wives. See Exod. xxi. 10. God says, that He will take away all these things from His faithless spouse. Calmet.

—— and delivered thee unto the will &c.] As a punishment of the idolatries which king Ahaz introduced amongst you: see ver. 57; and 2 Chron. xxviii. 18, 19. "The daughters of the Philistines" are here put for the Philistines; as the daughters of Samaria, Sodom, and the Syrians, stand for the people of those places, ver. 46, 48, 57; to carry on the allegory and comparison between them and Jerusalem, being all of them described as so many lewd women prostituting themselves to idols: see ver. 41. By the same metaphor Samaria and Sodom are called sisters to Jerusalem, ver. 46. W. Lowth.

—— which are ashamed of thy lewd way.] Those have not forsaken the religion of their country, as you Jews have done; nor have been so fond of foreign idolatries. Compare chap. v. 7; Jer. ii. 11. W. Lowth. Or it means, that they were ashamed of the excess, to which their abominations were carried by the Jews.

30. How weak is thine heart,] Having neither strength of judgment to discern the truth and purity of religion, nor strength of resolution to hold fast to it. Poole.

—— imperious — woman;] No way restrained in thy licentiousness. Abp. Newcome.

31. — thine eminent place] See ver. 16, 24.

33. — but thou givest thy gifts &c.] The Jews are often upbraided for making leagues with idolaters, and courting their favours by presents, and by complying with their idolatries, Is. xxx. 6; lvii. 5—9. W. Lowth.

34. — whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms:] It is not meant, that no particular Gentile ever embraced the Jewish religion; but that no Gentile people took in any of its rites into their national worship. Bp. Warburton.

36. — by the blood of thy children,] See ver. 20; Jer. ii. 34.

37. — all thy lovers,] Thy allies.

—— with all them that thou hast hated;] Compare ver. 41. Such were Edom, Moab, and Ammon; who always bore a spite to the Jews, and insulted over their calamities, chap. xxv. 3, 6, 12. W. Lowth.

—— and will discover thy nakedness] I will put thee to shame and confusion before the faces of those which consorted with thee in thine idolatries. Bp. Hall. After the taking of Jerusalem, the shame of that unhappy city was fully seen. The enemy beat down, broke in pieces, and pillaged the idols, to which she had delivered herself: she then found too late the vanity of her hopes, and the absurdity of her worship. Calmet.

38. — as women that break wedlock] Adultery and idolatry, which is spiritual adultery, were both capital offences by the law, Lev. xx. 10; Deut xvii. 2, 7. Abp. Newcome.

42 So will I make my fury toward thee to rest, and my jealousy shall depart from thee, and I will be quiet, and will be no more angry.

43 Because thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, but hast fretted me in all these things; behold, therefore I also will recompense thy way upon thine head, saith the Lord GOD: and thou shalt not commit this lewdness above all thine abominations.

44 ¶ Behold, every one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, As is the mother, so is her daughter.

45 Thou art thy mother's daughter, that lotheth her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters, which lothed their husbands and their children: your mother was an Hittite, and your father an Amorite.

40. — and they shall stone thee with stones,] The ordinary punishment for adultery was stoning, John viii. 5. So the walls of the city of Jerusalem were beaten down with stones, flung out of battering engines. See Jer. xxxiii. 4. Calmet, W. Lowth.

41. — many women:] Many nations. The Syrians, Philistines, and other nations. W. Lowth.

—— thou also shalt give no hire any more.] Thou shalt not be able any more to give the hire of fornication to thy mercenary lovers. Bp. Hall.

42. — to rest,] I will reject you, and will think no more of you. Calmet.

43. — the days of thy youth,] The favours I conferred upon thee, and the covenants I made with thee in thy youth. Bp. Hall. See ver. 22.

44. Behold, every one that useth proverbs &c.] Thy notorious sins shall be the ordinary by-word of the world, who shall say, As is the mother Canaan, so is the daughter Judah. Bp. Hall.

45. Thou art thy mother's daughter, &c.] Like her in wickedness and sin: as she, so thou hast cast off thy God, and all that appertain unto Him. Bp. Hall.

—— which lothed] In imitation of which unnatural practice, thou hatest Me thy husband, and offerest thy children to idols. Abp. Newcome.

46. And thine elder sister is Samaria, &c.] Or the ten tribes of Israel. She, and those her daughter cities, that lie to the north; and thy younger sister that dwelleth to the south, is Sodom, and the cities appertaining unto her. Bp. Hall.

By Sodom, the Ammonites and Moabites seem here to be meant. These people, whose father Lot went out of Sodom, and whose country bordered upon the Dead sea, or the lake of Sodom, are called the younger sister of Jerusalem; partly because they were less in number than the Samaritans, and partly because they were more distant from Jerusalem than Samaria. Grotius, Calmet. Sodom was on the right, and Samaria was on the left: that is, the first was to the south, the second to the north. The Jews speak of the situation of places, upon the supposition that they stand with their faces to the east, and their backs to the west; the right hand will then be to the south, and the left to the north. The same way of speaking is still used in the ancient British, or Welsh language. Abp. Usher.

47. Yet hast thou not walked after their ways, &c.] Thou hast not contented thyself to do after their example; but, &c. Bp. Hall.

49. — this was the iniquity of — Sodom, &c.] We may learn from this passage of the Prophet, how odious in the sight of God are intemperance, vanity, and want of mercy to the poor. These reproaches may regard the ancient Sodomites less perhaps than the Moabites and the Ammonites of that day, who were extremely wicked and corrupted, as appears from Is. xvi. 6; Jer. xlviii. 29, 30; and xlix. 4. Calmet.

—— abundance of idleness] In places, where there is least work, the worst sins do most prevail: and idleness therefore is by the Prophet reckoned one of the three great sins of Sodom, perents of the rest. It seldom happens in any way of life, that a sluggard and a profligate do not go together, or that he, who is idle, is not also dissolute. Dr. Isaac Barrow.

51. — and hast justified thy sisters in all &c.] Thou hast made thy sister's wickedness to appear small in comparison of thine. Bp. Hall. The ingratitude of Jerusalem was greater than that of Samaria. God had placed His name in Jerusalem, and they forsook His worship, and profaned His temple, by placing idols in it; a degree of idolatry beyond any thing the ten tribes had been guilty of. W. Lowth.

52. — bear thine own shame] Expect to undergo the shame and judgment, which thy own greater and more abominable sins have deserved. Bp. Hall.

CHAP. XVII.

1 Under the parable of two eagles and a vine, 11 is shewed God's judgment upon Jerusalem for revolting from Babylon to Egypt. 22 God promiseth to plant the cedar of the gospel.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, about 594.

2 Son of man, put forth a riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of Israel;

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; A great eagle with great wings, longwinged,

53. When I shall bring again their captivity, &c.] The meaning is, When the fulness of the Gentiles shall come into the Church, (some of whom may be compared to Sodom for wickedness,) then will I also remember you who are My ancient people. The conversion of the Gentiles is expressed in Jeremiah by the returning of the captivity of Moab, Ammon, and Elam, chap. xlviii. 47; xlix. 6, 39; and by the Egyptians, Ethiopians, and Syrians, acknowledging themselves His servants in the prophecy of Isaiah, chap. xix. 24, 25; xxiii. 18. And by the same analogy we are to understand the returning of "the captivity of Sodom," here, of the Gentiles coming into the Church. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome. See below, verses 60—63, which seem to explain the sense of this passage.

54. That thou mayest bear thine own shame, &c.] In the mean time thou shalt bear the shame and punishment due to thy sins, and shalt be some sort of comfort to thy neighbours, in being a companion with them in punishment, as thou hast been in wickedness. W. Lowth.

56, 57. For thy sister Sodom &c. — Before thy wickedness was discovered,] These words should be joined together in the same verse or sentence. W. Lowth. "Thou never thoughtest of the judgment which I brought upon thy sister Sodom, while thou wert transported with thy security and pride; before that God, by His inflicted judgments, brought forth thy wickedness to the notice of the world; and before He made thee a reproach to the Syrians, and to the Philistines, and to the people adjoining; all which have despitefully insulted upon thee." Bp. Hall.

59. — in breaking the covenant,] The solemn oath you entered into to be My people, and to serve no other God besides, Deut. xxix. 12—14. W. Lowth.

60. Nevertheless I will remember my covenant &c.] The Lord, having denounced a perpetual punishment upon the stubborn impenitent body of the Jewish nation, here promises to the remnant, that they shall be remembered and obtain mercy by that covenant, which is announced in the concluding part of the chapter. Poole.

—— an everlasting covenant.] That of the Gospel. See Jer. xxxii. 40. W. Lowth.

61. — when thou shalt receive thy sisters,] See ver. 53, 55. Converted with thee to Christianity. Abp. Newcome. Thou, who didst not blush, whilst thou wast false to thine husband, shalt now with a deep shame remember and detest thy lewdness, when thou shalt admit thy sisters into communion with thee, or own them as members of the Church of Christ. Poole.

—— I will give them unto thee for daughters,] Jerusalem thus restored shall be a type of that heavenly Jerusalem, which is "the mother of us all," Gal. iv. 26. And even in the times of the Apostles there was a particular deference paid to the Church of Jerusalem, as the mother Church of the Christian world. See Rom. xv. 26, 27. Accordingly she is styled "the mother of all Churches," by the second general council, in their synodical Epistle: a title, which the Church of Rome now assumes, without any pretence from Scripture or antiquity. W. Lowth.

—— not by thy covenant.] But by the covenant under the Gospel. Bp. Hall, Abp. Newcome.

The Gentile nations, represented in this very remarkable prophecy by Sodom and Samaria, are become the daughters of Jerusalem by that new alliance, in which Jesus Christ has been graciously pleased to comprehend strangers together with His children, the Gentiles together with the Jews. Calmet.

62. And I will establish my covenant with thee,] With thee, O Israel, first; and then with the Gentiles, as thy children; with all the genuine children of Abraham, father of the faithful. Poole.

Chap. XVII. ver. 2. — a riddle,] Meaning, a continued allegory, or figurative speech. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 594.

verses. In more than one place, conquerors are represented under the figure of eagles, which are birds of prey, remarkable for their swiftness, Deut. xxviii. 49; Jer. iv. 13. W. Lowth. See the note on Jer. xlviii. 40.

Respecting the "cedar," see note at 1 Kings v. 6.

It seems there is a foundation in nature for joining the eagle and the cedars together. "We employed the rest of the day," says La Roque, (speaking of the spot where the cedars of Lebanon grew,) "in attentively surveying the beauties of this place, in measuring some of the cedars, and in cutting off many of their branches with their cones; which we sent away with a number of large eagle's feathers, which were found in the same place." Harmer.

4. — the top of his young twigs,] All their prime nobility and able soldiery. Bp. Hall.

—— a land of traffick:] Babylon is called a land of traffick, because in fact it was at that time the most celebrated place of all the East for commerce. Its situation possessed infinite advantages in this respect: the two rivers, the Tigris and Euphrates, and the Persian gulph, opened it a way into the richest and most distant countries. The vast extent of the dominions of Nebuchadnezzar afforded the greatest facilities to the journies of the merchant, and to the transport of merchandise; finally, the affluence of the people, and the riches of Babylon, attracted thither from all parts of the world a multitude of traders. Calmet.

Strabo takes notice, that the merchants who travelled by land to Babylon, went through the country of the Arabians, called Scenitæ: and vessels of great burden came up to the walls of it from the Persian gulph, by the Euphrates, as appears from Pliny. W. Lowth.

6. — of low stature, whose branches turned toward him, &c.] Alluding to the tributary state of Zedekiah, and to his subjection to the king of Babylon. Abp. Newcome.

7. — another great eagle] Pharaoh king of Egypt. This prince was also great and powerful, but less so than the king of Babylon. Calmet.

—— this vine did bend her roots toward him,] Zedekiah, weary of the yoke of Babylon, requested succour from the king of Egypt, thinking, under the protection of Egypt, to cast off the Babylonish yoke, and to set himself at liberty. For the event, see Jer. xxxvii. 4—7. Calmet.

—— that he might water it] That the king of Egypt might protect Zedekiah. Abp. Newcome.

8. It was planted in a good soil] The words are to the same purpose as ver. 5, to shew that Zedekiah's condition was so good under the king of Babylon, that he needed not to have broken his oath, out of a desire to better it; whereby he involved himself and his country in ruin, 2 Kings xxiv. 20. W. Lowth.

9. — even without great power] It is an effect which may be produced with ease, God being on the side of the Chaldeans. Abp. Newcome. In fact, the conquest of Jerusalem cost but little to the king of Babylon. Zedekiah made but a slight resistance; he fled during the night with a few of his people, and was taken in the desert of Jericho. Calmet.

10. — when the east wind toucheth it?] The Prophet compares the army of Nebuchadnezzar to a parching wind that blasts the fruits of the earth, withers the leaves of the trees, and makes every thing look naked and bare. See chap. xix. 12; Is. xxvii. S. W. Lowth.

13. And hath taken of the king's seed, &c.] Hath made Zedekiah swear an oath of fealty to him, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13. W. Lowth.

—— the mighty of the land:] As hostages, for performance of the covenant between him and Zedekiah. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 594.

15 But he rebelled against him in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, that they might give him horses and much people. Shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things? or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered?

16 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, surely in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king, whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake, even with him in the midst of Babylon he shall die.

17 Neither shall Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company make for him in the war, by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons:

18 Seeing he despised the oath by breaking the covenant, when, lo, he had given his hand, and hath done all these things, he shall not escape.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; As I live, surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath broken, even it will I recompense upon his own head.

[a] Chap. 12. 13. & 32. 3.

20 And I will [a] spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare, and I will bring him to Babylon, and will plead with him there for his trespass that he hath trespassed against me.

21 And all his fugitives with all his bands shall fall by the sword, and they that remain shall be scattered toward all winds: and ye shall know that I the LORD have spoken it.

22 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon an high mountain and eminent:

Before CHRIST about 594.

23 In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it: and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell.

24 And all the trees of the field shall know that I the LORD have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish: I the LORD have spoken and have done it.

CHAP. XVIII.

1 God reproveth the unjust parable of sour grapes. 5 He sheweth how he dealeth with a just father: 10 with a wicked son of a just father: 14 with a just son of a wicked father: 19 with a wicked man repenting: 24 with a just man revolting. 25 He defendeth his justice, 31 and exhorteth to repentance.

Before CHRIST 594.

THE word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

2 What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel, saying, The [a] fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge? [b] Jer. 31. 29.

3 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel.

4 Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die.

15. — that they might give him horses &c.] Cavalry for war. Egypt was a country which abounded in horses, of which there was a great scarcity in Judea. W. Lowth. See notes at Deut. xvii. 16.

16. — in the midst of Babylon he shall die.] See chap. xii. 13.

17. — by casting up mounts,] See Jer. xxxii. 24. It appears from Ezekiel, chap. xxx. 21, that there was a battle in which Pharaoh was beaten. Calmet.

18. — when, lo, he had given his hand,] See the notes on 2 Kings x. 15; 1 Chron. xxix. 24.

20. — spread my net] See chap. xii. 13.

21. — scattered] Some in Egypt, some in Chaldea, and others in different countries where chance, or rather the avenging hand of God, conducted them. Calmet.

22. — I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, &c.] I will at the last work out the delivery and redemption of My people; out of the seed of David, will I raise up the Messiah, and set him on high in My holy Church. Bp. Hall.

23. In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it:] Even in My glorious evangelical Church will I exalt His power; and he shall spread My Gospel, and enlarge His spiritual dominions all the world over; and all His elect shall shroud themselves under His grace and protection. Bp. Hall.

The holy mountain is often used by the Prophets to denote the Christian Church. W. Lowth.

24. And all the trees of the field shall know &c.] And all the people of the earth shall know, that I have brought down the proud and mighty tyrants of the world; and have exalted this meek and despised Saviour of mankind, above every name that is named in heaven and earth. Bp. Hall.

These circumstances, mentioned in ver. 22—24, can properly refer to no other than our Saviour Christ; who has collected in His Church, and under His empire, all the birds of heaven; that is, all those who have been able to elevate themselves above earthly things, by attaching themselves only to God through the profession and the practice of Christianity. W. Lowth, Bp. Hall, Calmet. Whereas the judgments threatened in this chapter might seem to indicate the utter extirpation of the seed of David, the Lord is here pleased to assure its continuance, and the raising of the Messiah from that house according to promise. Poole. And thus this prophecy, as well as that contained in the last chapter, closes its denunciation of woes with a striking passage relating to the kingdom of Christ.

Chap. XVIII. ver. 2. — concerning the land of Israel,] With respect to the desolations made in it by the sword, famine, and pestilence: chap. vi. 2, 3; and vii. 2. W. Lowth.

—— The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge?] The Chaldee Paraphrase explains the proverb rightly: "The fathers have sinned, and the sons are smitten:" see the notes on Exod. xx. 5; Deut. v. 9: also on Jer. xxxi. 29, 30.

4. — all souls are mine;] All persons and their lives. I will deal with them without prejudice or partiality. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

6. — eaten upon the mountains, &c.] Feasted on the sacrifices there offered to false gods, chap. vi. 2, 13. Abp. Newcome. Eating part of the sacrifice was properly maintaining communion with the idol to whom it was offered. W. Lowth.

—— neither hath lifted up his eyes] In prayer and adoration. Abp. Newcome.

7. — hath restored to the debtor his pledge,] God commanded the Jews not to detain any pledge they took from a poor man all night; which was in effect to enjoin them to lend to the poor without either pawn or usury. See Exod. xxii. 25, 26; Deut. xxiv. 12, 13. W. Lowth.

8. — upon usury,] See Deut. xxiii. 19, 20, in which it appears, that usury was permitted towards strangers. We may therefore conclude, that taking increase or interest may be agreeable to justice, if duly circumstanced. Every kind and degree of usury was forbidden to the Israelites amongst each other, to promote a spirit of mutual kindness: but this law was peculiar to them. Abp. Newcome. Oppressive usury to the poor may be here meant, because it is joined with violence and want of charity. W. Lowth.

9. — he shall surely live,] By life is meant, in the Old Testament, all that happiness which is contained in the literal sense of the promises belonging to that covenant; and under these were comprehended the promises of a better life, wherein God will bestow upon His servants the peculiar marks of His favour. W. Lowth.

13. — his blood shall be upon him.] His destruction is owing wholly to himself. See chap. xxxiii. 4. W. Lowth.

19. Yet say ye, Why? doth not the son &c.] The Jews still appealed to their own experience, as the ground of their complaint, mentioned ver. 2. God replies, that now every man shall bear his own burden. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

20. The soul that sinneth, it shall die.] The people, whom Ezekiel addressed, presumptuously complained that they were punished for the sins of their forefathers, though in truth they had merited their captivity by persisting in evil. God therefore, very consistently with His former declarations, here announces by the Prophet His purpose to make such distinction between the righteous and the wicked, that each man should be sensible of having deserved his sufferings. And he assures the people, with especial reference to eternal punishment, that "the soul that sinned should die," and that "the son should not bear the iniquity of his father:" that each should be responsible only for his own conduct. Dr. Grey.

21. But if the wicked will turn &c.] See the note from Bp. Sanderson on chap. xxxiii. 14.

[1] Chap. 33. 11. 23 [1] Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord GOD: and *not that he should return from his ways, and live?

24 ¶ But when the righteous turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and doeth according to all the abominations that the wicked man doeth, shall he live? All his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned: in his trespass that he hath trespassed, and in his sin that he hath sinned, in them shall he die.

[k] Chap. 33. 20. 25 ¶ Yet ye say, [k] The way of the LORD is not equal. Hear now, O house of Israel; Is not my way equal? are not your ways unequal?

26 When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die.

27 Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive. Before CHRIST 594.

28 Because he considereth, and turneth away from all his transgressions that he hath committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

29 Yet saith the house of Israel, The way of the LORD is not equal. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal?

30 Therefore I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord GOD. [l] Repent, and turn ‖ yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin. [l] Matt. 3. 2. ‖ Or, others.

31 ¶ Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a [m] new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel? [m] Jer. 32. 39. chap. 11. 19 & 36. 26.

32 For [n] I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord GOD: wherefore turn ‖ yourselves, and live ye. [n] Chap. 33. 11. 2 Pet. 3. 9. ‖ Or, others.

23. Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die?] That those which are now wicked should die everlastingly? Is it not rather My desire that men should repent, and that the repentant should live? Is not this the sum of My Gospel, which I send into the world? Do not I call, and cry, and sue to men, that they would return from their sins, and be saved? Bp. Hall. In conformity to this, St. Paul instructs us, that "God would have all men to be saved," and is "not willing that any should perish," 1 Tim. ii. 4; 2 Pet. iii. 9. W. Lowth.

24. — All his righteousness that he hath done &c.] Such an one sins against a clearer light, and greater convictions, and is withal guilty of ingratitude, in doing despite unto the Spirit of grace. "It had been better for him not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after he hath known it, to turn from the holy commandment," 2 Pet. ii. 21. W. Lowth.

25. Yet ye say, The way of the Lord is not equal.] Why? Because He punishes the children for the fathers: for this is the subject of the chapter. God had already answered this complaint: see ver. 5, 9, &c. Here He gives another reason to justify His conduct; namely, that those very persons who complain that "The way of the Lord is not equal," and "our fathers have eaten sour grapes, and our teeth are set on edge;" these Jews themselves are culpable in many ways, and have well deserved to be found guilty. "Are not your ways unequal?" Calmet.

26, 27. When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, &c.] It is an opinion that prevails among the Jews even *till this day, that at the day of judgment a considerable number of good actions shall overbalance men's evil ones. See chap. xxxiii. 13. So they thought it a hard case for a man who had been righteous the far greater part of his life, if he did at last commit iniquity, that his former righteousness should avail him nothing. In opposition to this doctrine God here declares, that a righteous man sinning, and not repenting, should die in his sins; and that a wicked man, upon his repentance, should save his soul alive. W. Lowth.

30. — every one according to his ways,] You complain of the partiality of My providence, therefore will I be indeed impartial to you, and deal with you according to your deserts: you demand justice, and you shall have it; but remember that it will descend in punishment. Since you call Me so strictly to account, I will be strict and exact in My reckoning with you: "I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord God." Dr. Ogden.

31. — and make you a new heart &c.] The Prophets often exhort the Jews to an inward purity and holiness, thereby to take them off from relying upon an outward legal righteousness, and an exactness in the observance of the ritual parts of the law. By thus instructing them in a more excellent way of serving God, than the ceremonial law did directly prescribe, they prepared their minds for receiving those truths which the Gospel would more fully discover. God promises (chap. xxxvi. 26) to "give them a new heart," and to "put within them a new spirit;" here He exhorts them to make themselves a new heart, and a new spirit. Which difference of expression is thus to be reconciled, that although God works in us to will and to do, and is the first Mover in our reformation, yet we must work together with His grace, at least willingly receive it, and not quench or resist its motions. W. Lowth.

The repentance, to which God here joins the promise of pardon, is that which withdraws a man from sin, and leads him, as is often repeated in this chapter, to repair the evil he has done by restitution, and by all other possible means. In a word, the Lord declares, there is no repentance effectual, but that which produces by God's grace a new heart, and a change of inclinations, followed by actual amendment, reformation, and future holiness of life. Ostervald.

32. For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth,] The Holy Scriptures in general expressly declare, that the good and gracious God was from the beginning, and is still, using the best, fittest, and wisest means to render all His creatures, one as well as another, blessed and happy: and if any of them; through their own selfwilled obstinacy and perverseness, miss of these joys, it will be greatly contrary to His inclination and desire. Thus when Adam was in paradise, the good God kindly cautioned him against the danger of disobedience. And when man by transgression fell, He immediately comforted him, by telling him of the remedy He had prepared for his reconciliation and recovery, even the Seed of the woman, which was to "bruise the serpent's head; that Seed, in whom all the nations of the earth were to be blessed; and who, in the fulness of time, was to "give His life a ransom for many," to "taste death for every man." And in consequence of this first promise, how gracious, yea, how compassionate, is the tenour of every declaration, which He made from time to time on this head. "Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God: and not that he should return from his ways, and live? Make you a new heart

Before CHRIST 594.

1 A lamentation for the princes of Israel, under the parable of lions' whelps taken in a pit, 10 and for Jerusalem, under the parable of a wasted vine.

594. MOREOVER take thou up a lamentation for the princes of Israel,

2 And say, What is thy mother? A lioness: she lay down among lions, she nourished her whelps among young lions.

3 And she brought up one of her whelps: it became a young lion, and it learned to catch the prey; it devoured men.

4 The nations also heard of him; he was taken in their pit, and they brought him with chains unto the land of [a] Egypt.

[a] 2 Kings 23. 11. Jer. 22. 11.

5 Now when she saw that she had waited, and her hope was lost, then she took another of her whelps, and made him a young lion.

6 And he went up and down among the lions, he became a young lion, and learned to catch the prey, and devoured men.

7 And he knew ‖ their desolate palaces, and he laid waste their cities; and the land was desolate, and the fulness thereof, by the noise of his roaring.

8 Then the nations set against him on every side from the provinces, and spread their net over him: he was taken in their pit. Before CHRIST 594.

9 And they put him in ward ‖ in chains, and brought him to the king of Babylon: they brought him into holds, that his voice should no more be heard upon the mountains of Israel. ‖ Or, in hooks.

10 ¶ Thy mother is like a vine ‖ in thy blood, planted by the waters: she was fruitful and full of branches by reason of many waters. ‖ Or, in thy pattern, or, in thy likeness.

11 And she had strong rods for the sceptres of them that bare rule, and her stature was exalted among the thick branches, and she appeared in her height with the multitude of her branches.

12 But she was plucked up in fury, she was cast down to the ground, and the [b] east wind dried up her fruit: her strong rods were broken and withered; the fire consumed them. [b] Hosea 13. 15.

13 And now she is planted in the wilderness, in a dry and thirsty ground.

14 And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, which hath devoured her fruit, so that she hath no strong rod to be a sceptre to rule. This is a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation.

and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel?" Why will ye die, O sons of Adam? seeing that God would have all men to be saved, and is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. Dean Tucker. See the note on chap. xxxiii. 11.

Chap. XIX. ver. 1. — take thou up a lamentation &c.] Sing a funeral dirge for the princes of Israel. Compare chap. xxvi. 17; xxvii. 2. W. Loveth.

2. — A lioness.] An allusion to Gen. xlix. 9. Grotius. Judea was among the nations, like a lioness among the beasts of the forest. She had strength and sovereignty. Abp. Newcome. Or, perhaps, on account of her ferocious and cruel disposition: see chap. vii. 23; Jer. xxii. 17. W. Loveth.

3. — one of her whelps:] See ver. 6. Jehoahaz the son of Josiah is meant: whom Pharaoh-necho put in bands, and took into Egypt, 2 Kings xxiii. 33, 34. He followed not the good example of his father Josiah. W. Loveth, Abp. Newcome.

4. — in their pit,] Like a lion who is taken in a pitfall covered with earth and branches, that he may fall into it in passing over. Calmet.

The Arabs dig a pit where the lions are observed to enter the inclosures for cattle, and covering it slightly with reeds or small branches of trees, they frequently decoy and catch them. The practice is alluded to in this passage. Dr. Shaw.

5. — her hope was lost,] The object of her hope, Jehoahaz, detained in Egypt. Abp. Newcome.

—— another of her whelps,] She set up another of the seed royal, even Jehoiakim the son of Josiah. Bp. Hall. Pharaoh seems to have made this appointment with the joint consent of the people: the younger brother had been set up without the participation of Pharaoh. W. Loveth.

6. — he went up and down among the lions, &c.] He ruled fiercely and wickedly among his people, and followed those courses of oppression and violence, which his brother had led him into. See Jer. xxii. 13—17; xxxvii. 2. Bp. Hall.

7. — he knew their desolate palaces,] He made himself master of the riches and pleasant seats of the great men of the land. W. Loveth.

8. — set against him] See 2 Kings xxiv. 2.

9. — that his voice should no more be heard upon the mountains of Israel.] The words allude to a lion's seeking his prey upon the mountains. W. Loveth.

10. Thy mother is like a vine in thy blood,] Like a vine in the time of her first peaceable plantation. Bp. Hall. See the margin.

—— planted by the waters:] This circumstance is mentioned of the vine, chap. xvii. 8. Abp. Newcome. In a very fruitful soil. Poole. Compare ver. 16; and see Ps. i. 3; Jer. xvii. 8.

11. — strong rods for the sceptres of them that bare rule,] From her sprung sovereign princes, who were themselves very powerful, and made their people appear considerable among their neighbours. A rod or sceptre is an emblem of authority. W. Loveth.

—— among the thick branches,] Of other trees. In several countries they join the vines to trees, about which they wind themselves and run very high. Michaelis.

12. But she was plucked up in fury,] God in His anger removed her out of her land. Compare Jer. xii. 14. W. Loveth.

13. And now she is planted in the wilderness, &c.] Her people are carried captive and planted like a vine in a foreign and a barren soil. Bp. Hall, Abp. Newcome.

14. And fire is gone out of a rod of her branches, &c.] Signifying that Zedekiah's breaking his oath of fealty to the king of Babylon, hath been the occasion of the utter destruction of the royal family, and the entire ruin of the government. W. Loveth, Bp. Hall.

—— This is a lamentation, and shall be for a lamentation.] Ezekiel composed this lamentation five years before the destruction of Jerusalem actually took place. He here predicts, that it should be remembered, and that it should be sung by future generations. Calmet.

CHAP. XX.

1 God refuseth to be consulted by the elders of Israel. 5 He sheweth the story of their rebellions in Egypt, 10 in the wilderness, 27 and in the land. 33 He promiseth to gather them by the gospel. 45 Under the name of a forest he sheweth the destruction of Jerusalem.

about 592. AND it came to pass in the seventh year, in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month, that certain of the elders of Israel came to enquire of the LORD, and sat before me.

2 Then came the word of the LORD unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Are ye come to enquire of me? As I live, saith the Lord GOD, I will not be enquired of by you.

‖ Or, plead for them. [a] Chap. 22. 2. & 23. 36.

4 Wilt thou ‖ [a] judge them, son of man, wilt thou judge them? cause them to know the abominations of their fathers:

‖ Or, sware: and so ver. 6, &c. [b] Exod. 3. 8. & 4. 31.

5 ¶ And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the day when I chose Israel, and ‖ lifted up mine hand unto the seed of the house of Jacob, and made myself [b] known unto them in the land of Egypt, when I lifted up mine hand unto them, saying, I am the LORD your God;

6 In the day that I lifted up mine hand unto them, to bring them forth of the land of Egypt into a land that I had espied for them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands:

7 Then said I unto them, Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes, and defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

8 But they rebelled against me, and would not hearken unto me: they did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt: then I said, I will pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt.

See ver. 30 of this chapter, and chap. xxxviii. 17: the phrase is properly rendered by our translators, 2 Sam. xxiii. 17: and see 1 Sam. ii. 27; and the note there. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

9. But I wrought for my name's sake,] This is elsewhere assigned as the reason why God did not punish the Israelites according to their deserts; namely, because it would turn to God's dishonour in the heathen world; as if He were not able to make good those gracious promises He had given them; see chap. xxxvi. 21, 22; Exod. xxxii. 12; Numb. xiv. 13. This was a proper consideration to check the vain presumption of the Jews, who imagined that God's gracious dealings were owing to their own desires; see ver. 44 of this chapter, and chap. xxxvi. 22. W. Lowth. See the note on Jer. xiv. 7.

18. But I said unto their children in the wilderness,] This refers to the many pathetical exhortations contained in the Book of

Before CHRIST 593. your fathers, neither observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their idols:

19 I am the LORD your God; walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them;

20 And hallow my sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the LORD your God.

21 Notwithstanding the children rebelled against me: they walked not in my statutes, neither kept my judgments to do them, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; they polluted my sabbaths: then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the wilderness.

22 Nevertheless I withdrew mine hand, and wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen, in whose sight I brought them forth.

23 I lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness, that I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries;

24 Because they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and their eyes were after their fathers' idols.

25 Wherefore I gave them also statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they should not live;

26 And I polluted them in their own gifts, in that they caused to pass [b] through the fire all that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate, to the end that they might know that I am the LORD. Before CHRIST 593. [b] Chap. 16. 21.

27 ¶ Therefore, son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Yet in this your fathers have blasphemed me, in that they have [†] committed a trespass against me. [†] Heb. trespassed a trespass.

28 For when I had brought them into the land, for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to them, then they saw every high hill, and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the provocation of their offering: there also they made their sweet savour, and poured out there their drink offerings.

29 Then [‖] I said unto them, What is the high place whereunto ye go? And the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day. [‖] Or. I told them what the high place was, or, Bamah.

30 Wherefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers? and commit ye whoredom after their abominations?

31 For when ye offer your gifts, when ye make your sons to pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day: and shall I be enquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I

Deuteronomy, particularly those in chap. xxix, xxx, xxxi, and xxxii, which were uttered after that rebellious generation were all consumed, as God had threatened them, (see Numb. xiv. 32. 33; xxvi. 64, 65,) and were designed as warnings to succeeding generations, Deut. xxxi. 16—21. W. Lowth.

25. Wherefore I gave them also statutes that were not good,] God intended not here His own statutes and judgments, but the idolatrous statutes and judgments, the corrupt principles and practices, of the heathen nations, to which He sometimes gave up and abandoned His own people, because they first deserted and abandoned Him. This is the sense given to the passage by the Targum of Jonathan, and in the speech of St. Stephen in the New Testament, Acts vii. 42; and the context points to the same interpretation; for that this is its true sense appears chiefly from this, that God here describes these statutes and judgments by characters directly opposite to those He gives of His own in the same chapter. For it appears from ver. 11, 13, 21, and other passages, that the chief distinction of God's own law was that a man "should live in them;" whereas He expressly says of these, that they were statutes and judgments, whereby "they should not live." Also, at ver. 18, we have mention of statutes and of judgments, (the same words in the Hebrew as in this verse,) yet not meaning God's statutes and judgments, but the corrupt customs and manners of their idolatrous ancestors, such as God permitted or gave them up to, because they chose them, as is intimated in ver. 25. The original word for "give," is frequently used in the permissive sense; and therefore "I gave them" in this verse may amount to no more than "I suffered such things." Vitringa, Dr. Waterland, W. Lowth, Dr. Berriman. See also Ps. lxxxi. 12; Rom. i. 24.

26. — I polluted them in their own gifts, in that they caused to pass through the fire &c.] This sufficiently intimates what kind of statutes and judgments God was just before speaking of; namely, the rites and practices of the heathen, whereby God polluted them, that is, gave them up to their own hearts' lusts, to defile and pollute themselves. The Israelites had provoked God many ways, and more especially by their frequent idolatries; and therefore God gave them up to the vilest and most deplorable idolatry of all; namely, that of offering up their children as burnt offerings to Moloch. Vitringa, Dr. Waterland.

—— that I might make them desolate, &c.] The consequence of which was, that they would be exposed to My anger, and at length would acknowledge My hand in the judgments inflicted on them. Abp. Newcome.

28. — then they saw every high hill, &c.] They cast their eyes upon those hills and groves whereon the heathen had been wont to offer their idolatrous sacrifices; and there, contrary to My commandments, they made their sinful oblations to provoke Me to wrath. Bp. Hall.

29. — What is the high place &c.] What mean you that ye go to the high place? Should you not go to the altar of God, and bring your sacrifices to the temple, instead of leaving My temple and the service I prescribed, and in other places unrequired doing supposed duties? Poole.

—— And the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day.] The words probably refer to some noted high place, which the Jews frequented to perform their idolatrous worship. W. Lowth. The very word told them their wickedness, that they acted against the express will of God, and framed themselves to the idolatries of the nations. Poole.

32. — that which cometh into your mind shall not be at all, &c.] The Jews had all along a fond desire of worshipping the gods of their neighbours, and could not bear that imputation of singularity, to which their peculiar way of worship exposed them. They thought likewise, by worshipping the gods of the heathen, to live more undisturbedly among them; but God tells them here, that He will prevent this purpose of their's from taking effect. W. Lowth.

33. — surely with a mighty hand, &c.] I will no longer try to reclaim you by the gentle methods of patience and forbearance, but will govern you, as masters do rebellious servants, by stripes and corrections, and thus cure you of your hankering after heathen customs and idolatries. W. Lowth.

34. And I will bring you out from the people, &c.] You would have Me abandon you for ever, as the nations whom I suffer to go on quietly in their wrong; but I will punish you, and retain you in your allegiance to Me. Calmet.

35. And I will bring you into the wilderness of the people, &c.] I will bring you into the desert land of your captivity under the heathen, and there will I argue this case with you: laying before you those offences wherewith you have justly provoked Me. Bp. Hall. The phrase alludes to the wilderness, through which the Jews passed in their way to Canaan, in order to the trial of the obedient, and the destruction of the rebellious. W. Lowth.

37. — under the rod,] Both of correction and guidance. Bp. Hall.

—— into the bond of the covenant:] And I will recall you to the memory and recognition of that bond and mutual covenant which has been made between us. Bp. Hall.

Or, "I will bring you into the discipline of my covenant;" that is, bring you into the chastisement due for breaking My covenant, Lev. xxvi. 25. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

38. — will purge out] I will separate the righteous from the wicked; see ver. 37. This may be understood of the captive Israelites in Chaldea and Babylon; God well knew how to distinguish among the captives, the just from the unjust. He will bring back the former into their country, and will disperse the latter into every part of the world. The passage may have further reference to the Jews who rejected our Saviour; they have been driven from their country, and have not reentered the land of Israel. Calmet.

39. — Go ye,] A permission, full of indignation and rebuke. W. Lowth. See the notes on Numb. xxii. 20; 2 Kings ii. 17, 18.

40. For in mine holy mountain, &c.] But for you, who are the true spiritual seed of faithful Israel, you shall all serve Me in My holy Church, and I will both expect and graciously accept of those services and devotions which ye shall offer unto Me. Bp. Hall.

—— all of them in the land,] All of the house of Israel that are restored shall serve Me; there shall be no separation of tribes. Abp. Newcome.

—— your offerings, and the firstfruits of your oblations,] The Prophet here expresses the Christian worship by those religious oblations which were proper to his own time; as the other Prophets frequently describe the state of the Christian Church by representations taken from the Jewish temple and service, Is. xix. 19; lvi. 7; lx. 7; lxvi. 23. W. Lowth.

43. — and ye shall lothe yourselves!] See chap. vi. 9; xvi. 63.

44. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, &c.] As in the height of God's vengeance on the sins of this wretched people, the distant prospect always terminated in a mercy; so with a mercy and a promise of better times the whole of this prophetick scene is closed, in order that those, to whom it is addressed, should, however criminal, not be left in an utter state of desperation, but be afforded some shadow of repose in the prospect of future peace and tranquillity. The idea of mercy is naturally attached to that of repentance and reformation; and with mercy the prophecy ends. Bp. Warburton.

CHAP. XXI.

1 Ezekiel prophesieth against Jerusalem with a sign of sighing. 8 The sharp and bright sword, 18 against Jerusalem, 25 against the kingdom, 28 and against the Ammonites.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, and drop thy word toward the holy places, and prophesy against the land of Israel, Before CHRIST 592.

3 And say to the land of Israel, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, I am against thee, and will draw forth my sword out of his sheath, and will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked.

4 Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall my sword go forth out of his sheath against all flesh from the south to the north:

5 That all flesh may know that I the LORD have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath: it shall not return any more.

6 Sigh therefore, thou son of man, with the breaking of thy loins; and with bitterness sigh before their eyes.

7 And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt answer, For the tidings; because it cometh: and every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees † shall be weak as water: behold, it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord GOD.

† Heb. shall go into water.

8 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD; Say, A sword, a sword is sharpened, and also furbished:

10 It is sharpened to make a sore slaughter; it is furbished that it may glitter: should we then make mirth? ‖ it contemneth the rod of my son, as every tree.

‖ Or, it is the rod of my son, it despiseth every tree.

45. Moreover the word &c.] The next chapter should have begun here; as what is contained in the 21 and following verses of that chapter is an explanation of what is included in the latter part of this. Grotius, Houbigant.

46. — the forest of the south &c.] Ezekiel was in the northern part of Chaldea, and therefore Judea was to the south of him. Abp. Secker supposes, that a city is called a forest, rather from its inhabitants than its buildings. In this verse there are three Hebrew words for the "south." Abp. Newcome.

47. — every green tree &c.] The righteous as well as the wicked, see chap. xxi. 3. Many of these two classes were alike to be led into captivity; though in other respects a great difference was made between them. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

—— and all faces from the south to the north] From one end of the land to the other. The length of Judah lay north and south. Poole.

49. — Doth he not speak parables?] They complain of the obscurity of my prophecies. Bp. Hall. God therefore commands him, chap. xxi. to utter plainly what, ver. 47, 48, he was here instructed to deliver parabolically. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

The foregoing chapter presents us with a detail of the favours, conferred by God upon the Jews; of their ingratitude for His blessings, and insensibility to His warnings; and of the severe judgments, which were for this reason to overtake them. God has done infinitely more for us than for the Jews; He has redeemed us by His only Son, our Lord Jesus Christ; He has given us the knowledge of His holy laws, by which we may obtain life; and the warnings, which He gives us, to induce us to serve and fear Him, are not less express, nor less frequent, than those addressed to His ancient people. If, after all, we fall into infidelity and disobedience, we shall be infinitely more criminal than the Jews, and our punishment will be proportionally more severe. Outervald.

Chap. XXI. ver. 2. Son of man, set thy face] Without all parables I say unto thee plainly, "Set thy face toward Jerusalem." Bp. Hall.

—— set thy face, — drop thy word, — prophesy] These expressions are correspondent to those at chap. xx. 46. Abp. Newcome.

—— the holy places,] The temple and the several courts, which were holy in different degrees. Abp. Newcome.

3. — the righteous and the wicked.] A plain reference to the green tree and the dry, chap. xx. 47. I will sweep every man in the common destruction; the righteous will I remove to their advantage and glory; the wicked to their confusion. Bp. Hall.

5. — it shall not return any more.] Into its sheath; as the sense is more fully expressed, ver. 30; till it has executed My commands. W. Lowth. The sword of the king of Babylon is meant, the instrument of God's vengeance. Calmet.

6. Sigh therefore—with the breaking of thy loins;] Sigh so deeply and so strongly as to break thy girdle from thy loins, and by this sighing intimate unto them that great sorrow which is coming unto them. Bp. Hall. See Jer. xxiii. 9; Dan. vii. 28.

10. — it contemneth the rod of my son, as every tree.] It makes no distinction between the sceptre and common wood; between the branches of the royal family, whom I honoured with the title of My sons, (Ps. lxxxix. 26,) and the meanest of the people. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 598.

11 And he hath given it to be furbished, that it may be handled: this sword is sharpened, and it is furbished, to give it into the hand of the slayer.

11. — of the slayer.] Of the king of Babylon. W. Lowth.

12. — smite therefore upon thy thigh.] An action expressive of grief; compare chap. vi. 11; Jer. xxxi. 19; where see the note.

13. Because it is a trial,] A calamity. W. Lowth. The sense may be, "for the firmness of the sword has been proved; and what if it destroy not only the common branches, but even the rod of the sceptre?" Abp. Newcome.

—— it shall be no more,] The diadem and throne shall be no more; see ver. 27; the regal succession shall end in Zedekiah. Abp. Newcome.

14. — smite thine hands together,] A sign of grief, chap. vi. 11; of rage, Numb. xxiv. 10; of astonishment, chap. xxii. 13. But many think it here a gesture of encouragement to the victorious Chaldeans. Abp. Newcome.

—— and let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain:] The expression may mean no more than if the Prophet had said, "Let the stroke be repeated twice and thrice," that is, "oftentimes." So that phrase is used, Job xxxiii. 29, "All these things worketh God twice and thrice with man," where our translation very fitly expresses the sense "oftentimes." A form of speech, much like those elsewhere used; "For three transgressions, and for four," Amos i. 3. "Give a portion to seven, and also to eight," Eccles. xi. 2. W. Lowth.

"The sword of the slain" in this verse should probably be rendered "the sword of the soldiers," that is, of the Babylonians; and "the sword of the great men that are slain" should be "the sword of the great soldier," that is, of the warlike king of Babylon, for thus it is expressly called in the 19th verse, "the sword of the king of Babylon." Dr. Kennicott.

—— into their privy chambers.] Whither they went to hide themselves; see 1 Kings xxii. 25. W. Lowth.

15. — wrapped up.] In the scabbard, but sharpened and ready for slaughter. Calmet.

16. Go thee — either on the right hand, or on the left,] The words are addressed to the sword, which is directed to go through the land without restraint, to the south or to the north; these two quarters being expressed in the Hebrew language by the right and left; see chap. xxi. 46, and note. W. Lowth.

17. — my fury to rest:] See chap. v. 13; xxiv. 13.

19. — appoint thee two ways,] "Describe or paint two roads diverging from one." God foreshews His Prophet, that the king of Babylon, coming with his army into Syria, and finding that the Ammonites had entered into a confederacy with Egypt as well as Zedekiah, was in doubt against which of the two people he should first make war; and committed the decision of this matter to his arts of divination, described ver. 21. W. Lowth.

20. — to Rabbath] Or, Rabbah, chap. xxv. 5; the chief city of the Ammonites, 2 Sam. xii. 26; Jer. xlix. 2.

21. For the king of Babylon stood at the parting of the way, — to use divination: he made his arrows bright,] This way of divining by arrows is thus described by St. Jerome, in his commentary upon this place. "They wrote on several arrows the names of the cities they intended to assault, and then putting them all together promiscuously in a quiver, they drew them out thence as lots are drawn; and that city whose name was written on the arrow first drawn, was the city they first made war upon." W. Lowth.

—— he made his arrows bright,] Or rather, he mingled his arrows; which sense of the word agrees better with the description of this kind of divination given by St. Jerome. It is preferred by Dr. Pocock, who confirms this exposition from the Arabick use of the word, and also by Houbigant. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

Abp. Potter notices the practice among the Greeks, in which divination was made by arrows shaken together in a quiver. The method of divination practised by the idolatrous Arabs, but forbidden by the Koran, is too singular to be unnoticed. "Seven divining arrows were kept at the temple of Mecca; but generally in divination, the idolatrous Arabs made use of three only; on one was written, 'My lord hath commanded me;' on another, 'My lord hath forbidden me;' and the third was blank. If the first was drawn, they looked upon it as an approbation of the enterprise in question; if the second, they made a contrary conclusion; but if the third happened to be drawn, they mixed them and drew over again, till a decisive answer was given by one of the others." Abp. Newcome.

—— he consulted with images,] In Hebrew[d] "teraphim," which signifies all sorts of idols, principally of the human form, Hos. iii. 4; and it is apparent from several passages of Scripture, that they were consulted as oracles. Dr. E. Pocock. Gen. xxxi. 19; 1 Sam. xv. 23, &c.

—— he looked in the liver.] The practice of predicting the future by inspecting the fibres of the liver in an animal recently killed, was very common in antiquity. Grotius conjectures, that the Chaldæans communicated this superstitious custom to the Lydians, the Lydians to the Tuscans, and the Tuscans to the people of Italy. Calmet.

for Jerusalem, to appoint ‖† captains, to open the mouth in the slaughter, to lift up the voice with shouting, to appoint battering rams against the gates, to cast a mount, and to build a fort.

‖ Or, battering rams. † Heb. rams.

23 And it shall be unto them as a false divination in their sight, ‖ to them that have sworn oaths: but he will call to remembrance the iniquity, that they may be taken.

‖ Or, For it saith made unto them.

24 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are discovered, so that in all your doings your sins do appear; because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand.

25 ¶ And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end,

26 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high.

† Heb. Perverted, perverted, perverted, will I make it.

27 † I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him.

Before CHRIST 593.

28 ¶ And thou, son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach; even say thou, The sword, the sword is drawn: for the slaughter it is furbished, to consume because of the glittering:

29 Whiles they see vanity unto thee, whiles they divine a lie unto thee, to bring thee upon the necks of them that are slain, of the wicked, whose day is come, when their iniquity shall have an end.

30 ‖ Shall I cause it to return into his sheath? I will judge thee in the place where thou wast created, in the land of thy nativity.

‖ Or, Cause it to return.

31 And I will pour out mine indignation upon thee, I will blow against thee in the fire of my wrath, and deliver thee into the hand of ‖brutish men, and skilful to destroy.

‖ Or, burning.

32 Thou shalt be for fuel to the fire; thy blood shall be in the midst of the land; thou shalt be no more remembered: for I the LORD have spoken it.

divinations shew that he was to go to the right hand; that is, towards Jerusalem. Dathius. Supposing the face towards the east, the southern branch of the two roads, which was towards the right hand, led towards Jerusalem; for this city lay to the south of Rabbah. You must represent Nebuchadnezzar as coming from Dan, and marching along the Jordan. Here Rabbah was situated at the left hand, and Jerusalem at the right. Abp. Newcome, Michaelis.

In coming from beyond the Euphrates into Syria and Phenicia, they commonly took their journey through Damascus. They passed the Euphrates at Thapsacus; entered into Palestine by the plain of Libanus, under mount Hermon, and crossed the Jordan above the lake Semechonites. They did not come directly from Babylon through Arabia Deserta, the shortest rout, on account of the sterility of the country. Calmet.

Though the manner, which the king of Babylon chose to determine him what course to take, was such, yet God was pleased so to direct it, that he turned first against Jerusalem. God governs all things by His providence: He ever presides over such events, as we imagine to depend upon mere chance; and, generally speaking, over the actions of men: so that men, without knowing it, become the instruments of executing what He has resolved to do or permit. Ortervald.

—— to appoint captains, to open the mouth in the slaughter,] Whose office it was to encourage the army to fall upon the enemy and destroy them. W. Lowth.

23. And it shall be unto them as a false divination] But this process shall be unto the Jews, when some of their friends behold it, and report it at Jerusalem, as a deceitful lot, such as the event would not verify; it shall even appear so to the Jews, who had sworn false oaths to the Chaldeans, (2 Chron. xxxvi 13,) and ought therefore to have expected the Divine vengeance. But he (Nebuchadnezzar) is mindful of their perjury, and gladly turns his arms first against them, to revenge himself on them. Abp. Newcome.

25. And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel,] The words are addressed to king Zedekiah, whom the Prophet calls "profane" and "wicked," chiefly with respect to his breaking that solemn oath uttered in the name of God, whereby he had engaged himself to be tributary to the king of Babylon, chap. xvii. 19. W. Lowth.

26. — exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high.] As Zedekiah shall be brought down from his kingly dignity, so another branch of that family, namely, Christ, (see ver 27,) shall be advanced from an obscure original and low condition, to the supreme degree of sovereignty. W. Lowth.

27. I will overturn, — it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him.] This is a threat, that the kingdom should never recover its former glory and strength, but consume, till the sceptre should be quite taken away from Judah, and way be made for the Messiah, who is He that was to come, whose was the dominion, and to whom the Father would give it: so that the final desolation of the temporal kingdom of the seed of David is here threatened, and the eternal kingdom of the Messiah is promised. The triple use of the word "overturn," expresses the certainty of the event. Poole.

28. And thou, son of man, &c.] In ver. 19, 20, Rabbath, the chief city of the Ammonites, was mentioned, as being in equal danger with Jerusalem. God here directs the Prophet to resume the subject of Rabbath, and to declare the ruin of it. Poole.

—— the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach;] They insulted over their brethren the Jews, for which they are often reproved very severely by the Prophets, and threatened with like judgments. See chap. xxv. 2—6; Zeph. ii. 8, 10. W. Lowth.

29. Whiles they see vanity unto thee, whiles they divine a lie &c.] While thy wizards feed thee with false predictions to stir thee up against those already miserable and distressed Israelites, against those wicked revolters from Me, whose judgment is now to be fully accomplished. Bp. Hall.

—— to bring thee upon the necks of them that are slain,] To add thee to the number of those who are slain in Judea, and make thy condition like theirs. W. Lowth, Calmet.

30. — in the land of thy nativity.] The Ammonites were destroyed in their own country. The Jewish nation was sent into captivity. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

31. — blow against thee] To melt thee, as it were, in the furnace. See chap. xxii. 20, 21. Abp. Newcome.

32. — thou shalt be no more remembered:] See chap. xxv. 10.

A catalogue of sins

CHAP. XXII.

Before CHRIST 593.

1 A catalogue of sins in Jerusalem. 18 God will burn them as dross in his furnace. 23 The general corruption of prophets, priests, princes, and people.

593. MOREOVER the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Now, thou son of man, [a] wilt thou ‖judge, wilt thou judge the † bloody city? yea, thou shalt † shew her all her abominations.

3 Then say thou, Thus saith the Lord GOD; The city sheddeth blood in the midst of it, that her time may come, and maketh idols against herself to defile herself.

4 Thou art become guilty in thy blood that thou hast [b] shed; and hast defiled thyself in thine idols which thou hast made; and thou hast caused thy days to draw near, and art come even unto thy years: therefore have I made thee a reproach unto the heathen, and a mocking to all countries.

[b] 2 Kings 21. 16.

5 Those that be near, and those that be far from thee, shall mock thee, which art † infamous and much vexed.

† Heb. polluted of name, much in vexation.

6 Behold, the princes of Israel, every one were in thee to their † power to shed blood.

† Heb. arm.

7 In thee have they set light by father and mother: in the midst of thee have they dealt by ‖ oppression with the stranger: in thee have they vexed the fatherless and the widow.

‖ Or, deceit.

8 Thou hast despised mine holy things, and hast profaned my sabbaths.

† Heb. men of slanders.

9 In thee are † men that carry tales to shed blood: and in thee they eat upon the mountains: in the midst of thee they commit lewdness.

Before CHRIST 593.

10 In thee have they [c] discovered their fathers' nakedness: in thee have they humbled her that was [d] set apart for pollution.

[c] Lev. 18. 8. & 20. 11. [d] Lev. 18. 19.

11 And ‖ one hath committed abomination with his neighbour's [e] wife; and ‖ another hath ‖ lewdly defiled his daughter in law; and another in thee hath humbled his [f] sister, his father's daughter.

‖ Or, every one. [e] Lev. 18. 20. Jer. 5. 8. ‖ Or, every one. [f] Or, by levitness. Lev. 18. 9.

12 In thee have they taken gifts to shed blood; thou hast taken usury and increase, and thou hast greedily gained of thy neighbours by extortion, and hast forgotten me, saith the Lord GOD.

13 ¶ Behold, therefore I have [g] smitten mine hand at thy dishonest gain which thou hast made, and at thy blood which hath been in the midst of thee.

[g] Chap. 21. 17.

14 Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong, in the days that I shall deal with thee? I the LORD have spoken it, and will do it.

15 And I will scatter thee among the heathen, and disperse thee in the countries, and will consume thy filthiness out of thee.

16 And thou ‖ shalt take thine inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen, and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

17 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, the house of Israel is to me become dross: all they are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the furnace; they are even the † dross of silver.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because ye are all become dross, behold,

---

The Jewish nation still subsists. The Ammonites are lost in the mass of mankind, and have been long forgotten. Abp. Newcome.

Chap. XXII. ver. 2. — wilt thou judge,] See chap. xx. 4.

—— the bloody city?] See chap. xxiii. 37, 45; xxiv. 6, 9; 2 Kings xxi. 16.

3. — that her time may come,] See chap. vii. 7. Her time of punishment and vengeance. Abp. Newcome.

6. Behold, the princes of Israel,] These were probably the members of the great Sanhedrim, or the king's counsellors and chief officers of state. See Jer. xxvi. 10; xxxvi. 12. W. Lowth.

—— every one were in thee to their power to shed blood.] The Hebrew reads, "with his arm to shed blood." See the margin: and the sense may be, "they have employed all the force of their arms to shed blood in the midst of thee." Calmet.

9. — in thee they eat upon the mountains:] In the midst of thee there are those that offer idolatrous sacrifices to their false gods, in their high places. Bp. Hall.

10. In thee have they discovered their fathers' nakedness:] That is, taken their mother in law to wife, which St. Paul calls, "such fornication as is not so much as named among the Gentiles," 1 Cor. v. 1. W. Lowth.

12. — gifts to shed blood;] Innocent blood. Abp. Secker. The judges may be here particularly meant. W. Lowth.

—— and hast forgotten me,] The forgetfulness of God is the source of the greatest disorders; for as St. Jerome well observes, The remembrance of God excludes all sin. Men rush into crimes in proportion as they forget God. Calmet.

13. — have smitten mine hand.] With astonishment and indignation. See chap. xxi. 14. Abp. Newcome.

15. — will consume thy filthiness out of thee.] I will purge thee in the furnace of afflictions, and take that method to consume thy dross, and put an end to thy idolatrous practices. Compare ver. 18, 19; chap. xxiii. 27. W. Lowth.

16. And thou shalt take thine inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen,] The margin of our Bible reads, "Thou shalt be profaned in thyself;" which expresses the sense much better; that is, thou shalt no longer enjoy the privileges of a city called by My name, and set apart for My residence, but shalt be laid open as common ground, to be profaned by infidels. See Is. xlvii. 6. W. Lowth.

18. — dross:] The house of Israel is in My sight like silver alloyed with several baser metals. I am about to act towards them as a refiner, who purifies and separates the metals in the fire. Calmet.

19, 20. — Because ye are all become dross, &c.] Because you are thus depraved, I will deal with you accordingly; I will gather you all up as into one furnace, which shall be Jerusalem, and Before CHRIST 593. therefore I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem.

† Heb. According as the fashering. 20 † As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you.

21 Yea, I will gather you, and blow upon you in the fire of my wrath, and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof.

22 As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I the LORD have poured out my fury upon you.

23 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

24 Son of man, say unto her, Thou art the land that is not cleansed, nor rained upon in the day of indignation.

25 There is a conspiracy of her prophets in the midst thereof, like a roaring lion ravening the prey; they [b] have devoured souls; they have taken the treasure and precious things; they have made her many widows in the midst thereof.

[b] Matth. 23. 14.

† Heb. offered violence to. 26 Her priests have † violated my law, and have profaned mine holy things: they have put no difference between the holy and profane, neither have they shewed difference between the unclean and the clean, and have hid their eyes from my sabbaths, and I am profaned among them.

27 Her [1] princes in the midst thereof are like wolves ravening the prey, to shed blood, and to destroy souls, to get dishonest gain. Before CHRIST 593. [1] Mic. 3. 11. Zeph. 3.

28 And her prophets have daubed them with untempered morter, seeing vanity, and divining lies unto them, saying, Thus saith the Lord GOD, when the LORD hath not spoken.

29 The people of the land have used ‖ oppression, and exercised robbery, and have vexed the poor and needy: yea, they have oppressed the stranger † wrongfully. ‖ Or, deceit. † Heb. without right.

30 And I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it: but I found none.

31 Therefore have I poured out mine indignation upon them; I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath: their own way have I recompensed upon their heads, saith the Lord GOD.

CHAP. XXIII.

1 The whoredoms of Aholah and Aholibah. 22 Aholibah is to be plagued by her lovers. 36 The prophet reproveth the adulteries of them both, 45 and sheweth their judgments.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying, 593.

2 Son of man, there were two women, the daughters of one mother:

3 And they committed whoredoms in Egypt; they committed whoredoms in their youth: there were their breasts pressed, there I will send the fire of My judgment upon you. Bp. Hall.

24. — Thou art the land that is not cleansed, nor rained upon in the day of indignation.] Thou art a land notoriously unclean with thy abominable sins, and therefore shalt be seized upon by My judgments without mitigation; when My fire shall flame up to consume thee, there shall not be so much as a shower of rain for the quenching thereof. Bp. Hall.

The metaphor of fire, which had been used in the foregoing verses, seems to be pursued here; and the admonition of the Prophets is to be understood under the figure of rain. Calmet, W. Lowth. See chap. xx. 46.

25. — a conspiracy of her prophets] That is, of the false prophets. These are often reproved for making a gain of their profession. See Jer. vi. 13; Micah iii. 5, 11. W. Lowth. Probably they agreed together in supporting each other's false prophecies. See chap. xiii. 11, 12. Calmet.

—— they have devoured souls;] They make merchandise of men's souls; or else they take away their lives by false accusation, and then seize upon their substance. Compare ver. 27, and Matt. xxiii. 14. W. Lowth. Or, the consequence of their false prophecies, the destruction of men's lives by the judgments which fall on impenitence, is charged on them.

26. — and have hid their eyes from my sabbaths,] Absenting themselves from the holy rites to be performed in My courts. Abp. Newcome.

28. And her prophets have daubed them &c.] Have soothed them in their sins; and in a base flattery have spoken plausible things to them, no less false than pleasing. Bp. Hall. See chap. xiii. 6—10, and the note there.

30. — but I found none.] The Jews had generally given themselves up to idolatry, injustice, uncleanness, and abominations of every kind; and had profaned in the most shocking manner the religion and the service of God. The corruption spread among persons in a publick character: the prophet seduced the people; the priests broke the law, and profaned the holy things; the magistrates were addicted to injustice, dishonest gain, fraud, and violence. This deprived them of the Divine protection, and obliged God, as it were, to put His threatenings into execution. These sins, no doubt, God does still abhor, and much more in Christians: to whom the punishments of the Jews should be a warning, and especially to pastors and governours, that they be not the authors of corruption and of publick calamities, and so, in the end, of eternal perdition to those, whom God has placed under their care. Osterwald.

Chap. XXIII. ver. 2. — there were two women,] The style of this chapter, like that of chap. xvi, is adapted to men among whom, at that time, no refinement subsisted. Large allowance must be made for language addressed to an ancient Eastern people, in the worst period of their history; all whose ideas were sensual, and whose grand inducement to idolatry seems to have been, the brutal impurities which it encouraged. Abp. Newcome.

—— the daughters of one mother:] Samaria and Jerusalem are described in this chapter as sisters, the offspring of the same land or country. Compare chap. xvi. 46; Jer. iii. 7, 8. W. Lowth.

3. And they committed whoredoms in Egypt;] Idolatry; see chap. xx. 7, 8.

—— in their youth:] The time when the Israelites were in Egypt, or were lately departed out of it, is called their "youth" in Before CHRIST 593. and there they bruised the teats of their virginity.

4 And the names of them were Aholah the elder, and Aholibah her sister: and they were mine, and they bare sons and daughters. Thus were their names; Samaria is Aholah, and Jerusalem Aholibah.

5 And Aholah played the harlot when she was mine; and she doted on her lovers, on the Assyrians her neighbours,

6 Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers, all of them desirable young men, horsemen riding upon horses.

7 Thus she committed her whoredoms with them, with all them that were the chosen men of Assyria, and with all on whom she doted: with all their idols she defiled herself.

8 Neither left she her whoredoms brought from Egypt: for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her.

9 Wherefore I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the [a] Assyrians, upon whom she doted.

[a] 2 Kings 17. 23.

10 These discovered her nakedness: they took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword: and she became † famous among women; for they had executed judgment upon her.

11 And when her sister Aholibah saw this, † she was more corrupt in her inordinate love than she, and in her whoredoms † more than her sister in her whoredoms.

Before CHRIST 593.

† Heb. she corrupted her inordinate love more than. † Heb. more than the whoredoms of her sister.

12 She doted upon the [b] Assyrians her neighbours, captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men.

[b] 2 Kings 16. 7.

13 Then I saw that she was defiled, that they took both one way,

14 And that she increased her whoredoms: for when she saw men pourtrayed upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans pourtrayed with vermilion,

15 Girded with girdles upon their loins, exceeding in dyed attire upon their heads, all of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity:

16 And † as soon as she saw them with her eyes, she doted upon them, and sent messengers unto them into Chaldea.

17 And the † Babylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their whoredom, and she was polluted with them, and her mind was † alienated from them.

18 So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness: then my mind was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her sister.

19 Yet she multiplied her whoredoms, in calling to remembrance the days of her the Prophets, because that was the time when God first owned them for His people. See ver. 8, 19; chap. xvi. 8, 22; Jer. ii. 2; Hos. ii. 15. W. Lowth.

4. And the names of them were Aholah the elder, &c.] Both of these divided people had their names from a tent, or tabernacle. Israel, which is the greater part of the ten tribes, is Aholah, "her own tabernacle," which she would needs erect according to her own device, to draw away clients from My temple. Judah is Aholibah, "My tent or tabernacle in her;" because of the place of My worship settled there. Bp. Hall.

5. — when she was mine;] When she was under My dominion. Houbigant. While she professed to be Mine. Bp. Hall.

—— on the Assyrians her neighbours,] The king of Assyria was a very powerful prince, and therefore his alliance was courted both by the kings of Israel and Judah, 2 Kings xv. 29; xvi. 7; and ver. 12 of this chapter. W. Lowth.

The Assyrians taught them the worship of Baal, and inspired them with the rage for making sacrifices upon high places. Calmet.

6. — clothed with blue,] The Chaldeans, the Assyrians, and the Persians, chiefly admired the colour of purple and hyacinth. Dresses of these colours were reserved for the prince and the great lords, and one of the most distinguished rewards for merit and service was the permission to wear them. Calmet. See Nahum ii. 3.

—— horsemen riding upon horses.] Horses were scarce in Judea, which made the Jews, in proportion as they renounced their dependence upon Heaven, apply themselves to the neighbouring countries for troops of horse, in the time of any hostile invasion, Isa. xxx. 16; xxxi. 1. W. Lowth.

8. — her whoredoms brought from Egypt:] All the precautions taken by Moses, all the zeal of Joshua and his successors, were insufficient to root out the propensity to idolatry, which the Jews had imbibed in Egypt. Calmet.

10. — and she became famous among women:] And she became a noted and remarkable example of God's judgments among the nations. Bp. Hall.

11. And when her sister Aholibah saw this,] Saw the judgment inflicted on Samaria; instead of taking warning by it, she advanced to greater degrees of idolatry. Bp. Hall, W. Lowth.

14. — men pourtrayed upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans] The deified men worshipped by the Chaldeans must be meant. These the inhabitants of Chaldea had represented on the walls of Jerusalem; and the Jews desired to possess the idols, that they might pay them Divine honours. Abp. Newcome. Such as Bel, Nebo, and Merodach, mentioned Is. xlvi. 1; Jer. l. 2. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

15. — exceeding in dyed attire upon their heads,] Flowing, luxuriant, in the turbans worn by them. Abp. Newcome.

16. — and sent messengers] This probably relates to those times when a correspondence was maintained between the cities of Babylon and Jerusalem, after that Nebuchadnezzar had conquered Judea, and made it a tributary kingdom, in the beginning of the fourth year of Jehoiakim, Dan. i. 1, 2; 2 Kings xxiv. 1. W. Lowth.

17. — and her mind was alienated] Through satiety she loathed them; but still she desired other paramours, chap. xvi. 29. Abp. Newcome.

The representation of idolatry under the figure of the inordinate lust of adultery is still kept up. W. Lowth.

18. So she discovered her whoredoms,] She was open and notorious in them, and in the highest degree shameless. Abp. Newcome.

youth, wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt. Before CHRIST 593.

20 For she doted upon their paramours, whose flesh is as the flesh of asses, and whose issue is like the issue of horses.

21 Thus thou calledst to remembrance the lewdness of thy youth, in bruising thy teats by the Egyptians for the paps of thy youth.

22 ¶ Therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will raise up thy lovers against thee, from whom thy mind is alienated, and I will bring them against thee on every side;

23 The Babylonians, and all the Chaldeans, Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa, and all the Assyrians with them: all of them desirable young men, captains and rulers, great lords and renowned, all of them riding upon horses.

24 And they shall come against thee with chariots, wagons, and wheels, and with an assembly of people, which shall set against thee buckler and shield and helmet round about: and I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their judgments.

25 And I will set my jealousy against thee, and they shall deal furiously with thee: they shall take away thy nose and thine ears; and thy remnant shall fall by the sword: they shall take thy sons and thy daughters; and thy residue shall be devoured by the fire.

26 They shall also strip thee out of thy clothes, and take away thy † fair jewels.

27 Thus will I make thy lewdness to cease from thee, and thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt: so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more. Before CHRIST 593.

28 For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will deliver thee into the hand of them whom thou hatest, into the hand of them from whom thy mind is alienated:

29 And they shall deal with thee hatefully, and shall take away all thy labour, and shall leave thee naked and bare: and the nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be discovered, both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

30 I will do these things unto thee, because thou hast gone a whoring after the heathen, and because thou art polluted with their idols.

31 Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I give her cup into thine hand.

32 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Thou shalt drink of thy sister's cup deep and large: thou shalt be laughed to scorn and had in derision; it containeth much.

33 Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and sorrow, with the cup of astonishment and desolation, with the cup of thy sister Samaria.

34 Thou shalt even drink it and suck it out, and thou shalt break the sherds thereof, and pluck off thine own breasts: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD.

35 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thou hast forgotten me, and cast me behind thy back, therefore bear thou also thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

36 ¶ The LORD said moreover unto me; Son of man, wilt thou ‖ judge Aholah and

The last kings of the Jews put their confidence in Egypt, and broke their faith with the Chaldeans. Calmet.

22. — from whom thy mind is alienated,] The Chaldeans, against whom the Jews revolted, rebelling against Nebuchadnezzar. Michaelis.

23. — Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa,] The inhabitants of the several provinces of the Babylonish monarchy. "Pekod" is mentioned as a province, Jer. l. 21. Calmet. The subdivisions of the Babylonish empire are little known to us. Abp. Newcome.

—— and all the Assyrians] The Assyrians were now under the king of Babylon, and served him as auxiliary troops. Michaelis.

—— and they shall judge thee &c.] That is, shall make thy punishment suitable to thy guilt. Dr. Wells.

25. — thy nose and thine ears;] They shall set upon thee the marks of thine adultery; they shall slit thy nose and thine ears for a harlot; and those that shall escape the shameful reproaches of their whoredoms, shall fall by the sword. Bp. Hall. St. Jerome informs us, that these mutilations were sometimes the punishment of adultery. Calmet.

These cruelties might have been literally practised by the Chaldeans upon the Israelites; but the sense of the passage is, that all the glories and ornaments of Jerusalem would be defaced, and that after the inhabitants had been carried away captive, the city would be set on fire and reduced to a heap of ashes. Calmet, W. Lowth.

28. — of them whom thou hatest,] The Chaldeans, formerly thy lovers. W. Lowth.

29. — all thy labour,] The fruit of thy labour.

31. — her cup into thine hand.] I will make thee taste deep of those grievous judgments, which thy sister Israel hath tasted of. Bp. Hall. See Jer. xxv. 15; Habak. ii. 16.

34. — and suck it out,] See Is. li. 17.

—— thou shalt break the sherds thereof,] Severe affliction is often described as a cup occasioning drunkenness: "O thou drunken, but not with wine:" here the image is extended farther. The cup, already drained to the dregs, is represented as broken, and the sherds used in the frenzy of despair as instruments of self-torture. Dr. Wells.

Before CHRIST 595. Aholibah? yea, declare unto them their abominations;

37 That they have committed adultery, and blood is in their hands, and with their idols have they committed adultery, and have also caused their sons, whom they bare unto me, to pass for them through the fire, to devour them.

38 Moreover this they have done unto me: they have defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and have profaned my sabbaths.

39 For when they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it; and, lo, [a] thus have they done in the midst of mine house.

[a] 2 Kings 21. 4.

40 And furthermore, that ye have sent for men † to come from far, unto whom a messenger was sent; and, lo, they came: for whom thou didst wash thyself, paintedst thy eyes, and deckedst thyself with ornaments,

† Heb. honourable. [a] Prov. 7. 17.

41 And satest upon a † stately bed, and a table prepared before it, [a] whereupon thou hast set mine incense and mine oil.

42 And a voice of a multitude being at ease was with her: and with the men † of the common sort were brought ‖ Sabeans from the wilderness, which put bracelets upon their hands, and beautiful crowns upon their heads.

† Heb. of the multitude of men. ‖ Or, drunkards.

43 Then said I unto her that was old in adulteries, Will they now commit † whoredoms with her, and she with them?

† Heb. her whoredoms.

44 Yet they went in unto her, as they go in unto a woman that playeth the harlot: so went they in unto Aholah and unto Aholibah, the lewd women.

45 ¶ And the righteous men, they shall [a] judge them after the manner of adulteresses, and after the manner of women that shed blood; because they are adulteresses, and blood is in their hands.

[a] Chap. 16. 38.

46 For thus saith the Lord GOD; I will bring up a company upon them, and will give them † to be removed and spoiled.

† Heb. for a removing and spoil.

47 And the company shall stone them with stones, and ‖ dispatch them with their swords; they shall slay their sons and their daughters, and burn up their houses with fire.

‖ Or, assail them out.

48 Thus will I cause lewdness to cease out of the land, that all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness.

49 And they shall recompense your lewdness upon you, and ye shall bear the sins of your idols: and ye shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

CHAP. XXIV.

1 Under the parable of a boiling pot, 6 is shewed the irrevocable destruction of Jerusalem. 15 By the sign of Ezekiel not mourning for the death of his wife, 19 is shewed the calamity of the Jews to be beyond all sorrow.

AGAIN in the ninth year, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, Write thee the name of the day, even of this same day: the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem this same day.

37. — and blood is in their hands,] They have shed innocent blood, particularly in sacrificing their children, as the verse afterwards expresses. Dr. Wells.

40. — ye have sent for men to come from far, &c.] Their courting the alliances of foreign nations, by complying with their idolatries, is set forth under the representation of the several arts which harlots use to recommend themselves to new lovers, Is. lvii. 9. W. Lowth.

—— paintedst thy eyes,] See the note on Jer. iv. 30.

41. — mine incense and mine oil.] Which should have been offered to me. Abp. Newcome.

42. — at ease] Feasting and making merry.

—— Sabeans from the wilderness,] The Sabeans. The word is translated "drunkards" in the margin. The word seba in the Hebrew signifies to drink to excess, from whence comes the participle sebaim, drunkards, which comes very near in sound to the word "Sabeans" in the text. The same word occurs Joel iii. 8; Is. xlv. 14; in which places it is supposed to denote the inhabitants of Arabia Felix, who were the posterity of Seba, mentioned Gen. x. 7. W. Lowth, Dean Spencer.

—— upon their hands,] That is, upon the hands and heads of these two lewd women, Aholah and Aholibah. See ver. 45. Bracelets and crowns were ornaments proper to brides, (see chap. xvi. 11, 12,) and were likewise presented by lovers to their mistresses. W. Lowth.

43. — her that was old in adulteries,] The word "her" is taken collectively in this and the following verses, so as to include both the sisters. W. Lowth.

45. And the righteous men,] Meaning, the Prophets who foretold the judgments God would inflict upon Samaria and Jerusalem; such as Hosea, Amos, Jeremiah, &c. The Prophets are said to execute those judgments which they foretell; so Ezekiel says of himself, that he was sent "to destroy the city," chap. xliii. 3; that is, to prophesy its destruction. To the same sense we read, Hos. vi. 5, "I have hewed them by the Prophets; I have slain them by the words of My mouth." See Is. vi. 10; Jer. i. 10. W. Lowth.

46. — a company] The Babylonians.

47. — shall stone them] See chap. xvi. 38; John viii. 3.

49. — and ye shall bear the sins of your idols:] Ye shall bear the punishment due to your sins of idolatry. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXIV. ver. 1. — in the ninth year,] Ezekiel, who was then a captive in Mesopotamia, saw in spirit the commencement of the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, and he wrote down the date of it that very day, that the Jews who were near him, and who could not fail of knowing in a short time what had happened to the capital of their country, might also learn, that the Prophet did not utter vain prophecies, and that his predictions were no longer to be distrusted. Calmet.

Before CHRIST 590. 3 And utter a parable unto the rebellious house, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Set on a pot, set it on, and also pour water into it:

4 Gather the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece, the thigh, and the shoulder; fill it with the choice bones.

5 Take the choice of the flock, and ‖ burn also the bones under it, and make it boil well, and let them seeth the bones of it therein.

‖ Or, heap.

6 ¶ Wherefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Woe to the bloody city, to the pot whose scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it! bring it out piece by piece; let no lot fall upon it.

7 For her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the top of a rock; she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;

8 That it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; I have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.

9 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; [a] Woe to the bloody city! I will even make the pile for fire great.

[a] Nah. 3. 1. Hab. 2. 12.

10 Heap on wood, kindle the fire, consume the flesh, and spice it well, and let the bones be burned.

Before CHRIST 590.

11 Then set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of it may be hot, and may burn, and that the filthiness of it may be molten in it, that the scum of it may be consumed.

12 She hath wearied herself with lies, and her great scum went not forth out of her: her scum shall be in the fire.

13 In thy filthiness is lewdness: because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged, thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more, till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee.

14 I the LORD have spoken it: it shall come to pass, and I will do it; I will not go back, neither will I spare, neither will I repent; according to thy ways, and according to thy doings, shall they judge thee, saith the Lord GOD.

15 ¶ Also the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

16 Son of man, behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke: yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep, neither shall thy tears † run down.

† Heb. go.

† Heb. Be silent.

---

3. — Set on a pot.] If this figure should appear to any one undignified, let him remember that it bears allusion to the sacred rites of the temple, and therefore nothing low or mean was associated with it in the ideas of the Jews, to whom the prophecy was directed. Bp. Lowth. The destruction of Jerusalem is represented by a boiling pot or caldron, Jer. i. 13; Ezek. xi. 3. W. Lowth.

4. — the choice bones.] The choice joints. These represent the great men of Jerusalem. Abp. Newcome.

5. Take the choice of the flock,] This belongs in sense to the former verse. W. Lowth.

—— burn also the bones under it,] The bones of those who have been unjustly slain in the midst of the city: see chap. xi. 7. W. Lowth. Place the bones at the bottom of the pot under the flesh. Calmet.

6. — Woe to the bloody city,] This is the common character of Jerusalem. So she had made herself, partly by the blood of the Prophets, partly by the blood of innocents offered in the sacrifices of her idols, partly in the violences and outrages, which the higher sort committed upon the meaner people. Reading.

—— whose scum is therein,] Scum denotes filthiness. Jerusalem is the boiling pot, which is not purged from its foul sins: the flesh and bones are the Jews which have fled thither for safety. Bp. Hall.

—— bring it out piece by piece;] Put thou in thy hook and bring out the flesh and bone piecemeal wheresoever it lights, without any choice or deliberation, to shew that every one of them shall be fetched out thence without difference. Bp. Hall.

—— let no lot fall upon it.] Conquerors used to cast lots what share of the vanquished they would save: see 2 Sam. viii. 2; Joel iii. 3. Here there will be no use in lots, for all the principal inhabitants shall be slain. W. Lowth.

7. — she set it upon the top of a rock;] She seemed to glory in her crime, by doing it in the most open and audacious manner, so as to challenge God's vengeance. Dr. Blayney.

—— she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;] The words allude to the command of the law, Lev. xvii. 13, that they cover the blood of any beast or other living creature that was slain with dust: which precept was intended, not only to prevent their eating of blood, but also to give men a sort of horrour at the sight of bloodshed. W. Lowth.

8. — I have set her blood upon the top of a rock,] Her punishment shall be as notorious as her sin. W. Lowth, Calmet.

9. — I will even make the pile for fire great.] I will greatly aggravate her judgments. Bp. Hall.

10, 11. Heap on wood, — consume the flesh, &c.] See that full and exquisite vengeance be executed upon the wicked city. Bp. Hall.

11. — that the brass of it] The burning of the brass denotes that the judgments of God would fall upon the city as well as upon the inhabitants. Abp. Newcome.

12. She hath wearied herself with lies,] She hath multiplied her idolatries: idols being elsewhere called lies. W. Lowth.

—— and her great scum went not forth.] All her wickedness is still within her unrepented of, unamended. Bp. Hall.

13. In thy filthiness is lewdness:] That rust and scum which is in thee is thine abominable lewdness, or idolatry. Bp. Hall.

—— because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged,] I did what was requisite on My part towards thy conversion, but thou refusedst to comply with those frequent calls and exhortations which I gave thee; (see the note on Jer. xxxi. 18;) and therefore My Spirit shall not strive with thee any longer, but I will proceed to execute My judgments upon thee. W. Lowth.

16. — the desire of thine eyes] Thy wife, the object of thy affection. W. Lowth.

—— with a stroke:] Not by an ordinary death, but by an unexpected blow. Calmet.

17. — bind the tire &c.] Abstain from all mourning: use thy ordinary dress upon thine head. Whereas in the times of mourning it was customary sometimes to shave the head: see Lev. xiii. 45; Jer. vii. 29; xvi. 6. The priests were particularly forbidden to uncover their heads in the time of mourning. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 590. upon thee, and put on thy shoes upon thy feet, and cover not thy † lips, and eat not the bread of men.

† Heb. upper lip: and so ver. 22.

18 So I spake unto the people in the morning: and at even my wife died; and I did in the morning as I was commanded.

19 ¶ And the people said unto me, Wilt thou not tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest so?

20 Then I answered them, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

21 Speak unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will profane my sanctuary, the excellency of your strength, the desire of your eyes, and † that which your soul pitieth; and your sons and your daughters whom ye have left shall fall by the sword.

† Heb. the pity of your soul.

22 And ye shall do as I have done: ye shall not cover your lips, nor eat the bread of men.

23 And your tires shall be upon your heads, and your shoes upon your feet: ye shall not mourn nor weep; but ye shall pine away for your iniquities, and mourn one toward another.

24 Thus Ezekiel is unto you a sign: according to all that he hath done shall ye do: and when this cometh, ye shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

Before CHRIST 590.

25 Also, thou son of man, shall it not be in the day when I take from them their strength, the joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes, and † that whereupon they set their minds, their sons and their daughters,

† Heb. the lifting up of their soul.

26 That he that escapeth in that day shall come unto thee, to cause thee to hear it with thine ears?

27 In that day shall thy mouth be opened to him which is escaped, and thou shalt speak, and be no more dumb: and thou shalt be a sign unto them; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAP. XXV.

1 God's vengeance, for their insolency against the Jews, upon the Ammonites; 8 upon Moab and Seir; 12 upon Edom, 15 and upon the Philistines.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, set thy face [a] against the Ammonites, and prophesy against them;

[a] Jer. 49. 1, &c.

3 And say unto the Ammonites, Hear the

—— and put on thy shoes upon thy feet,] Going barefoot was another expression of sorrow, 2 Sam. xv. 30. W. Lowth. Addison, in his account of the modern mourning of the Jews in Barbary, says, "The relations of the deceased, for seven days after the interment, stir not abroad; or if by some extraordinary occasion they are forced to go out of doors, it is without shoes; which is a token with them that they have lost a dear friend." Harmer.

—— cover not thy lips,] Covering the lips was another token of mourning, Lev. xiii. 45; Micah iii 7. W. Lowth. The author above mentioned, in his account of the Jews of Barbary, thus describes one of their mourning rites: "They return from the grave to the house of the deceased, where one as chief mourner receives them, with his jaws tied up with a linen cloth, after the same manner that they bind up the dead; and by this the mourner is said to testify, that he was ready to die with his friend. And thus muffled, the mourner goes for seven days; during which time the rest of his friends come twice every twenty-four hours to pray with him." Harmer.

—— and eat not the bread of men.] Of mourners. Abp. Secker. Eat not the bread of consolation wont to be prepared by the humane, and sent to those in deep affliction. Harmer. See the note on Jer. xvi. 7.

18. —— and I did in the morning &c.] Of the next day. Syriack Version, Abp. Secker.

21. —— I will profane my sanctuary, &c.] I will deliver My temple into the hands of the heathen, and they shall profane and destroy it, chap. vii. 19, 20. That temple wherein you placed your glory, and thought My residence there your greatest protection. W. Lowth.

—— whom ye have left] Whom ye left behind you in the city, when you were carried captive. W. Lowth.

24. Thus Ezekiel is unto you a sign:] See the note on chap. xii. 6, from Fragments to Calmet.

26. That he that escapeth in that day] See chap. xxxiii. 21, 22.

27. In that day shall thy mouth be opened] Then will I give thee a new commission to speak, and that not by signs as at present, but with freedom and plainness; the event, so exactly answering thy predictions, shall give a new authority to what thou speakest. See chap. iii. 26; xxix. 21. W. Lowth.

—— and thou shalt be a sign] See ver. 24.

Ezekiel was a sign to the house of Israel in various instances; and described by sensible representations the miseries, which God was about to bring upon that people. That his predictions were fully accomplished we learn from the conclusion of the books of Kings and Chronicles; from the 39th and 52d chapters of Jeremiah; and most particularly from the Lamentations of that Prophet, who was an eyewitness of the desolations of his country, and the captivity of his people. How long did God wait! how often did He call, "Be thou instructed, O Jerusalem, lest My soul depart from thee; lest I make thee desolate, a land not inhabited!" But she refused to be instructed, and God's soul did depart from her. Let us hear, and fear, and take better impressions from such words of exhortation, and cleanse our hands, and purify our hearts, from the defilement of our sins. Let us speedily embrace the overtures of our peace, whilst the door of mercy stands open; turning without delay from our rebellious ways, and doing those things which are well pleasing to God, that so we may be reconciled to Him, and rejoice in the light of His countenance, and finally obtain from Him the salvation of our souls and bodies, through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ, our Lord. Reading.

Chap. XXV. ver. 2. — against the Ammonites,] The chronological order of this chapter is after chap. xxxiii. 21, &c. at a time when not only the taking of Jerusalem was known, but also the conduct which the surrounding nations pursued in consequence of the event. Abp. Newcome. Josephus and Archbishop Usher place the events of the chapter five years after the destruction of Jerusalem. W. Lowth.

The accomplishment of these prophecies has not been distinctly recorded by the Prophets: but Josephus informs us, that, five years after the taking of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar carried the war into Cœle-syria, and afterwards against the Ammonites and the Moabites, and finally against Egypt; and that having achieved the entire conquest of these countries, he returned to Babylon. Calmet.

word of the Lord GOD; Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thou saidst, Aha, against my sanctuary, when it was profaned; and against the land of Israel, when it was desolate; and against the house of Judah, when they went into captivity; Before CHRIST 590.

4 Behold, therefore I will deliver thee to the † men of the east for a possession, and they shall set their palaces in thee, and make their dwellings in thee: they shall eat thy fruit, and they shall drink thy milk. † Heb. children.

5 And I will make Rabbah a stable for camels, and the Ammonites a couching-place for flocks: and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

6 For thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thou hast clapped thine † hands, and stamped with the † feet, and rejoiced in † heart with all thy despite against the land of Israel; † Heb. hand. † Heb. foot. † Heb. soul.

7 Behold, therefore I will stretch out mine hand upon thee, and will deliver thee for ‖ a spoil to the heathen; and I will cut thee off from the people, and I will cause thee to perish out of the countries: I will destroy thee; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD. ‖ Or, meat.

8 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because that Moab and Seir do say, Behold, the house of Judah is like unto all the heathen; [b] Jer. 48. 1, &c.

9 Therefore, behold, I will open the † side of Moab from the cities, from his cities which are on his frontiers, the glory of the country, Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon, and Kiriathaim, † Heb. shoulder of Moab. Before CHRIST 590.

10 Unto the men of the east ‖ with the Ammonites, and will give them in possession, that the Ammonites may not be remembered among the nations. ‖ Or, against the children of Ammon.

11 And I will execute judgments upon Moab; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

12 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because that Edom hath dealt against the house of Judah † by taking vengeance, and hath greatly offended, and revenged himself upon them; † Heb. by revenging revenge.

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; I will also stretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off man and beast from it; and I will make it desolate from Teman; and ‖ they of Dedan shall fall by the sword. ‖ Or, they shall fall by the sword with Dedan.

14 And I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel: and they shall do in Edom according to mine anger and according to my fury; and they shall know my vengeance, saith the Lord GOD.

3. — Because thou saidst, Aha,] Because thou didst insult and rejoice in the profanation of My sanctuary. Bp. Hall. Compare Job xxxix. 25.

4. — to the men of the east] By the men of the East may be meant the Chaldeans, chap. xxi. 19, 20. Ammon is likewise reckoned amongst those countries, which God foretold by Jeremiah should be delivered into the hands of the king of Babylon, Jer. xxv. 21. W. Lowth. It is possible however that the Arabians may be here meant, the Ishmaelites, the tented inhabitants of Arabia Deserta. God might be said to give the country of Moab and Ammon to them, not that they ever subdued it by their arms, but because, when the inhabitants were carried captive beyond the Euphrates, the neighbouring Arabs, charmed with the beauty and the fertility of these provinces, rushed into the country and occupied their seats.

This exposition seems to be confirmed by the latter part of this, and by the following verse, which express clearly the genius and the mode of life of the Arabs. "They shall eat thy fruit, and they shall drink thy milk; and I will make Rabbah a stable for camels, and the Ammonites a couchingplace for flocks." Their food is milk, their riches flocks, and upon camels they transport themselves and their property from place to place. Calmet, Harmer.

—— their palaces] The word may also mean their pens or inclosures for cattle. Harmer. Or, their munitions and fortified camps. Poole.

5. And I will make Rabbah] See chap. xxi. 20. The capital city of the Ammonites.

6. — clapped thine hands, and stamped with the feet,] Gestures sometimes used to express joy and satisfaction, Job xxvii. 23; Lam. ii. 15; Jer. xlviii. 27. W. Lowth. See the note on Job xxvii. 23.

8. — Moab and Seir] Seir is the same with Edom: see chap. xxxv. 2.

—— is like unto all the heathen;] We see no difference betwixt Judah and other nations. God hath no more power to preserve them, than the god of their neighbours. Bp. Hall.

9. — I will open the side of Moab] I will make a passage for his enemies to invade his frontier. W. Lowth.

—— Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon, and Kiriathaim,] They were the chief frontier towns of Moab. Calmet.

10. Unto the men of the east with the Ammonites,] That is, together with the Moabites, I will deliver up the Ammonites unto the men of the East, see ver. 4. Moab and Ammon are joined together, Zeph. ii. 8, 9. Nebuchadnezzar subdued both. Abp. Newcome.

12. — Because that Edom hath dealt against the house of Judah] The Idumeans, being the posterity of Esau, bore an ancient grudge against the Jews, on account of their ancestor's losing his right of primogeniture, and the subduing of Edom by David afterwards, 2 Sam. viii. 14. Upon both these accounts they took all opportunities of venting their spite towards the Jewish nation particularly; see 2 Chron. xxviii. 17. The ill will they shewed them in the time of their captivity was very remarkable, as appears by those pathetical words of Ps. cxxxvii. 7, "Remember the children of Edom, O Lord, in the day of Jerusalem, how they said, Down with it, down with it, even to the ground." W. Lowth.

13. — Teman; — Dedan] Noted cities of Idumea. See Jer. xlix. 7, 8.

14. — by the hand of my people Israel:] After the restoration of the Jews, Idumea was subdued by them under the conduct of Judas Maccabeus, 1 Maccab. v. 3; 2 Maccab. x. 16, 17. And afterwards the high priest Hyrcanus made an entire conquest of the country. Dean Prideaux.

Providence would not permit that they should be punished by other hands than those of the Jews, whom they had treated with so much cruelty. Calmet.

Before CHRIST 590.

15 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because the Philistines have dealt by revenge, and have taken vengeance with a despiteful heart, to destroy it ‖ for the old hatred;

‖ Or, with perpetual hatred.

16 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will stretch out mine hand upon the Philistines, and I will cut off the Cherethims, and destroy the remnant of the ‖ sea coast.

‖ Or, haven of the sea.

† Heb. vengeances.

17 And I will execute great † vengeance upon them with furious rebukes; and they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall lay my vengeance upon them.

CHAP. XXVI.

1 Tyrus, for insulting against Jerusalem, is threatened. 7 The power of Nebuchadnezzar against her. 15 The mourning and astonishment of the sea at her fall.

589. AND it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

Before CHRIST 588.

2 Son of man, because that Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem, Aha, she is broken that was the gates of the people: she is turned unto me: I shall be replenished, now she is laid waste:

3 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up.

4 And they shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers: I will also scrape her dust from her, and make her like the top of a rock.

5 It shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD: and it shall become a spoil to the nations.

15. — Because the Philistines have dealt by revenge,] The Philistines being borderers upon the Jews, were their ancient enemies, from the time of the Judges downward, more particularly in the time of Ahaz: see 2 Chron. xxviii. 18. W. Lowth. Amos accuses them of having sold to the Idumeans the captives which they had taken in Judea; Amos i. 5—8. Calmet.

16. — and I will cut off the Cherethims,] The Cherethims or Cherethites are the same with the Philistines, or a tribe of that people, 1 Sam. xxx. 14; Zeph. ii. 5. W. Lowth.

—— the remnant] The Philistines had been much weakened in preceding wars by the kings of Egypt and of Chaldea; and therefore they are called "the remnant." Calmet. See Jer. xxv. and xlvii.

Chap. XXVI. ver. 1. — in the eleventh year, in the first day of the month,] The eleventh year mentioned here is the very year of the taking of Jerusalem. It was the eleventh year of the reign of Zedekiah, and of the captivity of Jehoiachin. The particular month is not mentioned. W. Lowth.

2. — she is broken that was the gates of the people:] Jerusalem is meant. There was a great confluence of people to Jerusalem from all parts at the solemn feasts of the year, as well of Jews as proselytes, John xii. 20. This, together with the resort for the purposes of trade, contributed to render her populous and wealthy, and on that account an object of envy to the Tyrians. W. Lowth, Calmet, Poole.

Ezekiel here begins his prophecy against the Tyrians with a declaration, that it was occasioned by their insulting over the Jews upon the taking of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. The Prophets Joel and Amos had before denounced the Divine judgments upon the Tyrians for their wickedness in general, and in particular for their cruelty to the children of Israel, and for buying and selling them like cattle in the markets, Joel iii. 5, &c.; Amos i. 9. And the Psalmist reckons them among the most inveterate and implacable enemies of the Jewish name and nation, Ps. lxxxiii. 6, 7. Bp. Newton.

—— she is turned unto me:] Her traffick and her wealth are come into my stores. Compare Is. lx. 5. Bp. Hall.

—— I shall be replenished,] Trading interest will turn to me; they, that carried merchandise to Jerusalem, will now bring it to me. Poole. Besides which, as Tyre was a noted market for all sorts of trade; so when Jerusalem was taken and sacked, the spoil of the city was carried thither for sale; and probably several of the inhabitants, being made captives, were sold there for slaves; a traffick the Tyrians dealt in very much, chap. xxvii. 13. This interpretation may be confirmed by comparing it with Joel iii. 4, 5, 6, where the Prophet upbraids the Tyrians for making men merchandise, both of the persons and substance of the Jews, when they came into their hands. To the same purpose we read 1 Mac. iii. 41, that when Lysias came with great forces to subdue the Jews, the merchants of the country took silver and gold, and came into the camp, to buy the children of Israel for slaves. W. Lowth.

3. — I am against thee, O Tyrus,] This prophecy respects the same siege of Tyre which is foretold in the 47th chapter of Jeremiah. The profane authors extant in the time of St. Jerome said nothing of this siege; but the ancient writers of the Phenician history, which had been read by Josephus, related that Nebuchadnezzar had besieged Tyre in the reign of king Ithobal, and that the siege had lasted thirteen years. Berosus and the Phenician history also stated, that the king of Chaldea had subdued Phenicia and Syria: and lastly, Philostratus had spoken of this siege by Nebuchadnezzar. The sole object of this and the two following chapters is the destruction of the city and of the kingdom of Tyre. Calmet.

When we consider the extent and effects of the Phenician commerce, the scanty information concerning it, which we receive from ancient writers, must on a first view appear surprising. But when we recollect that all the Greek historians, Herodotus excepted, who give any account of the Phenicians, published their works long after the destruction of Tyre by Alexander the Great, we shall cease to wonder at their not having entered into minute details with respect to a trade, which was then removed to new seats, and carried on in other channels. But the power and opulence of Tyre, in the prosperous age of its commerce, must have attracted general attention. In this and the two following chapters of Ezekiel, who flourished two hundred and sixty years before the fall of Tyre, there is the most particular account of the nature and variety of its commercial transactions, that is to be found in any ancient writer, and which conveys at the same time a magnificent idea of the extensive power of that state. Dr. Robertson.

entire house left. Its present inhabitants are only a few wretches harbouring themselves in the vaults, and subsisting themselves chiefly upon fishing, who seem to be preserved in this place by Divine Providence, as a visible argument how God has fulfilled His word concerning Tyre." Maundrell.

The Jesuit Hadrianus Parvillerius resided ten years in Syria; and Huetius heard him say, that when he approached the ruins of Tyre, and beheld the rocks stretched forth to the sea, and the great stones scattered up and down on the shore, made clean and smooth by the sun, waves, and winds, and useful only for the drying of fishermen's nets, many of which happened at the time to be spread on them, it brought to his memory this prophecy. Bp. Newton.

6. — her daughters which are in the field] By the daughters of Tyre are meant, the lesser towns which were under her jurisdiction as the mother city or seat of the kingdom. W. Lowth.

7. — Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus Nebuchadrezzar &c.] The Prophet in this place expressly declares, that the city should be taken and destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon. Shalmaneser king of Assyria had besieged Tyre, but without success; the Tyrians had with a few ships beaten his large fleet: but yet Nebuchadnezzar should prevail. Ezekiel not only foretold the siege, but mentioned it afterwards as a past transaction. See chap. xxix. 18. Bp. Newton.

It hath been questioned among learned men, which of the Tyres was the subject of these prophecies; whether Old Tyre, that was seated on the continent, or New Tyre, that was built in an island almost over against it. The truest and best answer I conceive to be, that the prophecies appertain to both, some expressions being applicable only to the former, and others only to the latter. Compare chap. xxvii. 3, with ver. 4 and 25; xxvi. 7, &c. with Is. xxiii. 2, 4, 6; and Ezek. xxvi. 10, with ver. 12, and xxviii. 8. From these passages it appears that the insular Tyre, as well as the Tyre upon the continent, is included in these prophecies: they are both comprehended under the same name, and both spoken of as one and the same city, part built on the continent, and part on an island adjoining. It is commonly said indeed, that when Old Tyre was closely besieged, and was near falling into the hands of the Chaldeans, then the Tyrians fled from thence, and built New Tyre in the island: but the learned Vitringa hath proved at large, that New Tyre was founded several ages before, and was the station for ships, and considered as part of Old Tyre: and Pliny, speaking of the compass of the city, reckons both the old and the new together. Bp. Newton.

8. — and lift up the buckler] In forming the testudo. Michaelis. In the practice of this manœuvre the men approached towards the wall with their bucklers lifted above their heads, and so closely pressed together as to form a shield impenetrable to the darts of the besieged. Calmet.

9. — and with his axes] Any instrument used in demolishing buildings. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

10, 11, 12. — their dust shall cover thee: &c.] A lively description of the tumult and desolation that attends a conquering army making themselves masters of a great city; compare Nahum ii. 3, 4, 9; iii. 2, 3. W. Lowth.

12. — thy stones and thy timber and thy dust in the midst of the water.] The sea shall overflow thy ruins, see ver. 19. W. Lowth.

14. — be built no more:] This is true of Old Tyre; it has been built no more: New Tyre, taken by Alexander, was built upon an island: Nebuchadnezzar quite destroyed Old Tyre, and the ruins were made use of by Alexander to effect the destruction of New Tyre.

The prophecy was also fulfilled upon New Tyre, whose inhabitants were quite destroyed by Alexander when he took the city, and afterwards the city itself became desolate. W. Lowth.

15. — Shall not the isles shake] Shall not all the sea coasts round about be afraid and amazed at thy destruction? Bp. Hall. See the note from Vitringa, on Isa. xi. 11.

16, 17. Then all the princes of the sea &c.] All the princes and rich merchants of Sidon, Carthage, and other maritime cities, that maintained a trade with Tyre, and got great wealth by that means; they whose "merchants are princes," as Isaiah speaks of the merchants of Tyre, chap. xxiii. 8; they shall express a deep sense and concern for her misfortunes; compare chap. xxvii. 30, 31, 32; xxxii. 10. *W. 17. — strong in the sea,] Tyre is called "the strength of the sea," Is. xxiii. 4; being strong both by its situation and the strength of its naval forces, upon which account it was formidable to all who had any trading upon the sea. W. Lowth.

18. Now shall the isles tremble!] Ver. 15. St. Jerome translates it, "Now shall the ships tremble," that is, all seafaring men; see chap. xxvii. 29, 30; Is. xxiii. 14. W. Lowth.

—— at thy departure.] Into captivity. W. Lowth, Chaldee Paraphrase. At thy forsaking of the city and flying in ships. Houbigant. See Bp. Lowth on Is. xxiii. 1.

The Tyrians having planted colonies at Tarshish and upon the coasts of Chittim, it was natural for them, when pressed with dangers and difficulties at home, to fly to their friends and countrymen abroad for refuge and protection. That they really did so, St. Jerome asserts upon the authority of Assyrian histories, now lost and perished. Bp. Newton.

19. — when I shall bring up the deep upon thee, &c.] This may mean literally, that the sea should come up and cover the ruins of the city, see ver. 12. W. Lowth. Or, that the Babylonians should break in like a deluge upon the city, and swallow it up. Bp. Hall. Jeremiah compares the army of the king of Egypt to a flood; see Jer. xlvi. 7.

20. — with them that descend into the pit, &c.] Into the place of departed souls, as our Saviour speaks concerning Capernaum, Luke x. 15; compare Is. xiv. 11, 15; Ezek. xxxii. 18, 24; and brought to utter desolation like cities, which have been long ago buried in oblivion. W. Lowth.

—— set glory in the land of the living;] When I shall restore other cities, conquered by the king of Babylon, to that flourishing condition they formerly enjoyed among the inhabitants of this world. W. Lowth.

21. — a terror,] A terrible example of My vengeance to all cities and countries. W. Lowth.

—— though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again,] Compare ver. 14, and note. The expression denotes utter destruction, Ps. xxxvii. 36. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXVII. ver. 2. — take up a lamentation] This alludes to the mournful ditties used at funerals, wherein the mourning women recounted every thing that was valuable or praiseworthy belonging to the deceased, and then lamented his loss, Jer. ix. 17, 18. In like manner those that traded with Tyre should mourn over her and lament the loss of her riches and greatness; compare chap. xxvi. 16, 17; and see ver. 32 of this chapter. W. Lowth.

3. — at the entry of the sea,] A seaport commodiously situated for the commerce of the Mediterranean. Calmet.

—— which art a merchant of the people] Tyre is called by Isaiah "a mart of nations," chap. xxiii. 3. Ezekiel, as it were commenting upon those words of Isaiah, recounts in this chapter the various nations, whose commodities were brought to Tyre, and were bought and sold by the Tyrians. Bp. Newton.

4. Thy borders are in the midst of the seas,] See chap. xxvi. 5, 19.

—— thy builders] Shipbuilders chiefly, in which the strength and glory of Tyre consisted; see ver. 5.

6. — the company of the Ashurites have made thy benches of ivory,] The Assyrians have made the seats of ivory for the rowers in a very costly manner. W. Lowth. Probably they were the seats in the cabins of the royal gallies that were thus ornamented. Abp. Newcome.

—— Chittim.] The isles of Chittim are the islands and countries lying upon the coast of the Mediterranean sea, Jer. ii. 10. See note at Numb. xxiv. 24.

7. Fine linen with broidered work from Egypt] Michaelis calls this chapter the most ancient monument of mercantile history. Abp. Newcome.

to their ships. Suetonius, in his Life of Caligula, reckons this among several instances of that emperor's extravagance, that he furnished his pleasure boats with costly sails, and other expensive ornaments. Bishop Newton compares this luxury in the Tyrian shipping with the elegance and magnificence of Cleopatra's galley, when she sailed down the river Cydnus to meet Antony. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome. Maillet says of Egypt, "there is still a considerable quantity of cloth made here, but it is far short of the perfection of that which was formerly brought from Egypt." Hasselquist is of a different opinion: "By what we can see of the linen wrapped round the mummies, the famous linen of the Egyptians was no better than what is made at present in this country; it is however softer and of a looser texture, for which reason it lasts longer, and does not wear out so soon as ours." Now as the persons embalmed were of great distinction, it is probable that the linen, in which the mummies were wrapped, was the finest at that time in Egypt; but if it was so coarse, why is it represented in this passage of Ezekiel as such a piece of magnificence for the ships of Tyre to have their sails of the linen of Egypt? Certainly, because though coarse in our eyes, it was thought to be very valuable when used even for clothing; and if matting was then commonly used for sails, as appears from Niebuhr to be the case at present on the Red sea, sails of linen must have been extremely magnificent. Harmer.

—— blue and purple from the isles of Elishah] Blue and purple are elsewhere reckoned among those colours which set off the richest attire; see Exod. xxv. 4; Jer. x. 9. They were brought from the islands of the Egean sea, particularly Coos, famed for purple among heathen authors. Elishah denotes the countries upon the coast of Greece; a part of Peloponnesus retains the name of Elis. W. Lowth. Bochart explains "Elishah" of Peloponnesus; and Michaelis remarks the resemblance of the name to Hellenes, who are said by Herodotus to have settled in the Peloponnesus. Abp. Newcome.

—— which covered thee.] Perhaps the awning placed over the ship. Harmer. St. Jerome suggests, that it might have been the dress of the pilots and the rowers. Calmet.

8. — Arvad] The island Aradus at the mouth of the river Eleutherus, on the coast of Phenicia, opposite to Tyre. The Arvadite is mentioned, Gen. x. 18. It is also called Arpad or Arphad, 2 Kings xviii. 34; Is. x. 9; Jer. xlix. 23. W. Lowth. The Tyrians were so opulent, that they employed the inhabitants of other cities in the servile office of rowers and mariners. Calmet.

9. — of Gebal] Probably Biblos on the coast of Phenicia.

10. — Lud] Probably an Egyptian colony. Abp. Newcome.

—— they hanged the shield and helmet in thee;] In their garrisons which they kept in time of peace. W. Lowth. Sandys speaks of one of the gates of the seraglio at Constantinople being "hung with shields and scimitars." Parkhurst.

—— the Gammadims] These were, as many think, a people in Phenicia. W. Lowth.

12. Tarshish] See note at 1 Kings x. 22.

13. Javan,] Greece, Dan. viii. 21. It was so called from Javan the son of Japhet, Gen. x. 2: from whom the Greeks are called Ions in their own tongue. Michaelis. All Greece, except Peloponnesus, was anciently called Ionia. W. Lowth.

—— Tubal, and Meshech,] Sons of Japhet, Gen. x. 2. The people called Tibareni and Moschi are here meant, who are generally mentioned together, and were situated towards mount Caucasus and the Euxine sea. Bochart, Michaelis.

—— they traded the persons of men] Sellers of men for slaves are branded by St. Paul as highly criminal, 1 Tim. i. 10. They abounded with them. Bochart observes, that Pontus, to which the Tibareni extended themselves, was remarkable for slaves; and that the Grecian slaves were the most valuable of any. Abp. Newcome.

—— vessels of brass] Mines of copper are worked in Caucasus to this day; and a village called Kubesche, on that mountain, is celebrated for the elegance of its brasen vessels. Michaelis.

14. — Togarmah] By "Togarmah" Bochart understands Cappadocia. The Septuagint reads "Thorgama," Gen. x. 3; which comes near in sound to Trogma or Trocma, a part of Cappadocia. W. Lowth.

15. — Dedan] A city in the Persian gulph, now called Dadan. Bochart, Michaelis. To this place the inhabitants of the Eastern isles or seacoasts brought their wares. Abp. Newcome.

The Dedan here spoken of was derived from that Dedan mentioned Gen. x. 7, the son of Raamah or Regma. W. Lowth.

—— many isles were the merchandise of thine hand:] They exported thy manufactures, "the wares of thy making," as they are called in the following verse; and by way of return brought thee in ivory and other rarities from India. W. Lowth.

16. Syria was thy merchant] Although it be certain that some of the wares mentioned in this verse were not the natural product of Syria, yet they might all have formed articles of the Syrian trade. The ingenious author of the Ruins of Palmyra supposes, that it was the East India trade which so enriched that city, and he imagines that this was at least as ancient as the time of Solo-

17. — wheat of Minnith,] These were the commodities which the Jews imported to Tyre, chiefly the necessary provisions for food; the Tyrians having none of their own growth. The Jews supplied them therewith from their own or the neighbouring countries; see 1 Kings v. 9, 11; Ezra iii. 7; Acts xii. 20. Minnith was a place belonging to the Ammonites; see Judges xi. 33. W. Lowth.

—— and Pannag,] This word is not elsewhere to be found; some suppose it to be not the name of a place, but of some rich ointment or gum. W. Lowth.

18. — wine of Helbon,] Helbon is supposed the same part of Syria which is called Chalybonitis by Ptolemy; now Aleppo: Strabo and Hesychius mention Chalybonian wine as the produce of Syria. Athenæus says, "It was so excellent, that the Persian king drank no other;" and Posidonius says, "that it grew in Damascus of Syria." W. Lowth.

—— and white wool.] The wool was dyed purple at Tyre. W. Lowth.

19. Dan — and Javan] By "Dan" St. Jerome understands the town afterwards called Cesarea Philippi, in the tribe of Dan. The Javan here mentioned is thought by Bochart to mean the southern part of Arabia. W. Lowth.

—— bright iron,] Steel or wrought iron. Abp. Newcome.

—— cassia, and calamus,] These articles being aromatick gums, confirm Bochart's interpretation in the note above; they are known not to grow in Greece but in Arabia. W. Lowth.

20. Dedan] This is probably to be understood of the posterity of that Dedan, who was Abraham's grandson; see chap. xxv. 13. W. Lowth.

—— in precious clothes] In the margin, "clothes of freedom:" literally, "clothes of stripping off for riding": it seems to mean such clothes as were used in riding, and occasionally stripped off the horse or other beast; that is, a kind of horsecloths, on which the ancients used to ride, before the invention of saddles with stirrups, which were not known till long after: in one word, housings. Parkhurst.

22. — Raamah,] Raamah was son of Cush, and father of Sheba. According to Bochart, Raamah is a city of Arabia on the Persian gulph.

23. Haran,] See Genesis xi. 31.

—— Canneh, and Eden,] Supposed by some to be ports in Arabia Felix. W. Lowth.

24. — bound with cords, and made of cedar,] Carefully packed up in chests of cedar, to give these clothes a fine scent, and to preserve them from decay. W. Lowth.

25. The ships of Tarshish did sing of thee] Ships of Tarshish signify sometimes in Scripture any trading or merchant ships; see Is. ii. 16. W. Lowth, Calmet. The Prophet, having reckoned up the principal countries which traded with Tyre, now adds, in comprehensive terms, that all merchant adventurers sung or spake great things of her riches; or as the word may be rendered, "they ruled or governed in thy markets." W. Lowth.

26. — into great waters:] Under these beautiful and expressive figures Tyre is represented as brought into danger by her statesmen, and destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar; see the like comparison Is. xxxiii. 23. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth. The Prophet is here speaking of Tyre under the image of a ship. Bp. Warburton.

29. — upon the land,] The shore of the adjoining island, from which they viewed the conflagration of their city. Abp. Newcome.

588. THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, say unto the prince of Tyrus, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thine heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, I am a god, I sit in the seat of God, in the † midst of the seas; [a] yet thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thine heart as the heart of God:

† Heb. heart.
[a] Isa. 31. 3.

3 Behold, thou art wiser than Daniel; there is no secret that they can hide from thee:

Before CHRIST 588.

4 With thy wisdom and with thine understanding thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures:

5 † By thy great wisdom and by thy traffick hast thou increased thy riches, and thine heart is lifted up because of thy riches:

† Heb. By the greatness of thy wisdom.

6 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thou hast set thine heart as the heart of God;

7 Behold, therefore I will bring strangers upon thee, the terrible of the nations: and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and they shall defile thy brightness.

8 They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas.

9 Wilt thou yet say before him that slayeth thee, I am God? but thou shalt be a man, and no God, in the hand of him that ‖ slayeth thee.

10 Thou shalt die the deaths of the uncircumcised by the hand of strangers: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD.

11 ¶ Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Son of man, take up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Thou sealest up the sum, full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty.

13 Thou hast been in Eden the garden

34. In the time when thou shalt be broken] In the time when thou shalt be destroyed by the Babylonian forces, which like a raging sea shall come in upon thee; thy trade, and all the commerce that thou hadst with other nations, shall utterly fail. Bp. Hall.

36. — shall hiss at thee;] By way of insult and derision; see 1 Kings ix. 8; as men are apt to despise those in adversity, whom they courted and respected in prosperity. The Chaldee Paraphrase renders it, "they shall be astonished;" and this sense agrees better with the lamentations of the seafaring men, mentioned in the foregoing verses. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXVIII. ver. 2. — the prince of Tyrus,] His name was Ithobal; as appears from the Phenician annals extracted from Josephus. Calmet, Abp. Newcome.

—— though thou set thine heart as the heart of God:] Though thou hast in thy proud thoughts equalled thyself with God. Bp. Hall.

Ezekiel here censures the pride of the king of Tyre, as he had before condemned the people for their insolence. For these and their other vices, more especially for their insults and injuries against the Jews, chap. xxvi. 2, the Prophets prophesied against them; see Is. xxiii. 9. Bp. Newton.

3. Behold, thou art wiser than Daniel;] In thy own conceit. Bp. Hall. The fame of Daniel's wisdom was quickly spread over Chaldea upon his being advanced to several posts of honour and dignity by Nebuchadnezzar; see Dan. ii. 48. The Phenicians, of whom the Tyrians were a colony, valued themselves for their wisdom and ingenuity, as being the inventors of navigation, of letters, and sciences; compare Zech. ix. 2. W. Lowth.

8. — of them that are slain in the midst of the seas.] And thou, that hast fondly imagined thyself a god, shalt die the death of thine ordinary vassals, notwithstanding thy strong forts and bulwarks of the sea. Bp. Hall.

9. Will thou yet say before him that slayeth thee, I am God?] A keen taunt or sarcasm. What will become of thy divinity then? Wilt thou then dream of immortality and almighty power, when thine enemy is killing thee? Appear then to thyself and others to be a mortal, weak, conquered man, who dieth a sacrifice to the conqueror's pride and cruelty. Poole.

10. — of the uncircumcised] Circumcision being the rite which distinguished God's people from the heathen, "uncircumcised" is equivalent in sense to "wicked or profane." W. Lowth. So the Greeks gave other nations the contemptuous name of "Barbarians;" see 1 Sam. xvii. 36. Abp. Newcome.

12. — Thou sealest up the sum, &c.] In thine own opinion thou art the perfect pattern of wisdom and all other excellencies. The expression is taken from vessels and other repositories, which when full were sealed in order to preserve their contents. See Deut. xxxii. 32; Job xiv. 17. W. Lowth.

13. Thou hast been in Eden the garden of God;] Thou abundedst in all delicacies, as if thou hadst lived in paradise. Bp. Hall.

16 By the multitude of thy merchandise they have filled the midst of thee with violence, and thou hast sinned: therefore I will cast thee as profane out of the mountain of God: and I will destroy thee, O covering cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire.

17 Thine heart was lifted up because of thy beauty, thou hast corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness: I will cast thee to the ground, I will lay thee before kings, that they may behold thee.

18 Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries by the multitude of thine iniquities, by the iniquity of thy traffick; therefore will I bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, it shall devour thee, and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth in the sight of all them that behold thee.

23 For I will send into her pestilence, and blood into her streets; and the wounded shall be judged in the midst of her by the sword upon her on every side; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

24 ¶ And there shall be no more a pricking brier unto the house of Israel, nor any grieving thorn of all that are round about them, that despised them; and they shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

25 Thus saith the Lord GOD; When I

This expression, as well as the whole context, alludes to the complete happiness which Adam enjoyed in paradise before his apostasy and fearful fall. W. Lowth.

—— every precious stone was thy covering,] In the canopy of thy throne; or, thy garments have been adorned with them. Abp. Newcome.

—— the workmanship of thy tabrets — was prepared in thee] The Prophet here notices the enjoyments of the Tyrians, their musick and songs, on instruments of the most exquisite workmanship: with allusion probably either to those solemnities, with which the birth of princes is celebrated, or to those which accompany the coronation of a king, and his investiture with the royal dignity. Poole.

14. Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth;] The particle of similitude "like" is understood; the two cherubim of beaten gold were part of the ark, and therefore anointed, Exod. xxv. 18, 21; xxx. 26; the two cherubim covered the mercy seat with their wings. In this lamentation, wisdom, beauty, magnificence, splendour and perfection are attributed to the king of Tyre; he likewise bore an exalted and sacred office: on these accounts he is compared to one of the angelick orders. Abp. Newcome.

—— thou wast upon the holy mountain of God; &c.] The image of the cherub is pursued; such was thy eminent distinction, that thou wast, as it were, placed in the temple of God in His holy mountain. Thou wast, as it were, conversant among the twelve precious stones on the breastplate of the high priest, which shone like fire. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome. Whenever God, who dwelt between the cherubim, was approached, the high priest wore his breastplate, Exod. xxviii. 30; 1 Sam. xxviii. 6. Abp. Newcome. Thinking himself more than mortal, is expressed by being as Adam was in paradise, and as the cherubim were in a place not to be approached. Abp. Secker. Tertullian paraphrases the latter part of the verse thus: "Thou hadst thy abode among glittering stars," as the angels are sometimes called; see Job xxv viii. 7; Is. xiv. 13. W. Lowth.

16. By the multitude of thy merchandise &c.] By the confluence of much people upon the occasions of thy merchandise, and the oppressive bargains that are used therein, thou art full of fraud, and violence, and art thereupon grown exceedingly sinful; therefore will I cast thee out from those vainly pretended rights which thou claimest in the temple of God: I will destroy thee, O thou false cherub, from the ark whose covering thou wouldst resemble, and strike thee down from those clouds where thou affectest to walk among the fiery meteors. Bp. Hall.

17. —— by reason of thy brightness:] That height of glory to which I had advanced thee has perverted thy judgment, and made thee abuse thy wisdom to craft and deceit. W. Lowth.

—— I will lay thee before kings,] I will make thee a spectacle and a warning or object of contempt to other princes. W. Lowth, Poole.

18. Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries] By the multitude of thine iniquities, thou hast defiled those places of majesty and devotion which thou wouldest have to be thought sacred. Bp. Hall, Calmet. Or, the word translated "sanctuaries" may mean palaces, stately buildings. W. Lowth.

21. —— against Zidon,] Zidon was the mother city of Tyre; and possessed for a long time the empire of Phenicia, and of the sea. Afterwards Tyre became more powerful than the mother country, and obtained the sovereignty, both of Zidon and the other cities of Phenicia. We learn from Josephus, that Zidon revolted from Tyre, and submitted herself to Shalmaneser. They were however generally partakers of the same fate in prosperity and adversity, and the destruction of Zidon followed close upon that of Tyre. Calmet, W. Lowth.

24. And there shall be no more a pricking brier unto the house of Israel, &c.] I will put an end to the sorrows of My Church; these heathens shall no more gall and grieve them; neither shall the nations round about insult upon their miseries, and trample upon them. Bp. Hall.

25. —— When I shall have gathered &c.] These expressions refer

Before CHRIST 589. shall have gathered the house of Israel from the people among whom they are scattered, and shall be sanctified in them in the sight of the heathen, then shall they dwell in their land that I have given to my servant Jacob.

‖ Or, with confidence. 26 And they shall dwell ‖ safely therein, and shall build houses, and plant vineyards; yea, they shall dwell with confidence, when I have executed judgments upon all those that ‖ despise them round about them; and they shall know that I am the LORD their God.

1 The judgment of Pharaoh for his treachery to Israel. 8 The desolation of Egypt. 13 The restoration thereof after forty years. 17 Egypt the reward of Nebuchadrezzar. 21 Israel shall be restored.

569. IN the tenth year, in the tenth month, in the twelfth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, set thy face against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and prophesy against him, and against all Egypt:

3 Speak, and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, the great [a] dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself.

to the times of the Gospel, and are to be understood in a spiritual sense. Junius. Or, if we follow the literal sense of the words, it is a plain prophecy, either of the comparative safety and happiness which the Jews enjoyed after the seventy years' captivity; (Poole;) or, of the general restoration of the Jews, and their future return into their own land; as will appear by comparing the words with the parallel texts of this Prophet, namely, chap. xi. 17; xx. 38, 41; xxxiv. 13; xxxvi. 24; xxxvii. 12, 14, 21, 25; xxxix. 27. Compare Is. lxv. 9, 10; Jer. xxx. 18; xxxii. 41; in which prediction most of the other Prophets agree with him. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXIX. ver. 1. In the tenth year, in the tenth month, &c.] This and the three following chapters are joined together, because they treat of the same subject; though they consist of prophecies uttered at very different periods of time. The period assigned at the head of this chapter is during the siege of Jerusalem, and, agreeably to ver. 6, 7, may be immediately after Pharaoh's retreat, foretold by Jeremiah, chap. xxxvii. 7. Abp. Newcome.

2. — against Pharaoh] Pharaoh being a common name to all the kings of Egypt, this prince was called Pharaoh-hophra by Jeremiah, chap. xliv. 30; and Apries by Herodotus. W. Lowth.

3. — the great dragon] The crocodile is alluded to. Bochart remarks, that the word Pharaoh signifies a crocodile in the Arabick tongue. Among the ancients it was a symbol of Egypt, and appears so in Roman coins. W. Lowth, Michaelis.

—— that lieth in the midst of his rivers.] Memphis is thought to have been the residence of the ancient kings of Egypt. There were large lakes to the north and west of Memphis, which made the strength of the place surprising; and Dr. Pococke saw some near Alettahenny, which he supposes were these very lakes. Nothing then could be more natural than these words of Ezekiel. Harmer. The expression however is to be understood figuratively: and, as Pharaoh is intended by the "great dragon," so the power, riches, and forces of his kingdom are denoted by "his rivers:" as it follows, "My river is mine own," that is, all the strength and glory of Egypt are mine. Poole.

—— I have made it for myself.] This vaunting language agrees with what Herodotus relates of Pharaoh-hophra, (see Jer. xliv. 30,) or Apries. This is said to have been the persuasion of Apries, that no God was able to deprive him of his kingdom. Grotius, Abp. Newcome.

4. But I will put hooks in thy jaws, &c.] But I will put the hooks of the king of Babylon into thy jaws, and will drag thee out of those watery forts of thine to the dry land; and for thy princes and people, which are as the lesser sort of fishes, they also, as sticking to thy scales, shall be plucked out with thee. Bp. Hall. This prophecy may also relate to the unsuccessful expedition of Apries against the Cyrenians. W. Lowth. To the mutiny of his own people, and to his defeat by Amasis. Abp. Newcome.

5. — thrown into the wilderness,] This seems to be a plainer allusion to the heavy loss which Apries and his Egyptian army sustained amongst the deserts of Lybia and Cyrene. Apries did not perish there, he was strangled afterwards in his palace. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth. Thrown upon the shore. Calmet.

6. — a staff of reed.] A deceitful and untrusty stay to the house of Israel. Canes or reeds abounded on the banks of the Nile. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

7. When they took hold of thee by thy hand, thou didst break, and rend all their shoulder:] Or their arm. The sharp fragment pierced the arm that leaned on it. The king, who was Zedekiah's confederate, came with a great army to raise the siege of Jerusalem; but durst not venture a battle with the Chaldeans, and in a little time returned into his own country, deserting Zedekiah, whom he had engaged to rebel against Nebuchadnezzar; whereby they became the occasion of his own and his people's ruin, chap. xvii 15; Jer. xxxvii. 5, 7. W. Lowth.

—— and madest all their loins to be at a stand.] Or, "and didst strain all their loins." Abp. Newcome.

8. — a sword] This may be understood of Nebuchadnezzar, who, taking advantage of Amasis' revolt, overran that country, and made a prey of the whole kingdom. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 589. late and waste; and they shall know that I am the LORD: because he hath said, The river is mine, and I have made it.

10 Behold, therefore I am against thee, and against thy rivers, and I will make the land of Egypt † utterly waste and desolate, from the tower of † Syene even unto the border of Ethiopia.

† Heb. wastes of waste. † Heb. Sewenich.

12 And I will make the land of Egypt desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities among the cities that are laid waste shall be desolate forty years: and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries.

13 ¶ Yet thus saith the Lord GOD; At * Jer. 46. 26. the ᶜ end of forty years will I gather the Egyptians from the people whither they were scattered:

14 And I will bring again the captivity of Egypt, and will cause them to return into the land of Pathros, into the land of their ‖habitation; and they shall be there a † base kingdom.

Before CHRIST about 589. ‖ Or, birth. † Heb. low.

16 And it shall be no more the confidence of the house of Israel, which bringeth their iniquity to remembrance, when they shall look after them: but they shall know that I am the Lord GOD.

17 ¶ And it came to pass in the seven and twentieth year, in the first month, in the first day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon caused his army to serve a great service against Tyrus: every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled: yet had he no wages, nor his army, for Tyrus, for the service that he had served against it:

10. — from the tower of Syene even unto the border of Ethiopia.] From the south borders of Egypt unto the north, shall the land be desolate. Bp. Hall. Others prefer the translation, "from Migdol to Syene even unto the border of Ethiopia." Compare chap. xxx. 5, 9. Migdol, or Magdolus, was a town near the Red sea, as appears from Exod. xiv. 2; Numb. xxxiii. 7. It lay therefore towards the north, at the entrance of Egypt from Palestine. And Syene was to the south of Egypt, under the tropick of Cancer, and bordering upon African Ethiopia. Dean Prideaux, W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

11. — neither shall it be inhabited forty years.] After the total defeat of Apries by the Cyrenians, in which so many Egyptians fell, that the whole nation was enraged against their king, a civil war with Amasis followed; after that a conquest and a desolation of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, and another conquest of it by Cyrus. We learn from this passage, during what period of years Egypt was laid waste, and in a manner deserted. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth. Amasis reigned forty-four years according to Herodotus. The forty years of desolation must have ended in the time of Cyrus, who probably permitted the Egyptian captives to return. Calmet.

12. — I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations,] Some of them shall flee for refuge into foreign countries, and some shall be carried captive by the Babylonians. Compare Jer. xlvi. 19. W. Lowth.

We cannot prove from heathen authors that this desolation of the country continued exactly forty years, though it is likely enough that this, as well as the other conquered countries, did not shake off the Babylonian yoke till the time of Cyrus: but we are assured by Berosus, that Nebuchadnezzar took several captives in Egypt, and carried them to Babylon; and from Megasthenes we learn, that he transplanted and settled others in Pontus. So true it is that they were "scattered among the nations, and dispersed through the countries;" and aright, upon the dissolution of the Babylonian empire, return to their native country. Bp. Newton.

14. — into the land of Pathros,] That part of Egypt which is called Thebais, as Bochart proves by several arguments. W. Lowth.

15. It shall be the basest of the kingdoms;] And, as it follows in the next chapter, "there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt," ver. 13. It is now a great deal above two thousand years since this prophecy was first delivered: and what likelihood or appearance was there, that the Egyptians should for so many ages bow under a foreign yoke, and never in all that time be able to recover their liberties, and have a prince of their own to reign over them? Bp. Newton. In Egypt the human mind had made some of its earliest and most auspicious efforts. It was long the general opinion, that there the laws of society had been discovered, and the fountains of science opened. Unquestionably that ingenious people were very early distinguished by an ardent spirit of enterprise, and a peculiar happiness of invention. The stupendous monuments of art, which lie scattered over the banks of the Nile, attest the vastness of their designs, and the extent of their power. The earliest professors of literature, and the first founders of civil polity, in Europe, and in the more western provinces of Asia, travelled into Egypt, and there acquired a knowledge of the fundamental principles of science and government. Egypt was possessed likewise of natural advantages, which could seldom fail. Its situation was singularly calculated to defend it against the attacks of foreign invaders: whilst its uncommon fruitfulness promised to secure the country, which it enriched, from poverty, baseness, and subjection. Yet after a long course of grandeur, and in contradiction to its natural advantages, Ezekiel pronounced that "the kingdom should be the basest of kingdoms," and that "there should be no more a prince of the land of Egypt." Richards. As is the prophecy, so is the event. For not long afterwards Egypt was conquered by the Babylonians; and after the Babylonians, by the Persians; and after the Persians, it became subject to the Macedonians; and after the Macedonians, to the Romans; and after the Romans, to the Saracens; and then to the Mamalucks; and is now a province of the Ottoman empire. Bp. Newton.

16. — which bringeth their iniquity to remembrance,] Causing God to punish the iniquity of His people. Abp. Newcome. God never forgets; but when He visits, punishes, and judges a nation for their sin, then their sin is said to come up into remembrance. Poole.

17. — in the seven and twentieth year,] See the note on ver. 1.

18. — to serve a great service.] The siege lasted thirteen years. The heads of the soldiers were made bald by the helmet, by disease, and by labour: and their shoulders galled by carrying earth to raise mounts and fortifications against it. W. Lowth, Bp. Hall.

—— yet had he no wages, nor his army.] This was literally true: for when the Tyrians saw that the works for carrying on the siege were perfected, and the foundations of the walls were shaken by the battering of the rams, whatsoever precious things in gold, silver, clothes, and various kinds of furniture, the nobility had, they put them on board their ships, and carried them to the islands; so that the city being taken, Nebuchadnezzar found nothing worthy of his labour. Bp. Newton.

20. — because they wrought for me,] The destruction of cities and countries is a work of God's providence, for the effecting of which He makes use of kings and princes as His instruments. Upon this account He calls Nebuchadnezzar His servant, Jer. xxv. 9, because "he wrought for Him," as it is here expressed; that is, executed His judgments upon Tyre, and the other cities and countries which God delivered into his hand. W. Lowth.

21. — the horn of the house of Israel to bud forth,] The enlargement of Jehoiakim may be referred to. See 2 Kings xxv. 27. Or, Zerubbabel, who was born at Babylon, of the house of David. Daniel was also advanced to authority, Dan. ii. 48, 49. These marks of favour bestowed upon the Jews were preludes to their general restoration. Whatever event is foretold, Ezekiel lived to be animated by it in his prophetical office, as appears from the following clause. Abp. Newcome, Calmet.

—— Woe worth the day!] "To worth," or "wurth," is a Saxon verb, signifying to be. It is now only retained in "woe worth," that is, woe be, a denunciation, or exclamation of sorrow. Dr. Johnson. Unhappy be! or, Woe be to! Tyrwhitt.

3. — the day is near,] The day when the Lord will take vengeance of the heathen, who have oppressed His people. Bp. Hall.

5. Ethiopia, and Libya, and Lydia,] The names in the Hebrew are "Cush, Phut, and Lud," who are mentioned together as the Egyptian allies, Jer. xlvi. 9. Cush probably signifies Ethiopia here, (see chap. xxix. 10,) as being joined with Phut and Lud, who were people of Africa. See the note on chap. xxvii. 10. W. Lowth.

—— all the mingled people,] See the note on Jer. xxv. 20.

—— and Chub,] In Marcotis, an Egyptian province according to Ptolemy. They are called Cubii. W. Lowth, Grotius.

—— and the men of the land that is in league,] The Septuagint translates it, "the men of my league or covenant;" that is, the Jews, who took refuge in Egypt after the murder of Gedaliah. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

6. — They also that uphold Egypt] Either the princes, counsellers, and warriours in Egypt; or the foreigners that favoured and helped her. Poole.

8. — a fire in Egypt,] God's judgments are often compared to fire. W. Lowth.

9. — in ships] Up the Nile to Ethiopia, it being a more secure way of conveying intelligence in a time of general commotion. Abp. Newcome. St. Jerome informs us, that vessels navigated the Nile as far as the cataracts at Syene, on the borders of Ethiopia. Calmet.

—— in the day of Egypt:] The Egyptians and Ethiopians being confederates, the news of the conquest of Egypt shall sensibly affect them. W. Lowth.

11. — the terrible of the nations,] See chap. xxviii. 7.

12. — I will make the rivers dry,] The fertility and prosperity of

Before CHRIST 572. that is therein, by the hand of strangers: I the LORD have spoken it.

18 Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will
* Zech. 13. 2. also * destroy the idols, and I will cause their images to cease out of Noph; and there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt: and I will put a fear in the land of Egypt.

14 And I will make Pathros desolate,
‖ Or, Tanis. and will set fire in ‖ Zoan, and will execute judgments in No.

‖ Or, Pelusium. 15 And I will pour my fury upon ‖ Sin, the strength of Egypt; and I will cut off the multitude of No.

16 And I will set fire in Egypt: Sin shall have great pain, and No shall be rent asunder, and Noph shall have distresses daily.

‖ Or, Heliopolis. ‖ Or, Pubastum. 17 The young men of ‖ Aven and of ‖ Pi-beseth shall fall by the sword: and these cities shall go into captivity.

18 At Tehaphnehes also the day shall
‖ Or, restrained. be ‖ darkened, when I shall break there the yokes of Egypt: and the pomp of her strength shall cease in her: as for her, a cloud shall cover her, and her daughters shall go into captivity.

19 Thus will I execute judgments in Egypt: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

588. 20 ¶ And it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first month, in the seventh day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

21 Son of man, I have broken the arm of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and, lo, it shall not be bound up to be healed, to put a roller to bind it, to make it strong to hold the sword.

22 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Before CHRIST 588.
Behold, I am against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and will break his arms, the strong, and that which was broken; and I will cause the sword to fall out of his hand.

23 And I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them through the countries.

24 And I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and put my sword in his hand: but I will break Pharaoh's arms, and he shall groan before him with the groanings of a deadly wounded man.

25 But I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and the arms of Pharaoh shall fall down; and they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall stretch it out upon the land of Egypt.

26 And I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them among the countries; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

1 A relation unto Pharaoh, 3 of the glory of Assyria, 10 and the fall thereof for pride. 18 The like destruction of Egypt.

AND it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the third month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

Egypt depended entirely upon the overflowing of the Nile. Abp. Newcome.

18. — out of Noph.] Noph, or Memphis, was one of the principal cities of Egypt, a seat of their kings, where their sepulchres stood. On this account it is frequently mentioned in Scripture. See Is. xix. 13; Jer. ii. 16; xliv. 1. In Hosea it is called "Moph," (chap. ix. 6,) which comes near in sound to Memphis. W. Lowth. Cairo is called to this day "Menoph." Abp. Newcome.

—— no more a prince] A natural prince of the Egyptian race to rule over it. It shall be subject to foreigners. Abp. Secker. See the note on chap. xxix. 15.

14. — Pathros] See chap. xxix. 14, and note.

—— in Zoan,] Or Tanis, one of the ancient cities of Egypt, Numb. xiii. 22; Ps. lxxviii. 12, 43. W. Lowth, Dr. Wells.

—— No.] Diospolis, or Thebes. Bochart. It was the capital of Upper Egypt. Calmet.

18. — Tehaphnehes] Elsewhere written Tahpanhes; it is supposed to be the same place which was afterwards called Daphne Pelusiacæ. Bp. Hall, W. Lowth. See the notes on Is. xxx. 4; Jer. ii. 16.

—— the yokes] The yokes imposed by the Egyptians. W. Lowth.

22. — and will break his arms, the strong, and that which was broken; &c.] The king of Babylon had before dispossessed the king of Egypt of all his new conquests, from the river of Egypt to the river Euphrates, 2 Kings xxiv. 7. So that this part of his strength was already taken away, never to be recovered; and now God threatens to destroy the remainder of his power, the kingdom of Egypt itself. W. Lowth.

24. And I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon.] The same promise God afterwards made to Cyrus, Is. xlv. 1. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXXI. ver. 2. — Whom art thou like] Thou pridest thyself as if there never was any prince or king that could compare with thee. W. Lowth.

3. Behold, the Assyrian] The Assyrian empire, which was destroyed by Nabopolassar king of Babylon.

The fitness and beauty of this fine image may be learnt from the account of the cedars of Libanus, given by different authors. See note at 1 Kings v. 6.

The prophetick and poetical writers among the Jews make use of the cedar of Lebanon in a figurative sense to express something proud, of high stature, and magnificence, as in this place. This shadowing shroud, and of an high stature; and his top was among the thick boughs.

‖ Or, nourished. ‖ Or, brought him up. ‖ Or, conduits.

4 The waters ‖ made him great, the deep ‖ set him up on high with her rivers running round about his plants, and sent out her ‖ little rivers unto all the trees of the field.

5 Therefore his height was exalted above all the trees of the field, and his boughs were multiplied, and his branches became long because of the multitude of waters, ‖ when he shot forth.

‖ Or, when it sent them forth. [a] Dan. 4. 12.

6 All the [a] fowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs, and under his branches did all the beasts of the field bring forth their young, and under his shadow dwelt all great nations.

7 Thus was he fair in his greatness, in the length of his branches: for his root was by great waters.

[b] Gen. 2. 8.

8 The cedars in the [b] garden of God could not hide him: the fir trees were not like his boughs, and the chesnut trees were not like his branches; nor any tree in the garden of God was like unto him in his beauty.

9 I have made him fair by the multitude of his branches: so that all the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, envied him.

10 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Because thou hast lifted up thyself in height, and he hath shot up his top among the thick boughs, and his heart is lifted up in his height;

Before CHRIST 588.

11 I have therefore delivered him into the hand of the mighty one of the heathen; † he shall surely deal with him: for I have driven him out for his wickedness.

† Heb. in dealing he shall deal unto him.

12 And strangers, the terrible of the nations, have cut him off, and have left him: upon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen, and his boughs are broken by all the rivers of the land; and all the people of the earth are gone down from his shadow, and have left him.

13 Upon his ruin shall all the fowls of the heaven remain, and all the beasts of the field shall be upon his branches:

14 To the end that none of all the trees by the waters exalt themselves for their height, neither shoot up their top among the thick boughs, neither their trees ‖ stand up in their height, all that drink water: for they are all delivered unto death, to the nether parts of the earth, in the midst of the children of men, with them that go down to the pit.

‖ Or, stand upon themselves for their height.

15 Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the day when he went down to the grave I caused a mourning: I covered the deep for him, and I restrained the floods thereof, and the great waters were stayed: and beautiful tree, remarkable for its loftiness, and in the most flourishing condition, but afterwards cut down and deserted, gives us a lively painting of the glory and the catastrophe of the Assyrian monarch. The manner, in which the Prophet has embellished his description, is full of propriety and elegance, and the colouring is such as fills the mind with the greatest delight. Bp. Lowth.

4. The waters made him great,] As trees flourish by a river side, (compare chap. xvii. 5,) so the traffick of the several branches of the river Tigris, upon which Nineveh was situated, made that city and kingdom rich and populous, and she imparted her wealth and stores among the neighbouring provinces. See Nahum ii. 6. W. Lowth.

—— little rivers] Small artificial channels, through which water was distributed in Eastern gardens. According to St. Jerome, the rivers represent the tributary kings of Assyria, and the little rivers its princes and governours, to whom the royal authority was communicated. Calmet.

6. All the fowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs,] Representing the several nations which applied to the Assyrians for protection and safety, chap. xvii. 23; Dan. iv. 12. W. Lowth.

8. The cedars in the garden of God could not hide him: &c.] See Ps. lxxx. 10. Such fair cedars as might be supposed to grow in paradise. W. Lowth. Implying, that the greatest princes in the most flourishing kingdoms of the world could not stand in comparison with the Assyrian monarch; but all of them were forced to yield to him as more powerful and glorious than themselves. Bp. Hall.

9. — all the trees of Eden, — envied him.] "All the kings of the East envied him his greatness," as the Chaldee Paraphrase expresseth the sense. W. Lowth.

11. — the mighty one of the heathen;] Or, "of the nations," as the same word is rendered in the next verse. Nabopolassar king of Babylon, who with Cyaxares destroyed the kingdom of Assyria: see ver. 3, and note. W. Lowth.

12. — have cut him off, and have left him:] Without life or strength, like a tree that is cut down, dried up, and withered. W. Lowth.

13. Upon his ruin &c.] As the birds sit upon the boughs of a tree cut down, and the beasts browse upon its branches, so his dominions shall be a prey to the conquerors; or his armies that are slain shall become meat to the birds and beasts. W. Lowth.

14. To the end &c.] To the end that none of the proud princes of the earth should hereafter dare to exalt themselves in the overweening confidence of their own strength and glory. Bp. Hall.

—— all that drink water:] A figurative expression for trees, which derive so much nourishment from water. Abp. Newcome.

—— for they are all delivered unto death,] Whatever distinction there is between them and the inferiour sort, death shall make them all equal, Ps. lxxxii. 7. This is more particularly intimated to Egypt, and to those other countries against which God had denounced His judgments: the same fate is here allotted to them which the Assyrian monarch had undergone. W. Lowth.

15. — In the day when he went down to the grave] This and the following verse form a noble and elegant description of that consternation which seized the king of Assyria's allies at the suddenness of his downfal: the same metaphor being still pursued. W. Lowth.

—— I covered the deep for him,] I caused the deep to mourn; or, I caused it to cover itself in token of grief. Grotius. The deep that nourished this fair tree (ver. 4) is described as mourning at its downfal. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 588. I caused Lebanon † to mourn for him, and all the trees of the field fainted for him.

† Heb. to be black.

16 I made the nations to shake at the sound of his fall, when I cast him down to hell with them that descend into the pit: and all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water, shall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth.

17 They also went down into hell with him unto them that be slain with the sword; and they that were his arm, that dwelt under his shadow in the midst of the heathen.

18 ¶ To whom art thou thus like in glory and in greatness among the trees of Eden? yet shalt thou be brought down with the trees of Eden unto the nether parts of the earth: thou shalt lie in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword. This is Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord GOD.

CHAP. XXXII.

1 A lamentation for the fearful fall of Egypt. 11 The sword of Babylon shall destroy it. 17 It shall be brought down to hell, among all the uncircumcised nations.

597. AND it came to pass in the twelfth year, in the twelfth month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, take up a lamentation for Pharaoh king of Egypt, and say unto him, Thou art like a young lion of the nations, and thou art as a ‖ whale in the seas: and thou camest forth with thy rivers, and troubledst the waters with thy feet, and fouledst their rivers.

Before CHRIST 587.

‖ Or, dragon.

3 Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will therefore [a] spread out my net over thee with a company of many people; and they shall bring thee up in my net.

[a] Chap. 12. 13. & 17. 20.

4 Then will I leave thee upon the land, I will cast thee forth upon the open field, and will cause all the fowls of the heaven to remain upon thee, and I will fill the beasts of the whole earth with thee.

5 And I will lay thy flesh upon the mountains, and fill the valleys with thy height.

6 I will also water with thy blood ‖ the land wherein thou swimmest, even to the mountains; and the rivers shall be full of thee.

‖ Or, the land of thy swimming.

7 And when I shall ‖ put thee out, [b] I will cover the heaven, and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light.

‖ Or, extinguish. [b] Isa. 13. 10. Joel 2. 31. & 3. 15. Matth. 24. 29.

8 All the † bright lights of heaven will I make † dark over thee, and set darkness upon thy land, saith the Lord GOD.

† Heb. lights of the light in heaven. † Heb. them dark.

9 I will also † vex the hearts of many people, when I shall bring thy destruction among the nations, into the countries which thou hast not known.

† Heb. provoke to anger, or, grief.

10 Yea, I will make many people amazed at thee, and their kings shall be horribly afraid for thee, when I shall brandish my

16. — when I cast him down to hell (or the grave) with them that descend into the pit:] See chap. xxxii. 18, 21; Is. xiv. 15.

—— all the trees of Eden, — shall be comforted] The deceased princes, his allies and tributaries, described here as so many stately trees and cedars, shall feel some mitigation of their calamity, in considering, that this king, so mighty, and so powerful, is brought like themselves to the nether parts of the earth; or, that he is become their equal in the pit, in the grave, in the place of darkness, from which all distinctions of quality and condition are entirely banished. Calmet, W. Lowth.

17. — his arm,] His auxiliaries: the nations that composed his strength, and lived under his protection. W. Lowth.

18. To whom art thou thus like &c.] Oh Pharaoh! thou that art thus like to the Assyrian amongst all the kings of the earth in glory and magnificence, thou shalt also be like him in thy ruin; thou with the other princes of the world shalt be brought down into the grave, and shalt be destroyed in the midst of thy fellow heathen. Bp. Hall. The latter part of ver. 2 is here resumed, and the application is directly made to Egypt. Abp. Newcome.

Chap. XXXII. ver. 2. — take up a lamentation] To the preceding funeral panegyrick over Assyria, the fate of which was past, Ezekiel prophetically subjoins a similar panegyrick over Egypt, though its fate was still future; making plainly here a happy variation in the figure. In the former case past events are brought down and represented as now present before our eyes; whereas, on the contrary, by this prophetick figure, future events are anticipated, and represented as already past. Abp. Newcome.

—— thou art as a whale] By the original word we may fitly understand a crocodile, as hath been observed upon chap. xxix. 3, and the description that follows of this creature agrees very well to a crocodile, but cannot be applied to a whale. W. Lowth.

—— and thou camest forth with thy rivers, &c.] Thou didst raise mighty armies, and lead them out against thy neighbours; see chap. xxix. 3, and the note there. By "the waters" in the next clause are intended the neighbouring people, kings, and kingdoms, whose peace and enjoyments were disturbed by the invasion of the Egyptian monarch. Poole.

5. And I will lay thy flesh upon the mountains, &c.] Implying that the vast bulk of thine armies, when they are slain, shall fill both mountains and vallies. See chap. xxxi. 12. W. Lowth.

—— with thy height.] With thy projection, or thy carcase. Capellus.

7, 8. — I will cover the heaven, and make the stars thereof dark; &c.] Compare this sublime passage with chap. xxxi. 15.

The downfal and destruction of kingdoms is denoted by the strong figurative language of these verses. Kings and rulers are expressed by the sun, moon, and stars: compare Is. xiii. 10; xxxiv. 4; Joel ii. 31. God's judgments upon particular countries bring earnests of a general judgment, they are described in such terms, as if the whole frame of nature were dissolved. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth. See the notes on Is. xiii. 10.

9. — when I shall bring thy destruction among the nations,] The nations shall be affrighted and amazed when I shall bring unto them both the rumour and the expectation of thy destruction. Bp. Hall.

sword before them; and they shall tremble at every moment, every man for his own life, in the day of thy fall.

11 ¶ For thus saith the Lord GOD; The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon thee.

12 By the swords of the mighty will I cause thy multitude to fall, the terrible of the nations, all of them: and they shall spoil the pomp of Egypt, and all the multitude thereof shall be destroyed.

13 I will destroy also all the beasts thereof from beside the great waters; neither shall the foot of man trouble them any more, nor the hoofs of beasts trouble them.

14 Then will I make their waters deep, and cause their rivers to run like oil, saith the Lord GOD.

15 When I shall make the land of Egypt desolate, and the country shall be † destitute of that whereof it was full, when I shall smite all them that dwell therein, then shall they know that I am the LORD.

† Heb. desolate from the fulness thereof.

16 This is the lamentation wherewith they shall lament her: the daughters of the nations shall lament her: they shall lament for her, even for Egypt, and for all her multitude, saith the Lord GOD.

17 ¶ It came to pass also in the twelfth year, in the fifteenth day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

Before CHRIST about 587.

18 Son of man, wail for the multitude of Egypt, and cast them down, even her, and the daughters of the famous nations, unto the nether parts of the earth, with them that go down into the pit.

19 Whom dost thou pass in beauty? go down, and be thou laid with the uncircumcised.

20 They shall fall in the midst of them that are slain by the sword: ‖ she is delivered to the sword: draw her and all her multitudes.

‖ Or, the rest is lost.

21 The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell with them that help him: they are gone down, they lie uncircumcised, slain by the sword.

22 Asshur is there and all her company: his graves are about him: all of them slain, fallen by the sword:

23 Whose graves are set in the sides of the pit, and her company is round about her grave: all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which caused ‖ terror in the land of the living.

‖ Or, dismayed.

24 There is Elam and all her multitude

---

13. — from beside the great waters;] The cattle that used to feed upon the fertile meadows beside the hill shall be destroyed or driven away. Abp. Newcome.

—— trouble them] The country shall be so deserted, that the waters of the river shall not be fouled by man or beast. Abp. Newcome.

—— any more,] During the forty years of desolation, chap. xxix. 11.

14. Then will I make their waters deep, and cause their rivers to run like oil, &c.] The Prophet in the second verse compared the disturbances the Egyptians gave their neighbours to the troubling and fouling of waters; in allusion to which metaphor he saith here, that when Egypt is made desolate, and the number of men and beasts diminished by their wars and confusions, then their neighbours will enjoy such quietness as a river does, that smoothly glides along, and never hath its streams fouled or disturbed. W. Lowth.

16. — the daughters of the nations] That is, the people of the neighbouring countries: so the "daughter of Zion" and "of Babylon" signifies the inhabitants of those cities. The expression alludes to the mourning women, whose profession it was to lament at funerals. W. Lowth.

17. — in the fifteenth day of the month,] Probably of the twelfth month: see ver. 1. Calmet, W. Lowth.

18. Son of man, wail for the multitude &c.] This prophetick ode is a masterpiece in that species of writing, which is appropriated to the exciting of terrour. Bp. Lowth.

—— and cast them down, &c.] The Prophets are said to do what they foretell: see chap. xliii. 3; Jer. i. 10. Abp. Secker.

—— into the pit.] An imitation may be observed here of that sublime chapter, the 14th of Isaiah. But our Prophet has so conducted it in his own manner, that fertility of genius, copiousness of diction, and variety of expression, are not less to be admired in the one than in the other. Dathius. Bp. Lowth remarks, that Ezekiel has here described the same scene, with all the same circumstances as Isaiah; affording in it a singular example of the sublime and terrible, for which the former Prophet is so peculiarly distinguished. Abp. Newcome.

19. — go down, and be thou laid with the uncircumcised.] Strong and goodly as thou art, go down into the duet, and be laid together with thy godless and lewd companions of the profane heathen. Bp. Hall. See chap. xxviii. 10, and the notes there.

20. —draw her] Drag her carcase to the sepulchre. The words are addressed to the Babylonians. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

21. The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell with them that help him;] "Hell" signifies here the state of the dead, where the deceased tyrants with their subjects are represented as coming to meet the king of Egypt with his auxiliaries (see chap. xxx. 8) upon their arrival at the same place. Compare chap. xxxi. 16, 17; Isa. xiv. 9, &c. W. Lowth, Bp. Hall.

—— they are gone down, &c.] These warriours, famous in their time for their exploits, have undergone the same fate with other men of blood, and are gone down to the grave by violent deaths. W. Lowth.

22. Asshur is there and all her company:] The Assyrians, both king and people, whose destruction is represented in the foregoing chapter. W. Lowth.

23. Whose graves are set in the sides of the pit, &c.] See chap. xxvi. 20; Is. xiv. 15. The graves of his companies and complices are set in the sides of the burialplace round about the grave of Asshur, which lies in the midst of his attendants: all of them slain, &c. Bp. Hall.

—— in the sides of the pit,] Upon the hill of offence near Jerusalem, the sepulchres exhibit a series of subterranean chambers, hewn with marvellous art, each containing one or many repositories for the dead, like cisterns carved in the rock upon the sides of those chambers. Dr. E. D. Clarke.

26. — Meshech, Tubal,] See chap. xxvii. 13, and note. The Scythians may be comprehended, who anciently governed Asia. This is no other than the well known expulsion of the Scythians from Media by Cyaxares, as Jackson hath also rightly observed. Abp. Newcome.

27. And they shall not lie with the mighty &c.] They shall not lie among those heathen heroes who died a natural death, and are laid in their graves with pomp and magnificence; see Is. xiv. 18, 19. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

—— and they have laid their swords under their heads,] It has been the custom of all ages to adorn the sepulchres of heroes with their swords and other trophies of war. W. Lowth.

"In Mingrelia they all sleep with their swords under their heads, and their other arms by their sides; and they bury them in the same manner, their arms being placed in the same position." This is the account of Sir John Chardin; and the extract becomes more interesting and important, when it is considered, that, according to Bochart and other learned men, Meshech and Tubal mean Mingrelia and the country thereabout. Harmer.

29. — Edom, her kings, and all her princes,] Of whose destruction Ezekiel prophesied, chap. xxv. 12. W. Lowth.

30. — the princes of the north,] By "the princes of the north" may be understood the Tyrians and their allies, (chap. xxvi. 16,) joined here with the Zidonians their neighbours. Calmet, W. Lowth. Others understand the Syrian kings who reigned at Damascus. Abp. Newcome.

31. — and shall be comforted] As it affords some relief to calamitous persons to see others in the same condition with themselves, chap. xxxi. 16. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXXIII. ver. 1. Again the word of the Lord &c.] It is plain that Ezekiel uttered what is contained in this chapter to ver. 20, before Jerusalem was taken by the Babylonians: but how long before is uncertain. Abp. Newcome.

2. — a man of their coasts,] From among them. W. Lowth. Out of their borders: the proper place to station watchmen. Abp. Newcome.

3. — when he seeth the sword] When he spieth the enemy. W. Lowth.

5. — But he that taketh warning] Shall save his soul from the danger that threatens it: in like manner he that takes warning by the Prophet's admonition, shall preserve himself from the judgment threatened against sinners. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 587.

6 But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand.

[a] Chap. 3. 17, &c.

7 ¶ [a] So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.

8 When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

9 Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul.

10 Therefore, O thou son of man, speak unto the house of Israel; Thus ye speak, saying, If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we pine away in them, how should we then live?

11 Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord GOD, [b] I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for [c] why will ye die, O house of Israel?

[c] Chap. 18. 31.

12 Therefore, thou son of man, say unto the children of thy people, The [d] righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day of his transgression: as for the wickedness of the wicked, he shall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedness; neither shall the righteous be able to live for his righteousness in the day that he sinneth.

[d] Chap. 18. 24.

13 When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live; if he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, all his righteousnesses shall not be remembered; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it.

14 Again, when I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; if he turn from his sin, and do † that which is lawful and right;

† Heb. judgment and justice

7, 8, 9. — I have set thee a watchman &c.] See chap. iii, 17, 18, 19.

10. — If our transgressions — be upon us, and we pine away &c.] If according to thy prophecies God has determined to reckon with us for our sins, and to bring judgment upon us, to what purpose shall our conversion be? and how shall we live, though we do amend? Bp. Hall. They are the words of persons despairing of God's mercy, and from thence taking occasion to go on in their sins. See a like instance Jer. ii. 25. W. Lowth.

11. — As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; &c.] We have here one of the most express declarations to be found in the whole Scripture, of the infinite mercy of God. God swears by Himself, that He would not by any means the death of the wicked; that He desires nothing but their conversion and life; and receives them graciously as soon as they return to Him. The consideration of God's great mercy should fill sinners with confidence, and engage them to repent, and thereby prevent their ruin. Osterwald.

These are most comfortable words: for now we may be sure, that when we will leave our sins and wickedness, and turn unto Him with all our hearts earnestly, then He will turn Himself unto us, and will shew Himself a loving Father. And to the intent we should believe this, He sweareth an oath: we ought to believe God without an oath, yet He sweareth, to make us more sure. Bp. Latimer.

God declares Himself to bear an universal good will to mankind; that He doth earnestly desire the welfare of all men; and is displeased with the ruin of any man. This He affirms; and, for the confirmation of our faith, and our consolation therein, He swears it: "As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live." See also Is. v. 4; Hos. xiii. 9; Is. lxv. 2; Rom. x. 21; Jer. vii. 31; Prov. i. 24, 29; Is. lxv. 12; lxvi. 4; i. 18; Jer. vi. 10; Zech. vii. 11, 12. Which passages, and many others of the like importance that occur, do imply the large extent of God's merciful intentions, and the competency of the means, which God affords for the salvation of men; that He wants no affection or inclination to save them; that He neglects no means proper for effecting it; that He draws them into the way leading thither by serious and earnest invitation, directs them by needful light and instruction, excites them by powerful arguments and persuasions; and, as St. Ambrose speaketh, that "God hath shewed to all, that, what was in Him, He did will to deliver or save all men." Whence He may truly and properly be called the Benefactor and Saviour even of those, who by their wilful malice or neglect do not obtain salvation. Dr. Isaac Barrow.

12, 13. — The righteousness of the righteous &c.] See chap. xviii. 26, 27, and note.

13. — if he trust to his own righteousness,] If he rely upon the good works that he hath done, and think the worth of them will overbalance his evil deeds. This seems to be the persuasion of the latter Jews, who lay this down for a certain rule in their Mishna, that all Israel hath a share in the world to come. The Mahometans think the same respecting themselves. Reland, W. Lowth.

14. — when I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; &c.] In the whole course of Scripture, God's threatenings, and so His promises too, have ever a condition annexed to them in God's purpose: which though it be not ever, indeed but seldom, expressed, yet is it ever included, and so to be understood. All God's promises, how absolutely soever expressed, are made on condition of obedience; and all His threatenings, how absolutely soever expressed, on condition of impenitence. This is plain from the passage before us; where Almighty God clearly teaches us, that we ought so to conceive of all His threatenings, be they never so peremptorily set down, (as what more peremptory than this, "Thou shalt surely die?") as that He may reserve to Himself a power of revocation, in case the parties threatened repent. Bp. Sanderson.

15. — give again that he had robbed,] The law was express to this purpose, Lev. vi. 5, where the offender is required to add a fifth part to the principal, and give it to him to whom it appertaineth. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 587. hath done that which is lawful and right; he shall surely live.

17 ¶ Yet the children of thy people say, The way of the Lord is not equal: but as for them, their way is not equal.

18 When the righteous turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall even die thereby.

19 But if the wicked turn from his wickedness, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall live thereby.

23 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

24 Son of man, they that inhabit those wastes of the land of Israel speak, saying, Abraham was one, and he inherited the land: but we are many; the land is given us for inheritance.

25 Wherefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Ye eat with the blood, and lift up your eyes toward your idols, and shed blood: and shall ye possess the land?

Before CHRIST 587. 26 Ye stand upon your sword, ye work abomination, and ye defile every one his neighbour's wife: and shall ye possess the land?

27 Say thou thus unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; As I live, surely they that are in the wastes shall fall by the sword, and him that is in the open field will I give to the beasts † to be devoured, and they that be in the forts and in the caves shall die of the pestilence.

29 Then shall they know that I am the LORD, when I have laid the land most desolate because of all their abominations which they have committed.

30 ¶ Also, thou son of man, the children of thy people still are talking against thee by the walls and in the doors of the houses, and speak one to another, every one to his brother, saying, Come, I pray you, and hear what is the word that cometh forth from the LORD.

31 And they come unto thee † as the people cometh, and ‖ they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: for with their mouth † they shew much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness.

22. — the hand of the Lord was upon me] I felt an impulse of the prophetical Spirit, chap. i. 3. W. Lowth.

24. — they that inhabit those wastes of the land of Israel] They that are left behind in the land that is now wasted with fire and sword, ver. 27, and chap. xxxvi. 4. W. Lowth.

—— Abraham was one, &c.] If Abraham, being but one, had this land given to him for an inheritance; how much more may we, his seed, to whom it is deduced, being many, challenge an interest in it? Bp. Hall.

The title of "one" is elsewhere given to Abraham, as being the original and head of the Jewish nation; Is. li. 2; Mal. ii. 15; Heb. xi. 12. W. Lowth.

25. — Ye eat with the blood,] Ye are not the sons of faithful Abraham; your works are contrary to his; ye eat the blood together with the flesh which I have forbidden; ye are guilty both of idolatry and murder; and shall ye challenge to possess the land in the right of Abraham? Bp. Hall.

26. Ye stand upon your sword,] Ye rely upon the confidence of your own sword. Bp. Hall.

27. — shall fall by the sword, &c.] The three judgments here mentioned, together with famine, are often threatened as the last and finishing stroke of God's vengeance upon the Jewish nation; see chap. v. 12, 17; vi. 12; xiv. 21; Jer. xv. 3. W. Lowth.

—— in the caves] The caves here mentioned were a sort of strong holds, formed by nature in the rocks, or cut out under the tops of mountains. They were so large that men might secure themselves, their families, and their goods in them; such was the cave of "Adullam," mentioned 1 Sam. xxii. 1; 2 Sam. xxiii. 13. W. Lowth.

30. — talking against thee] Rather, "of thee:" this is in some editions the marginal and probably the right translation. Abp. Secker.

—— and they sit] See note on chap. viii. 1.

—— with their mouth they shew much love,] According to the marginal reading the sense is, that they turned the Prophet's words into jest; but by comparing this with the following verse, we may rather understand the phrase in this sense, that they were delighted with the Prophet's harmonious voice, or attractive eloquence, but would not make the proper use of what he said for correcting their evil manners. W. Lowth.

—— but their heart goeth after their covetousness.] Their worldly desires of whatever sort. Abp. Secker.

32. And, lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song] They were struck with his eloquence without regarding his exhortations and admonitions.

It is no unusual thing for people to listen to discourses from the ministers of God only to enjoy the satisfaction, which a well-composed discourse naturally affords. Their ears are gratified,

Before CHRIST 587. 33 And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come,) then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.

CHAP. XXXIV.

1 A reproof of the shepherds. 7 God's judgment against them. 11 His providence for his flock. 20 The kingdom of Christ.

587. AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

[a] Jer. 23. 1. 2 Son of man, prophesy against the [a] shepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD unto the shepherds; Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds feed the flocks?

3 Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed: but ye feed not the flock.

4 The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye

‖ Or, without a shepherd: and so ver. 8. 5 And they were scattered, ‖ because there is no shepherd: and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered.

Before CHRIST 587. 6 My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them.

7 ¶ Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

8 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock, but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock;

9 Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

10 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against the shepherds; and I will require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more; for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them.

11 ¶ For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out.

† Heb. According to his seeking. 12 † As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, their sentiments are enlivened, agreeable emotions of various kinds are excited. So the hearer is pleased, the speaker is commended and followed; but with no thought of practising one word that he hath said. This is the turn of mind so admirably described many ages ago by the Prophet Ezekiel in this passage. But religious instruction could never be appointed to give such empty, insignificant delight as this: nor doth it in the least attain its proper end, unless it influences men to forget the preacher, and think of themselves; unless it raises in them, not a superficial complacency, or an idle admiration, but an awful and a durable solicitude about their eternal welfare. Abp. Secker.

33. And when this cometh to pass,] This matter, this event, the destruction of Jerusalem. Abp. Newcome.

—— (lo, it will come,)] Or rather, "lo, it is come," chap. vii. 2, 5, 10; the verb being in the present tense. When you see my prophecies concerning the destruction of Jerusalem actually brought to pass, as it appears they are at this time, see ver. 27; then you will be convinced of the truth of my mission, and of your own inexcusable crime in despising my predictions, see chap. xxiv. 27. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXXIV. ver. 1. — came unto me,] It is probable that this prophecy immediately followed the preceding. At or before the news that Jerusalem was conquered, the Prophet was to speak of the tyranny and carelessness of the governours, and to promise the return of the people. Michaelis. The negligence of the governours being pointed out as a cause of the incredulity of the people, the transition here is natural, and the connexion close between this prophecy and the foregoing one; as also between the beginning of this prophecy and its conclusion. For considering that in part the people suffered for the faults of their shepherds, raercy now urged the Prophet to declare from God, that He would judge between them, save the flock, and set up one Shepherd over them, who should feed them, even His servant David. Abp. Newcome.

2. — shepherds] The king, his counsellors, and the heads of the people. Michaelis. The word "shepherd" comprehends governours both civil and ecclesiastical; compare Is. lvi. 11; Jer. ii. 8; xxiii. 1. W. Lowth.

—— that do feed themselves!] That regard their own profit and advantages, not the good of the people committed to their charge. W. Lowth.

3. Ye eat the fat,] Or the milk; milk and fat being expressed by the same word in Hebrew. W. Lowth.

—— ye kill them that are fed:] The wealthy and substantial, to enrich yourselves. W. Lowth.

4. The diseased have ye not strengthened,] Those particular offices which belong to your charge, as comforting the weak, healing the sick, binding up the broken-hearted, reclaiming and reducing those that have erred, ye have not accordingly done; but rather have tyrannously and cruelly exercised an imperious authority over them. Bp. Hall.

The same allegory holds, ver. 5—10. Jesus Christ made the same reproach to the Scribes and Pharisees, Matt. xxiii. 4; see also 1 Pet. v. 2, 3. Calmet.

5. — no shepherd:] None in effect; none deserving the name. Abp. Newcome.

—— meat to all the beasts of the field,] That is, to their enemies, who as so many beasts of prey have spoiled and devoured them; compare Jer. xii. 9; Is. lvi. 9. W. Lowth.

10. — I will require my flock at their hand,] I will require a severe account from their kings and princes, their priests and prophets, of the damage My people have sustained through their ill management; and I will deprive them of that honour and pre-eminence, which they have so abused, as I have already displaced Zedekiah, and the princes, priests, and others, that were in authority under him. W. Lowth. All this actually came to pass at the taking of Jerusalem, and at the captivity which followed of their kings, and of their priests, and of the people. Calmet.

11. — and seek them out.] The Hebrew word signifies to seek early, to seek in the morning. Abp. Newcome.

Before CHRIST 587. and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day.

13 And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country.

14 I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel.

15 I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord GOD.

16 I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but I will destroy the fat and the strong; I will feed them with judgment.

17 And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I judge between † cattle and cattle, between the rams and the † he goats.

18 Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have eaten up the good pasture, but ye must tread down with your feet the residue of your pastures? and to have drunk of the deep waters, but ye must foul the residue with your feet?

19 And as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet; and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet.

Before CHRIST 587.

20 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD unto them; Behold, I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle.

21 Because ye have thrust with side and with shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad;

22 Therefore will I save my flock and they shall no more be a prey; and I will judge between cattle and cattle.

23 And I will set up one ‘shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.

‘ Is. xl. 11. John x. 11.

24 And I the LORD will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them; I the LORD have spoken it.

25 And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land: and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods.

26 And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing.

27 And the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the LORD, when I have broken the bands of their yoke, and

12. — in the cloudy and dark day.] Clouds mark seasons of misery, persecution, and trouble; see Joel ii. 2; Zeph. i. 15. Wolves profit by mists and darkness to plunder and devour the flock. Calmet.

13. And I will bring them out from the people,] I will fetch them from those several lands, whereinto they were driven by their miserable captivity, and will bring them back into their own country, and will feed them carefully and plentifully in My Church. So also the three following verses. Bp. Hall.

16. I will seek that which was lost,] The Messiah, whom I will set over them, see ver. 23, shall faithfully discharge all the offices of a shepherd towards them, which their former pastors have neglected, ver. 4. W. Lowth.

—— but I will destroy the fat and the strong;] Meaning, I will destroy those cruel shepherds who abuse their authority and domineer over the weak. Calmet, W. Lowth.

17. — between cattle and cattle,] Behold, I judge between one man and another, between the lambs and kids, between the rams and goats: as I do now put a difference between those of My own flock, and the world; so hereafter I will exquisitely sever them, the one to My right hand, the other to My left. Bp. Hall.

18. Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have eaten up the good pasture, &c.] Is it not very great cruelty and most barbarous inhumanity, that you, who have much more than others, partly by the bounty of the Lord of the sheep, and partly by your injustice and rapine, should eat the sweet and better parts of the pasture, and waste and spoil what you cannot eat? Thus the people are starved by your wantonness and oppression, or compelled to live on unwholesome and noxious food. Poole.

23. — one shepherd over them, — even my servant David;] Jesus Christ the true Shepherd, to whom the title of David is given by the Prophets, and attributed by Himself in the Gospel, and who has fulfilled all the duties, after having faithfully described all the characters, of the office. The Scriptures call this Shepherd David, because He was born of David after the flesh, and possessed in reality, and eminently, all those qualities, which the Scriptures give to David, under the figure of the Messiah. Calmet, Bp. Hall.

—— he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.] This prophecy was remarkably fulfilled, when Christ by the preaching of the Gospel "gathered in one the children of God, that were scattered abroad;" John xi. 52; Ephes. i. 10; among whom were many "of the lost sheep of the house of Israel." But it will receive a further completion at the general conversion of the Jews, when the time will come, that they shall say, "Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord," Matt. xxiii. 39: and this signal event will usher in, or complete the fulness of the Gentiles; see Rom. xi. 12, 15, 25, 32. W. Lowth.

24. — and my servant David a prince among them;] The Messiah; the true heir and successor of David. Bp. Hall.

25. — the evil beasts to cease] And I will keep them from these spiritual dangers that may be hurtful to them; see ver. 8 of this chapter. Calmet. The words may be meant of freedom from persecution by infidels and strangers. W. Lowth.

26. And I will make them &c. — a blessing;] I will there give remarkable instances of My favour, and the happiness which accompanies it; see Gen. xii. 2; Is. xix. 24. God's hill is the same with His "holy mountain," chap. xx. 40. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 587. delivered them out of the hand of those that served themselves of them.

The judgment of mount Seir for their hatred of Israel.

587. MOREOVER the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, set thy face against mount Seir, and prophesy against it,

† Heb. desolation and desolation.

7 Thus will I make mount Seir † most desolate, and cut off from it him that passeth out and him that returneth.

8 And I will fill his mountains with his slain men: in thy hills, and in thy valleys, and in all thy rivers, shall they fall that are slain with the sword.

9 I will make thee perpetual desolations, and thy cities shall not return: and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

29. And I will raise up for them a plant of renown,] I will make them a glorious plant, being fast rooted in that promised Messiah, and being incorporated in Him; and they shall no more be consumed with a spiritual famine, nor be trampled upon by the enemies of My Church. Bp. Hall.

The Messiah is often described under the name of "the Branch," and "the Rod," or shoot, growing out of the stem of Jesse; see Is. iv. 2; xi. 1; Jer. xxiii. 5; Zech. iii. 8; vi. 12. W. Lowth.

31. And ye my flock, &c.] These words at the conclusion of the chapter explain the metaphor, which runs through the whole; that what was said of a flock and its shepherds, is to be understood of men and their governours, and especially of God's people, whom He takes care of, as a shepherd does of his flock, chap. xxxvi. 38. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXXV. ver. 2. — mount Seir,] Idumea; see Deut. ii. 5, where God says, that He has "given mount Seir unto Esau for a possession." The Prophet goes on to shew, that the same reason which will operate in favour of the Jews, will not operate in favour of the heathen, especially not in favour of the Edomites, for they shewed no mercy, and therefore deserved to receive none; and because they had a perpetual hatred, were to be made a perpetual desolation. Abp. Newcome.

5. — a perpetual hatred,] See chap. xxv. 12. The enmity of the Edomites and the Jews had begun as it were in the womb of their common mother. This was afterwards aggravated by other griefs; and though Jacob's prudent calmness softened it for a time, yet their descendants did not fail to perpetuate their quarrel, which was always certain to be revived, whenever an occasion offered. The last strong proof of this enmity was given by the Edomites at the siege of Jerusalem, when they afflicted the Jews, already oppressed by the Chaldeans. Calmet.

6. — blood shall pursue thee:] Thy bloodguiltiness shall pursue thee; thou shalt be punished for it. Michaelis.

9. I will make thee perpetual desolations, &c.] See chap. xxv. 13; Jer. xlix. 17, 18.

10. Because thou hast said, These two nations &c.] These two nations, Israel and Judah, and their countries wasted by the Assyrian and Babylonian, shall be mine, and we will possess it; whereas, however this land is abused, it is the Lord's peculiar, and therefore out of thy reach, and free from any challenge of thine. Bp. Hall, Abp. Newcome.

11. — I will make myself known among them, when I have judged thee.] I will make My people see that I have not quite cast them off, by My avenging their quarrel upon thee. W. Lowth.

14. — When the whole earth rejoiceth,] After the return from the captivity, when all thy neighbours, conquered by the king of Babylon, shall be restored in peace and prosperity, thou shalt be reduced to distress and desolation. Calmet.

5 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Surely in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken against the residue of the heathen, and against all Idumea, which have appointed my land into their possession with the joy of all their heart, with despiteful minds, to cast it out for a prey. Before CHRIST 587.

6 Prophesy therefore concerning the land of Israel, and say unto the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my fury, because ye have borne the shame of the heathen:

Chap. XXXVI. ver. 1. — prophesy unto the mountains of Israel,] This prophecy is the sequel of that contained in the last chapter. Calmet.

2. — even the ancient high places are our's in possession:] The Edomites have made their boasts, (chap. xxxv. 10,) that they should become masters of the mountainous parts of Judea, where the ancient fortresses were placed, which commanded all the rest of the country; see Deut. xxxii. 13. W. Lowth.

7. — I have lifted up mine hand,] I have solemnly sworn; see chap. xx. 5. W. Lowth.

8. — for they are at hand to come.] They, My people Israel, are near the time of their coming from Babylon into their own land. Abp. Newcome.

The most sensible interpreters seem to agree, that there are several expressions in this chapter, particularly in the latter part of it, which cannot be literally understood of any event, excepting of the reign of the Messiah, of the freedom that He has procured for His Church, of another promised land, and of a chosen people, different from that of the Jews; but at the same time that there may be recognised in it certain forms of speech, which have had their literal accomplishment, since the return of the Jews from the captivity. Calmet.

10. — and the wastes shall be builded:] Compare ver. 33. This may likewise in some measure have been fulfilled at their return from Babylon; Is. lviii. 12; lxi. 4. W. Lowth.

12. — bereave them of men.] By the sword, pestilence, and famine, which were God's judgments upon His people for their idolatries. Abp. Newcome.

16 ¶ Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

13. — they say unto you, Thou land devourest up] The neighbouring nations observed the heavy sufferings of Israel and Judah, and accused the land of exterminating its inhabitants. Abp. Newcome. Compare Numb. xiii. 32.

17. — their way was before me as the uncleanness &c.] Their continual practice was as foul and odious to Me, as can be expressed by any legal uncleanness. Bp. Hall.

18. — for the blood] They had shed the blood of their sons and of their daughters, whom they offered to their idols; see chap. xvi. 36. They had also shed innocent blood in their cities, chap. vii. 23; ix. 9. Calmet.

20. — they profaned my holy name,] They caused My holy name to be scorned and evil spoken of, in that it was said of these so wicked and lewd persons, Lo, these are the select people of the Lord, and those that were inhabitants of His holy land. Bp. Hall.

21. But I had pity for mine holy name,] I wrought for My name's sake, that it should not be polluted among the heathen; see chap. xx. 9; compare Deut. ix. 5; Ps. cvi. 8.

23. — and the heathen shall know that I am the Lord,] The return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity was taken notice of by the heathens, as a signal instance of God's providence towards them, Ps. cxxvi. 2; and their general conversion will be a much more remarkable proof of My fulfilling the promises made to their fathers; so that the heathens themselves will be forced to take notice of it, chap. xxxvii. 28. W. Lowth.

—— when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes.] When I shall glorify Myself by working your deliverance, and your apparent reformation before their eyes. Bp. Hall.

25. Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean:] Allusion is here made to the purifications which were effected in the Jewish Church, by sprinkling pure water upon persons under legal pollution; these were types of baptism, and of that penitence which cleanses us from our sins, through the blood of Jesus Christ, and by the invisible aspersion of His Holy Spirit and grace. It is only therefore in the general establishment of the Church of God, that the real and perfect accomplishment of this prophecy can come to pass. St. Paul may probably allude to this text, when he exhorts the Hebrew converts "to draw near to God, having their hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and their bodies washed with pure water." Calmet, W. Lowth.

26. — the stony heart out of your flesh,] I will take away your perverse and rebellious disposition; I will give you a tenderness of heart, and an aptness to be wrought upon by the motions of My Spirit. Bp. Hall. Certain it is, that the Jews gave much less occasion for reproach after their return from captivity, more particularly upon the subject of idolatry, and of those other disorders with which they had been reproached by the Prophets, than before that event took place; but their conduct even then was far from being such as to resemble that picture of perfection, of purity, of docility, and of justice, which is described here, and in other places of the Prophets. It is Christianity alone which removes the "heart of stone," and supplies the "heart of flesh." Calmet.

32 Not for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord GOD, be it known unto you: be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O house of Israel.

33 Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the day that I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities I will also cause you to dwell in the cities, and the wastes shall be builded.

5 Thus saith the Lord GOD unto these bones; Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live:

6 And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

7 So I prophesied as I was commanded: and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone.

8 And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above: but there was no breath in them.

31. — and shall lothe yourselves in your own sight.] When the Prophets foretell the general conversion of the Jews, they usually mention their detestation of their former idolatries, as a necessary preparation towards it. See Is. i. 27; xvii. 7, 8; Jer. iii. 22, &c. W. Lowth.

37. — I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel,] God in His anger tells the Jews, that He will not be enquired of by them, chap. xiv. 3; xx. 3, 31: intimating, that during their continuance in idolatry and other wickedness, they ought not to address themselves to Him, nor expect any favourable answer to their requests. But now, upon their repentance and reconciliation, He tells them, that He will be enquired of by them; that is, He will dispose their hearts to apply themselves to Him by prayer, and will answer the petitions they make to Him, for fulfilling these His promises, Ps. x. 17; Jer. xxix. 13. W. Lowth. By these words God hath given us to understand, that, whatsoever blessing He hath promised, we must pray unto Him for it, otherwise we shall not have it. Bp. Beveridge.

38. As the holy flock,] As Jerusalem in her holy feasts is filled with whole flocks and herds of those cattle that are brought up thither for sacrifice, so shall all the waste cities of Israel be filled with the flocks of man. Bp. Hall. The epithet of "holy" and "most holy" is often applied to sacrifices in the Levitical law, as being wholly dedicated to God, and set apart for His worship. See Ley. vi. 25, 29. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXXVII. ver. 1. — and carried me out in the spirit of the Lord,] Or, by the Spirit of the Lord. Compare chap. iii. 14; viii. 3; xi. 24. This was performed, either by a local translation of the Prophet, or else by way of vision, or lively representation. W. Lowth.

3. — O Lord God, thou knowest.] The Prophet replies, that the restoration of the bones to life was more than human reason could conceive, but acknowledges that nothing was impossible with God. Bp. Hall.

4. — O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord.] A prophetical and lively representation of that voice of the Son of God, which all that are in their graves shall hear at the last day, and shall come forth out of them, John v. 28, 29. W. Lowth. See the notes on Is. xxvi. 19.

8. — no breath] No life; no vital principle. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 587.

Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live.

10 So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

11 ¶ Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts.

12 Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel.

13 And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, 14 And shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the LORD have spoken it, and performed it, saith the LORD.

15 ¶ The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

16 Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions:

Before CHRIST about 587.

17 And join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand.

18 ¶ And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not shew us what thou meanest by these?

19 Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.

20 ¶ And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes.

21 And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land:

22 And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and [a] one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations,

[a] John 10. 16.

9. — Come from the four winds, O breath,] The words figuratively represent the restoration of the Jewish nation from the several countries, whither they were dispersed, over the whole world; expressed by their being scattered towards all winds, chap. v. 10; xii. 14. W. Lowth.

11. — these bones are the whole house of Israel:] The state of death and dryness, of dispersion and abandonment, in which you see them, marks the captivity to which they are reduced. I will draw them from that state. Calmet.

12. — your graves,] Alluding to their being buried, as it were, in the land of their captivity. The Jews seemed as absolutely deprived of their own country, as persons committed to the grave are cut off from the land of the living. The foregoing similitude shews in a beautiful manner, that God, who could raise the dead, had power to restore them. Abp. Newcome.

The Jews, in the state of their dispersion and captivity, are called the "dead Israelites" in Baruch, chap. iii. 4. And their restoration is described as a "resurrection" by Isaiah, chap. xxvi. 19; at which time "their bones" are said to "flourish," or to be restored to their former strength and vigour, in the same Prophet, chap. lxvi. 14. In like manner St. Paul expresses their conversion by "life from the dead," Rom. xi. 15. W. Lowth.

16. — take thee one stick, and write upon it,] That is, one rod: the expression alludes to Numb. xvii. 2, where Moses is commanded to take twelve rods, one for each tribe, and to write the name of the tribe upon the rod. W. Lowth.

—— For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions:] When Jeroboam, at the head of his companions, withdrew from his obedience to the house of David, the tribes of Benjamin, Judah, and Levi, still adhered to the government of Rehoboam. Besides these three tribes, many Israelites from the other tribes joined themselves to the same party, as appears from 2 Chron. xi. 12—16; xv. 9; xxx. 11, 18. Hence the expression, "for Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions." Calmet.

—— For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all &c.] Upon Reuben's forfeiting his birthright, that privilege was conferred upon the sons of Joseph, of whom Ephraim had the precedence, 1 Chron. v. 1; Gen. xlviii. 20; which caused him to be reckoned the head of the ten tribes. Samaria, the seat of that kingdom, was likewise situated in the tribe of Ephraim, and Jeroboam their first king was an Ephraimite. Upon these accounts the name of Ephraim signifies in the Prophets the whole kingdom of Israel, as distinct from that of Judah. W. Lowth. The union of the two sticks may be supposed to signify in a more extended sense, the assembling, not only of the Jews of all the tribes, but also of the people of all nations in the Church of Christ. Calmet.

19. — which is in the hand of Ephraim,] Which is wielded as a sceptre in the hand of Ephraim, and of the other nine tribes of Israel, the companions of their chief tribe Ephraim. Abp. Newcome.

—— they shall be one in mine hand.] I will make them one nation, and appoint one King to rule over them, the Messiah; see ver. 22. W. Lowth.

This prophecy was fulfilled very imperfectly in the persons of the Jews after the captivity, both because neither the tribe of Judah, nor the other tribes, returned entire, and because they were not governed by kings of the family of David. Calmet.

22. And I will make them one nation &c.] And I will unite My Church all the world over in one: and one King, even the Messiah, whom I shall send, shall be King to them all; and they shall no more be so divided in profession, as if they were different kingdoms, ruled by divers sovereigns, but in the main substance of religion shall be one. Bp. Hall.

—— and one king shall be king to them all:] The Messiah is described as King of the Jews in most of the prophecies of the Old Testament, beginning with that of Genesis, chap. xlix. 10, concerning Shiloh. From David's time He is commonly spoken of as the Person in whom the promises relating to the perpetuity of David's kingdom were to be accomplished. This was a truth unanimously owned by the Jews; see John i. 49; to which our Saviour bore testimony before Pontius Pilate, when the question being put to Him, "Art thou a king?" He made answer, "Thou sayest," (the truth,) "that I am a King." St. Paul, alluding to these words, calls them "a good confession," 1 Tim. vi. 13. The same truth Pontius Pilate himself asserted in that inscription, which by the direction of Providence he ordered to be written upon the cross; see John xix. 19: so that the chief priests impiously renounced their own avowed principles, when they told Pilate, that they had no king but Cæsar. W. Lowth.

26. — and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them &c.] I will set My Church in the midst of them, which shall continue to the end of the world; and I will dwell in their hearts as in My temple for ever. B. Holl.

If we understand "for evermore" in a limited sense, and the condition of obedience implied, the rebuilding of the temple may be in the first instance foretold. At the final restoration of the Jews, God will place His tabernacle and sanctuary among them in a larger sense. Abp. Newcome.

28. And the heathen shall know,] The conversion of the Jewish nation, and their being restored to their former state of favour and acceptance with God, will be a work of Providence taken notice of by the heathens themselves, who shall join themselves to the Jews, as the Church of God and temple of truth: see chap. xxxvi. 23. W. Lowth.

Chap. XXXVIII. ver. 2. — set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog,] Or, of the land of Magog. Magog is reckoned among the sons of Japhet: see Gen. x. 2: and Ezekiel here uses Magog as the country of which Gog was prince. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

It has been the subject of much discussion amongst the learned, what is the meaning of this remarkable prophecy; who is designed under the name of Gog; and to what period of history the fulfilment of it belongs. On the one hand it has been thought, that the whole prophecy received its completion in the Jewish Church in the times succeeding the Babylonish captivity; that by Gog is designed Antiochus Epiphanes; and that the deliverances predicted to the Church are those which occurred in the times of the Maccabees. On the other hand, it is believed that the prophecy is to be referred to some period of the Christian Church, either past, or yet to come; that by Gog are either represented generally the enemies of the Christian Church, who have been discomfited by the superintending providence of God; or some particular enemies, who were to arise at some future period, either of the conversion of the Jews to Christianity, or, as some suppose, of their restoration to their own land; or, as others maintain, of a second advent of the Messiah to reign personally on earth. Amidst this great variety of opinions, on a subject of so great difficulty and obscurity, it is best to maintain a cautious reserve in forming a decision, and to wait for that clearer light which Providence may hereafter vouchsafe to us, in the full development of the whole scheme of Scriptural prophecies. Pole's Syn. Crit.

The other Prophets speak of some future enemy of the Jews and the Church under a similar description. But in what manner this magnificent prophecy is to receive its completion, time only can explain. Dr. Gray.

—— the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal.] The king or head of those northern nations which lie upon the Euxine sea, and border upon mount Caucasus. See note on chap. xxvii. 13. W. Lowth.

4. — and put hooks into thy jaws,] See chap. xxix. 4. It is an allusion to the manner of taking the crocodile. See Bp. Lowth's note on Is. xxxvii. 29. I will disappoint all thy designs. W. Lowth.

—— and I will bring thee forth.] The sense would be plainer, if the words were thus translated, "after I have brought thee forth," &c.; in which sense the copulative, here translated "and," is sometimes used. W. Lowth.

5. Persia, Ethiopia, and Libya] Their allies, Ethiopia and Libya, are called Cush and Phut in the Hebrew; and are joined together as allies, chap. xxx. 5. Persians are joined in like manner with Africans, chap. xxvii. 10. W. Lowth.

8 ¶ After many days thou shalt be visited: in the latter years thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste: but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them.

9 Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm, thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee.

10 Thus saith the Lord GOD; It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt ‖ think an evil thought:

‖ Or, conceive a mischievous purpose.

† Heb. To spoil the spoil, and to prey the prey.

12 † To take a spoil, and to take a prey; to turn thine hand upon the desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the † midst of the land.

14 ¶ Therefore, son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord GOD; In that day when my people of Israel dwelleth safely, shalt thou not know it?

15 And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, thou, and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company, and a mighty army:

16 And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes.

17 Thus saith the Lord GOD; Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time † by my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years that I would bring thee against them?

† Heb. by the hands.

18 And it shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord GOD, that my fury shall come up in my face.

—— all of them with shield and helmet:] The Libyans, or people of Phut, are described in Jer. xlvi. 9, as "handling the shield;" and Xenophon relates of them, that they were remarkable for their great and large shields. W. Lowth.

—— Togarmah of the north quarters,] Cappadocians. See note on chap. xxvii. 14. Abp. Newcome. In the Scripture language, the quarters of the north mean the provinces to the north of Mesopotamia; and even Chaldea, Mesopotamia, Syria, and Babylon. Calmet.

7. — and be thou a guard unto them.] Do thou be their chief, or leader. Calmet. Let them rely upon thy prowess and conduct as their leader. W. Lowth.

8. — thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword,] The "land" is often put for those who inhabit it: compare Jer. xxxi. 2. The land therefore that is brought back from the sword must mean, those who should survive after the hardships they had suffered in their several dispersions, and the judgment that should fall upon the disobedient in their return home. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

11. And thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; &c.] I will go up to a land that is easily invaded and overrun, as that which consists of unwalled villages, not able to bear out an assault: I will go to a secure people, that dwell as they think safely in the confidence of the strength and number of the inhabitants. Bp. Hall.

13. Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish,] These were great traders. See notes at chap. xxvii. 12, 15, 20, 22. These merchants, as soon as they heard of this intended invasion, came into Gog's camp, as to a market, to buy both persons and goods which should come into the conqueror's power. W. Lowth.

—— with all the young lions thereof,] Meaning, probably, their chief merchants, who are described as so many princes, Is. xxiii. 8, and are called "lions," because of the injustice and oppression they commonly practised in their commerce. W. Lowth.

15. — out of the north parts,] See ver. 6, and note.

17. — Art thou he?] Art thou not he? A sense which the particle of interrogation often imports. See the note on chap. xx. 4. W. Lowth.

—— of whom I have spoken in old time by my servants &c.] The enemy, here said to be foretold of old by the Prophets, is probably described under the names of such nations as were the chief enemies to the Jews in the particular times of each Prophet. To particular prophecies of this nature we may add those prophecies which speak of some great and general destruction of God's enemies before the day of judgment, or consummation of all things: such are Ps. ex. 5, 6; Is. xxvi. 20, 21; xxxiv. 1; Jer. xxv. 7, 10; Joel iii. 9, 14; Obad. ver. 15. W. Lowth.

18. — my fury shall come up in my face.] An expression taken from human passions, which cause the blood to fly up into the face. So Isaiah (chap. xxx. 27) describes Almighty God as "burning with anger," His lips being "full of indignation, and His tongue as a devouring fire." W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 587. 19 For in my jealousy and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken, Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel;

20 So that the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence, and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the ‖ steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground.

‖ Or, towers, or, stairs.

21 And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord GOD: every man's sword shall be against his brother.

22 And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire, and brimstone.

The Prophets often describe God's judgments upon particular countries or persons, as if it were a dissolution of the whole world. See Is. xiii. 10. W. Lowth.

21. And I will call for a sword against him.] I will appoint a sword to destroy him. So God is said to call for a dearth upon the land of Canaan, Ps. cv. 16. W. Lowth.

22. And I will plead against him.] Or, I will plead with him: see chap. xx. 35. God pleads with men by His judgments, which are a manifest token of the vengeance due to their sins: see Is. lxvi. 16; Jer. xxv. 31. Pestilence is joined with blood here, as it is chap. v. 17; xiv. 19; xxviii. 23. W. Lowth.

—— and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, &c.] Compare Rev. xx. 8, 9. It is plain that the extraordinary circumstances mentioned ver. 19—22, remain to be accomplished on the future enemies of the Jews, when God's people are reinstated in His favour. Abp. Newcome.

Chap. XL. The following obscure vision of Ezekiel is generally supposed to contain the description of a temple, corresponding in its structure and dimensions with that of Solomon. The Prophet, by presenting to the captives this delineation of what had been "the desire of their eyes," reminded them of the loss which they had suffered from their unrighteousness, and furnished them with a model, upon which the temple might rise again from its ruins; as it did, with less magnificence indeed, in the time of Zerubbabel. Under the particulars detailed by Ezekiel, however, we often discover the economy of a spiritual temple, which should again be filled with "the glory of the Lord coming from the east," see chap. xliii. 2, 4. Dr. Gray.

This concluding vision of a new city and temple was shown to Ezekiel at the close of his ministry, for the consolation of his brethren, who were then commemorating by the waters of Babylon with sighs and tears the fate of their former city and temple with all its glory, which had that day been extinguished just fourteen years. The restoration of the temple and its service, here circumstantially insisted on, was well calculated to raise their drooping spirits, and renew their trust and confidence in the God of their fathers; and that the rather in their present situation, as they would then naturally refer all those benefits to themselves in their own persons, and expect that they were to be the immediate consequence of a redemption from the captivity they then laboured under. But the Spirit of God, as in other prophecies on the same occasion, looked to a period beyond that event, which then became evident when the Jews were restored to their land, and the second temple was completed. For neither the extent and magnificence of the building, nor the privileges and ministry of that temple, did by any means correspond to this representation; and, in the glory of the Divine presence, it was entirely deficient: whereas the Prophet here tells us, "The Spirit took me, and brought me into the inner court; and, behold, the glory of the Lord filled the house." He adds further, "And I heard Him speaking unto me out of the house; and He said unto me, The place of My throne, and the place of the soles of My feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever," chap. xliii. 5—7; which last circumstance of perpetual duration could not belong to any temple under the Mosaick economy, but is the peculiar attribute of that nobler dispensation to which it led. Such an interpretation of this mystical vision is agreeable to the usage of the Prophets, who speak of the future dispensation under the image of a temple or city; see Is. ii. 2; and Zech. vi. 12, 13. At the conclusion of this very vision we are told, that the name of the city should be, "The Lord is there," chap. xlviii. 35; a name of the same import with that given by Jeremiah to the city of Christ, "The Lord our righteousness," Jer. xxxiii. 16. The whole vision, whatever difficulties there may be in the explication of particular parts, must be considered as a mystical representation of the Messiah's government. On this general application, that there should still be partial difficulties, is exactly what ought to be expected: neither will those difficulties entirely vanish, till the whole scheme is completed: for the true and accurate interpretation of all prophecy is only to be had from the accomplishment. Bp. Bagot.

Ver. 1. — in the beginning of the year, in the tenth day of the month,] That is, the first month, called here the beginning of the year, which in the ecclesiastical computation was the month Nisan. W. Lowth. See the notes on Exod. xii. 2; xiii. 4.

—— the fourteenth year] See chap. i. 1, 2; the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in which Jerusalem was taken, was also the eleventh year of Jehoiachin's captivity, from which the Prophet dates; and therefore the twenty-fifth year of Jehoiachin's captivity was the fourteenth year after the taking of Jerusalem. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

2. — and set me upon a very high mountain,] The expression points out mount Moriah, upon which the temple was built. W. Lowth, Calmet. This mountain was not however very high; and Michaelis remarks, that the expression probably signifies nothing more than that Jerusalem, and the true worship of God, should be very much exalted, and made known to all the world. Abp. Newcome. In this respect the expression represents the Christian Church; see Is. ii. 1, 2. W. Lowth.

—— by which was as the frame of a city on the south.] Upon which; see the margin. If we suppose the Prophet brought by the Spirit from Chaldea into the land of Israel, both the temple and the city would be to the south. 4. — behold with thine eyes, — declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel.] Compare chap. xliii. 10; xliv. 5. The temple now represented was designed, partly to assure the people, that their temple should be restored, and partly to serve them as a

7 And every little chamber was one reed long, and one reed broad; and between the little chambers were five cubits; and the threshold of the gate by the porch of the gate within was one reed.

8 He measured also the porch of the gate within, one reed.

9 Then measured he the porch of the gate, eight cubits; and the posts thereof, two cubits; and the porch of the gate was inward.

10 And the little chambers of the gate eastward were three on this side, and three on that side; they three were of one measure: and the posts had one measure on this side and on that side.

11 And he measured the breadth of the entry of the gate, ten cubits; and the length of the gate, thirteen cubits.

† Heb. limit, or, bound.

12 The † space also before the little chambers was one cubit on this side, and the space was one cubit on that side: and the little chambers were six cubits on this side, and six cubits on that side.

13 He measured then the gate from the roof of one little chamber to the roof of another: the breadth was five and twenty cubits, door against door.

Before CHRIST 574.

14 He made also posts of threescore cubits, even unto the post of the court round about the gate.

15 And from the face of the gate of the entrance unto the face of the porch of the inner gate were fifty cubits.

† Heb. closed

16 And there were † narrow windows to the little chambers, and to their posts within in the gate round about, and likewise to the ‖ arches: and windows were round about ‖ inward: and upon each post were palm trees.

17 Then brought he me into the outward court, and, lo, there were chambers, and a pavement made for the court round about: thirty chambers were upon the pavement.

18 And the pavement by the side of the gates over against the length of the gates was the lower pavement.

19 Then he measured the breadth from the forefront of the lower gate unto the forefront of the inner court ‖ without, an hundred cubits eastward and northward.

‖ Or, from without.

20 ¶ And the gate of the outward court † that looked toward the north, he measured the length thereof, and the breadth thereof.

21 And the little chambers thereof were three on this side and three on that side; and the posts thereof and the ‖ arches thereof were after the measure of the first gate: the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits.

model by which they should rebuild it at their return from captivity. The Jewish writers confirm this opinion when they tell us, "that the children of the captivity, when they returned from Babylon, followed the platform of that temple which Ezekiel described, as far as their circumstances would allow." Dr. Lightfoot, W. Lowth.

5. And behold a wall on the outside of the house round about,] A wall went round the whole plain surface of the holy mountain like a parapet. Calmet.

—— by the cubit and an hand breadth:] Each cubit containing a cubit and a hand breadth, called the "great cubit", chap. xli. 8; and supposed equal to half a yard. The cubit used in Chaldea, where the Prophet lived, was five hand breadths. Bp. Cumberland.

—— of the building,] Of the outer wall; it was three yards high and three yards broad. This wall served as a security against the precipices of the mount on which the temple stood. Abp. Newcome. And it separated the holy ground from that which was profane. W. Lowth.

6. Then came he &c.] After having passed the court of the Gentiles, he came to the eastern gate of the court of Israel. Abp. Newcome.

11. — and the length of the gate,] By this some understand the height of the gate. Houbigant renders it, "and the length of the entry of the gate." W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

14. He made also posts of threescore cubits,] The angel described the height of the columns or pillars which were to support the rooms or stories over the arch of the gate, and these were in height sixty cubits; the whole building being divided into three stories like those described, chap. xlii. 6. Calmet.

16. And there were narrow windows] These windows were narrow without, but broad within to disperse the light. The margin of our Bibles thus explains it, and refers to 1 Kings vi. 4. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

—— and likewise to the arches:] The word here rendered "arch," sometimes signifies a porch or entrance. W. Lowth. See the margin.

—— and upon each post were palm trees.] Probably pilasters representing palm trees; the trunks forming the shafts, and the branches the capitals. Calmet.

17. Then brought he me into the outward court,] The court of Israel or of the people; the outer of the two courts, mentioned 2 Kings xxi. 5. Herod added a third, called "the court of the Gentiles." Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

18. — the lower pavement.] This was called the lower pavement, with respect to the several ascents which were still to go up the nearer you came to the temple. Dr. Lightfoot.

23 And the gate of the inner court was over against the gate toward the north, and toward the east; and he measured from gate to gate an hundred cubits.

24 ¶ After that he brought me toward the south, and behold a gate toward the south: and he measured the posts thereof and the arches thereof according to these measures.

25 And there were windows in it and in the arches thereof round about, like those windows: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits.

26 And there were seven steps to go up to it, and the arches thereof were before them: and it had palm trees, one on this side, and another on that side, upon the posts thereof.

27 And there was a gate in the inner court toward the south: and he measured from gate to gate toward the south an hundred cubits.

28 And he brought me to the inner court by the south gate: and he measured the south gate according to these measures;

29 And the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, according to these measures: and there were windows in it and in the arches thereof round about: it was fifty cubits long, and five and twenty cubits broad.

30 And the arches round about were five and twenty cubits long, and five cubits † broad.

† Heb. breadth.

31 And the arches thereof were toward the utter court; and palm trees were upon the posts thereof: and the going up to it had eight steps.

32 ¶ And he brought me into the inner court toward the east: and he measured the gate according to these measures.

33 And the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, were according to these measures: and there were windows therein and in the arches thereof round about: it was fifty cubits long, and five and twenty cubits broad. Before CHRIST 574.

34 And the arches thereof were toward the outward court; and palm trees were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side: and the going up to it had eight steps.

35 ¶ And he brought me to the north gate, and measured it according to these measures;

36 The little chambers thereof, the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, and the windows to it round about: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits.

37 And the posts thereof were toward the utter court; and palm trees were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side: and the going up to it had eight steps.

38 And the chambers and the entries thereof were by the posts of the gates, where they washed the burnt offering.

39 ¶ And in the porch of the gate were two tables on this side, and two tables on that side, to slay thereon the burnt offering and the sin offering and the trespass offering.

40 And at the side without, ‖ as one goeth up to the entry of the north gate, were two tables; and on the other side, which was at the porch of the gate, were two tables.

41 Four tables were on this side, and four tables on that side, by the side of the gate; eight tables, whereupon they slew their sacrifices.

42 And the four tables were of hewn stone for the burnt offering, of a cubit and an half long, and a cubit and an half broad, and one cubit high: whereupon also they laid the instruments wherewith they slew the burnt offering and the sacrifice.

43 And within were ‖ hooks, an hand broad, fastened round about: and upon the tables was the flesh of the offering.

44 ¶ And without the inner gate were the chambers of the singers in the inner court, which was at the side of the north gate; and their prospect was toward the

22. — and the arches thereof were before them.] Or at the entrance of them. W. Lowth.

23. And the gate of the inner court was over against the gate toward the north, and toward the east;] The expression is elliptical, and means, that the north gate of the inner court did exactly answer this north gate of the outer court described ver. 20, 22, in like manner as the east gate of the inner court answered the east gate of the outer court. W. Lowth.

30. — five and twenty cubits long, and five cubits broad.] Length seems here to be taken for height, as before, ver. 11. W. Lowth.

43. — within were hooks,] Hooks for hanging up the beasts slain for sacrifice, in order to the flaying of them; or, as some think the meaning of the Hebrew word to be, edges to the tables to prevent the instruments of sacrifice from slipping off. Dr. Lightfoot, Calmet.

45 And he said unto me, This chamber, whose prospect is toward the south, is for the priests, the keepers of the ‖ charge of the house.

‖ Or, ward, or, ordinance: and so ver. 46.

46 And the chamber whose prospect is toward the north is for the priests, the keepers of the charge of the altar: these are the sons of Zadok among the sons of Levi, which come near to the LORD to minister unto him.

47 So he measured the court, an hundred cubits long, and an hundred cubits broad, foursquare; and the altar that was before the house.

48 ¶ And he brought me to the porch of the house, and measured each post of the porch, five cubits on this side, and five cubits on that side: and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, and three cubits on that side.

49 The length of the porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth eleven cubits; and he brought me by the steps whereby they went up to it: and there were pillars by the posts, one on this side, and another on that side.

CHAP. XLI.

The measures, parts, chambers, and ornaments of the temple.

AFTERWARD he brought me to the temple, and measured the posts, six cubits broad on the one side, and six cubits broad on the other side, which was the breadth of the tabernacle.

2 And the breadth of the ‖ door was ten cubits; and the sides of the door were five cubits on the one side, and five cubits on the other side: and he measured the length thereof, forty cubits: and the breadth, twenty cubits. Before CHRIST 574.

3 Then went he inward, and measured the post of the door, two cubits; and the door, six cubits; and the breadth of the door, seven cubits.

4 So he measured the length thereof, twenty cubits; and the breadth, twenty cubits, before the temple: and he said unto me, This is the most holy place.

5 After he measured the wall of the house, six cubits; and the breadth of every side chamber, four cubits, round about the house on every side.

6 And the side chambers were three, † one over another, and ‖ thirty in order; and they entered into the wall which was of the house for the side chambers round about, that they might † have hold, but they had not hold in the wall of the house.

† Heb. side chamber over side chamber.

‖ Or, three and thirty times, or, five.

† Heb. be holden.

7 And † there was an enlarging, and a winding about still upward to the chambers: for the winding about of the house went still upward round about the house: therefore the breadth of the house was still upward, and so increased from the lowest chamber to the highest by the midst.

† Heb. it was made broader, and went round.

8 I saw also the height of the house round about: the foundations of the side chambers were a full reed of six great cubits.

9 The thickness of the wall, which was for the side chamber without, was five cubits: and that which was left was the place of the side chambers that were within.

10 And between the chambers was the wideness of twenty cubits round about the house on every side.

11 And the doors of the side chambers were toward the place that was left, one door toward the north, and another door toward

45. — This chamber, — is for the priests.] The word "chamber" is put here for a suite of chambers. The wing or row of buildings on the north side of the inner court was destined for the use of the priests, who were in constant attendance according to their courses upon the service of the temple; see Numb. xviii. 5; 1 Chron. vi. 49; 2 Chron. xiii. 11. Calmet, W. Lowth.

—— of the charge of the house.] They had the charge of the sacred vessels, of the precious veils, of the perfumes, &c. Calmet. The word "priests" may here include Levites under it. W. Lowth.

46. And the chamber whose prospect is toward the north] Another wing or row of chambers on the south side of the inner court is for the descendants of the family of Aaron, whose office it is to attend upon the service of the altar, and keep the fire burning thereon perpetually, Lev. vi. 12, 13. W. Lowth.

47. — and the altar that was before the house.] The altar stood in the inner court, just before the porch that entered into the temple. W. Lowth.

Chap. XLI. ver. 1. — which was the breadth of the tabernacle.] See Exod. xxvi. 16, 22, 23.

4. — before the temple:] Or, according to the breadth of the temple; that is, corresponding to it. W. Lowth.

6. And the side chambers were three, one over another,] They were three stories high. W. Lowth.

—— and they entered into the wall] The beams of the chamber entered into the outer wall built opposite to that of the temple; see 1 Kings vi. 6, 10. Abp. Newcome.

—— but they had not hold in the wall of the house.] Though the beams of the chamber were admitted into the outer wall, they rested on the projections of the inner wall; either from reverence to the sacred place, or to secure it from fire. Abp. Newcome.

8. — the height of the house] Of these chambers, three stories high, in which sense the word is used ver. 9. W. Lowth.

12 Now the building that was before the separate place at the end toward the west was seventy cubits broad; and the wall of the building was five cubits thick round about, and the length thereof ninety cubits.

13 So he measured the house, an hundred cubits long; and the separate place, and the building, with the walls thereof, an hundred cubits long;

14 Also the breadth of the face of the house, and of the separate place toward the east, an hundred cubits.

15 And he measured the length of the building over against the separate place which was behind it, and the ‖ galleries thereof on the one side and on the other side, an hundred cubits, with the inner temple, and the porches of the court;

20 From the ground unto above the door were cherubims and palm trees made, and on the wall of the temple.

21 The † posts of the temple were squared, and the face of the sanctuary; the appearance of the one as the appearance of the other.

Before CHRIST 574.

22 The altar of wood was three cubits high, and the length thereof two cubits; and the corners thereof, and the length thereof, and the walls thereof, were of wood: and he said unto me, This is the table that is before the LORD.

23 And the temple and the sanctuary had two doors.

24 And the doors had two leaves apiece, two turning leaves; two leaves for the one door, and two leaves for the other door.

25 And there were made on them, on the doors of the temple, cherubims and palm trees, like as were made upon the walls; and there were thick planks upon the face of the porch without.

26 And there were narrow windows and palm trees on the one side and on the other side, on the sides of the porch, and upon the side chambers of the house, and thick planks.

CHAP. XLII.

1 The chambers for the priests. 13 The use thereof. 19 The measures of the outward court.

THEN he brought me forth into the utter court, the way toward the north: and he brought me into the chamber that was over against the separate place, and which was before the building toward the north.

2 Before the length of an hundred cubits was the north door, and the breadth was fifty cubits.

3 Over against the twenty cubits which were for the inner court, and over against the pavement which was for the utter court, was gallery against gallery in three stories.

4 And before the chambers was a walk of ten cubits breadth inward, a way of one cubit; and their doors toward the north.

---

12. — the separate place] By this most understand the temple proper. Abp. Newcome.

14. — the breadth of the face of the house,] The whole temple with the porch and walls was a hundred cubits in length westward. W. Lowth.

15. And he measured the length of the building over against the separate place which was behind it,] Noldius translates this sentence more clearly thus; "And he measured the length of the building which was before the separate place, and that which was behind it." Abp. Newcome. The east and west sides having been measured before, the north and south sides are here represented as measuring each an hundred cubits. W. Lowth.

16. — and the windows were covered;] With lattices, or curtains, or both. Abp. Newcome.

18. And it was made with cherubims &c.] On the inside of the house the walls were adorned with carved work of cherubim and palm trees as in Solomon's temple; see 1 Kings vi. 29. W. Lowth.

—— two faces;] Which appeared; the other two (of the ox and the eagle) being supposed below the plain. The cherubim had each four faces; see chap. i. vi. W. Lowth.

22. — the walls thereof,] The sides. W. Lowth.

—— This is the table that is before the Lord.] Compare chap. xliv. 16. The words "altar" and "table" are used promiscuously; see Heb. xiii. 10; where by "altar" the Apostle means "table." Abp. Newcome.

Chap. XLII. ver. 1. — the utter court,] Utter with respect to the temple itself; the court of the priests is meant. Houbigant, Abp. Newcome, Calmet.

4. — a way of one cubit;] This some understand of an entrance at each end of the cloister. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 574.

5 Now the upper chambers were shorter: for the galleries ‖ were higher than these, ‖ than the lower, and than the middlemost of the building.

‖ Or, did eat of these.

6 For they were in three stories, but had not pillars as the pillars of the courts: therefore the building was straitened more than the lowest and the middlemost from the ground.

¶ Or, and the building consisted of the lower and the middlemost.

7 And the wall that was without over against the chambers, toward the utter court on the forepart of the chambers, the length thereof was fifty cubits.

8 For the length of the chambers that were in the utter court was fifty cubits: and, lo, before the temple were an hundred cubits.

‖ Or, from the place.

9 And ‖ from under these chambers was ‖ the entry on the east side, ‖ as one goeth into them from the utter court.

¶ Or, he that brought me.

10 The chambers were in the thickness of the wall of the court toward the east, over against the separate place, and over against the building.

¶ Or, as he came.

11 And the way before them was like the appearance of the chambers which were toward the north, as long as they, and as broad as they: and all their goings out were both according to their fashions, and according to their doors.

12 And according to the doors of the chambers that were toward the south was a door in the head of the way, even the way directly before the wall toward the east, as one entereth into them.

13 ¶ Then said he unto me, The north chambers and the south chambers, which are before the separate place, they be holy chambers, where the priests that approach unto the LORD shall eat the most holy things: there shall they lay the most holy things, and the meat offering, and the sin offering, and the trespass offering; for the place is holy.

Before CHRIST 574.

14 When the priests enter therein, then shall they not go out of the holy place into the utter court, but there they shall lay their garments wherein they minister; for they are holy; and shall put on other garments, and shall approach to those things which are for the people.

15 Now when he had made an end of measuring the inner house, he brought me forth toward the gate whose prospect is toward the east, and measured it round about.

16 He measured the east † side with the measuring reed, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed round about.

17 He measured the north side, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed round about.

18 He measured the south side, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed.

19 ¶ He turned about to the west side, and measured five hundred reeds with the measuring reed.

20 He measured it by the four sides: it had a wall round about, five hundred reeds long, and five hundred broad, to make a separation between the sanctuary and the profane place.

5. Now the upper chambers were shorter: &c.] The marginal reading is to be preferred; the sense of which is, "for the galleries did abate of these;" that is, took of these more than of the lowest and middlemost part of the building. The reason of this is assigned in the next verse. W. Lowth. Abp. Newcome.

6. — had not pillars.] To support the galleries or balconies; the two upper stories had balconies standing out of them, the breadth of which was taken out of the rooms themselves, and this made them so much the narrower, because the weight of the balconies was not supported by pillars, as the rooms over the cloisters of the outward court were, but only by the wall. W. Lowth.

8. — and, lo, before the temple were an hundred cubits.] The angel conducts the Prophet from the north side of the court to the south side, and in passing before the temple he observes the dimensions of the east front; see chap. xli. 14. Calmet, W. Lowth.

10. — in the thickness of the wall] In the breadth of the wall; that is, in the breadth of ground which that wall enclosed. W. Lowth.

11. And the way before them] The alley or way of ten cubits within the chambers; see ver. 4. Calmet.

13. — they be holy chambers,] The shewbread, the remainder of the meat offering, sin offering, and trespass offering, are expressly called the most holy things; Lev. vi. 14, 17; xxiv. 9; Numb. xviii. 9; and are distinguished from the holy things, such as are the peace offerings, first fruits, and tithes, Lev. xxi. 22. These were to be eaten within the precincts of the temple by the same laws. W. Lowth.

14. When the priests enter therein,] Within the inner court; chap. xliv. 17. W. Lowth.

—— then shall they not go out of the holy place into the utter court,] Moses had given the same direction, in saying, that the high priest and the inferiour priests should use their dress of ceremony when they entered into the tabernacle to perform their functions; insinuating thereby, that in other places they should not wear it, Exod. xxviii. 43. Calmet.

15. — the inner house,] The temple itself; compare chap. xli. 15. W. Lowth.

16. He measured the east side with the measuring reed, five hundred reeds,] These are the measures of the holy mountain or area upon which the temple stood; it is an exact square. Capellus is of opinion, that instead of "five hundred reeds," we ought to read "five hundred cubits;" and this reading is supported by the Septuagint, by St. Jerome, by the Jewish authors themselves, by all the interpreters, and by the actual size of the holy mountain. The smaller cubit is probably here intended. Calmet.

20. — it had a wall round about,] This was the outermost wall, to defend it from being invaded or profaned; compare Rev. xxi. 17. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

—— between the sanctuary and the profane place.] By the "sanctuary" is here meant, the whole compass of ground which was the precincts of the temple, elsewhere called the "holy mountain;" see chap. xliii. 12; in comparison of which Jerusalem itself, though upon several accounts styled "the holy city," was esteemed but as profane or unconsecrated ground; see chap. xlviii. 15. W. Lowth.

CHAP. XLIII.

1 The returning of the glory of God into the temple. 7 The sin of Israel hindered God's presence. 10 The prophet exhorteth them to repentance, and observation of the law of the house. 13 The measures, 18 and the ordinances of the altar.

AFTERWARD he brought me to the gate, even the gate that looketh toward the east:

2 And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel came from the way of the east: and [a] his voice was like a noise of many [a] waters: and the earth shined with his glory.

3 And it was [b] according to the appearance of the vision which I saw, even according to the vision that I saw ‖ when I came to destroy the city: and the visions were like the vision that I saw by the river Chebar; and I fell upon my face.

4 And the glory of the LORD came into the house by the way of the gate whose prospect is toward the east.

5 So the spirit took me up, and brought me into the inner court; and, behold, the glory of the LORD filled the house.

6 And I heard him speaking unto me out of the house; and the man stood by me.

7 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, the place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever, and my holy name, shall the house of Israel no more defile, neither they, nor their kings, by their whoredom, nor by the carcases of their kings in their high places.

8 In their setting of their threshold by my thresholds, and their post by my posts, ‖ and the wall between me and them, they have even defiled my holy name by their abominations that they have committed: wherefore I have consumed them in mine anger.

9 Now let them put away their whoredom, and the carcases of their kings, far from me, and I will dwell in the midst of them for ever.

10 ¶ Thou son of man, shew the house to the house of Israel, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities: and let them measure the ‖ pattern.

11 And if they be ashamed of all that they have done, shew them the form of the house, and the fashion thereof, and the goings out thereof, and the comings in thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the laws thereof: and write it in their sight, that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them.

12 This is the law of the house; Upon the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy. Behold, this is the law of the house.

† Heb. bosom.

Chap. XLIII. ver. 2. — came from the way of the east:] It had removed thither, chap. xi. 23, and was now returning. Abp. Sacker. The glory of the Lord, when it forsook the temple, is described as departing from the eastern gate of it, chap. x. 19; afterwards it is represented as quite forsaking the city, and removing to a mountain on the east side of the city, chap. xi. 23. W. Lowth.

3. — when I came to destroy the city:] When I was transported in vision to Jerusalem, to foretell the destruction of the city. Calmet. See the note on Jer. i. 10.

4. — came into the house] To shew that God would again accept that place and its sacred rites, and afford the Jews His protection. Grotius.

5. — and, behold, the glory of the Lord filled the house.] The glory, or the symbol of the Divine presence, entered into the temple and settled there, as it did when it was finished by Solomon, 1 Kings viii. 10, 11. W. Lowth.

7. — the place of my throne, &c.] Here is the place of My throne, &c. The cherubim were God's throne, from whence He is said to sit between the cherubim, and the ark was His footstool, Ps. xcix. 1, 5. Calmet, W. Lowth.

—— where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever,] See Ps. lxviii. 16. This promise is to be understood like those formerly made upon the condition of their obedience, but it is eminently fulfilled in Christ, in whom all the prophecies of the Old Testament are to have their final accomplishment. Zechariah prophesies of the Messiah, chap. vi. 13, that "He should build the temple of the Lord, and bear the glory;" that is, He shall build the Christian Church; "in Him shall all the fulness of the Godhead dwell bodily," and really, not in types and figures; see Heb. iii. 3; Matt. xvi. 18; John i. 14; Col. ii. 9. There was no visible shechinah or glory in the second temple, till the Lord, whom they expected, "came to His temple," Mal. iii. 1; that is, till the Messiah, who was "the brightness of His Father's glory," appeared there, and made it an illustrious figure of that true church or temple of believers, where He would continue His presence for ever, 2 Cor. vi. 16. W. Lowth, Bp. Hall.

—— by the carcases of their kings in their high places.] By the idols set up by their kings in the high places, Jer. xvi. 18. W. Lowth. We may understand by "carcases," bodies offered to idols. Bp. Hall.

8. In their setting of] See 2 Kings xvi. 14; xxi. 4, 5, 7.

—— and the wall between me and them,] The sense in the margin is better, "for there was but a wall between Me and them." W. Lowth.

10, 11. — shew the house to the house of Israel,] It was indeed a model for them to imitate, as far as they were able; but we may probably suppose, that the words may have a further view and import; that the model of God's temple here set forth, is but a pattern of heavenly things, and a type of that pure church, "built upon the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone;" which we may hope God may in due time every where restore. W. Lowth.

We learn from Josephus, that the Asmonean princes built a tower close to the north side of the mount, which became famous toward the close of the Jewish history, under the name of the Tower Antonia. This was a profanation of the holy ground. Calmet.

13. — the bottom] The base of the altar. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 574.

† Heb. lip.

shall be a cubit, and the breadth a cubit, and the border thereof by the † edge thereof round about shall be a span: and this shall be the higher place of the altar.

14 And from the bottom upon the ground even to the lower settle shall be two cubits, and the breadth one cubit; and from the lesser settle even to the greater settle shall be four cubits, and the breadth one cubit.

† Heb. Harel, that is, Mountain of God. † Heb. Ariel, that is, the lion of God.

15 So † the altar shall be four cubits; and from † the altar and upward shall be four horns.

16 And the altar shall be twelve cubits long, twelve broad, square in the four squares thereof.

17 And the settle shall be fourteen cubits long and fourteen broad in the four squares thereof; and the border about it shall be half a cubit; and the bottom thereof shall be a cubit about; and his stairs shall look toward the east.

18 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, thus saith the Lord GOD; These are the ordinances of the altar in the day when they shall make it, to offer burnt offerings thereon, and to sprinkle blood thereon.

19 And thou shalt give to the priests the Levites that be of the seed of Zadok, which approach unto me, to minister unto me, saith the Lord GOD, a young bullock for a sin offering.

20 And thou shalt take of the blood thereof, and put it on the four horns of it, and on the four corners of the settle, and upon the border round about: thus shalt thou cleanse and purge it.

21 Thou shalt take the bullock also of the sin offering, and he shall burn it in the appointed place of the house, without the sanctuary. Before CHRIST 574.

22 And on the second day thou shalt offer a kid of the goats without blemish for a sin offering; and they shall cleanse the altar, as they did cleanse it with the bullock.

23 When thou hast made an end of cleansing it, thou shalt offer a young bullock without blemish, and a ram out of the flock without blemish.

24 And thou shalt offer them before the LORD, and the priests shall cast salt upon them, and they shall offer them up for a burnt offering unto the LORD.

25 Seven days shalt thou prepare every day a goat for a sin offering: they shall also prepare a young bullock, and a ram out of the flock, without blemish.

26 Seven days shall they purge the altar and purify it; and they shall † consecrate themselves. † Heb. fill their hands.

27 And when these days are expired, it shall be, that upon the eighth day, and so forward, the priests shall make your burnt offerings upon the altar, and your ‖ peace offerings; and I will accept you, saith the Lord GOD. ‖ Or, thank offerings.

CHAP. XLIV.

1 The east gate assigned only to the prince. 4 The priests reproved for polluting of the sanctuary. 9 Idolaters uncapable of the priest's office. 15 The sons of Zadok are accepted thereto. 17 Ordinances for the priests.

THEN he brought me back the way of the gate of the outward sanctuary

---

—— the higher place] In the Hebrew, "the back of the altar," which imports that this base was the protuberance, or the widest part of it. W. Lowth, Houbigant.

14. And from the bottom upon the ground even to the lower settle] The "settle" means the imbeuching or narrowing; the altar was made narrower as it came nearer to the top. On this lower settle or ledge the priests walked round the altar. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

15. —four horns.] One at each corner; see Exod. xxvii. 2. They arose from the uppermost bench, where the priest stood to officiate. W. Lowth.

In two ancient Egyptian pictures, taken from the ruins of Herculaneum, are representations of altars, having at each of their four corners a rising, which continues square to about half its height, but from thence is gradually sloped off to an edge or a point. It is likely that these are "the horns of the altar" alluded to in Scripture; and probably this is their true figure; see Ps. cxviii. 27. To retain the victim was perhaps the primary use of these horns. Fragments to Calmet.

17. — stairs] See Exod. xx. 26. It was an inclined plane. God forbade His priests to go up by steps to His altar. The ascent up to the altar was by a gentle rising, which was thirty-two cubits in length, and sixteen in breadth, and landed (for the convenience of the priests who went up to sacrifice) upon the upper ledge or settle next the hearth, or the top of the altar. Dean Prideaux.

18. — These are the ordinances of the altar] At the dedication, before the ordinary sacrifices are made. Calmet.

21. — without the sanctuary.] In some place appointed for that purpose within the precincts of the holy mountain. The temple itself is called the "inner house," chap. xli. 15; xlii. 15; to distinguish it from the outer court and precincts thereof. The body of the bullock, whose blood was to sanctify the altar, was to be burnt without the camp, by order of the law, Exod. xxix. 14. W. Lowth, Calmet.

22. — a kid of the goats] This is over and above the sacrifices of consecration prescribed, Exod. xxix. 1. W. Lowth.

23. — a ram out of the flock] Called the "ram of consecration," Exod. xxix. 31; Lev. viii. 22. W. Lowth.

24. — shall cast salt] Upon the victims, according to the law in Lev. ii. 13. W. Lowth.

26. Seven days] See Exod. xxix. 35; Lev. viii. 33.

—— and they shall consecrate themselves.] The expression in the original is, "they shall fill their hands." The priests were consecrated to their office partly by the act of filling their hands with what they were to offer, Exod. xxix. 24. Calmet, W. Lowth.

Chap. XLIV. ver. 1. — of the outward sanctuary] In opposition to the temple itself, which was the inner sanctuary. This was called the outward sanctuary, because none but priests entered into it. The gate is to be understood of the inner gate, which immediately communicated with the court of the priests. Houbigant.

Before CHRIST 574. which looketh toward the east; and it was shut.

2 Then said the LORD unto me; This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; because the LORD, the God of Israel, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be shut.

3 It is for the prince; the prince, he shall sit in it to eat bread before the LORD; he shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate, and shall go out by the way of the same.

4 ¶ Then brought he me the way of the north gate before the house: and I looked, and, behold, the glory of the LORD filled the house of the LORD: and I fell upon my face.

† Heb. set thine heart.

10 And the Levites that are gone away far from me, when Israel went astray, which went astray away from me after their idols; they shall even bear their iniquity.

11 Yet they shall be ministers in my sanctuary, having charge at the gates of the house, and ministering to the house: they shall slay the burnt offering and the sacrifice for the people, and they shall stand before them to minister unto them.

12 Because they ministered unto them before their idols, and † caused the house of Israel to fall into iniquity; therefore have I lifted up mine hand against them, saith the Lord GOD, and they shall bear their iniquity.

—— and it was shut.] After that the glory of the Lord had entered that way. W. Lowth.

2. — it shall not be opened,] Unless at particular seasons; see chap. xliii. 4; xlvi. 1, 2. W. Lowth.

—— because the Lord, the God of Israel, &c.] That is, the glory of the Lord; as it is expressed, chap. xliii. 2, 4: see also Exod. xxiv. 10; Is. vi. 1, 5. W. Lowth.

3. It is for the prince,] Solomon placed his seat at the entrance into the inner court before the altar of the Lord, 2 Chron. vi. 13; and here the prince seems to have had his place in aftertimes, whenever he came to worship in the temple, 2 Chron. xxiii. 13; xxxiv. 31. Not far from which place a seat was placed for the high priest, as may be gathered from Eli's seat, 1 Sam. i. 9; and from whence the high priest pronounced the blessing after the service was ended; see Eccius. l. 20. W. Lowth, Dr. Lightfoot.

—— to eat bread before the Lord;] To eat part of the peace offerings, chap. xlvi. 2. Bread stands for all sorts of entertainment; see Gen. xliii. 31; and particularly for a religious feast, made of the remainder of a sacrifice, Gen. xxxi. 54. W. Lowth.

5. — mark well the entering in of the house, with every going forth &c.] Suffer none that are unqualified to enter upon God's service there. W. Lowth. In the Hebrew idiom, the comings in and the goings out often signify all the conduct, the actions, and the habits of a person. Calmet.

7. — strangers, uncircumcised in heart, and uncircumcised in flesh,] In that you have ordained and appointed those to be priests in My sanctuary that are strangers both in blood and in religion; and have given them a place of ministration in My temple to pollute it. Bp. Hall. See Acts xxi. 28, where St. Paul is accused by the Jews of violating the temple, by introducing Gentiles into it. Calmet.

—— the fat and the blood,] These were peculiarly appropriated to God; see Lev. iii. 16; xvii. 11. W. Lowth.

9. — No stranger, — shall enter into my sanctuary,] We learn from Josephus, that on certain extraordinary occasions strangers have been admitted since the captivity into the court of the priests, but they have never consented to the admission of any one into the sanctuary. Ptolemy Philopator in vain endeavoured to penetrate to the holy place; he found the Jews determined to die rather than to permit him. Heliodorus entered as far as the treasure, but he was punished by the hand of angels. Antiochus Epiphanes and Pompey penetrated to the holy of holies, but they effected it by a violence which it was impossible for the priests to resist; and nothing upon these occasions appeared more mournful, or more distressing to the Jews, than that the things which they held most sacred should have been discovered and laid open to the Gentiles. Calmet.

10. — the Levites] Many of the priests and Levites lived to see the second temple, Ezra iii. 12; but the descendants of former idolatrous priests and Levites may be meant. Abp. Newcome. The Levites, who were priests, are here understood. Calmet. They were now to be degraded from attending upon the higher offices belonging to the priesthood, and thrust down to meaner services. W. Lowth.

11. — having charge at the gates &c.] Performing the office of porters, and other servile duties of the inferiour Levites. W. Lowth.

13. — to do the office of a priest] So Josiah discharged the priests who had been guilty of idolatry from attending upon the service of the altar, 2 Kings xxiii. 9. W. Lowth.

16 They shall enter into my sanctuary, and they shall come near to my table, to minister unto me, and they shall keep my charge.

17 ¶ And it shall come to pass, that when they enter in at the gates of the inner court, they shall be clothed with linen garments; and no wool shall come upon them, whiles they minister in the gates of the inner court, and within.

19 And when they go forth into the utter court, even into the utter court to the people, they shall put off their garments wherein they ministered, and lay them in the holy chambers, and they shall put on other garments; and they shall not sanctify the people with their garments.

25 And they shall come at no [b] dead person to defile themselves: but for father, or for mother, or for son, or for daughter, for brother, or for sister that hath had no husband, they may defile themselves.

[b] Lev. 21. 1, 11.

26 And after he is cleansed, they shall reckon unto him seven days.

27 And in the day that he goeth into the sanctuary, unto the inner court, to minister in the sanctuary, he shall offer his sin offering, saith the Lord GOD.

15. — the sons of Zadok.] See chap. xl. 46. The whole passage from ver. 10 to 16 naturally refers to the period of time when the second temple was rebuilt. Abp. Newcome.

17. — the inner court.] The court just before the temple, where the altar of burnt offering stood, ver. 27 of this chapter. W. Lowth.

—— with linen.] The ephod, mitre, breeches, and girdle, which was the habit of the ordinary priests, were all of fine linen, contrived "for glory and beauty," Exod. xxviii. 40. W. Lowth.

18. — with any thing that causeth sweat.] Lest those holy vestments may be soiled, or any outward uncleanliness may be caused thereby. Bp. Hall.

19. — and they shall not sanctify the people with their garments.] In touching them with their holy clothes. Whatever touched any thing holy, became itself holy, and was no longer to be profaned by vulgar use, Exod. xxx. 29; Lev. vi. 27. The altar sanctifies the gift, Matt. xxiii. 19. What touched the altar or the furniture of the tabernacle was holy; probably what the holy garments touched was so too. Abp. Secker.

20. Neither shall they shave their heads, nor suffer their locks to grow long;] See Lev. xxi. The ministers of the sacred things shall not shave their heads so as to make them bare, nor yet shall they wear their hair long and disordered; but, avoiding the vanity of either extreme, they shall only cut their hair. Dean Spencer.

22. — for their wives.] See Lev. xxi. 14.

23. — the holy and profane,] What places, according to the ceremonial law, are holy, and what common; what things are defiled, and what clean. Abp. Newcome.

24. And in controversy they shall stand in judgment;] See Deut. xvii. 8, 9; and the people were to seek the law at their mouths, Mal. ii. 7; that is, to inquire of them the purport and meaning of it. When the supreme judicial power was placed in the Sanhedrim, the majority of that court consisted chiefly of such as had the chief stations among the priests; see Acts iv. 5, 6. W. Lowth.

26. — seven days.] His uncleanness continued for seven days by the law, Numb. xix. 11; and the priests were to reckon to him seven days more, before he was to be admitted into the sanctuary. W. Lowth.

28. — ye shall give them no possession] Their priesthood, their ministry in My sanctuary, and the perquisites thereto belonging, shall be to them instead of lands and cities, of which they shall not have any share as the other tribes; see Deut. x. 9; Josh. xiii. 14. W. Lowth, Michaelis. A portion was however allotted to them, under the new division in the following chapter. W. Lowth.

29. — every dedicated thing] Devoted thing; as a field or a beast, Lev. xxvii. 28; Numb. xviii. 14. Abp. Newcome.

30. — of your dough,] See Numb. xv. 20.

CHAP. XLV.

1 The portion of land for the sanctuary. 6 for the city, 7 and for the prince. 9 Ordinances for the prince.

† Heb. when ye cause the land to fall. ‡ Heb. Perizzah.

MOREOVER, † when ye shall divide by lot the land for inheritance, ye shall offer an oblation unto the LORD, † an holy portion of the land: the length shall be the length of five and twenty thousand reeds, and the breadth shall be ten thousand. This shall be holy in all the borders thereof round about.

2 Of this there shall be for the sanctuary five hundred in length, with five hundred in breadth, square round about; and fifty cubits round about for the ‖ suburbs thereof.

‖ Or, void places.

3 And of this measure shalt thou measure the length of five and twenty thousand, and the breadth of ten thousand: and in it shall be the sanctuary and the most holy place.

4 The holy portion of the land shall be for the priests the ministers of the sanctuary, which shall come near to minister unto the LORD: and it shall be a place for their houses, and an holy place for the sanctuary.

Before CHRIST 574.

5 And the five and twenty thousand of length, and the ten thousand of breadth, shall also the Levites, the ministers of the house, have for themselves, for a possession for twenty chambers.

6 ¶ And ye shall appoint the possession of the city five thousand broad, and five and twenty thousand long, over against the oblation of the holy portion: it shall be for the whole house of Israel.

7 ¶ And a portion shall be for the prince on the one side and on the other side of the oblation of the holy portion, and of the possession of the city, before the oblation of the holy portion, and before the possession of the city, from the west side westward, and from the east side eastward: and the length shall be over against one of the portions, from the west border unto the east border.

8 In the land shall be his possession in

He hath made of blessing those with an extraordinary degree of plenty, who conscientiously pay their tithes and offerings as grateful acknowledgments to God, the Giver of all good things; Prov. iii. 9, 10; Mal. iii. 10; 2 Cor. xxxi. 10. W. Lowth.

31. — dead of itself.] A command given to all the Jews, Exod. xxii. 31; and more particularly to the priests, Lev. xxii. 8. W. Lowth.

Chap. XLV. ver. 1 — by lot] The land was so divided by Joshua in the first partition. W. Lowth.

—— an oblation unto the Lord.] The portion of the Lord is here called an oblation, because it was a sort of firstfruits of the land or soil itself. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

—— five and twenty thousand reeds,] The Hebrew doth not express either reeds or cubits: but many interpreters expound the place of cubits, considering this to be the more probable measure, and concluding cubits to be here meant from the circumstance of their being used in the measurement of the temple in the next verse. Bp. Lowth, Calmet, Michaelis.

4. — a place for their houses,] The houses were for the priests of the four and twenty courses, who were not in their course of waiting. W. Lowth.

—— for the sanctuary.] See chap. xlviii. 10.

5. And the five and twenty thousand of length, &c.] This was another allotment; and some translations render the sense plainer thus: "there shall be other five and twenty thousand," &c. The Levites were very numerous; in the time of David they were reckoned thirty-eight thousand, and therefore as large a piece of ground is allotted to them, as belonged to the temple and the whole priestly order. W. Lowth.

—— for twenty chambers.] According to most commentators, rows of chambers, or ranges of building. The Septuagint reads "cities to inhabit." Such cities as were allotted to them by Moses, Numb. xxxv. 2. W. Lowth.

6. — five thousand broad, and five and twenty thousand long,] These measurements contained an area of about seventeen miles in circuit, which was more than four times the circuit of Jerusalem, according to the account of Josephus. But it was intended for the whole house of Israel; that is, all the tribes upon solemn festivals, and was to have twelve gates according to the number of the tribes of Israel, chap. xlviii. 31. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth.

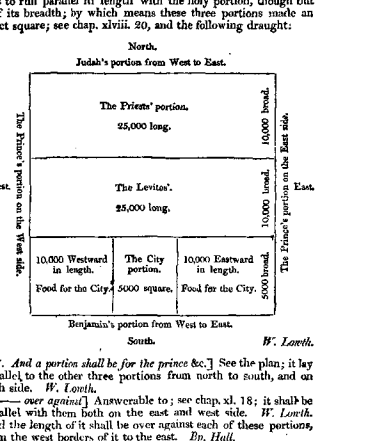
—— over against] Or by the side of; see chap. xlviii. 15. It was to run parallel in length with the holy portion, though but half its breadth; by which means these three portions made an exact square; see chap. xlviii. 20, and the following draught:



W. Lowth.

7. And a portion shall be for the prince &c.] See the plan; it lay parallel to the other three portions from north to south, and on each side. W. Lowth.

—— over against] Answerable to; see chap. xl. 18; it shall be parallel with them both on the east and west side. W. Lowth. And the length of it shall be over against each of these portions, from the west borders of it to the east. Bp. Hall.

8. In the land shall be his possession &c.] That My princes may not be put for want of a due and settled provision to raise means to themselves by the oppression of My people. Bp. Hall.

Before CHRIST 574. Israel: and my princes shall no more oppress my people; and the rest of the land shall they give to the house of Israel according to their tribes.

17 And it shall be the prince's part to give burnt offerings, and meat offerings, and drink offerings, in the feasts, and in the new moons, and in the sabbaths, in all solemnities of the house of Israel: he shall prepare the sin offering, and the meat offering, and the burnt offering, and the ‖ peace offerings, to make reconciliation for the house of Israel.

Before CHRIST 574.

‖ Or, thank offerings.

18 Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the first month, in the first day of the month, thou shalt take a young bullock without blemish, and cleanse the sanctuary:

19 And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering, and put it upon the posts of the house, and upon the four corners of the settle of the altar, and upon the posts of the gate of the inner court.

20 And so thou shalt do the seventh day of the month for every one that erreth, and for him that is simple: so shall ye reconcile the house.

21 In the first month, in the fourteenth day of the month, ye shall have the passover, a feast of seven days; unleavened bread shall be eaten.

22 And upon that day shall the prince prepare for himself and for all the people of the land a bullock for a sin offering.

23 And seven days of the feast he shall prepare a burnt offering to the LORD, seven bullocks and seven rams without blemish daily the seven days; and a kid of the goats daily for a sin offering.

12. And the shekel shall be &c.] See the note at Exod. xxx. 13; where the same number is made the standard of the shekel.

—— twenty shekels, five and twenty shekels, fifteen shekels, shall be your maneh.] The amount of the three is sixty shekels, which make a maneh or mina, about thirty ounces of silver. We may well suppose that three of the usual current coins among the Jews answered to the three numbers of shekels here mentioned. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth. But we learn from Sir John Chardin, that it is still the custom of the East, in reckoning a sum of money, to specify the different parts of which it is composed. Harmer.

13. This is the oblation &c.] The portion belonging to the Levites out of the fruits of the earth, when they were gathered in; see chap. xliv. 30. W. Lowth.

15. And one lamb out of the flock, &c.] This offering is besides the firstborn set apart for the use of the priests and Levites, Numb. xviii. 15. It is for the daily burnt offering. Numb. xxviii. 3; or for burnt offerings and peace offerings, or sacrifices of thanksgivings that were to be made upon proper occasions, chap. xliii. 27. W. Lowth.

—— for a meat offering,] See ver. 13, 14. The meat offering, or more properly the bread offering, was made of fine flour mingled with oil, Lev. ii. 5, 6. W. Lowth.

—— to make reconciliation] This effect is attributed to burnt offerings, as well as to those which are properly sacrifices for sin, Lev. i. 4. W. Lowth.

16. — for the prince] The marginal reading is "with the prince," which agrees better with the sense. The prince shall join with the people in making the oblations already mentioned; but those in the next verse are to be at the exclusive charge of the prince. W. Lowth.

This was an offering enjoined to cleanse the temple from defilement, previous to the celebration of the passover, which took place a few days after; see Lev. xvi. 19. W. Lowth. But the time, and the ceremony, and the circumstances of this offering are not to be found in the law of Moses, and appear to be entirely new. Calmet. Michaelis also observes, that the regulations which follow are in several circumstances very different from the Mosaical. Abp. Newcome.

23. — seven days] Moses in some places speaks of the feast of unleavened bread, which lasted seven days, as distinct from the day wherein the passover was to be eaten; see Lev. xxiii. 5, 6; which is agreeable to the injunctions of this and the following verse. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 574. 24 And he shall prepare a meat offering of an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and an hin of oil for an ephah.

25 In the seventh month, in the fifteenth day of the month, shall he do the like in [c] Numb. 29. 12. the feast of the seven days, according to the sin[-]offering, according to the burnt offering, and according to the meat offering, and according to the oil.

CHAP. XLVI.

1 Ordinances for the prince in his worship, 9 and for the people. 16 An order for the prince's inheritance. 19 The courts for boiling and baking.

THUS saith the Lord GOD; The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east shall be shut the six working days; but on the sabbath it shall be opened, and in the day of the new moon it shall be opened.

2 And the prince shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, and shall stand by the post of the gate, and the priests shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, and he shall worship at the threshold of the gate: then he shall go forth; but the gate shall not be shut until the evening.

3 Likewise the people of the land shall worship at the door of this gate before the LORD in the sabbaths and in the new moons.

4 And the burnt offering that the prince shall offer unto the LORD in the sabbath day shall be six lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish.

5 And the meat offering shall be an ephah for a ram, and the meat offering for the lambs † as he shall be able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

† Heb. the gift of his hand.

6 And in the day of the new moon it shall be a young bullock without blemish, and six lambs, and a ram: they shall be without blemish.

Before CHRIST 574. 7 And he shall prepare a meat offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and for the lambs according as his hand shall attain unto, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

8 And when the prince shall enter, he shall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof.

9 ¶ But when the people of the land shall come before the LORD in the solemn feasts, he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate: he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it.

10 And the prince in the midst of them, when they go in, shall go in; and when they go forth, shall go forth.

11 And in the feasts and in the solemnities the meat offering shall be an ephah to a bullock, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambs as he is able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

12 Now when the prince shall prepare a voluntary burnt offering or peace offerings voluntarily unto the LORD, one shall then open him the gate that looketh toward the east, and he shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, as he did on the sabbath day: then he shall go forth; and after his going forth one shall shut the gate.

13 Thou shalt daily prepare a burnt offering unto the LORD of a lamb † of the first year without blemish: thou shalt prepare it † every morning.

† Heb. morning by morning.

14 And thou shalt prepare a meat offering for it every morning, the sixth part of an ephah, and the third part of an hin of

---

24. — an hin of oil for an ephah.] For each ephah of fine flour: an hin was the sixth part of an ephah or bath, and contained one gallon and two pints. Bp. Cumberland.

25. — In the seventh month, &c.] At the feast of tabernacles he shall do the same things as have been directed here for the passover. Calmet.

Chap. XLVI. ver. 3. Likewise the people of the land &c.] During the continuance of the tabernacle, they that would offer any sacrifice were required to bring it to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and there lay their hands upon the head of it, Lev. i. 3, 4: and after the temple was built, they came to the north or south gate of the inner court, according as the sacrifice was to be slain on the north or south side of the altar, and there presented their sacrifice. Dr. Lightfoot. Here the inner porch of the east gate is assigned for their station who came to present themselves before the Lord upon the solemn festivals, and they were to come no further into the inner court. W. Lowth.

4. — the burnt offering — in the sabbath day] It was the prince's part to provide sacrifices for the sabbaths and other festivals; see chap. xlv. 17. This was a new ordinance, and accordingly the offerings are different from those prescribed in the law. Moses had directed only two lambs extraordinary to be offered on the sabbath day; see Numb. xxviii. 9. The other proportions of the meat and drink offerings are also different; compare ver. 4, 6, 7, and 14, with Numb. xxviii. 9, 11, 12, 5. Calmet, W. Lowth.

5. — as he shall be able to give,] As he is disposed to give; see Deut. xvi. 17. Abp. Newcome.

8. — of that gate,] Of the eastern gate. To enter by this gate was the privilege of the prince and priests only; see ver. 2. W. Lowth.

10. And the prince in the midst &c.] The prince shall observe the same times of My service with My people, both for his coming in and for his going forth. Bp. Hall.

12. — a voluntary burnt offering] See Lev. xxii. 18, 21. The gate which was shut the whole week shall be open to the prince when he makes a voluntary offering. Calmet.

14. — the sixth part of an ephah, and the third part of an hin of oil,] In Numb. xxviii. 5, the proportion required is the tenth part

Before CHRIST 574. oil, to temper with the fine flour; a meat offering continually by a perpetual ordinance unto the LORD.

15 Thus shall they prepare the lamb, and the meat offering, and the oil, every morning for a continual burnt offering.

16 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD; If the prince give a gift unto any of his sons, the inheritance thereof shall be his sons'; it shall be their possession by inheritance.

17 But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to the year of liberty; after it shall return to the prince: but his inheritance shall be his sons' for them.

18 Moreover the prince shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, to thrust them out of their possession; but he shall give his sons inheritance out of his own possession: that my people be not scattered every man from his possession.

19 ¶ After he brought me through the entry, which was at the side of the gate, into the holy chambers of the priests, which looked toward the north: and, behold, there was a place on the two sides westward.

20 Then said he unto me, This is the place where the priests shall boil the trespass offering and the sin offering, where they shall bake the meat offering; that they bear them not out into the utter court, to sanctify the people.

21 Then he brought me forth into the utter court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court; and, behold, † in every corner of the court there was a court.

Before CHRIST 574.

† Heb. a court in a corner of a court, and a court in a corner of a court.

22 In the four corners of the court there were courts ‖ joined of forty cubits long and thirty broad: these four † corners were of one measure.

23 And there was a row of building round about in them, round about them four, and it was made with boiling places under the rows round about.

‖ Or, made with chimnies.

† Heb. corners.

24 Then said he unto me, These are the places of them that boil, where the ministers of the house shall boil the sacrifice of the people.

CHAP. XLVII.

1 The vision of the holy waters. 6 The virtue of them. 13 The borders of the land. 22 The division of it by lot.

AFTERWARD he brought me again unto the door of the house; and, behold, waters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward: for the forefront of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from under from the right side of the house, at the south side of the altar.

2 Then brought he me out of the way of the gate northward, and led me about the way without unto the utter gate by the way that looketh eastward; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side.

3 And when the man that had the line in his hand went forth eastward, he measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me of an ephah of flour, and the fourth part of an hin of oil. W. Lowth. On account of this difference, this offering should be understood of the prince. Abp. Newcome.

17. — it shall be his to the year of liberty;] The year of jubilee; see note at Lev. xxv. 10. The power given to the prince in the former verse of alienating to his sons is entirely new. Calmet.

—— shall be his sons' for them.] It shall be theirs, so as not to be alienated. W. Lowth.

18. — the prince shall not take &c.] 1 Kings xxi. 16; compare, chap. xlv. 8. W. Lowth.

19. — behold, there was a place on the two sides westward.] Or, on their sides westward; that is, there was an inclosure on the west sides of these chambers. W. Lowth.

20. — bake the meat offering;] Levit. ii. 4, 5, 7. W. Lowth.

—— that they bear them not out] That they bear them not into the outer court, where the people are allowed to assemble, since this privilege of these holy services rests in their own persons. Bp. Hall. See chap. xliv. 19, and Lev. vi. 26.

23. — a row of building] On the inside of these courts. W. Lowth.

24. — the ministers of the house] Probably the Levites, or inferiour ministers. The former sacrifices were boiled by the priests in the court properly belonging to them; see chap. xl. 45, and note. W. Lowth.

Chap. XLVII. ver. 1. — the door of the house;] The door of the temple, which is described, chap. xli. 2. W. Lowth.

—— waters issued out from under the threshold — eastward:] There was a great quantity of water necessary for the uses of the temple, for washing the bodies of those that officiated, as well as the sacrifices which they offered; this was conveyed in pipes under ground from the fountain Etam. These waters gave occasion to the vision here related. Dr. Lightfoot, W. Lowth.

The progressive establishment of the Messiah's kingdom is declared by some of the later Prophets under the most striking and lively representations. In Nebuchadnezzar's dream, related by the Prophet Daniel, and by him expounded of successive kingdoms, that last kingdom set up by the God of heaven was at first no more than "a stone," but "it became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth," Dan. ii. 34, 35. In other prophecies, the gradual increase of this new dispensation is beautifully represented by the growth of a tender plant. See Ezek. xvii. 22, 23. And here again the several steps of this growth are pointed out to us by the same Prophet Ezekiel, under the image of a stream receiving continual accessions in its progress. The waters were at first extremely shallow, reaching only "to the ancles." At the next ford they came up "to the knees;" afterwards "to the loins;" and at last they were risen to a great height; "waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over:" see verses 3, 4, 5. The increasing blessings of the Messiah's kingdom are want to be expressed under the figure of waters in prophetick language; see Is. xxxv. 6, 7: and elsewhere the same figure is used with a peculiar resemblance to this place; see Joel iii. 18. Such a sense also best suits that healing and beneficial influence attributed to these sanctified waters, which are said to have power to "heal the waters of the sea," and to give life wherever they flow; "every thing shall live whither the river cometh." And of the trees nourished by this stream it is said, that "their leaf should not fade, nor their fruit be consumed; but their fruit should be for meat, and their leaf for medicine," verses 8—12. Bp. Bagot.

Before CHRIST 574. through the waters; the † waters were to the ankles.

4 Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters; the waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters were to the loins.

5 Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass over: for the waters were risen, † waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over.

† Heb. waters of swimming.

6 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the brink of the river.

7 Now when I had returned, behold, at the † bank of the river were very many [a] trees on the one side and on the other.

† Heb. lip.
[a] Rev. 22. 2.

8 Then said he unto me, These waters issue out toward the east country, and go down into the ‖ desert, and go into the sea: which being brought forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed.

‖ Or, plain.

9 And it shall come to pass, that every thing that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the † rivers shall come, shall live: and there shall be a very great multitude of fish, because these waters shall come thither: for they shall be healed; and every thing shall live whither the river cometh.

† Heb. two rivers.

10 And it shall come to pass, that the fishers shall stand upon it from En-gedi even unto En-eglaim; they shall be a place to spread forth nets; their fish shall be according to their kinds, as the fish of the great sea, exceeding many.

Before CHRIST 574.

11 But the miry places thereof and the marishes thereof ‖ shall not be healed; they shall be given to salt.

‖ Or, and that which shall not be healed.

12 And by the river upon the bank thereof, on this side and on that side, † shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade, neither shall the fruit thereof be consumed: it shall bring forth ‖ new fruit according to his months, because their waters they issued out of the sanctuary: and the fruit thereof shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof ‖ for [b] medicine.

[c] Gen. 12. 7. & 17. 8. & 26. 3. & 28. 13.

16 Hamath, Berothah, Sibraim, which is

8. — the waters shall be healed.] This finely represents the tendency of the Gospel to heal the corruptions of human nature. Abp. Newcome.

10. — the fishers] The mention of fishers does indeed appear to determine this increase of religious knowledge and practice to Christianity. Our Saviour Christ told His disciples, that He would make them "fishers of men," Matt. iv. 19. Abp. Secker, W. Lowth.

—— from En-gedi] See the note on 1 Sam. xxiii. 29.

—— unto En-eglaim;] This city is placed by some at the north of the Dead sea, where the Jordan runs into it. Eglaim is mentioned, Is. xv. 8, as a place on the borders of Moab, which country ran on the east of the Dead sea. Abp. Newcome.

—— as the fish of the great sea,] Of the great Mediterranean sea; see Josh. xviii. 4, and chap. xlviii. 28. The fish on the coasts of Judea and Phenicia are very abundant. Harmer.

11. — the miry places] The Dead sea shall preserve its salt and bitter qualities on its shores and in its marshes, where the waters become stagnant. Calmet. The allegorical sense is, that some shall reject the Gospel, and some receive it without obeying it. Abp. Newcome. Saltness is equivalent to barrenness in the Hebrew language; see Ps. cvii. 34; Deut. xxix. 23; Judges ix. 45. W. Lowth.

12. — for meat,] For food.

—— whose leaf shall not fade,] They shall be like the trees of paradise, never barren or withering; a proper emblem of the flourishing state of the righteous still bringing forth fruit unto holiness, and whose end is everlasting life, Ps. i. 3; Jer. xvii. 8. W. Lowth.

—— new fruit according to his months, &c.] It shall be constantly fruitful; see Rev. xxii. 1, 2. From ver. 1 to ver. 12 we have one of the most striking allegories in the Hebrew Scriptures. Abp. Newcome.

13. — This shall be the border,] This allotment, and that which follows in the next chapter, would probably have taken place, if the whole of the ten tribes, as well as those of Judah and Benjamin, had turned themselves to God; for by this means they also would have obtained permission to return: but since a few only belonging to the other tribes returned, and were confounded with those of Judah and Benjamin, they obtained settlements in common with them. Grotius. But there is without question a mystical sense implied under this literal description. W. Lowth.

—— Joseph shall have two portions.] See Gen. xlviii. 5; 1 Chron. v. 1.

14. — one as well as another:] Under Joshua the lots were proportioned to the numbers in each tribe. This mysterious equality shews perhaps, that in the Church of Christ there should be no distinction betwixt the Jew and the Gentile. Calmet.

15. — Hethlon,] Mentioned again chap. xlviii. 1. De L'Isle writes it Hethalon, and places it between Tyre and Damascus. Abp. Newcome. W. Lowth. Zedad is written Sedada in De L'Isle, and placed east of Hethlon, nearly in the same latitude. "The northern border of the land was to begin from the west point, on which side lay the Mediterranean sea, and so on northward towards Hethlon, and so on forward to Zedad;" mentioned Numb. xxxiv. 8. W. Lowth.

16. Hamath, Berothah, Sibraim,] Concerning Hamath, see the note on Is. x. 9. The other two towns were situate between Hamath and Damascus. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST 574. between the border of Damascus and the border of Hamath; ‖ Hazar-hatticon, which is by the coast of Hauran.

‖ Or, the middle village.

17 And the border from the sea shall be Hazar-enan, the border of Damascus, and the north northward, and the border of Hamath. And this is the north side.

18 And the east side ye shall measure † from Hauran, and from Damascus, and from Gilead, and from the land of Israel by Jordan, from the border unto the east sea. And this is the east side.

‖ Or, Meribah. ‖ Or, valley. ‖ Or, toward Teman.

20 The west side also shall be the great sea from the border, till a man come over against Hamath. This is the west side.

21 So shall ye divide this land unto you according to the tribes of Israel.

22 ¶ And it shall come to pass, that ye shall divide it by lot for an inheritance unto you, and to the strangers that sojourn among you, which shall beget children among you: and they shall be unto you as born in the country among the children of Israel; they shall have inheritance with you among the tribes of Israel.

23 And it shall come to pass, that in what tribe the stranger sojourneth, there shall ye give him his inheritance, saith the Lord GOD.

CHAP. XLVIII.

1, 23 The portions of the twelve tribes, 8 of the sanctuary, 15 of the city and suburbs, 21 and of the prince. 30 The dimensions and gates of the city.

NOW these are the names of the tribes. From the north end to the coast of the way of Hethlon, as one goeth to Hamath, Hazar-enan, the border of Damascus northward, to the coast of Hamath; for these are his sides east and west; a portion for Dan. Before CHRIST 574.

2 And by the border of Dan, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Asher.

3 And by the border of Asher, from the east side even unto the west side, a portion for Naphtali.

4 And by the border of Naphtali, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Manasseh.

5 And by the border of Manasseh, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Ephraim.

6 And by the border of Ephraim, from the east side even unto the west side, a portion for Reuben.

7 And by the border of Reuben, from the east side even unto the west side, a portion for Judah.

8 ¶ And by the border of Judah, from the east side unto the west side, shall be the offering which ye shall offer of five and twenty thousand reeds in breadth, and in length as one of the other parts, from the east side unto the west side: and the sanctuary shall be in the midst of it.

19. And the south side southward, from Tamar] The southern frontier shall be from "En-gedi," called "Hazazon-tamar," 2 Chron. xx. 2, to the waters of Meribah, or strife, in Kadesh, Deut. xxxii. 51; and from thence to the river of Egypt. Dr. Lightfoot, W. Lowth.

—— till a man come over against Hamath.] Or rather, till a man come to Hamath, the northern point towards the west frontier. W. Lowth.

22. —— and to the strangers &c.] Foreigners before never had the privilege of purchasing or possessing any inheritance among the Jews; so this mystically imports the incorporating of the Gentiles into the same Church with the Jews, making them "fellow-heirs, and of the same body" with them "by the Gospel," Ephes. iii. 6. W. Lowth. There is no reason to believe that this privilege was ever granted under Zerubbabel. Calmet. From ver. 9 to the end of the chapter is prefigured such an extension and enlargement of the Christian Church, as that it shall reach all the world over, even from one end of the world to the other. Bp Hall.

13 And over against the border of the priests the Levites shall have five and twenty thousand in length, and ten thousand in breadth: all the length shall be five and twenty thousand, and the breadth ten thousand.

The sense of the verse is, that the possession belonging to the priests and Levites, (see ver. 11,) and the city, were bounded on the east and west by the prince's portion; that the former lay in the middle, the latter beyond them. W. Lowth.

23. — Issachar] These appointments are not laid out with any regard to the division of the land made in Joshua's time; for here a platform of a new church and state is set forth. W. Lowth.

28. — from Tamar] See note on chap. xlvii. 19.

29. — for inheritance,] Since there is no doubt but that other things which are said in these chapters relating to the temple, and the land of Israel, are of a prophetical nature, it seems safer to determine that the above-mentioned measures were observed both in building the temple and in assigning the lots to the tribes; though we know not how these things were done, because there is a great chasm in the sacred history, from the time of Ezra to that of the Maccabees. Houbigant.

It is the opinion of some learned men, that so particular a description of the several portions allotted to each tribe, relates to the Jewish settlement in their own country after their conversion; several passages in the Prophets looking that way But without laying too great a stress upon that opinion, we may fairly suppose some mystical sense contained under this description; the twelve tribes denote the true Christian Church in the New Testament; see Luke xxii. 30. So this division of the land among the twelve tribes may imply, that all true Christians shall be equally sharers in the privileges of the Gospel. W. Lowth.

30. — on the north side,] See ver. 16, where the same measures are set forth. There were three gates in the face of each wall, and the whole circuit of the city was eighteen thousand cubits. Calmet.

32. — one gate of Joseph,] There being a gate named after Levi, the gate of Joseph includes Ephraim and Manasseh, the sons of Joseph. Abp. Newcome.

35. — The Lord is there. It is frequently said in the sacred writings, that a person or a thing shall be called by a certain name, where it is predicted that the person or thing shall be endowed with those qualities which the name imports. When Isaiah predicts the coming of the Messiah, he says, that "His name shall be called Wonderful, Counseller, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace;" because He was to possess the qualities which would serve as a foundation to these titles. In this sense Jerusalem is called in the Psalms, the "city of God, the city of the Great King;" and in Isaiah, "The city of Righteousness, the faithful city;" and in this passage, "The Lord is there." Calmet.

In this new Jerusalem, the Church of Christ, God shall dwell in a more glorious manner, and make it the place of His perpetual residence; so that every part of that city shall be honoured with evident tokens of the Divine presence; and every member of it being dedicated to God's service, and becoming an habitation of God through His Spirit, shall have some degree of the holiness of the temple where God had placed His name, 1 Kings viii. 29; compared with Rev. xxi. 22. This is in a lower degree fulfilled in all good Christians, who are called "the temple of the living God," 2 Cor. vi. 16; 1 Pet. ii. 5: and "an habitation of God through the Spirit," Eph. ii. 22. W. Lowth.

THE BOOK OF

DANIEL.

INTRODUCTION.

DANIEL was of the tribe of Judah, and of very illustrious, if not of royal, descent. Josephus says, he was of the family of Zedekiah, the last king of Judah before the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuzar-adan. He was carried away captive to Babylon in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, in the year of the world 3398, probably in the eighteenth or twentieth year of his age: and on account of his birth, wisdom, and accomplishments, was selected to stand in the presence of Nebuchadnezzar.

Daniel's strength and habits of mind were of a very superiour cast, whether considered as the gifts of nature, or the acquisitions of well-applied industry. "An excellent spirit was in him," which directed him to cultivate and improve all the proper means of knowledge: so that he became master of all the literature of the Chaldeans, and was far superiour to all the Magi, or wise men of the East. He was not only renowned for secular wisdom, but favoured with Divine illuminations; had extraordinary insight into visions, and discernment in the interpretation of dreams. Qualified with these abilities, he was admitted to the special favour of several very powerful monarchs; of Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Darius, and Cyrus: and hence he is supposed to have resided, not only in the court at Babylon, but occasionally also in those of Media and Persia. Wintle.

In the vicissitudes of his life, as in the virtues which he displayed, he has been thought to have resembled Joseph. Like him, he lived amidst the corruption of a great court; and preserved an unshaken attachment to his religion, in a situation embarrassed with difficulties, and surrounded by temptations. He publickly professed God's service, in defiance of every danger; and predicted His fearful judgments to the very face of intemperate and powerful tyrants. It may be collected from the pensive cast of his writings, that he was of that melancholy disposition, which might be expected to characterize the servants of the true God amidst scenes of idolatry. He experienced throughout his life very signal and miraculous proofs of Divine favour; and was looked up to by the Persians, as well as by his own countrymen, as an oracle of inspired wisdom. He appears to have attained a great age, as he prophesied during the whole period of the captivity. He probably however did not long survive his last vision concerning the succession of the kings of Persia, which he beheld in the third year of Cyrus, and in the year of the world 3470, when the Prophet must have reached his ninetieth year.

The book of Daniel contains a very interesting mixture of history and prophecies. The six first chapters are chiefly historical, and are written with much spirit and animation: we seem to be present at the scenes described, and the whole is enriched with the most exalted sentiments of piety, and with the finest attestations to the praise and glory of God. The six last chapters are composed of prophecies, delivered at different times, all of which are however connected as parts of one great scheme. They extend through many ages, and furnish the most striking description of the fall of successive kingdoms, which were to be introductory to the establishment of the Messiah's reign. They characterize in descriptive terms the four great monarchies of the world to be succeeded by "that kingdom which shall not be destroyed." They foreshew the power and destruction of Antichrist in predictions repeated and extended by St. John; and conclude with a distinct assurance of a general resurrection to a life of everlasting shame, or everlasting glory. Dr. Gray.

In general the words of Daniel are proper, well chosen, and comprehensive; his diction simple and chaste, yet often strong and nervous; and his whole style compact, concise, and close, but pure and regular. Sometimes however he is diffusive and copious, enlarges an idea, and swells an image to an uncommon pitch of grandeur. His book is not to be reckoned among the poetical compositions of the sacred volume: he makes great use indeed of parabolical imagery, but as a Prophet, shadowing out things and events by means of visions and allegories, without any colouring of a poetick style. Wintle, Bp. Lowth.

With respect to the genuineness and authenticity of this book of Daniel, there is abundance both of external and of internal evidence. Of external evidence, there is all that can well be had or desired in a case of this nature: not only the testimony of the whole Jewish Church and nation, who have constantly received this book as canonical; but of Josephus particularly, who recommends him as the greatest of the Prophets; of the Jewish Targums and Talmuds, which frequently cite and appeal to his authority; of St. Paul and St. John, who have copied many of his prophecies; of our Saviour Himself, who citeth his words, and styleth him "Daniel the Prophet;" of ancient historians, who relate many of the same transactions; of the mother of the seven sons and of the father of the Maccabees, who both recommend the example of Daniel to their sons; of old Eleazar in Egypt, who, praying for the Jews then suffering under the persecution of Ptolemy Philopator, 3 Mac. vii. 6, 7, mentions the deliverance of Daniel out of the den of lions, together with the deliverance of the three men out of the fiery furnace; of the Jewish High Priest, who shewed Daniel's prophecies to Alexander the Great, whilst he was at Jerusalem; and still higher, of Ezekiel, a contemporary writer, who greatly extols his piety and wisdom. Nor is the internal less powerful and convincing than the external evidence: for the language, the style, the manner of writing, and all other internal marks and characters, are perfectly agreeable to that age: and he appears plainly and undeniably to have been a Prophet by the exact accomplishment of his prophecies, as well those which have already been fulfilled, as those which are now fulfilling in the world. Bp. Newton.

To reject the prophecies of Daniel is to reject the Christian religion; for this religion is founded upon his prophecy concerning the Messiah: (Sir Isaac Newton:) but to read this book with attention, and intelligence, and with an unbiassed mind to follow the advice of our Saviour, when he quoted this very prophecy, "Let him that readeth understand," might be sufficient to convert an unbeliever from Deism to Christianity. Bp. Watson.

CHAP. I.

Before CHRIST about 607. 1 Jehoiakim's captivity. 3 Ashpenaz taketh Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. 8 They refusing the king's portion do prosper with pulse and water. 17 Their excellency in wisdom.

about 607. a 2 Kings 24. 1. 2 Chron. 36. 5. IN the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah [a] came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it.

about 606. 2 And the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with part of the vessels of the house of God: which he carried into the land of Shinar to the house of his god; and he brought the vessels into the treasure house of his god.

3 ¶ And the king spake unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs, that he should bring certain of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed, and of the princes;

4 Children in whom was no blemish, but well favoured, and skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace, and whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans.

5 And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat, and of † the wine which he drank: so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might stand before the king.

† Heb. the wine of his drink.

Before CHRIST about 606

6 Now among these were of the children of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah:

7 Unto whom the prince of the eunuchs gave names: for he gave unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar; and to Hananiah, of Shadrach; and to Mishael, of Meshach; and to Azariah, of Abed-nego.

8 ¶ But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank: therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.

9 Now God had brought Daniel into favour and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs.

10 And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and your drink: for why should he see your faces † worse liking than the children which are of your ‖ sort? then shall ye make me endanger my head to the king.

‖ Or, term, or, continuance.

11 Then said Daniel to ‖ Melzar, whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah,

‖ Or, the steward.

Chap. I. ver. 1. In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim — came N. buchadnezzar &c.] Jeremiah makes the first year of Nebuchadnezzar coincide with the fourth year of Jehoiakim, and thence begins the date of the seventy years' captivity: see Jer. xxv. 1. But here Daniel speaks of Nebuchadnezzar as king of Babylon in the third year of Jehoiakim. In explanation it may be observed, that Daniel begins his computation from the time that Nebuchadnezzar was sent by his father against Pharaoh-necho king of Egypt, which was towards the latter end of the third year of Jehoiakim. In the beginning of the following year he conquered the Egyptians, which was the fourth year of Jehoiakim: see Jer. xlvi. 2. And in the latter end of the same year he came and besieged Jerusalem; at which time Jehoiakim became tributary to the king of Babylon, and consequently the seventy years of captivity and vassalage to Babylon began. Dean Prideaux.

2. — into the land of Shinar] This was the original name of the country about Babylon, Gen. xi. 2; and it was still in use with the Prophets. See Is. xi. 11; Zech. v. 11. W. Lowth.

—— the treasure house of his god.] Of the idol Bel. See Jer. l. 2. W. Lowth. The treasury was a place in ancient temples, appropriated for the reception of spoils and trophies, that were consecrated to the deity, to which the temple belonged. Wintle.

3. — the master of his eunuchs.] Or, "the chief of his chamberlains." It appears to have been a title given to the satraps, or such distinguished men as had the care of the royal chambers or wardrobe. Wintle.

—— and of the king's seed.] Rather, "even of the king's seed." Isaiah's prophecy, chap. xxxix. 7, was thus punctually fulfilled. W. Lowth.

4. Children in whom was no blemish.] He was directed to make choice of such as had the best accomplishments both of body and mind, and were fit to give attendance in a king's court. The word interpreted "children" is used in Scripture of such as are past the age of childhood, as we now distinguish the parts of man's life. See 1 Kings xii. 8. W. Lowth.

—— whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans.] Besides the study of politicks and the art of war, the learning chiefly valued among them was astrology, or the knowledge of the heavenly motions, the interpretation of dreams, and architecture. W. Lowth.

As Moses was "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians," so we are not to wonder that Daniel was taught the learning of the Chaldeans; and that he so far excelled in it, as to be placed at the head of the Magi. See chap. iv. 9. Wintle.

5. — of the king's meat.] So that, according to the Eastern manners, they should be fed with such food and wine as were served at the king's table. Wintle.

7. — gave names:] It was customary among the Eastern nations, for the kings to distinguish their favourites by new names, when they conferred on them new dignities: and the Mogul still adheres to the custom. Dr. Gray. There might also be in this case a desire to wean these young Jews from the manners of their country, and to bring them to a conformity with the Chaldee usages in all respects. Wintle.

—— Belteshazzar.] "According to the name of his god," as Nebuchadnezzar himself derives the word, chap. iv. 8. So the name was derived from Bel, the chief idol of Babylon, as Nebuchadnezzar had his own name from Nebo, another of their idols, mentioned Is. xlvi. 1; and Evil-merodach, his successor, was named from their idol, Merodach, Jer. l. 2. W. Lowth.

8. But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself &c.] The defilement here alluded to might arise, either from the food being prohibited in the law of Moses, or else from its being what was offered to the idols of the Chaldees, or at least intreated to be blessed in their name: see 1 Cor. viii. 10, and Ezek. iv. 13. Wintle.

9. Now God had brought Daniel into favour &c.] See Gen. xxxix. 21; and compare Ps. cvi. 46. W. Lowth.

10. — of your sort?] Or, "of your age." W. Lowth. Probably it may include the condition also. Wintle.

Before CHRIST about 606.

12 Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days; and let them give us † pulse † to eat, and water to drink.

† Heb. of pulse.

13 Then let our countenances be looked upon before thee, and the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat: and as thou seest, deal with thy servants.

† Heb. that we may eat, &c.

14 So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days.

15 And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat.

16 Thus Melzar took away the portion of their meat, and the wine that they should drink; and gave them pulse.

17 ¶ As for these four children, God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and ‖ Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams.

‖ Or, he made Daniel understand. 603.

18 Now at the end of the days that the king had said he should bring them in, then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar.

19 And the king communed with them; and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore stood they before the king.

† Heb. wisdom of understanding.

20 And in all matters of † wisdom and understanding, that the king enquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers that were in all his realm.

Before CHRIST 603.

21 And Daniel continued even unto the first year of king Cyrus.

603.

CHAP. II.

1 Nebuchadnezzar, forgetting his dream, requireth it of the Chaldeans, by promises and threatenings. 10 They acknowledging their inability are judged to die. 14 Daniel obtaining some respite findeth the dream. 19 He blesseth God. 24 He staying the decree is brought to the king. 31 The dream. 36 The interpretation. 46 Daniel's advancement.

AND in the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, wherewith his spirit was troubled, and his sleep brake from him.

2 Then the king commanded to call the magicians, and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, for to shew the king his dreams. So they came and stood before the king.

3 And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream.

4 Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriack, O king, live for ever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation.

* Chap. 2. 9.

12. — pulse] Various sorts of grain were dried and prepared for food by the people of the East, as wheat, barley, rice, and pulse. Of some of these was the parched corn mentioned in Scripture, and the chief food of the labourers and poorer sort of people. Wintle.

15. — their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh &c.] Abstinence from wine and from rich food is no injury, but rather an improvement, to the health and complexion of people in those countries. What is said therefore of the effects of the abstemiousness of Daniel and his companions, might be nothing miraculous or out of the common course of things. Sir J. Chardin, Harmer.

17. — in all visions and dreams.] Not fortuitous or casual dreams, but such as were sent from Heaven. Wintle. See the note on Gen xx. 3.

19. — among them all] That is, among all the young men alluded to at ver. 4. Wintle.

—— therefore stood they before the king.] They were in continual attendance in the king's court. So Joseph "stood before Pharaoh," Gen. xli. 46. Compare 1 Kings xvii. 1; Jer. xv. 19; Numb. xvi. 9. W. Lowth.

20. — the magicians and astrologers] These words seem to comprehend the persons in general, who were distinguished in the several kinds of learning cultivated among the Chaldees. Of the like character were the Magi in Egypt and Persia, and the other countries of the East, and those "wise men," that came to our Saviour at His birth, Matt. ii. 1. Wintle.

21. And Daniel continued even unto the first year of king Cyrus.] And so witnessed the accomplishment of Jeremiah's prophecy concerning the seventy years, Ezra i. 1. This being so remarkable a year, the text takes notice that Daniel lived so long: not but that he lived longer, at least till the third year of Cyrus, as appears from chap. x. 1. W. Lowth.

Chap. II. The prophecies of Daniel are all of them related to one another, as if they were but several parts of one general prophecy, given at several times. The first is the easiest to be understood, and every following prophecy adds something new to the former. Sir Isaac Newton.

Ver. 1. — in the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar] The second year, according to the Babylonian account, or the fourth, according to the Jewish; that is, in the second year of his reigning alone, or the fourth of his reigning jointly with his father. Bp. Newton. Daniel, writing the following history in Chaldee for the use of the Chaldeans, follows the computation of time in use among them. W. Lowth.

—— dreams.] Though it was but one continued dream, it contained a succession of various events. W. Lowth, Wintle.

2. — the sorcerers,] See the note on chap. i. 20. By "sorcerers" seems to be meant a sort of necromancers, who pretended to an acquaintance with departed spirits. Wintle.

—— the Chaldeans,] The Chaldeans were so much addicted to the study of the heavenly motions, and to make prognostications from them, that the word "Chaldean" is used both in Greek and Latin authors for an astrologer. W. Lowth. According to this sense, we find it used below, ver. 4, for the magicians of every sort. Wintle.

4. — in Syriack,] That is, in the Aramean or Syrian language, as understood in its largest sense, being what was spoken by the Assyrians, Babylonians, and many of the neighbouring nations, and the same with what was called the ancient Chaldee. This language, when corrupted by the introduction of many Hebrew words, is called the Hebrew tongue in the New Testament. The language, spoken in Antioch and other parts of Syria, differs as a dialect from the two former, and is what we now call the Syriack. Wintle, W. Lowth.

—— O king, live for ever:] Or, "Long live the king." An usual mode of addressing the monarch. When he in his turn addressed the people, it was in the form, "Peace be multiplied unto you:" see chap. iv. 1. Wintle.

Before CHRIST 602.

5 The king answered and said to the Chaldeans, The thing is gone from me: if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof, ye shall be

‖ Or, fee, chap. 5. 17.

7 They answered again and said, Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation of it.

8 The king answered and said, I know of certainty that ye would † gain the time, because ye see the thing is gone from me.

† Chald. buy.

9 But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, there is but one decree for you: for ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me, till the time be changed: therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that ye can shew me the interpretation thereof.

10 ¶ The Chaldeans answered before the king, and said, There is not a man upon the earth that can shew the king's matter: therefore there is no king, lord, nor ruler, that asked such things at any magician, or astrologer, or Chaldean.

11 And it is a rare thing that the king requireth, and there is none other that can shew it before the king, except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh.

12 For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon.

13 And the decree went forth that the wise men should be slain; and they sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain.

Before CHRIST 603.

14 ¶ Then Daniel † answered with counsel and wisdom to Arioch the ‖ † captain of the king's guard, which was gone forth to slay the wise men of Babylon:

† Chald. returned. ‖ Or, chief marshal. † Chald. chief of the executioners, or, slaughtermen.

15 He answered and said to Arioch the king's captain, Why is the decree so hasty from the king? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel.

16 Then Daniel went in, and desired of the king that he would give him time, and that he would shew the king the interpretation.

17 Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions:

18 That they would desire mercies † of the God of heaven concerning this secret; ‖ that Daniel and his fellows should not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon.

† Chald. from before God. ‖ Or, that they should not destroy Daniel, &c.

19 ¶ Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

20 Daniel answered and said, [c] Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: for wisdom and might are his:

[c] Psal. 113. 2. & 115. 18.

21 And he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding:

22 He revealeth the deep and secret things: he knoweth what is in the darkness, and the light dwelleth with him.

23 I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers, who hast given me wisdom and might, and hast made known unto me now what we desired of thee: for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.

5. — The thing is gone from me:] Meaning, "I do not recollect it," according to the Greek and Latin versions: or, according to the Syriack, "The word is most sure which I say;" that is, My decree is gone forth and is irrevocable. Wintle.

—— ye shall be cut in pieces,] That is, alive: a dreadful punishment sometimes inflicted by the Babylonians. Parkhurst. Compare 1 Sam. xv. 33; Heb. xi. 37; Luke xii. 46. The same sort of punishment is still used in Abyssinia. Bruce.

8. — I know of certainty that ye would gain the time,] Ye seek delays, in order to gain time; that the king's attention to other concerns might make him forget this. Wintle.

9. — till the time be changed:] Until some other occasions may divert me from this earnest inquiry. Bp. Hall.

10. — There is not a man upon the earth &c.] The answer of the Chaldeans was very reasonable, that no king had ever required such a thing, that it transcended all the powers and faculties of man; God alone could disclose it. But the pride of absolute power cannot hear any reason, or bear any control. Bp. Newton. The furious and arbitrary conduct of Nebuchadnezzar both in this instance, and in that which is recorded in the following chapter, is much illustrated by history, which shews that such characters are not uncommon among the eastern monarchs.

18. That they would desire mercies &c.] Many useful observations might be drawn from this passage on the nature, the efficacy, and the rewards, of devotion; on the power and prevalency of united addresses to Heaven; and the important benefits, which the piety of a few holy men may sometimes bring down upon a multitude. Such improvements must be obvious to every attentive reader. Wintle.

20. — Blessed be the name of God &c.] In this and the three next verses, the Prophet has celebrated the praises of the Almighty in a simple, but truly sublime and animated, strain of warm and unaffected piety; has made especial mention of His wisdom and power; and illustrated the display of those attributes in several instances apposite to the subject and occasion. Wintle.

21. — he changeth the times and the seasons: &c.] The great changes of the world are brought to pass by removing kings and transferring their dominions to others: by raising some empires and pulling down others. W. Lowth.

22. — the light dwelleth with him.] With Him, and in Him, is all perfection of knowledge, and power of illumination. Bp. Hall.

Before CHRIST 603. 24 ¶ Therefore Daniel went in unto Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went and said thus unto him; Destroy not the wise men of Babylon: bring me in before the king, and I will shew unto the king the interpretation.

27 Daniel answered in the presence of the king, and said, The secret which the king hath demanded cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, the soothsayers, shew unto the king;

28 But there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and † maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days. Thy dream, and the visions of thy head upon thy bed, are these;

Before CHRIST 603. † Chald. hath made known.

† Chald. came up.

30 But as for me, this secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I have more than any living, but for their sakes that shall make known the interpretation to the king, and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thy heart.

31 ¶ Thou, O king, † sawest, and behold a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the form thereof was terrible.

32 This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his ‖ thighs of brass,

28. But there is a God in heaven &c.] Daniel's great modesty in disclaiming all merit or extraordinary wisdom on his own part; his piety in giving the glory to God alone, and at the same time his skill and dexterity in preparing the king's attention, and gradually opening his understanding to the reception of the truth, and the acknowledgment of the one true God, are very remarkable. Wintle. The impious king, as St. Jerome justly observes, had a prophetick dream, that, the saint interpreting it, God might be glorified, and the captives, and those who served God in captivity, might receive great consolation. We read the same thing of Pharaoh. Bp. Newton.

—— the latter days.] This phrase often signifies the times of the Messiah, called the last times, or age of the world. See the note on Is. ii. 2; and so the expression may be understood here: for the prophecy contained in this vision reaches to the establishment of Messiah's kingdom. See ver. 44, and compare chap. x. 14. W. Lowth.

30. —— but for their sakes that shall make known the interpretation to the king,] That this may be the means for myself and my three friends to gain your goodwill, the better to promote the glory of God, and do kindnesses to our brethren of the captivity. W. Lowth.

31. Thou, O king, sawest, and behold a great image.] In this vision of the image composed of four metals, the foundation of all Daniel's prophecies is laid. It represents a body of four great nations, which should reign over the earth successively; namely, the people of Babylonia, the Persians, the Greeks, and the Romans. And by a stone cut out without hands, which fell upon the feet of the image, and brake all the four metals to pieces, and "became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth," it further represents, that a new kingdom should arise after the four, and conquer all those nations, and grow very great, and last to the end of all ages. Sir Isaac Newton.

—— This great image, whose brightness was excellent, &c.] A great terrible human figure is not an improper emblem of human power and dominion; and the various metals, of which it was composed, not unfitly typify the various kingdoms that should arise. The order of their succession is clearly denoted by the order of the parts, the head and higher parts signifying the earlier times, and the lower parts the latter times. Bps. Chandler and Newton.

Grotius acutely observes, that this image appeared with a glorious lustre in the imagination of Nebuchadnezzar, whose mind was wholly taken up with admiration of worldly pomp and splendour: whereas the same monarchies were represented to Daniel under the shape of fierce and wild beasts, chap. vii; as being the great supporters of idolatry and tyranny in the world. W. Lowth.

32. This image's head was of fine gold,] Which Daniel interprets, ver. 38, "Thou art this head of gold;" thou, and thy family, and thy representatives. The Babylonian therefore was the first of these kingdoms; and it was fitly represented by the "head of fine gold," on account of its great riches: and Babylon for the same reason was called by Isaiah "the golden city," chap. xiv. 4. Daniel addresses Nebuchadnezzar, as if he were a very powerful king, and his empire very large and extensive: "Thou, O king, art a king of kings: &c." see verses 37 and 38. Almost all the ancient eastern histories are lost: but there are some fragments even of heathen historians yet preserved, which speak of this mighty conqueror and his extended empire, and describe him as holding in subjection Egypt, Syria, Phenicia, and Arabia, as having subdued the greatest part of Lybia and Spain, and as having proceeded as far as to the pillars of Hercules, and led his army out of Spain into Thrace and Pontus. But his empire, though of great extent, was yet of no long duration: for it ended in his grandson Belshazzar, not seventy years after the delivery of this prophecy, and not above twenty-three years after the death of Nebuchadnezzar. Bp. Newton.

—— his breast and his arms of silver,] Which Daniel interprets, ver. 39, "And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee." The kingdom, which arose after the Babylonian, was the Medo-Persian. The two hands and the shoulders, saith Josephus, signify that the empire of the Babylonians should be dissolved by two kings. The two kings were the kings of the Medes and Persians, whose powers were united under Cyrus, who was son of one of the kings, and son in law of the other, who besieged and took Babylon, put an end to that empire, and on its ruins erected the Medo-Persian, or Persian, as it is more usually called, the Persians having soon gained the ascendancy over the Medes. This empire is said to have been inferior, as being less than the former, according to the sense of the Latin Vulgate, because neither Cyrus, nor either of his successors, ever carried their arms into Africa or Spain, so far as Nebuchadnezzar is reported to have done: or rather inferior, as being worse than the former; for Dean Prideaux asserts, and it may be very truly so asserted, that the kings of Persia were the worst race of men that ever governed an empire. This empire, from its first establishment by Cyrus, to the death of the last king Darius Codomannus, lasted not much more than two hundred years. Bp. Newton.

The arms and shields of the Persians were frequently ornamented or cased with silver: whence Alexander instituted that remarkable body of veteran infantry, called Argyraspides, from their silver shields, after the conquest of Persia, adopting the manners of the conquered nations. Dr. Hales.

——his belly and his thighs of brass,] Which Daniel interprets, ver. 39, "And another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth." Alexander the Great subverted the Persian empire. The kingdom therefore, which succeeded to the Persian, was the Macedonian: and this kingdom was fitly represented by brass; for the Greeks were famous for their brasen armour, their usual epithet being, "the brasen-coated Greeks." The interpretation of Daniel in Josephus is, that another, coming from the west, completely armed in brass, shall destroy the empire of the Medes and Persians. This third kingdom is also said to "bear rule over all the earth," by a figure usual in almost all authors. Alexander himself commanded, that he should be called the king of all the world: not that he really conquered, or near conquered, the whole world, but he had considerable dominions in Europe, Asia, and Africa; that is, in all the three parts of the world then known: and Diodorus Siculus, and other historians, give an account of ambassadours coming from almost all the world to congratulate him on his success, or to submit to his empire; and then especially, as Arrian remarks, did Alexander appear to himself, and to those about him, to be master both of the earth and of the sea.

The Seleucidæ, who reigned in Syria, and the Lagidæ, who reigned in Egypt, successors of Alexander, might be designed particularly by "the two thighs" of brass. And of all his successors they alone might be pointed out, because they alone had much connexion with the Jewish church and nation. Bp. Newton.

33. His legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay.] Which is thus interpreted by Daniel, "And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron: &c." See verses 40—43. The Romans succeeded next to the Macedonians, and therefore in course were next to be mentioned. The Roman empire was stronger and larger than any of the preceding. The Romans brake in pieces and subdued all the former kingdoms. The iron was "mixed with miry clay," and the Romans were defiled with a mixture of barbarous nations. The Roman empire was at length divided into ten lesser kingdoms, answering to the ten toes of the image, as we shall see hereafter. These kingdoms retained much of the old Roman strength, and manifested it upon several occasions, so that "the kingdom was partly strong, and partly broken." They "mingled themselves with the seed of men;" they made marriages and alliances one with another, as they continue to do at this day: but no union ensued; reasons of state are stronger than the ties of blood, and interest generally avails more than affinity. Some expound it of the secular and ecclesiastical powers, sometimes agreeing, and sometimes clashing and interfering with each other, to the weakening of both, and endangering of their breaking to pieces. The Roman empire therefore is represented in a double state; first, with the strength of iron, conquering all before it, "his legs of iron;" and then weakened and divided by the mixture of barbarous nations, "his feet part of iron and part of clay." It subdued Syria, and made the kingdom of the Seleucidæ a Roman province in the year 65 before Christ; it subdued Egypt, and made the kingdom of the Lagidæ a Roman province in the year 30 before Christ: and in the fourth century after Christ, it began to be torn in pieces by the incursions of the barbarous nations. Bp. Newton.

34, 35. Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands,] Which is interpreted and explained by Daniel, in the 44th and 45th verses, "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, &c." This description can with propriety be understood only, as the ancients understood it, of the kingdom of Christ. "And in the days of these kings;" that is, in the days of some of them. As "in the days when the judges ruled," Ruth i. 1, signifies "in the days when some" of the judges ruled: so "in the days of these kings" signifies, "in the days" of some "of these kingdoms;" and it must be during the days of some of the last of them, because they are reckoned "four in succession, and consequently this must be the fifth kingdom. Accordingly the kingdom of Christ was set up during the last of these kingdoms; that is, the Romans. "The stone" was a totally different thing from "the image," and the kingdom of Christ is totally different from the kingdoms of this world. "The stone was cut out of the mountain without hands," as our heavenly body is said (2 Cor. v. 1) to be "a building of God, an house not made with hands;" that is, spiritual, as the phrase is used in other places, Mark xiv. 58, compared with John ii. 21: see also Col. ii. 9. This is to be understood of the kingdom of Christ, which was formed out of the Roman empire, not by number of hands, or strength of armies, but without human means, and the virtue of second causes. This kingdom was "set up by the God of heaven;" and from hence the phrase of the "kingdom of heaven" came to signify the kingdom of the Messiah, and so it was used and understood by the Jews, and so it is applied by our Saviour in the New Testament. Other kingdoms were raised by human ambition and worldly power: but this was the work, not of man, but of God; this was truly, as it is called, the "kingdom of heaven," and, John xviii. 36, "a kingdom not of this world;" its laws, its powers, were all Divine. This kingdom was never to be destroyed, as the Babylonian, the Persian, and the Macedonian empires have been, and in great measure also the Roman. This kingdom was to "break in pieces" and consume all the other kingdoms, to spread and enlarge itself, so that it should comprehend within itself all the former kingdoms. This kingdom was to "fill the whole earth," to become universal, and to stand for ever.

As the fourth kingdom, or the Roman empire, was represented in a twofold state, first strong and flourishing with "legs of iron," and then weakened and divided with feet and toes, "part of iron and part of clay;" so this fifth kingdom, or the kingdom of Christ, is described likewise in two states, which Mr. Mede rightly distinguisheth by the names of the kingdom of the stone and the kingdom of the mountain; the first when "the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands," the second when "it became itself a great mountain, and filled the whole earth." "The stone was cut out of the mountain without hands," the kingdom of Christ was first set up, while the Roman empire was in its full strength with "legs of iron." The Roman empire was afterwards divided into ten lesser kingdoms, the remains of which are subsisting at present. The image is still standing upon his feet and toes of iron and clay; the kingdom of Christ is still "a stumblingblock and a rock of offence;" but the stone will one day "smite the image upon the feet" and toes, and destroy it utterly, and will itself "become a great mountain, and fill the whole earth:" or in other words, Rev. xi. 15, "The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign for ever and ever." We have therefore seen the kingdom of "the stone," but we have not yet seen the kingdom of "the mountain." Some parts of this prophecy still remain to be fulfilled: but the exact completion of the other parts will not suffer us to doubt of the accomplishment of the rest also in due season. Bp. Newton.

Before CHRIST 603. the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

36 ¶ This is the dream; and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king.

37 Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory.

38 And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this head of gold.

39 And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee, and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth.

40 And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron: forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things: and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise.

41 And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potters' clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay.

42 And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly ‖ broken. Before CHRIST 603.

43 And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men: but they shall not cleave † one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay.

44 And in the † days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, [a] which shall never be destroyed: and the † kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.

45 Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain ‖ without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass † hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure.

45. Forasmuch as thou sawest &c.] There should not have been a full stop placed at the end of the last verse, as our translation is commonly pointed: the particle "forasmuch" carrying on the sense from the foregoing words, as in verses 40 and 41. W. Lowth.

—— the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure.] The king, hearing his dream related with such exactness, might be better assured of the truth of the interpretation, and of the great events which should follow. Bp. Newton.

46. Then the king — fell upon his face, and worshipped Daniel,] Or, "did reverence to Daniel." The king highly revered Daniel, and paid him such tokens of respect, as were consonant to Oriental manners. Wintle.

47. — Of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings,] Superiour to all the gods or demons, who are worshipped by men; the supreme Governour of the world, and Ruler of the kings and kingdoms in it: see ver. 21. W. Lowth.

The Jews were not only of service in their flourishing state to support true religion in the world, but under their afflictions and captivities they spread it much farther than they could before. They then became extensively useful to the nations, amongst whom necessity mixed them; as both the reasonableness of their faith, compared with heathenism, was easy to be seen; and as prophecies fulfilled, or miracles performed in their favour, could not but recommend the worship of that Being, whom they served. By these means their conqueror Nebuchadnezzar was brought to declare Him "a God of gods, and a Lord of kings, all whose works are truth, and His ways judgment," chap. iv. 37. On these accounts did Darius the Mede decree, "That in every dominion of his kingdom men should tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: for He is the living God, and stedfast for ever," chap. vi. 26. And Cyrus, whom Isaiah had foretold by name above one hundred years before his birth, for the restorer of the people from their captivity, acknowledged by a written proclamation, sent through his whole empire, that the God of the Jews

It was from the prophecy recorded in this chapter that the distinction first arose of the four great empires of the world, which hath been followed by most historians and chronologers in their distribution of times. These four empires, as they are the subject of this prophecy, are likewise the subject of the most celebrated pens both in former and in later ages. Not but there have been empires as great, or greater, than some of these, as those of the Tartars for instance, and of the Saracens, and of the Turks; and we may think perhaps, that they were as well deserving of a place in this succession of kingdoms, and were equally worthy to be made the objects of prophecy, being as eminent for the wisdom of their constitutions, the extent of their dominion, and the length of their duration. But these four empires had a particular relation to the church and people of God, who were subject to them in their turns. They were therefore particularly predicted; and we have in them, without the intermixture of others, a line of prophecy (as I may say) extending from the reign of Nebuchadnezzar to the full and complete establishment of the kingdom of the Messiah. He, who is Arbiter of kingdoms, and Governour of the universe, can reveal as much of their future revolutions as He pleaseth; and He hath revealed enough to manifest His providence, and to confirm the truth of religion. What Daniel said upon the first discovery of these things, well may we say, after the completion of so many particulars, "Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: for wisdom and might are His: and He changeth the times and the seasons: He removeth kings, and setteth up kings: He giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding: He revealeth the deep and secret things: He knoweth what is in the darkness, and the light dwelleth with Him," ver. 20—22. Bp. Newton.

Chap. III. ver. 1. Nebuchadnezzar — made an image] The statue was probably of Bel, or some Assyrian deity; see ver. 16. It is thought to have been hollow within, like that of the Colossus of Rhodes, whose height exceeded that of the statue by ten cubits. The proportion of the height seems unequal to the breadth, unless the pedestal, on which it was placed, be included. Diodorus relates, that Xerxes took away an image of gold forty feet high, when he demolished the temple of Belus in Babylon. Dean Prideaux supposes it may have been this statue, and then the body of the image would hardly have been twenty-seven cubits high. The statue of Jupiter, made by Lysippus at Tarentum, is said to have been forty cubits. Wintle. W. Lowth.

—— in the plain of Dura,] See its probable situation near Babylon, in the map of the dominions of David and Solomon.

2. — the princes, the governors, &c.] It is difficult, if not impossible, to describe with certainty the several officers and commanders here mentioned. W. Lowth, Wintle.

4. — O people, nations, and languages,] From whatever part of the empire ye come, and whatever language ye speak: see ver. 29, and chap. iv. 1. This form of speech was designed to set forth the largeness and extent of the Babylonish empire, which had subjects of so many different languages. The same phrase was afterwards used under the Medes and Persians, chap. vi. 25; Esth. i. 22; iii. 12; viii. 9. W. Lowth.

5. — cornet, flute, harp, &c.] There is much difficulty in determining the several musical instruments here intended. Though Dr. Burney, in his History of Musick, has one whole chapter on the musick of the ancient Hebrews, yet he only enumerates the names of these instruments, by quoting the verse; and probably in his researches could not meet with sufficient data to explain them in a satisfactory manner. Wintle.

6. — the same hour] This is the first place in the Old Testament where we meet with the division of time into hours. The Greeks ascribe the invention of hours to Anaximander, or Anaximenes; who probably learned it from the Chaldeans. W. Lowth.

—— be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.] Burning offenders alive was a punishment used among the Babylonians; see Jer. xxix. 22: and perhaps among other Eastern nations; see Ps. xxi. 9. W. Lowth. It is still inflicted on Jews and Christians for capital offences at Algiers. Dr. Shaw.

Before CHRIST about 580. 7 Therefore at that time, when all the people heard the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of musick, all the people, the nations, and the languages, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

8 ¶ Wherefore at that time certain Chaldeans came near, and accused the Jews.

9 They spake and said to the king Nebuchadnezzar, O king, live for ever.

10 Thou, O king, hast made a decree, that every man that shall hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, shall fall down and worship the golden image:

11 And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth, that he should be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.

12 There are certain Jews whom thou hast set over the affairs of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; these men, O king, † have not regarded thee: they serve not thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

† Chald. have set no regard upon thee.

13 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage and fury commanded to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Then they brought these men before the king.

14 Nebuchadnezzar spake and said unto them, Is it ‖ true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, do not ye serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up?

‖ Or, of purpose: as Exod. 21. 13.

15 Now if ye be ready that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, ye fall down and worship the image which I have made; well: but if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace; and who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?

16 Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, answered and said to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not careful to answer thee in this matter.

Before CHRIST about 580.

17 If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king.

18 But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

19 ¶ Then was Nebuchadnezzar † full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego: therefore he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace one seven times more than it was wont to be heated.

20 And he commanded the † most mighty men that were in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, and to cast them into the burning fiery furnace.

† Chald. mighty of strength.

21 Then these men were bound in their ‖ coats, their hosen, and their ‖ hats, and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

‖ Or, mantles. ‖ Or, turbans.

22 Therefore because the king's † commandment was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the ‖ flame of the fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego.

† Chald. word. ‖ Or, spake.

23 And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

24 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonied, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his ‖ counsellers, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king.

‖ Or, governors.

25 He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and † they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the son of God.

† Chald. there is no hurt in them.

15. — well:] The ellipsis, though familiar in the Hebrew and other ancient languages, is beautiful in this verse, and seems to point at the great wrath and overbearing impetuosity of the furious monarch, which is further devoted at the end of the verse. For a like ellipsis see Luke xiii. 9; Matth. xv. 5, 6, &c. Wintle.

—— and who is that God &c.] Thus Nebuchadnezzar exalted himself above God Almighty, as Sennacherib had done before him. 2 Kings xviii. 35. Notwithstanding he had before made a confession of the true God, chap. ii. 47. W. Lowth.

16. — we are not careful to answer thee in this matter.] In so plain a case, there is no room for deliberation: we have an answer ready at hand, that we ought to obey God rather than man. W. Lowth. See the note on chap. ii. 10.

24. Then Nebuchadnezzar &c.] The hymn of the three children follows the twenty-third verse in the Latin, Greek, and some other versions. But this is generally now agreed to be a spurious production of much later date. From a review of the hymn, however pious and well-designed, we cannot discover the usual style of Daniel, or any resemblance to the other parts of his book. Wintle.

25. — I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, &c.] This would be more easily understood, if we knew the true form of what is denominated "a furnace." Probably it was either an enclosed building, with an opening large enough to admit a full view of it; or an uncovered building, an enclosure of fire, or an area surrounded by a wall, within which the fire raged; so that Nebuchadnezzar, still seated on his throne, might see the persons in the fire. Fragments to Calmet.

—— like the son of God.] Very bright and glorious, above the possibility of all human beauty and resplendence. Bp. Hall.

Before CHRIST about 580.

† Chald. dear.

26 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the † mouth of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, came forth of the midst of the fire.

27 And the princes, governors, and captains, and the king's counsellers, being gathered together, saw these men, upon whose bodies the fire had no power, nor was an hair of their head singed, neither were their coats changed, nor the smell of fire had passed on them.

28 Then Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him, and have changed the king's word, and yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god, except their own God.

† Chald. a decree is made by me. † Chald. error. [a] Chap. 2. 5. † Chald. made pieces.

29 Therefore † I make a decree, That every people, nation, and language, which speak † any thing amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, shall be [a] † cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill: because there is no other God that can deliver after this sort.

† Chald. made to prosper.

30 Then the king † promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, in the province of Babylon.

[a] Chap. 6. 26.

4 ¶ I Nebuchadnezzar was at rest in mine house, and flourishing in my palace:

6 Therefore made I a decree to bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known unto me the interpretation of the dream.

7 Then came in the magicians, the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers: and I told the dream before them; but they did not make known unto me the interpretation thereof.

[b] Chap. 2. 48.

"Like a son of God," some angelick appearance: see ver. 28, and Job i. 6. Or "like the Son of God," that is, Christ: of whom Munster understanding it observes, that he thinks it no wonder that Nebuchadnezzar saw the Son of God, when He appeared to Saul, who was persecuting His disciples. Wintle.

26. — ye servants of the most high God,] This miracle calls to the king's mind the confession he had formerly made of the true God: chap. ii. 47. W. Lowth.

27. — upon whose bodies the fire had no power,] The several expressions here used are meant to shew, that not the least injury was received from the fire. The expressions rise in beautiful order. The fire not only had no prevailing power over their bodies, but neither was a hair of their head burnt, nor their flowing robes singed, nor even the smell of fire had passed on them. Compare this with Isaiah xliii. 2. Wintle.

28. — have changed the king's word,] Have rendered his command of none effect, God Himself having suspended the execution of it. W. Lowth.

29. — which speak any thing amiss against the God of Shadrach, &c.] So Darius acknowledges "the God of Daniel," chap. vi. 26, looking on Him as superiour to other gods, but not as the only true God. W. Lowth.

30. Then the king promoted Shadrach, &c.] Or, restored them to their former places and dignities. W. Lowth.

These three blessed martyrs, who bore so noble a testimony of the true religion before so many thousand witnesses, afford not only an example of suffering undauntedly for the cause of truth, but an encouragement so to suffer. When the whole creation is in flames, and all this world becomes one great fiery furnace, the faithful servants of Christ shall escape unhurt from that general conflagration. Upon their bodies the fire shall have no power: but, having endured temptation unto the end, they shall receive from the hand of God "a crown of glory that fadeth not away." Wogan.

Chap. IV. ver. 1. — Peace be multiplied unto you.] An usual form of addressing the subjects of this vast empire: see chap. vi. 25. Wintle.

3. How great are his signs! &c.] The king's repeated experience had extorted from him the sublime confession contained in this verse; the latter part of which is a fine display of the infinite power and dominion of the true God. Wintle.

4. I Nebuchadnezzar was at rest in mine house, and flourishing in my palace:] God's particular judgments often resemble the general one, in coming suddenly and unexpectedly, while men are indulging themselves in carnal security. See Ps. xxx. 6, 7; Matt. xxiv. 43, 44; 1 Thess. v. 2, 3. W. Lowth.

8. — whose name was Belteshazzar,] See the note on chap. i. 7.

— in whom is the spirit of the holy gods:] Or, "of the holy God." The words admit of a singular sense. It must be presumed, that this king had now the one true God in his mind. Wintle. See chap. ii. 11; v. 11, 14.

10 Thus were the visions of mine head in my bed; † I saw, and behold a tree in the midst of the earth, and the height thereof was great.

† Chald. I was seeing.

11 The tree grew, and was strong, and the height thereof reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth:

12 The leaves thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all: the beasts of the field had shadow under it, and the fowls of the heaven dwelt in the boughs thereof, and all flesh was fed of it.

13 I saw in the visions of my head upon my bed, and, behold, a watcher and an holy one came down from heaven;

14 He cried † aloud, and said thus, Hew down the tree, and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit: let the beasts get away from under it, and the fowls from his branches:

15 Nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts in the grass of the earth:

16 Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him; and let seven times pass over him.

17 This matter is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones: to the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men.

18 This dream I king Nebuchadnezzar

the religion of the Magi, properly so called, was received among the Babylonians, is perhaps not altogether certain. The Magians, or worshippers of fire, were first established in Persia; (Dr. Hyde:) their sect was propagated in Persia and India, and they remain there to this time. Dean Prideaux. But it is not improbable, that their principles were well known also, and partly received, in Chaldea and Babylonia; especially as these nations were immersed in all sorts of superstition: and the name "Magi" seems to have belonged to the countries of the East in general. Wintle.

—— tell me the visions of my dream — and the interpretation thereof.] Nebuchadnezzar tells the dream himself in the following words: so the meaning of this sentence must be, Tell me the dream; that is, the interpretation thereof. The Greek translates it thus: "Hear the vision of my dream, and tell me the interpretation thereof." W. Lowth.

10. — behold a tree in the midst of the earth, &c.] "The midst of the earth" is probably meant as a centre, from which the extensive circuit of his empire was described. The sovereigns of the world are often represented by large trees in the language of other countries, as well as in the prophetick language of the Hebrews; and by the shadow is denoted the protection which men may receive under government. Wintle.

13. — a watcher and an holy one] See below the note on ver. 17.

15. Nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the earth,] As, when the root of a tree is still alive, there is a possibility of its flourishing again; so there should still be hopes that the king might recover his former state and dignity: see ver. 26. W. Lowth.

Though the tree was to be hewn down, &c, "the stump of his roots," which was to be left in the earth, was to be secured "with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field." The words of menace which follow are applicable only to a man, and plainly shew, that the whole vision was typical of some dreadful calamity, to fall for a time, but for a time only, on some one of the sons of men. Bp. Horsley.

16. Let his heart be changed &c.] Compare ver. 25. The plain interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's case, stripped of the prophetick figurative language, appears to be, that he should be punished with madness, should fancy himself a beast and live like a . but after some time should recover his reason and resume the government. Bp. Newton.

—— let seven times pass over him.] That is, seven years: so the expression is taken, chap. xi. 13, where the Hebrew reads, "the king of the north shall come at the end of times;" that is, years. So the "time, times, and an half," mentioned chap. vii. 25; xii. 7; signify three years and a half; and are accordingly explained by "forty and two months," Rev. xi. 2; and by 1260 days, Rev. xii. 6: both which reckonings of time are equivalent to three years and an half. W. Lowth.

17. — the watchers, — the holy ones:] It is the opinion of commentators in general, that by these titles are to be understood angelick beings, who are the instruments of God, and messengers to execute God's judgments. And Stackhouse observes, after Calmet, that from some expressions in this verse it looks as if the Chaldeans had a notion, (for the king, we may suppose, speaks according to the sentiments of the nation,) that these "watchers" or "holy ones" in heaven constituted an assembly of judges, or were an order of blessed spirits, who took under their cognizance and decision the fate of men. Bp. Horsley however has suggested, that these appellations denote the Persons in the Godhead; the first describing Them by the vigilance of Their universal providence; the second, by the transcendent sanctity of Their nature: and he observes, that it is not the mere execution of the judgment upon Nebuchadnezzar, but the decree itself, which is ascribed to Them; that the whole matter originated in Their decree, and at Their command the decree was executed; and that in perfect consistency with this exposition we find, in the 24th verse, that this decree of "the watchers" and "the holy ones" is "the decree of the most High" God. Edit.

—— to the intent that the living may know &c.] The intent of this matter was to give mankind a proof, in the fall and restoration of this mighty monarch, that the fortunes of kings and empires are in the hand of God; that His providence perpetually interposes in the affairs of men, distributing crowns and sceptres always for the good of the faithful primarily, ultimately of His whole creation, but according to His will: by which we must understand a will perfectly independent, and unbiassed by any thing external; yet not an arbitrary will, but a will directed by the governing perfections of the Divine intellect; by God's own goodness and wisdom; and as justice is included in the idea of goodness, it must be a will governed by God's justice. Bp. Horsley.

—— the basest of men.] This regards Nebuchadnezzar, either with respect to his present condition, whose pride and cruelty rendered him as despicable in the sight of God, as his high estate made him appear honourable in the sight of man: and therefore he was justly doomed to so low a degree of abasement; or else it may be understood of his wonderful advancement and restoration, after he had been degraded from his dignity; and sent to herd with the beasts of the field. God thereby asserting that prerogative of His, of "bringing low and lifting up:" and of "raising the beggar from the dunghill, to set him among princes," 1 Sam. ii. 8, 9; Ps. cxiii. 7, 8. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 570. have seen. Now thou, O Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation thereof, forasmuch as all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known unto me the interpretation: but thou art able; for the spirit of the holy gods is in thee.

19 ¶ Then Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, was astonied for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. The king spake, and said, Belteshazzar, let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof, trouble thee. Belteshazzar answered and said, My lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies.

20 The tree that thou sawest, which grew, and was strong, whose height reached unto the heaven, and the sight thereof to all the earth;

21 Whose leaves were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all; under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of the heaven had their habitation:

22 It is thou, O king, that art grown and become strong: for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth.

23 And whereas the king saw a watcher and an holy one coming down from heaven, and saying, Hew the tree down, and destroy it; yet leave the stump of the roots thereof in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him;

24 This is the interpretation, O king, and this is the decree of the most High, which is come upon my lord the king:

25 That they shall 'drive thee from men, Before CHRIST about 570. and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee to [1] Chap. 2. eat grass as oxen, and they shall wet thee with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee, till thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will.

26 And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the tree roots; thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that the heavens do rule.

27 Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by shewing mercy to the poor; if it may be ‖ a lengthening of thy tranquillity. ‖ Or, an easing of your error.

28 ¶ All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar.

29 At the end of twelve months he walked ‖ in the palace of the kingdom of ‖ Or, upon. Babylon.

30 The king spake, and said, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?

31 While the word was in the king's mouth, there fell a voice from heaven, saying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken; The kingdom is departed from thee.

32 And they shall drive thee from men, about 563. and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field: they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times shall pass over thee, until thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will.

33 The same hour was the thing fulfilled

26. — thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee.] That a dispensation of judgment should be tempered with such signal mercy to a heathen prince, not, like Cyrus, eminent for his virtues, however distinguished by his talents, is perhaps in some degree to be put to the account of the favour he shewed to many of the Jews his captives, and in particular to his constant patronage of the Prophet Daniel. Bp. Horsley.

27. — break off thy sins by righteousness, &c.] The plain meaning of this counsel given to the king is, that he should "do justly, and love mercy," should practise those great duties of justice and charity towards mankind, in which he had been hitherto remarkably deficient; then, as it follows, Perhaps there shall be a prolongation to thy tranquillity, or peace; that is, his punishment might be remitted, and his felicity continued for a longer term: not unlike the case of Hezekiah in Isaiah, chap. xxxviii; or that of the Ninevites, recorded by the Prophet Jonah. See also Jer. xviii. Wintle.

28. 'All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar.] Strange as it must seem, notwithstanding Daniel's weight and credit with the king; notwithstanding the consternation of mind, into which the dream had thrown him; this warning had no permanent effect. He was not cured of his overweening pride and vanity, till he was overtaken by the threatened judgment. Bp. Horsley.

29. — he walked in the palace] Or, "he was walking upon the palace." It is well known that the roofs of the buildings in the East were flat or plain, over which the inhabitants used to walk for pleasure. Wintle. See the note on 2 Sam. xi. 2.

30. — great Babylon, that I have built] It is frequently expressed in Scripture that a person has built a city, who has enlarged, repaired, or fortified it. See 2 Chron. xi. 6; 2 Kings xiv. 22.

Whatever we read of the original construction of Babylon by Nimrod or Belus, or of its enlargement by Semiramis, yet it was either of little account, or certainly not as one of the wonders of the world, till the walls with their hundred gates, the temple of Belus, the monarch's most magnificent palace, the hanging gardens, and other grand works and improvements, were added by the king, who is said to have "built" it. Wintle.

34. — I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes] The first indication of the recovery is noted by a reverse of the cause of the fall. At the expiration of the term, or at the end of seven years, Nebuchadnezzar lifted up his eyes unto heaven, and his understanding or mind returned: he acknowledged against whom he had transgressed by his pride, and looked up unto Him when he was restored. The following acts of praise are the suitable returns of a mind truly penitent, and deeply sensible of its faults and of the mercies it had received. Wintle.

37. Now I Nebuchadnezzar praise and extol and honour the King of heaven,] We shall not find in history a more awful example and monument of Providence, than the vicissitudes of Nebuchadnezzar's life afford. Raised gradually to the pinnacle of power and human glory by a long train of those brilliant actions and successes, which man is too apt to ascribe to himself, (the proximate causes being indeed in himself and in the instruments he uses, although Providence is always the prime efficient,) he was suddenly cast down from it, and, after a time, as suddenly restored, without any natural or human means. His humiliation was not the effect of any reverse of fortune, of any publick disaster, or any mismanagement of the affairs of his empire. At the expiration of a twelvemonth from his dream, the king, still at rest in his house, and flourishing in his palace, surveying his city, and exulting in the monuments of his own greatness, which it presented to his eye, was smitten by an invisible hand. As the event stood unconnected with any known natural cause, it must have been beyond the ken of any foresight short of the Divine; and it follows incontestably, that the prediction and the accomplishment of it were both from God. The king's restoration to power and grandeur had also been predicted; and this took place at the predicted time, independently of any natural cause, and without the use of any human means. And the evidence of these extraordinary occurrences; of the prediction, the fall, and the restoration; is perhaps the most undeniable of any thing which rests upon mere human testimony. The king himself, upon his recovery, published a proclamation in every part of his vast empire, giving an account of all which had befallen him, and in conclusion giving praise and honour to the King of heaven, acknowledging that "all His works are truth, and His ways judgment, and that those who walk in pride He is able to abase." The evidence of the whole fact therefore stands upon this publick record of the Babylonian empire, which was preserved word for word in this chapter, of which it makes indeed the whole. This chapter therefore is not Daniel's writing, but Nebuchadnezzar's. Bp. Horsley.

Chap. V. ver. 1. Belshazzar the king made a great feast &c.] This feast was made at a time of publick rejoicing, being an annual festival, when the whole night was spent in revelling: of which season Cyrus took the advantage to make himself master of the city, as Herodotus and Xenophon relate, and as was foretold by Jeremiah, chap. li. 39, 57. W. Lowth.

2. — whiles he tasted the wine,] The expression seems to allude to that part of the libation, in which the wine was tasted at the time of a sacrifice or a festal solemnity. This "impious king," as he is called by Xenophon, in making the libations, ordered the vessels of Jehovah to be introduced for these purposes, thus impiously prostituting the most sacred instruments of the temple of the true God to the idolatrous services of pagan superstition; or, if the impiety was not so gross, at least the sacred vessels were applied to common uses, and to the purposes of intemperance and excess. Wintle.

——his father Nebuchadnezzar] Rather, his grandfather. Nebuchadnezzar was succeeded by his son Iloarudam, according to Ptolemy, who is the Evil-merodach of Jeremiah: he married a discreet and prudent woman, called Nitocris, from whom was born Nabonadius or Belshazzar. Wintle. See the notes on Exod. ii. 18; and Jer. xxvii. 7.

4. — praised the gods of gold,] As they drank their wine in these once hallowed vessels, they triumphed over that God, to whom they had been consecrated; and magnified the power of their idols of gold and silver, &c. as if by their might these victories had been achieved, and these rich spoils obtained. Bp. Hall. Such a wanton and sacrilegious insult deserved and called for exemplary punishment. Wintle.

18 O thou king, the most high God gave Nebuchadnezzar thy father a kingdom, and majesty, and glory, and honour:

5. In the same hour came forth fingers &c.] In the very same hour, while they were offering this affront to the God of heaven, it pleased the just and powerful God to shew, that He took notice of this presumptuous impiety. Bp. Hall. Next to murder, no sin is so remarkably punished in this world as that of sacrilege, as appears by innumerable instances, taken out of the histories of all ages, of heathens and infidels, as well as Jews and Christians. W. Lowth.

6. Then the king's countenance was changed, &c.] The very great confusion and uneasiness of Belshazzar at the sight of the hand shews, that nothing is more weak and timorous than a guilty conscience; and that the Divine judgments overtake the ungodly, when they think themselves most secure. Ostervald.

7. — shall be clothed with scarlet, and have a chain of gold &c.] Gold chains are a mark of dignity in Abyssinia, bestowed by the sovereign on the most meritorious persons in his army. It is usual to give a splendid suit of clothes at the same time; an Egyptian and Persian custom. See Gen. xli. 42; Esth. viii. 15. Bruce.

— the third ruler in the kingdom.] Perhaps, next to the king and the king's son. Grotius.

11. There is a man in thy kingdom, &c.] Some persons are apt to wonder that Daniel was unknown to Belshazzar, which others have accounted for from the abandoned and indolent character of the king; but there is a farther reason, which Mr. Harmer has hinted from Sir John Chardin; namely, that he was displaced at the death of a prior king; since in the East, when a king dies, the physicians and astrologers are removed, the one for not having driven away death, the other for not having predicted it. But after all Daniel was not perhaps totally unknown, at least by report, to this king; however he was probably of no esteem, or employed in no considerable department in the state, in the early part of his reign, and therefore not readily recollected. Wintle.

12. — dissolving of doubts,] Literally, "of knots," as in the margin. It appears from Sir John Chardin, that this phrase is still in use in Persia: a patent given to him by the king of Persia speaks of "superintendents, who unloose all sorts of knots." Fragments to Calmet.

[c] Chap. 4. 32.

‖ Or, he made his heart equal, &c.

22 And thou his son, O Belshazzar, hast not humbled thine heart, though thou knewest all this;

23 But hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven; and they have brought the vessels of his house before thee, and thou, and thy lords, thy wives, and thy concubines, have drunk wine in them; and thou hast praised the gods of silver, and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone, which see not, nor hear, nor know: and the God in whose hand thy breath is, and whose are all thy ways, hast thou not glorified:

1 Daniel is made chief of the presidents. 4 They conspiring against him obtain an idolatrous decree. 10 Daniel, accused of the breach thereof, is cast into the lions' den. 18 Daniel is adversaries devoured, 25 and God magnified by a decree.

IT pleased Darius to set over the kingdom an hundred and twenty princes, which should be over the whole kingdom; about 538.

20. — and they took his glory from him:] Or, "his glory was taken from him," according to the Hebrew phraseology. W. Lowth. The authority of Nebuchadnezzar was raised in the last verse to the highest pitch; and on that account we find here, that his heart was elated, and his spirit grown obdurate in proud and arrogant behaviour, instead of ascribing all his honours and advantages to the real giver of them, the true God, whom he had been brought to acknowledge; and to the neglect of whom, and of improvement from his ancestor's sufferings, Belshazzar's fate is by the Prophet so justly and judiciously attributed. Wintle.

26. MENE; God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it.] "MENE," to number; that is, to fix bounds to a thing, or the period of its continuance. Wintle.

The determinate number of years which God hath appointed for the continuance of thy reign, and the Babylonish monarchy, is finished. So God is said to number the months of man's life, and to appoint him "bounds that he cannot pass," Job xiv. 5. The word "MENE" is doubled in the foregoing verse, to shew that the thing is certain, and "established by God," as Joseph tells Pharaoh in the like case, Gen. xli. 32. W. Lowth.

27. TEKEL; Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting.] Wicked men are often compared to silver adulterated, and alloyed with baser metals, which makes it too light, when weighed in the balances, see Jer. vi. 30; Ezek. xxii. 18. W. Lowth. "Tekel" signifies to weigh. The meaning here is, that the Almighty had weighed, or made a due estimate of, the conduct of Belshazzar, according to the just and impartial measures of His providence; and had found him light or deficient, a man of no account, unworthy of a kingdom, and a fit object of Divine vengeance. Wintle.

28. PERES; Thy kingdom is divided, &c.] The verb paras, from whence "peres" is derived as an appellative, signifies to divide or break: it is likewise the proper name of the Persians, who were to be sharers in the division of the Babylonish empire. "Upharsin" in the 25th verse literally signifies "and they divide." W. Lowth.

29. — and they clothed Daniel with scarlet,] The coming out from the presence of princes in a dress presented to the wearer as a mark of distinction, is an honour still practised in the East. They are conferred sometimes merely as an honour, and sometimes as an ensign of office. Harmer, Sir J. Chardin.

30. In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain.] And from the next verse it appears, that the Babylonian or Chaldean kingdom expired with him.

The punishment of Nebuchadnezzar, the death of Belshazzar, and the expiration of the kingdom, may remind us of that fine passage of the wise Son of Sirach, contained in Ecclus. x. 12—18. Wintle.

31. And Darius the Median took the kingdom,] This Darius is said to be of the "seed of the Medes," chap. ix. 1; and is supposed by the most judicious chronologers to be the same with Cyaxares, the son of Astyages: him Cyrus made king of the Chaldeans, as being his uncle by his mother's side, and his partner in carrying on the war against the Babylonians, and left him the palace of the king of Babylon, to live there whenever he pleased, as Xenophon relates. The Chaldee phrase, rendered here "took the kingdom," is translated "possessed the kingdom," chap. vii. 18; and means the same with succeeding to the kingdom. W. Lowth. Josephus says, that this Darius was the son of Astyages, and that the Greeks called him by another name: what this other name, given by the Greeks to the son and successor of Astyages, was, we learn from Xenophon, who tells us it was Cyaxares. Bp. Hallifax.

The judgment recorded in this chapter is a visible proof of the Divine vengeance on those, whose heart is lifted up by prosperity; on the profane and ungodly, who, instead of reverencing Him from whom they receive life, and breath, and all things, have the insolence to exalt themselves against Him; and on those, who do not improve the warnings He gives them, the afflictions He visits them with, nor the examples He sets before their eyes. Osterwald.

Chap. VI. ver. 1. — an hundred and twenty princes,] That is, viceroys, lieutenants, or chief governours under the king. Xenophon mentions the same fact, only he ascribes the institution of about 537. 4 ¶ Then the presidents and princes sought to find occasion against Daniel concerning the kingdom; but they could find none occasion nor fault; forasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him.

Before CHRIST about 538. 2 And over these three presidents; of whom Daniel was first: that the princes might give accounts unto them, and the king should have no damage.

5 Then said these men, We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him concerning the law of his God.

6 Then these presidents and princes ‖ assembled together to the king, and said thus unto him, King Darius, live for ever.

‖ Or, consultmultitudinously.

7 All the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, and the princes, the counsellors, and the captains, have consulted together to establish a royal statute, and to make a firm ‖ decree, that whosoever shall ask a petition of any God or man for thirty days, save of thee, O king, he shall be cast into the den of lions.

‖ Or, interdict.

8 Now, O king, establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the [a] law of the Medes and Persians, which [†] altereth not.

Before CHRIST about 537.

9 Wherefore king Darius signed the writing and the decree. [a] Esther 2. 1. & 8. 8. † Child. passeth not.

11 Then these men assembled, and found Daniel praying and making supplication before his God.

12 Then they came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's decree; Hast thou not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask a petition of any God or man within thirty days, save of thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not.

13 Then answered they and said before the king, That Daniel, which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day.

14 Then the king, when he heard these words, was sore displeased with himself, these satraps, as he calls them, to Cyrus; and, no doubt, Cyrus's uncle, Darius, called by Xenophon Cyaxares, did not appoint them without his nephew's advice and concurrence. Parkhurst. These "princes" were according to the number of the provinces, which were subject to the Medo-Persian empire. These were afterwards enlarged to an hundred and twenty-seven by the victories of Cambyses and Darius Hystaspes. See Esth. i. 1. W. Lowth.

2. — three presidents; of whom Daniel was first:] He had been appointed one of the principal officers of state by Belshazzar, chap. v. 29. W. Lowth.

8. — according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not.] After it is once enacted by the king, with the consent of his counsellors. W. Lowth. See the notes at Esth. viii. 11; ix. 16.

9. Wherefore king Darius signed the writing and the decree.] Thus was atheism established by the law in the court, city, and empire of Babylon, for the space of one month. Bp. Horne.

10. Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; &c.] He did his duty exactly according to his usual custom, as if nothing had happened, and no law had been passed, or any thing said at court about it. He would not go to any other place, where his enemies might not have found him, but "went to his own house," whither he might suppose they would follow him. He would not secrete himself in any private or remote corner of the house, but repaired forthwith to his own "chamber," the place whereunto he always resorted. He thought it not enough to pray inwardly with his mind, which he might have done in any posture, without being perceived, but made his body bear its accustomed part in the service: "he kneeled upon his knees." He contented not himself with praying once or twice only, dropping the third time in the middle of the day, on account of the imminent danger he was in, but made up his full and usual complement: "he kneeled upon his knees three times a day." Nor did he pray only, and not give thanks, cutting off some part of the service, to make the time of danger shorter, but performed the whole, without curtailing or diminishing aught: "he prayed and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime." And, in short, he would not so much as shut his windows, but did all this, "his windows in his chamber being open toward Jerusalem." In order to shew the meaning of this last circumstance, we must have recourse to a noble passage in king Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple, which Daniel had in his eye, and by which he directed his conduct. (See 1 Kings viii. 46—50, especially the latter part of the 48th verse.) The circumstance therefore of "praying toward Jerusalem" being thus enjoined, Daniel would by no means omit it. And now let us consider with ourselves, how clear the conscience, how holy the soul, how steadfast the faith, how lively the hope, how fervent the charity, how invincible the courage, of Daniel must have been, who, in such circumstances, could calmly and composedly go on in the regular and exact performance of his stated devotions. Let us consider of how great consequence the due performance of them is, if, with death in its most horrible form before his eyes, he thought he could not justify a single omission of them. And whenever we are tempted to neglect our prayers, let us remember that Daniel, though the den of lions was to be the consequence, "kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime." Bp. Horne.

—— his windows being open &c.] The like practice we find observed by Sara, the daughter of Raguel, in Tobit iii. 11, that "she prayed toward the window;" and, we may presume, for the same devout reason. This was the custom of the Jews in their captivities and dispersions. Wogan.

Before CHRIST about 537. and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him: and he laboured till the going down of the sun to deliver him.

15 Then these men assembled unto the king, and said unto the king, Know, O king, that the law of the Medes and Persians is, That no decree nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed.

16 Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spake and said unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee.

17 And a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords; that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel.

18 ¶ Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting: neither were ‖instruments of musick brought before him: and his sleep went from him.

19 Then the king arose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions.

20 And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel: and the king spake and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?

21 Then said Daniel unto the king, O king, live for ever.

22 My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt.

Before CHRIST about 537.

23 Then was the king exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God.

24 ¶ And the king commanded, and they brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions, them, their children, and their wives; and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den.

25 ¶ Then king Darius wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; Peace be multiplied unto you.

26 I make a decree, That in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: for he is the living God, and stedfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be [d] destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end.

CHAP. VII.

1 Daniel's vision of four beasts. 9 Of God's kingdom. 15 The interpretation thereof.

16. — he will deliver thee.] Rather, "May He deliver thee." The words express the king's hopes and good wishes, but no certain persuasion. See ver. 20. Wintle. W. Lowth.

17. And a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den; &c.] We see herein the hand of Providence, whose goodness in saving His servant, and power in defeating the malice of his enemies, were made the more conspicuous by the very method used to prevent the Prophet's escape. The stone is sealed, not only with the king's signet, but with the signet also of his lords, that so it might not be in the power of either to change the purpose concerning Daniel. This deliverance therefore appeared to be the sole work of God, and not of man. And as by this accrued the greater glory to God, so it effectually established the honour and safety of His Prophet. Wogan.

22. — forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me;] The Prophet, having justly offended neither God nor the king, very truly offers the righteousness of his cause as the reason of the Divine interference for his security; not from any ostentatious display of his own merit, but to direct the attention of the king to the power and providence of that great Being who is "mighty to save," and whose favour is more to be regarded than life itself. Wintle.

—— before thee, O king, have I done no hurt.] Though I disobeyed thy decree, it was not done out of contumacy or stubbornness, but purely to preserve a good conscience, which is the only true principle of loyalty and obedience: see Rom. xiii. 5. W. Lowth.

24. — and the lions had the mastery of them, &c.] The ravenous seizure of these wretched criminals and their families by the lions, "or ever they came at the bottom of the den," proved at once the protection of God over His servant, in shutting their mouths that they hurt him not, and His vengeance against the accusers of Daniel, in permitting the lions to satisfy their hunger by devouring them so greedily. Wogan.

28. — in the reign of Cyrus the Persian.] Who upon Darius's death took possession of the whole monarchy of the Medes and Persians, called from him the Persian monarchy. See Ezra i. 2. W. Lowth.

The example of Daniel not only stirs us of every excuse for not performing our devotions, but gives us likewise instructions how to perform them with regard to place, posture, time, and matter. And let the blessed effect and reward of his devotion fire our souls to an imitation of so great and glorious an example. Would we be delivered from the power of the devil, and the bitter pains of eternal death? would we be holy, and just, and good? would we be filled with wisdom and understanding in the counsels of God? would we be high in the favour of Heaven? nay, would we be saved from temporal calamities, and brought to honour, esteem, and reverence, in the sight of men? Constancy in prayer can open a way to all these blessings. Bp. Horne.

Chap. VII. The historical part of the book of Daniel was finished with the last chapter; the remaining part of this book acquaints us with the visions, which at different times were communicated to the Prophet himself. The interval of time from the first to the last of these visions, is about one or two and twenty years, that is, from the first year of Belshazzar, mentioned at the beginning of this chapter, to the third year of Cyrus at the beginning of chapter x. The first vision, or dream, is contained in the seventh chapter, and is the only one that is written in the Chaldee language; and perhaps the similarity of it to the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, which the Prophet had related and expounded at chap. ii, might have been one reason why this same language was here adopted; and the benefit designed by it for the impious king, in whose reign it was delivered, another. What was there prefigured by a large statue, composed of various metals, is here pointed at by a very different sort of emblem; each suited to the disposition or character of the persons to whom the communications were made. Four beasts are, in this dream, designed to signify the four great monarchies, or kingdoms, according to the interpretation of an angel; and some circumstances, relating to the fourth beast, are probably intended to shadow forth a series of events, which were to reach to the latest ages of the world. Wintle.

Ver. 1. In the first year of Belshazzar] This was about seventeen years before the history contained in the last chapter: see the dates in the margin. W. Lowth.

3. — four great beasts came up from the sea,] These beasts are indeed monstrous productions: but such emblems were usual among the eastern nations; a winged lion, and such fictitious animals, may still be seen in the ruins of Persepolis, according to Sir John Chardin and other travellers. Bp. Newton.

4. The first was like a lion, &c.] This is the kingdom of the Babylonians: and the king of Babylon is in like manner compared to a lion by Jeremiah, chap. iv. 7; and is said to fly as an eagle, chap. xlviii. 40; and he is also compared to an eagle by Ezekiel, chap. xvii. 3, 12. The lion is esteemed the king of beasts, and the eagle the king of birds; and therefore the kingdom of Babylon, which is described as the first and noblest kingdom, and was the kingdom then in being, is said to partake of the nature of both. "The eagle's wings" denote its swiftness and rapidity; and the conquests of Babylon were very rapid, that empire being advanced to the height within a few years by a single person, by the conduct and arms of Nebuchadnezzar. It is further said, "the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth," that is, it was taken away from the earth, as it is commonly understood, and as it is translated in almost all the ancient versions; or it may be rendered thus, "the wings thereof were plucked wherewith it was lifted up from the earth," as Grotius explains it, and as we read in the margin of our Bibles. Its wings were beginning to be plucked at the delivery of this prophecy: for at this time the Medes and Persians were encroaching upon it; Belshazzar, the king now reigning, was the last of his race; and in the seventeenth year of his reign Babylon was taken, and the kingdom was transferred to the Medes and Persians. Bp. Newton.

Though the dream of Nebuchadnezzar concerning the image, and this of Daniel's beasts, agree in their general sense and interpretation, yet there are circumstances added to the latter, as well as some points more plainly illustrated, than they were in the former. Nebuchadnezzar saw his kingdom flourishing; Daniel saw it when its wings were plucked, and its end approaching. Other particulars will be readily observed by the attentive reader in the subsequent parts of the vision. Wintle.

—— made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it.] The probable sense of this passage is, that, after the Babylonish empire was subverted, the people became more humane and gentle; their minds were humbled with their fortune, and they, who vaunted as if they had been gods, now felt themselves to be but men. They were brought to such a sense as the Psalmist wishes such persons to have, "Put them in fear, O Lord that the nations may know themselves to be but men." Bp. Newton.

5. And behold another beast, &c.] This is the kingdom of the Medes and Persians: and for their cruelty and greediness after blood they are compared to a "bear," which is a most voracious and cruel animal: the resemblance is alluded to in the following words, "Arise, devour much flesh." A bear, saith Aristotle, is an all-devouring animal: and so, saith Grotius, the Medo-Persians were great robbers and spoilers according to Jeremiah, chap. li. 48, 56. Bp. Newton.

—— it raised up itself on one side,] Or, it may be as in the margin, "it raised up one dominion:" that is, it made up one empire out of the joint powers of Media and Persia. W. Lowth.

—— and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it:] These are sometimes understood of the three kingdoms of the Babylonians, Medes, and Persians, reduced into one: but Sir Isaac Newton and Bp. Chandler with greater propriety explain them to signify the kingdoms of Babylon, Lydia, and Egypt, which were conquered by the second beast, but were not properly parts or members of its body. They might be called "ribs," as the conquest of them much strengthened the Persian empire: and they might be said to be "between the teeth of the beast," as they were much harassed and oppressed by the Persians. Bp. Newton.

—— and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh.] This was said, as before intimated, to denote the cruelty of the Medes and Persians. They are also represented as very cruel by Isaiah, chap. xiii. 18. Cambyses, Ochus, and others of their princes, were indeed more like bears than men. Instances of their cruelty abound in almost all historians, who have written of their affairs. Bp. Newton.

6. — lo another, like a leopard,] This is the kingdom of the Macedonians, or Grecians, who under the command of Alexander the Great overcame the Persians, and reigned next after them. The leopard is remarkable for its swiftness, see Hab. i. 8; and for the impetuosity with which it springs upon its prey: and Alexander and the Macedonians were amazingly swift and rapid in their conquests. This rapidity is further intimated by the "four wings on the back" of the beast. The Babylonian empire was represented with two wings, but this with four; for, as St. Jerome saith, nothing was swifter than the victories of Alexander. The "four heads" of the beast denote the four kingdoms, into which the empire of Alexander was divided at his death by his four captains; Cassander reigning over Macedon and Greece, Lysimachus over Thrace and Bithynia, Ptolemy over Egypt, and Seleucus over Syria. Bp. Newton. And if we reflect on the small beginnings of this power, the difficulties

Before CHRIST about 555. it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it.

7 After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns.

8 I considered the horns, and, behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots: and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things. Before CHRIST about 536.

9 ¶ I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool: his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire.

which it surmounted, and the vast strides it made towards universal empire, extending its conquests as far as the Ganges in so short a space as twelve years, 1 Mac. i. 7, we shall not be at a loss to assign a just interpretation to the last clause of this verse, and to conclude that such "dominion was given to it" by God. Wintle.

7. — behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly.] Daniel was curious to know particularly what this beast might mean; see ver. 19; and was answered by the angel in the 23d verse. This fourth kingdom can be no other than the Roman empire, which was "dreadful, and terrible, and strong exceedingly," beyond any of the former kingdoms. It was "diverse from all kingdoms," not only in its republican form of government, but likewise in strength, and power, and greatness, length of duration, and extent of dominion. "It devoured, and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it:" it reduced Macedon into a Roman province about 168 years, the kingdom of Pergamus about 133 years, Syria about 65 years, and Egypt about 30 years, before Christ. And besides the remains of the Macedonian empire, it subdued many other provinces and kingdoms, so that it might by a very usual figure be said to "devour the whole earth, and to tread it down, and break it in pieces;" and became in a manner what the Roman writers delighted to call it, the empire of the whole world. Bp. Newton.

Daniel has not described the shape of this beast, but St. John has supplied the deficiency; representing it in the Apocalypse as compounded of all the rest, or combining their destructive qualities, having "the body of the leopard, the feet of the bear, and the mouth of the lion," and exceeding them in having seven heads, but with the same number of ten horns, which marks its identity with Daniel's fourth beast; Rev. xiii. 1, 2. Dr. Hales.

—— stamped the residue with the feet of it.] This alludes to the fury of wild beasts, which stamp upon that part of their prey that they cannot devour. W. Lowth.

—— and it had ten horns.] Another remarkable property of this fourth beast is, that "it had ten horns:" and according to the angel's interpretation, ver. 24, "the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings," or kingdoms, "that shall arise." "Four kings" a little before, ver. 17, signified four kingdoms: and so here "ten kings" are ten kingdoms, according to the usual phraseology of Scripture. We must look for these kingdoms amid the broken pieces of the Roman empire, represented under the fourth beast. The Roman empire was, by means of the incursions of the northern nations, dismembered into ten kingdoms; and Machiavel hath given us their names; 1. the Ostrogoths in Mœsia; 2. the Visigoths in Pannonia; 3. the Sueves and Alans in Gascoigne and Spain; 4. the Vandals in Africa; 5. the Franks in France; 6. the Burgundians in Burgundy; 7. the Heruli and Turingi in Italy; 8. the Saxons and Angles in Britain; 9. the Huns in Hungary; 10. the Lombards, at first upon the Danube, afterwards in Italy. Bp. Newton.

The names of these ten kingdoms have been enumerated by several writers of the most respectable authority; and the few variations in their accounts may be readily explained from the confusion and uncertainty of the times of which they wrote. It is enough for us, and an illustrious verification of the prophecies of Holy Scripture, that such a partition was noticed long before by Daniel; and that among other particularities mentioned as incident to the fourth beast, this of ten horns springing all together from its head was recorded as one, and that these horns were expressly interpreted to mean ten kings or kingdoms. Bp. Halifax.

8. — behold, there came up among them another little horn.] In all the several respects, which the Prophet notices, the Pope fully answers the character of the "little horn;" so that if exquisite fitness of application may assure us of the true sense of the prophecy, we can have no doubt concerning the person. He is here called "a little horn:" and the power of the popes was originally very small, and their temporal dominions were little, and inconsiderable in comparison with others of the ten horns. Bp. Newton. For the several points of resemblance, see the notes on ver. 20, 21, 24, 25.

—— before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots:] Three of the ten kingdoms, namely, those of the Heruli, the Ostrogoths, and the Lombards, were successively plucked up or eradicated before the little horn, in the way of which they stood: and by the annexation of their dominions to the papacy, the Pope became also a temporal power. Hence he assumed the three keys in his arms, and the triple crown or mitre, as a temporal prince; and "his look was more stout than his fellows," whom he frequently awed by his anathemas and excommunications. Dr. Hales.

—— in this horn were eyes &c.] See below on ver. 20.

9. I beheld till the thrones were cast down, &c.] That is, till all the earthly kingdoms were brought to an end: but the word may be rendered "were pitched" or set down, for the reception of the Deity, and the saints who sat by Him; see Matt. xix. 28, and Rev. iv. 4; and this sense the versions follow. Wintle.

The fourth monarchy being to continue till the consummation of all things, the general judgment is described in this and the following verses, wherein sentence was to pass upon this fourth beast, and an end to be put to his dominion. W. Lowth.

—— the Ancient of days] The eternal Judge of the world; see Rev. xvi. 5; He that was from the beginning, 1 John ii. 14: who is elsewhere described "covering Himself with light as with a garment," Ps. civ. 2; and as a clear and unspotted brightness, 1 John i. 5. W. Lowth.

By this term is undoubtedly meant the Deity, the supreme eternal Spirit, whom the Prophet thus describes, to adapt himself to human apprehensions, and to make the following part of his descriptions more intelligible; but no similitude is pointed out, nor ought we from hence to attempt to represent by any figure the invisible God. Image-worship was not allowed the Jews under a less perfect dispensation, and therefore must be very ill-suited to the spirituality of the Christian service. The purity and sanctity of the Divine nature are next shadowed forth by similar allusions. The throne and wheels of fire at the conclusion of this verse may serve to denote His dread majesty, that pierces and penetrates all things, summons all to His judgment, and executes in an instant His sovereign will and final determinations. See Rev. iv. 2, &c. and Ezek. i. 26. Grotius observes, the ancient thrones and curule chairs had wheels. Wintle.

10. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him:] Lightnings and streams of fire were His harbingers, to give notice of His speedy approach. Compare Ps. l. 3; xcvii. 3. W. Lowth.

—— thousand thousands ministered unto him, &c.] His retinue was an innumerable company of angels. See Deut. xxxiii. 2; Ps. lxviii. 17; Heb. xii. 22; Rev. v. 11. W. Lowth. This is a figurative description of the last judgment, probably taken from the Jewish courts of justice. Wintle.

11. I beheld then because of the voice of the great words &c.] The final overthrow, or total abolition of this beast, on account of the blasphemies or presumptions of the eleventh horn, is here described; and the reference is probably to that awful reckoning, when the beast and the false prophet were to be cast alive into a lake of fire, burning with brimstone; and to this the fire, the judgment, and the entire destruction of the beast naturally lead our attention. See Rev. xix. 20. Wintle.

12. As concerning the rest of the beasts, &c.] As to the three first monarchies, though the succeeding monarchy took away the dominion of that which went before, yet it was not done all at once, but by degrees: and the nations, where those monarchies were seated, still had a being, though they changed their masters. Whereas the destruction of the last monarchy implied the putting of an end to that empire and to all other earthly governments: the kingdom of Christ being then immediately to take place. See ver. 15, 14; chap. ii. 34. W. Lowth.

13. —— behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven,] One in the shape and likeness of a man; but clothed with such ensigns of majesty, as shewed Him to be an extraordinary Person; (see the note upon Ezek. ii. 1; and compare Rev. i. 13; xiv. 14;) indeed no less than the Messiah, as the description of Him that followeth doth declare. The two foregoing verses having explained why the fourth beast was destroyed, this part of the verse shews by whom it was done, represents Christ in His judicial capacity, and describes Him by the title He often gives Himself, "the Son of man," in allusion to this place: particularly He alludes to this text, Matt. xxvi. 64, where He speaks of His coming in "the clouds of heaven," by which expression He acknowledged Himself to be Messias here described; and gave a direct answer to the question proposed to Him, "Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed:" compare Mark xiv. 61, 62; Rev. i. 7: whereupon they condemned Him as guilty of blasphemy. W. Lowth.

—— and they brought him near before him.] To signify that Christ received His kingdom from His Father: see Matt. xi. 27. xxviii. 18; John iii. 35; 1 Cor. xv. 27; Eph. i. 21; Phil. ii. 9. 10; Rev. v. 7. Compare Jer. xxx. 21. W. Lowth. To take it. His hands investiture of His new dignity, this exercise of His universal and everlasting kingdom. Bp. Chandler.

14. And there was given him dominion, &c.] All these kingdoms shall in their turns be destroyed, but the kingdom of the Messiah shall stand for ever: compare Luke i. 33. Bp. Newton.

16. I came near unto one of them that stood by,] To one of the angels, who always attended upon the throne of God and Christ ver. 9, 10. Several angels are represented as being present at Daniel's visions: see chap. viii. 13, 16; x. 5, 6, 16; xii. 5, 6. W. Lowth.

19. Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, &c.] See the note on ver. 7.

20. And of the ten horns &c.] See the last note on ver. 7.

—— and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell;] See the notes on ver. 8.

—— even of that horn that had eyes,] Of the little horn, which represents the papal power, it was before said, "in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man," ver. 8: namely, to denote his cunning and foresight, his looking out and watching all opportunities to promote his own interest. And the policy of the Roman hierarchy hath almost passed into a proverb. Bp. Newton.

—— and a mouth that spake very great things,] Such had the Pope, especially in former ages, boasting of his supremacy, thundering out his bulls and anathemas, excommunicating princes, and absolving subjects from their allegiance. Bp. Newton.

—— whose look was more stout than his fellows.] The Pope has assumed an unlimited superiority, not only over his fellow bishops, but even over crowned heads. Bp. Newton.

21. —— the same horn made war with the saints, &c.] And below, he "shall wear out the saints of the Most High," ver. 25: that is, by wars, and massacres, and inquisitions, persecuting and destroying the faithful servants of Jesus and the true worshippers of God, who protest against his innovations, and refuse to comply with the idolatry practised in the Church of Rome. Bp. Newton.

22 Until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.

23 Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces.

24 And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings.

25 And he shall speak great words against the most High, and shall wear out the saints of the most High, and think to change times and laws: and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.

26 But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end.

27 And the [a] kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all [‖] dominions shall serve and obey him.

22. Until the Ancient of days came, &c.] Until the final judgment, when the saints shall sit as assessors with God, shall be seated on thrones, and reign as kings and priests with God and Christ, and possess the kingdom for ever, Rev. xx. 4, 6. Wintle.

24. — and another shall rise after them;] Rather, "behind them:" the meaning appears to be, that the ten horns were not aware of the growing up of "the little horn," till it overtopped them. Jos. Mede.

—— he shall be diverse from the first,] The papal power being an ecclesiastical and spiritual, as well as a civil and temporal authority. Bp. Newton.

—— he shall subdue three kings.] See note on ver. 8, "before whom there were three &c."

25. And he shall speak great words against the most High,] See ver. 8, 20; chap. xi. 36. St. John plainly alludes to this text, Rev. xiii. 5, 6, where the beast is said to "open his mouth in blasphemy against God." This he did by advancing his own authority above that of God, and in derogation to His laws; compare 2 Thess. ii. 4; as also by setting up the worship of images, and other idolatrous practices, which the Prophet Isaiah calls reproaching and blaspheming God, Is. lxv. 7. W. Loveth.

Or, as Symmachus interprets it, "he shall speak great words as the Most High:" setting up himself above all laws divine and human, arrogating to himself godlike attributes and titles of holiness and infallibility; exacting obedience to his ordinances and decrees in preference to, and open violation of, reason and Scripture; insulting men, and blaspheming God. Bp. Newton.

—— and shall wear out the saints of the most High,] See above, note on ver. 21.

—— and think to change times and laws:] Appointing fasts and feasts, canonizing saints, granting pardons and indulgences for sins, instituting new modes of worship, imposing new articles of faith, enjoining new rules of practice, and reversing at pleasure the laws both of God and men. Bp. Newton.

—— and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.] "They," that is, either the saints shall be subject to his power, or his influence shall prevail over the times, or solemnities, and laws. Possibly both might be meant to be included in the usurpation. Wintle.

The period here mentioned must be computed according to the nature and genius of the prophetick language. According to this "time and times and the dividing of time," or half a time, are three years and a half: and the ancient Jewish year consisting of twelve months, and each month of thirty days, "a time and times and half a time," or three years and a half, are reckoned in the Revelation as equivalent to "forty and two months," or "a thousand two hundred and threescore days," chap. xi. 2, 3; xii. 6, 14: and a day in the style of the Prophets is a year, Ezek. iv. 6: and it is confessed, that the seventy weeks in the ninth chapter of Daniel are weeks of years; and consequently 1260 days are 1260 years. So long the little horn, or the papal power, will continue: but from what point of time the commencement of these 1260 years is to be dated, is not so easy to determine. And, as Irenæus saith in a like case, it is surer and safer to wait for the completion of the prophecy, than to conjecture and divine about it. When the end shall come, then shall we know better whence to date the beginning. Bp. Newton.

26. But the judgment shall sit, &c.] This being the last of the four earthly kingdoms or monarchies, when that is destroyed, there will be an end of the present state of things, when all human "rule, authority, and power," shall cease, 1 Cor. xv. 24; and "the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ," Rev. xi. 15. W. Loveth.

After what manner these great changes will be effected, we cannot pretend to say, since God hath not been pleased to reveal it. We see the remains of the "ten horns," which arose out of the Roman empire. We see the "little horn" still subsisting, though not in its full strength and vigour, but as we hope upon the decline, and tending towards a dissolution. And having seen so many of these particulars accomplished, we can have no reason to doubt that the rest also will be fulfilled in due season, though we cannot frame any conception, how Christ will be manifested in glory, how the little horn with the body of the fourth beast will be given to the burning flame, or how the saints will take the kingdom, and possess it for ever and ever. It is the nature of such prophecies not to be perfectly understood till they are fulfilled. The best comment upon them will be their completion. Bp. Newton.

Chap. VIII. Hitherto the prophecies of Daniel, that is, from the fourth verse of the second chapter to this chapter, are written in Chaldee. As they greatly concerned the Chaldeans, so they were published in that language. But the remaining prophecies are written in Hebrew, because they treat altogether of affairs subsequent to the times of the Chaldeans, and relate not at all to them, but principally to the Church and people of God. Bp. Newton.

probably comprehended the whole country on each side of the river Ulai, or Eulæus, the one part being called Elymais, the other Susiana. Shushan, the metropolis, according to Pliny, was placed on this river, or rather surrounded by it, and seems to have been the capital of both parts. Wintle. See the note on Nehem. i. 1.

The Ulai is the same as the Choaspes, according to Rennell's Geography of Herodotus. Dr. Hales.

3. — there stood before the river a ram] The second empire in the former vision is the first in this: and what was there compared to a bear is here prefigured by a ram. This "ram having two horns," according to the explication of the angel Gabriel, was the empire of the Medes and Persians, ver. 20; Cyrus, the founder of this empire, was son of Cambyses, king of Persia, and by his mother Mandane was grandson of Astyages king of Media: and afterwards marrying the daughter and only child of his uncle Cyaxares king of Media, he succeeded to both crowns, and united the kingdoms of Media and Persia. The propriety of the emblem appears from hence, that it was usual for the king of Persia to wear, instead of a diadem, a ram's head made of gold, and adorned with precious stones. Bp. Newton. Ram's heads with horns, one higher and the other lower, are still to be seen on the pillars of Persepolis. Sir J. Chardin.

— the two horns were high; &c.] This is said, because the empire of the Medes and Persians was a coalition of two very formidable powers: "but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last." The kingdom of Media was the more ancient of the two, and more famous in history: Persia was of little note or account till the time of Cyrus, but under Cyrus the Persians gained and maintained the ascendant. Bp. Newton.

4. I saw the ram pushing westward, and northward, and southward;] Daniel saw "the ram standing," or established in his strength, after the succession of the Persian power under Cyrus; and then butting "westward, and northward, and southward," or subduing Lydia, Babylonia, and Egypt, with their dependencies, represented in the former vision by three ribs in the bear's mouth. Dr. Hales.

— he did according to his will, and became great.] None of the neighbouring kingdoms being able to withstand its power, the Persian empire was increased and enlarged to such a degree, that it extended "from India even unto Ethiopia, over an hundred and seven and twenty provinces," Esth. i. 1: so that seven provinces were added to the hundred and twenty which it contained in the time of Cyrus, Dan. vi. 1. Bp. Newton.

5. — behold, an he goat] The interpretation of which is given in ver. 21. "A goat" is very properly made the type of the Grecian or Macedonian empire. The first king of the Macedonians, about 200 years before Daniel, instigated by an oracle, as it is said, made a goat his ensign, and called his capital city Ægeæ, or the goat's town. Jos. Mede. It is also remarkable, that Alexander's son by Roxana was named the son of the goat; and some of his successors are represented on their coins with goat's horns. Bp. Newton.

— came from the west &c.] He came "from the west;" for Europe lies westward of Asia: he came "on the face of the whole earth," carrying every thing before him in all the three parts of the world then known: "and he touched not the ground;" alluding to the swiftness of his marches, and the rapidity of his conquests. For the same reason the same empire in the former vision was likened to a "leopard," which is a very nimble animal; and, to denote the greater quickness and impetuosity, to "a leopard with four wings." Bp. Newton.

— and the goat had a notable horn between his eyes.] "The rough goat" (see the 21st verse) "is the king of Grecia," that is, the kingdom; "and the great horn between his eyes is the first king:" not the first monarch, but the first kingdom, that which lasted during the reign of Alexander the Great, and his brother Aridæus, and two young sons, Alexander and Hercules. Sir Isaac Newton.

6, 7. And he came to the ram &c.] In these two verses we have an account of the Grecians overthrowing the Persian empire. The ram had before "pushed westward;" and the Persians, in the reign of Darius Hystaspes and Xerxes, had poured down with great armies into Greece; but now the Grecians in return carried their arms into Asia, and the he goat invaded the ram that had invaded him. Bp. Newton.

— standing before the river, &c.] The first and principal engagement in which Alexander overthrew the Persians was at the river Granicus in Phrygia. The succeeding part of this description is a striking representation of his conquering the Persian monarch in repeated battles, subduing his whole kingdom, taking all his forts and strong cities, making the king himself, with his family, principal officers, &c. prisoners, and thus utterly overturning the Persian empire. Bp. Newton.

8. Therefore the he goat waxed very great: and when he was strong, &c.] This verse is interpreted by the angel in ver. 22. Nothing is fixed and stable in human affairs; and the empire of the goat, though exceeding great, was perhaps for that very reason the sooner broken in pieces. It was in its full strength, when Alexander died of a fever at Babylon. He was succeeded in the throne by his natural brother Philip Aridæus, and by his own two sons Alexander Ægus and Hercules; but in the space of about fifteen years they were all murdered, and then the first horn or kingdom was entirely broken. The royal family being thus extinct, the governours of provinces, who had usurped the power, assumed the title of kings, and, by the defeat and death of Antigonus in the battle of Ipsus, they were reduced to four, Cassander, Lysimachus, Ptolemy, and Seleucus, who parted Alexander's dominions among them, and divided and settled them into four kingdoms. These four kingdoms are the four notable horns, which came up in the room of the first great horn; and are the same as the four heads of the leopard in the former vision. "Four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power;" they were to be kingdoms of Greeks, not of Alexander's own family, but only of his nation; and neither were they to be equal to him in power and dominion: an empire united is certainly more powerful than the same empire divided, and the whole is greater than any of the parts. They were likewise to extend "toward the four winds of heaven:" and in the partition of the empire Cassander held Macedon, and Greece, and the western parts; Lysimachus had Thrace, Bithynia, and the northern regions; Ptolemy possessed Egypt, and the southern countries; and Seleucus obtained Syria, and the eastward provinces. Thus were they divided "toward the four winds of heaven." Bp. Newton.

9. And out of one of them came forth a little horn, &c.] This "little horn" has been supposed to mean Antiochus Epiphanes, king of Syria, who was a great enemy and cruel persecutor of the Jews. And at first sight he does indeed in some features very much resemble the "little horn;" but on a nearer view it appears, that in other parts there is no similitude or correspondence between them. Sir Isaac Newton, with that sagacity which was peculiar to him, and with which he penetrated into Scripture as well as into nature, perceived plainly that the "little horn" could not be drawn for Antiochus Epiphanes, but must be designed for some other subject. Bp. Newton. The description of it throughout is exactly applicable in all its parts to the Roman temporal power; and this application is sanctioned also by the prevailing opinion of the generality of commentators. Dr. Hales. The Romans, who were prefigured by a great "beast" in the former vision, are here represented by the "horn" of the goat: for nothing is more usual, than to describe the same person or thing under different images upon different occasions: and besides, in this vision the Roman empire is not designed at large, but only the Roman empire as the horn of the goat. When the Romans first got footing in Greece, then they became a horn of the goat. Out of this horn they came, and at first were a "little horn," but in process of time overtopped the other horns. From Greece they extended their arms, and overran the other parts of the goat's dominions: and their actions within the dominions of the goat, and not their affairs in the western empire, are the principal subject of this prophecy. But their actions, which are most largely and particularly specified, are their great persecution and oppression of the people of God; which renders it probable, that the appellation of the "little horn" might be given them for the same reason, that the great persecutor and oppressor of the saints in the western empire is also called the "little horn." It is the same kind of power, and therefore might be signified by the same name. Bp. Newton.

—— which waxed exceeding great, toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land.] This horn therefore was to rise up in the northwest parts of those nations, which composed the body of the goat; and from thence was to extend his dominion towards Egypt, Syria, and Judea. Sir Isaac Newton.

The actions of the little horn here described accord well with the Romans. He "waxed exceeding great;" and so did the Roman empire, even within the territory of the goat. "Toward the south;" the Romans made Egypt a province of their empire, and kept possession of it for several centuries. "Toward the east;" the Romans grew very powerful in this direction, conquering and making a province of Syria, which was the eastern kingdom of the goat. "And toward the pleasant land;" that is, Judea: see Ps. cvi. 24; Jer. iii. 19; Dan. xi. 16, 41. The Romans effectually conquered and subdued the Jews, first made a province of their country, and then destroyed their city and temple, and dispersed the people, so that after so fatal a fall they have never been able to rise again. Bp. Newton.

10. And it waxed great, even to the host of heaven; &c.] Or, "against the host of heaven." This part of the prophecy relates mostly to the persecution and oppression of the people of God. "The host of heaven" are the people and great men of the Jews. Sir Isaac Newton. Either the Jewish state in general, "the mighty and the holy people," ver. 24; or the priests and Levites in particular, who are called "stars," as being eminent for their station, and illustrious for their knowledge; and "the host of heaven," as they watched and served in the temple, and their service is denominated "a warfare," Numb. viii. 24, 25. Our Saviour makes use of the like expressions in speaking of the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, Matt. xxiv. 29. Bp. Newton.

In this elevated language is the Jewish hierarchy shadowed out, after the manner of the Eastern writers. The Jewish polity, both civil and religious, was the work of Heaven. The government, laws, and worship, of the holy people, were figured by the sun, moon, and stars. See Matt. xxiv. 29; Mark xiii. 24. Thus the fall of Babylon is foretold in Is. xiii. 10; and the destruction of Egypt in Ezek. xxxii. 7, 8; and that of Idumæa in Is. xxxiv. 4, 5. Dr. Zouch.

11. Yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host,] Or, "against the prince of the host." Bp. Newton. The Messiah, the Prince of the Jews, whom he put to death. Sir Isaac Newton. See the note on ver. 25.

—— and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down.] The Romans took away the daily sacrifice of the Jews, and utterly destroyed their temple. Bp. Newton.

In the 7th verse the he goat is said to "cast down the ram to the ground, and to stamp upon him:" by which is implied the total destruction of the ram. And here the expressions of "casting down some of the host and of the stars to the ground, and stamping upon them;" of "taking away the daily sacrifice, and casting down the place of the sanctuary;" seem to prefigure the most grievous miseries, the utter demolition and extirpation of the Jewish state, the dreadful devastation made by the Romans under Titus Vespasian, when "the stars fell from heaven, and the powers of the heavens were shaken." Dr. Zouch.

12. And an host was given &c.] Or, as we read in the margin, "the host was given over for the transgression against the daily sacrifice, and he cast down the truth to the ground, and he practised, and prospered." Or, as the same thing is expressed by the angel, "He shall destroy wonderfully, &c." see ver. 24, 25. The Romans carried their conquest and their revenge so far, as to put an end to the government of the Jews, and entirely to take away their place and nation. Bp. Newton.

13. —— unto that certain saint which spake,] "Unto that excellent one that was speaking." Wintle. This "excellent Saint," who uttered the response, was the Oracle Himself, who before appeared to Isaiah in glory, sitting on His throne between the Seraphim, Is. vi. 1; and now appeared to Daniel, "as a man, standing before him, and bidding the other angel, whom He called Gabriel, to explain the vision to the Prophet. Dr. Hales.

margin "the Numberer of secrets," or "the wonderful Numberer;" and must mean a Person of extraordinary rank, as being able to tell out those secrets, which were hid from the angels; and is therefore justly supposed to be the Son of God, called "Wonderful, Counseller," Is. ix. 6, as being acquainted with all God's purposes and designs; compare John i. 18. W. Lowth.

—— How long shall be the vision &c.] Moses had predicted, that the desolation to follow the Roman captivity would be of very long continuance, Deut. xxviii. 59. And Isaiah had inquired from the Oracle, in vision, How long it should continue? Is. vi. 11; to which no definite answer was then given. That was reserved for the highly favoured Daniel, in this remarkable episode, introduced into the midst of the second vision, and intimately connected therewith; immediately following the account of the destruction of the temple by the Romans. Dr. Hales.

—— the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, &c.] In the original there is no such word as "concerning:" and Mr. Lowth rightly observes, that the words may be rendered more agreeably to the Hebrew thus, "For how long a time shall the vision last, the daily sacrifice be taken away, and the transgression of desolation continue?" &c. Thus it is rendered in several translations. The answer is, "Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." In the original it is "unto two thousand and three hundred evenings and mornings," an evening and morning being in Hebrew the notation of time for a day; and in allusion to this expression it is said afterwards, "The vision of the evening and the morning is true."

The days without doubt are to be taken agreeably to the style of Daniel in other places, not for natural, but prophetick days; that is, years; and as the question was asked, not only how long the daily sacrifice should be taken away, and the transgression of desolation continue, but also how long the vision shall last; so the answer is to be understood; and these two thousand and three hundred days denote the whole time from the beginning of the vision to the cleansing of the sanctuary. The sanctuary is not yet cleansed, and consequently these years are not yet expired. When these years shall be expired, then their end will clearly shew from whence the beginning is to be dated, whether from the vision of the ram, or of the he goat, or of the little horn. It is difficult to fix the precise time, when the prophetick dates begin, and when they end, till the prophecies are fulfilled, and the event declares the certainty of them. Bp. Newton.

16. And I heard a man's voice — which called, and said, Gabriel, make this man to understand the vision.] And I heard the voice of Him, who was the Word of His Father, speaking in the tone of a man, betwixt the banks of Ulai; which called and said, Gabriel, it is the pleasure of Him, who is the God of spirits, that thou make this man to understand the vision. Bp. Hall.

The Person who utters this voice seems to be the same who is called "the wonderful Numberer," ver. 13; because He speaks as one that had authority over the angel Gabriel. W. Lowth.

Daniel was so overpowered by the Divine presence, that he fell on his face in a deep sleep or trance towards the earth, till Gabriel touched him, and restored him to his senses, and set him upright, and then explained to him more particularly the former historical part of the vision: concluding with a reference to the latter chronological part, or "vision of the evening-mornings," that it was "true," or would be verified by the accomplishment; but that the accomplishment was remote, or "for many days," and that "the vision was shut up," or sealed, and its further disclosure hidden for the present. Dr. Hales.

17. — O son of man:] This title is given to none of the Prophets but Ezekiel and Daniel. Probably it is here given to the Prophet, either to put him in mind that he was but flesh and blood, that he might not be exalted for having these heavenly visions imparted to him; or else it may be interpreted for a mark or title of honour, implying something more than an ordinary man, even such an one as was highly favoured and beloved of God. W. Lowth. See the note on Ezek. ii. 1.

—— for at the time of the end shall be the vision.] Or, "to the time of the end;" that is, there is a precise time appointed for the accomplishment of the vision, when it shall certainly be fulfilled. See ver. 19; and compare chap. ix. 27; xi. 35, 36; Hab. ii. 3. W. Lowth.

19. — in the last end of the indignation:] Or, "to the last end of the indignation." I will explain to thee the whole series of God's judgments upon His people to the end and conclusion of them. See chap. xii. 8. W. Lowth.

23. And in the latter time of their kingdom, &c.] That is, of Alexander's successors. Dr. Hales. The Romans might well be said to stand up "in the latter time of their kingdom," for they saw the end, not only of one kingdom, but of all the four, which were successively subdued, or otherwise gotten possession of, by the Romans. Bp. Newton.

—— when the transgressors are come to the full,] Alluding to the various invasions of the Jewish polity and religion which took place under the Romans; when, among other profanations, under the Roman consul Paulus Æmilius, the Jewish religion was put down, and the heathen worship was set up in the cities of Judea, and in Jerusalem; and the temple itself was consecrated to Jupiter Olympius, and his image was erected upon the very altar. Then indeed "the transgressors were come to the full;" and then, as we see, the Romans "stood up a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences." Bp. Newton.

—— a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences,] "A king" in the prophetick style is the same as "a kingdom;" and a kingdom is any state or government. Bp. Newton.

What follows is a description of the Roman power and policy, in subduing the world by force and fraud. That peculiar characteristick of the Romans, "the fierce countenance," first noticed by Moses, Deut. xxviii. 50, is here repeated, so as to leave no doubt of its application. Dr. Hales. The classical reader will doubtless recollect numberless instances of that peculiar trait in the person of a Roman citizen, which the Prophets Moses and Daniel have conveyed by the term of "a fierce countenance." Dr. Zouch.

The latter phrase is translated in the Syriack, "skilful in ruling;" and in the Arabick, "skilful of disputations." It may mean, that this would be a politick and artful, as well as a formidable, power. Bp. Newton.

The policy, with which the Romans conducted their designs, is thought to be meant in this passage, in allusion to their adroitness and penetration in discovering the designs of their enemies, their knowledge of the parties and interests that prevailed in the courts and councils of different princes; in short, their consummate skill in the intricacies of political intrigue. The contrivances of artful and subtle statesmen may very justly be called "dark sentences." In the art of unravelling their covert and secret machinations, consisted that singular address, which distinguished the character of the Roman people. Their arms were victorious: but their victories were ensured only by the artifice and prudence with which they conducted themselves on every occasion. Dr. Zouch.

24. And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power:] The strength of the other kingdoms consisted in themselves, and had its foundation in some part of the goat; but the Roman empire, as a horn or kingdom of the goat, was not mighty by its own power, was not strong by virtue of the goat; but drew its nourishment and strength from Rome and Italy. There grew the trunk and body of the tree, though the branches extended over Greece, Asia, Syria, and Egypt. Bp. Newton. Or, it may mean, that the singular progress of the Roman greatness was to be attributed, not so much to their own strength, as to the assistance of their allies, and not seldom to the feuds and divisions of their enemies, of which they were always on the watch to take advantage. Dr. Hales. It was the consummate policy of the Romans to use the resources and strength of every conquered nation in still further conquest; and thus to make the world, as it were, the great instrument of its own subjection. Dr. Zouch.

—— and he shall destroy wonderfully, &c.] See the note on ver. 12. The Romans "destroyed wonderfully" both by their arms and their arts: and, even in times of "peace," by their cruel and bloody combats of gladiators and captives. Dr. Hales.

Rome was the seat of perpetual wars. Mithridates, when he saw the Romans eager to watch every opportunity of embroiling themselves in war, said of them, "These conquerors of mankind seem to be really descendants of a wolf; such is their rapacity, such their insatiable avidity." In wars with foreign nations they were not sparing of the blood of their enemies. Their cruelty excites our indignation. The effusion of blood in their civil commotions, the dreadful carnage which followed their odious proscriptions, the savage massacres of their best and most virtuous citizens, can only tend to inspire sentiments of horrour and aversion. And, as to their humanity in the administration of justice, many of their laws may be said, like those of Draco, to have been written in blood. Dr. Zouch.

—— and shall prosper,] What nation was ever so successful as the Romans? Even their temporary disappointments and defeats gave fresh vigour to them. They continually renewed their strength, after the most violent and rude attacks; and, though for a short time deep sunk in calamity and distress, they fainted not, but with redoubled efforts exerted their wonted prowess. They seem to have been thoroughly sensible of their own good fortune, as appears from the inscriptions on their coins, indicating in various phrases their sense of the prosperity of their empire. It may be added, that this good fortune peculiarly attended them in their eastern conquests. Dr. Zouch.

—— and practise,] That is, shall perform great actions. The great and splendid actions of the Romans have commanded the admiration of all ages. To this subject the panegyrist finds himself unequal. So long as the volumes of history are read, the achievements of this wonderful people will be viewed with astonishment and applause. Dr. Zouch.

—— and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people.] And thus fully accomplish the direful imprecation of the Jews, when they urged Pontius Pilate to hasten the death of Jesus Christ: "His blood be on us and on our children." Dr. Zouch. Concerning the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, see the notes on Deut. xxviii; Matt. xxiv.

25. And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand,] The original word, rendered "craft," is always taken in a bad sense, and implies every kind of fraud, injustice, and deception. This strong lineament is exemplified by the insincerity, artifice, and injustice of the Roman patricians in their conduct towards the plebeians: but it peculiarly belongs to the character of the Romans, if we consider those scenes of fraud and injustice, which were exhibited by them towards the conquered nations, when reduced to the form of a province. Dr. Zouch.

—— and he shall magnify himself in his heart,] See 1 Mac. viii. 13. This expression is strictly applicable to the insolent conduct of Rome after a successful and destructive war. The epithets, so liberally bestowed on the city of Rome, upon ancient coins and medals, imply much vanity and presumption. Proud and arrogant titles were conferred upon the Roman emperours. Indeed their poets, their orators, and their historians, seldom omit an opportunity of exalting in the boasted universal empire of the city. The citizens held themselves equal to kings and princes. They confounded their dominion with the extent of the globe of the earth. Cicero speaks of Rome in all the language of panegyrick: and by one of her own historians, Rome is pronounced to be the city destined for the habitation of men and gods. Dr. Zouch.

—— and by peace shall destroy many:] Or rather, "in peace shall destroy many." Even in times of tranquillity and peace, he shall delight in scenes of cruelty and slaughter. As the character of a people may be deduced from their diversions, when we consider the entertainments to which the Romans were principally addicted, we must, I fear, pronounce them a people estranged from the sentiments of humanity, "in peace destroying many." What can fix them in a more unpleasing point of view, than the shews of their gladiators? Even in the most flourishing and polished periods of their state, they left their theatres, to become spectators of cruel and bloody combats. Nor has a single writer among them intimated his disapprobation of such a conduct, except Seneca, the philosopher. Their other diversions, such as the sight of their fellow creatures torn in pieces by wild beasts, did not discover marks of a more mild and merciful temper. Lipsius has observed, that no war brought such slaughter and devastation on the human race, as these diversions; and that one month has cost Europe twenty or thirty thousand lives. Dr. Zouch.

—— he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes;] It was by the malice of the Jews, but by the authority of the Romans, that the Messiah was put to death, and He suffered the punishment of the Roman malefactors and slaves. Bp. Newton. "He shall stand up against," that is, shall become the judge of, "the Prince of princes." The word, rendered "shall stand up against," is probably used here, as in other passages of Scripture, in a forensick sense; and thus expresses, in vivid colours, the judicial proceedings of the Roman judge against Jesus Christ. For that by "the Prince of princes" is here meant Jesus Christ, will admit, I think, of little doubt. This splendid title is properly applied to Him, who is called the "Prince of the kings of the earth," Rev. i. 5; "Lord of lords, and King of kings," Rev. xvii. 14; "The Prince of Peace," Isa. ix. 6; whose "dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away," Dan. vii. 14; "to whom all power was given in heaven and in earth," Matt. xxviii. 18; who, like a triumphant conqueror, "led captivity captive," Eph. iv. 8; who is the "Star" that was to come out of Jacob, and the "Sceptre" that was to arise out of Israel, Numb. xxiv. 17; before whom "all kings shall fall down," and whom "all nations shall serve," Ps. lxxii. 11; the "Prince" or "Captain of our salvation," Heb. ii. 10. Or, "to stand up against the Prince of princes" may be interpreted, to oppose His authority, by persecuting His faithful servants, and depreciating their merit; and thus to wage war against Him and His religion. The page of history is stained with deeds of exquisite cruelty and inhuman barbarity, exercised by the Romans against the first professors of Christianity: and while the supreme magistrate of Rome indulged himself in the various modes of torture, the zeal of the historian was equally exerted in debasing the characters of innocent men, and branding their religion with odious appellations. Dr. Zouch.

—— but he shall be broken without hand.] As "the stone," in Nebuchadnezzar's dream, was "cut out of the mountain without hands," that is, not by human, but by supernatural means, so "the little horn shall be broken without hand;" not die the common death, nor fall by the hand of men, but perish by a stroke from Heaven. And this agrees perfectly with other predictions of the fatal catastrophe of Rome. See chap. ii. 34; vii. 11, 26. All which implies, that the dominion of the Romans shall be finally destroyed with some extraordinary manifestation of the Divine power. Bp. Newton.

To a reader, conversant in the history of Rome, the character of the Romans will appear to be most accurately defined in this justly-celebrated prophecy; as being, 1. A people of fierce countenance, of great personal courage: 2. Noted also for their policy and wisdom: 3. Rising to dominion and power, not so much by their own strength, as by the assistance of their confederates, and not seldom by the feuds and divisions of their enemies: 4. Engaged in almost perpetual wars, and making dreadful havock and slaughter on the earth: 5. Generally successful in their designs: 6. Performing great and illustrious actions: and, 7. Appointed by Providence as an instrument for the punishment of the Jews, the holy people of God. 8. Corruption soon prevailed among the Romans; fraud and extortion prospered in their provinces. 9. This people assumed high and lofty titles, treating their conquered enemies with great insolence and pride, and considering themselves as sovereigns of the universe. 10. In times of peace feasting their eyes with cruel and bloody spectacles. 11. And to complete the whole, we see a Roman magistrate judging the Messiah, and passing the sentence of death upon "the Prince of princes." It must be allowed that the annals of Rome are adorned with noble examples of genuine and disinterested virtue. Yet whatever encomium is due to the great and splendid qualities of several illustrious individuals, displayed both in publick and in private life, perhaps the national character of the Romans cannot be more clearly delineated than in the portrait, which is here presented to us. Dr. Zouch.

26. — wherefore shut thou up the vision;] The same thing is expressed by "shutting up the words," and "sealing the book," chap. xii. 4. The expression in both places denotes the concealing of the sense of it from common understandings; or the deferring of the accomplishment of the events therein foretold. So we find "shutting" and "opening," "sealing" and "unfolding," are opposed in the prophetical language, and import the same as concealing and revealing; delaying the accomplishment of a prophecy, and bringing it into effect. See Isa. xxix. 11; Rev. v. 1—5; xxii. 10. The words instruct us, that prophecies are never fully understood till they are accomplished; and the nearer the time approaches of their accomplishment, the more light shall diligent searchers have for explaining them. See chap. xii. 4. W. Lowth.

27. And I Daniel fainted, and was sick certain days;] So much was he affected with the misfortunes and afflictions, which were to befall the Church and people of God. This concern of Daniel, and affection for his religion and country, shew him in a very amiable light, and give an additional lustre and glory to his character. Bp. Newton.

Chap. IX. This chapter contains a very affecting and fervent prayer of Daniel, on a near view of the expiration of the seventy years allotted for Judah's captivity; the success of his prayer is pointed out at the conclusion of it, and the deliverance of his brethren is communicated to the Prophet in a very extraordinary revelation by the angel Gabriel; but the misconduct and ingratitude of the Jews would occasion the utter destruction of their restored city, after a period, and by reason of an event, which the prophecy plainly indicates. Wintle.

— to seek by prayer and supplications,] The promises of God are generally conditional: and the promise of restoring the Jews after seventy years' captivity, had this condition particularly expressed, that they should "call upon Him and pray unto Him," and then He would "hearken unto them;" Jer. xxix. 12. W. Lowth.

4. And I prayed unto the Lord my God, and made my confession,] Both acknowledging His justice and holiness, and my own and my people's iniquity. The better men are, the greater is the sense of their guilt, and the deeper is their humiliation: see Job xlii. 6; 1 Tim. i. 15. W. Lowth.

Daniel here sets himself to confess his sins, and those of his countrymen, and to entreat for mercy on Jerusalem, with a fervour and affection never to be exceeded. Our devotions, according to this model, should consist of confession of sins; deprecation of the punishments and judgments acknowledged to be justly due to them; supplication for pardon, deliverance, and grace; and intercession for the Church, and all included in her, our relations, friends, countrymen, and fellow Christians, and more especially for all the sons and daughters of affliction: the whole to be concluded with thanksgiving; concerning which we may observe, that no situation in this world can exclude the necessity, and take away the ground of it, since we find Daniel "giving thanks," when the city and temple of God were in ashes, and himself a captive in Babylon. Even then he not only "prayed," but also "gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime:" chap. vi. 10. Bp. Horne.

12. — our judges that judged us,] Judges here signify any princes or rulers. Compare Job xii. 17; Ps. ii. 10; cxlviii. 11; Prov. viii. 16. W. Lowth.

15. And now, O Lord our God, that hast brought thy people forth out of the land of Egypt &c.] A form of supplication used in several places of Scripture, whereby devout persons entreat God to continue His favours, by recounting His former mercies towards them: see Exod. xxxii. 11, 13; Neh. ix. 10; Jer. xxxii. 20. W. Lowth.

16. — according to all thy righteousness, &c.] When we have in our Litany expressed from what things we desire to be delivered, we earnestly entreat our good and gracious Lord to shew this mercy to us, "by the mystery of His holy incarnation," and so on: that is, by the means and for the sake of all that He hath done and suffered for us. The same manner of expression is used, not only in common speech on other occasions, and in the liturgies of the ancient church on this, but in the Scripture itself; where St. Paul beseeches Christians "by the mercies of God," Rom. xii. 1; "by the meekness and gentleness of Christ," 2 Cor. x. 1; "by His coming and their gathering together unto Him," 2 Thess. ii. 1: and Daniel intercedes with God thus, "According to all Thy righteousness, let Thine anger and Thy fury be turned away: defer not for Thine own sake, O my God." *Abp. 17. — for the Lord's sake.] For the sake of the Messiah, known by the title of the "Lord" among the Jews, see Ps. cx. 1; and called "Messiah the Prince," ver. 25 of this chapter. All God's promises are fulfilled in and for the sake of Christ; 2 Cor. i. 20. W. Lowth.

This expression, "for the Lord's sake," seems to point out a personal distinction in the Deity, and to refer to the promised Redeemer, who says of Himself, "I am in the Father, and the Father in Me," John xiv. 11; that Lord, for whose sake alone the petition of the Prophet could be heard and accepted. Many similar passages occur in the Old Testament, shewing a plurality of Divine Persons so clearly, that no one, who has not "the veil upon his heart," can well mistake their meaning. See particularly Zech. ii. 10, 11; see also Ps. cx. 1. Waldo.

19. — defer not, for thine own sake, O my God:] The seventy years of our captivity are nearly expired: defer not then, I beseech Thee, the accomplishment of the promise, which Thou hast made, to restore us to our own country, and the free exercise of our religion. So remarkable a turn of providence will greatly redound to the honour of Thy name. See Ps. lxxix. 9, 10; cii. 15, 16. W. Lowth.

To the same effect with this supplication of Daniel are those petitions in our Litany, where we pray God to "deliver us for His name's sake," and presently after, "for His honour." In both which petitions we implore the aid and protection of Almighty God, not for any merit of our own, but from a deep sense of His boundless mercy and goodness; not merely that we may be delivered, but that His honour and glory may be displayed; that men may know, that "He, whose name alone is Jehovah, is the Most High over all the earth," Ps. lxxxiii. 18. Waldo.

21. — the man Gabriel,] The angel Gabriel, appearing in the shape of a man. W. Lowth.

—— about the time of the evening oblation.] There were three hours of prayer; see chap. vi. 10; but the two most solemn seasons of it were at the "time of the morning and evening oblation," that solemn service, which was offered daily in the temple in the name of the whole nation: see chap. viii. 11. This service was performed at the third and ninth hours of the day, answering to our nine in the morning and three in the afternoon. Devout persons, that could not attend the temple service, set apart those hours for their private devotions: see 1 Kings xviii. 36. W. Lowth.

23. At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth,] God's command to me, to instruct thee further in what should hereafter befall the city and temple of Jerusalem, in behalf of which thou didst pour forth thy supplications. Here was a remarkable completion of that promise in Isa. lxv. 24, "While they are yet speaking, I will hear." W. Lowth.

—— therefore understand the matter, &c.] Apply thy mind carefully to what is said, for this prophecy contains in it truths of the greatest importance. Our Saviour plainly refers to these words, which are repeated ver. 25, when, explaining the latter part of this prophecy of the final destruction of Jerusalem, He adds, "Whoso readeth, let him understand," Matth. xxiv. 15. W. Lowth.

This prophecy, like all the rest of Daniel's, consists of two parts, an introductory prophecy, and an explanation thereof. Sir Isaac Newton.

24. Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people &c.] By "seventy weeks" we are to understand seventy weeks of years, or seventy times seven years; that is, 490 years; each day being accounted for a year, according to the prophetical way of reckoning: see Numb. xiv. 34; Ezek. iv. 6. Daniel, by examining the prophecy of Jeremiah, had discovered, that the seventy years of the captivity were nearly expired: and here the angel reveals to him another line of time, importing that Jerusalem, after its restoration, should continue for a space consisting of seventy times seven years, which being expired, it should be finally destroyed. W. Lowth.

Here, by putting a week for seven years, are reckoned 490 years from the time that the dispersed Jews should be reincorporated into a people and a holy city, until the death and resurrection of Christ; whereby 'transgression should be finished and sin ended, iniquity be expiated, and everlasting righteousness brought in, and this vision be accomplished, and the Prophet' (as in the Hebrew) 'consummated,' that Prophet whom the Jews expected: and whereby 'the Most Holy should be anointed,' He who is therefore in the next verse called "the Anointed;" that is, the Messiah, or the Christ. For by joining the accomplishment of the vision with the expiation of sins, the 490 years are ended with the death of Christ. Now the dispersed Jews became a people and city, when they first returned into a polity or body politick: and this was in the seventh year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, when Ezra returned with a body of Jews from captivity, and revived the Jewish worship; and by the king's commission created magistrates in all the land to judge and govern the people according to the laws of God and of the king, Ezra vii. 26. From this year to the death of Christ was just 490 years. Sir Isaac Newton. See the note on ver. 26. Some chronologers date the seventy weeks from the twentieth of Artaxerxes: but the date here assigned appears preferable.

—— upon thy people and upon thy holy city,] Daniel, in his prayer to God, speaking of the Jews and Jerusalem, had used these expressions, "Thy people," and "Thy holy city," ver. 18, 19, as if their title to God's favour was indefeasible. To correct this mistake, the angel, directing his discourse to Daniel, returns him his own expressions, as if the people of the city were rather his than God's. In the same phrase God speaks to Moses, after the sin of the Israelites in making the golden calf, Exod.

xxxii. 7. At the 26th verse of this prophecy the angel tells Daniel how they ceased to be God's people. W. Lowth.

At the expiration of this time, which God had punctually "determined," or allotted for the people of the Jews, they were to be no longer His peculiar people; nor the once holy city Jerusalem, nor the Mosaical worship, any longer to be owned as His peculiar city or worship: and then "the most Holy should be anointed," the Messiah, or Christ, be manifested, "to finish the transgression," restrain impiety by the Gospel; "and to make an end of sins," by taking away the guilt thereof through His death, instead of the Jewish offerings, which were to cease; and thereby "to make reconciliation" with God the Father; "and to bring in everlasting righteousness," not like that of the Law, but of the Gospel, to endure for ever; and so "to seal up the vision and prophecy," fully to complete and finish all that by former visions and prophecies had been revealed. Cullyer.

25. — from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem] Daniel had besought God to "behold their desolations," and the ruins of "the city which was called by His name," ver. 18. In answer to this his supplication, the angel acquaints him, that the city, both the streets and the wall thereof, should be rebuilt. W. Lowth.

Daniel had this prophecy in the same year that Darius the Mede and Cyrus took Babylon, which was the 538th year before Christ. Some time after this a decree must be found for building Jerusalem, that now lay in the ruins wherein Nebuchadnezzar left it. Cyrus's decree two years after was not such an one, for that appears to be only a liberty to return and rebuild the temple, Ezra i. 1, 2. The next decree we read of was in the second year of Darius, which was no more than a reinforcement of Cyrus's former decree, Ezra vi. 5. A few houses were then hastily constructed, to accommodate the builders and the worshippers. But the people were like a rope of sand, without the bands of laws and civil sanctions to knit them into a political body, before the seventh year of Artaxerxes, Ezra vii. 11: there was no face of a city, the walls were broken down, and the gates lay, as they had been burnt with fire by the Chaldees. Bp. Chandler. See the note on ver. 26.

—— unto the Messiah the Prince] That is, until the awful period, when the business of His life should be finished; until His hour was come, when He was to glorify His Father, or when He was to be cut off by a voluntary suffering for the sins of all mankind, and thereby triumph as a Prince over death, and over all His and our enemies. All the circumstances of His life are omitted, or rather comprehended in this final event, when all things that were written of Him were accomplished. Windle.

—— shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: the street shall be built again,] The whole put together make sixty-nine weeks of years, or 483 years. The seven weeks, or forty-nine years, here mentioned, must in all probability be assigned to the building of "the street" and the "wall." W. Lowth.

—— even in troublous times.] The Jews were sorely assaulted by their adversaries, who did all they could to hinder them from rebuilding the city, and fortifying it with a new wall. See Nehem. iv. 7, &c; vi. 15. "The street" probably is put for "the streets" of the city: the singular for the plural, which is very common. W. Lowth.

26. And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off,] That is, after the sixty-two added to the seven foregoing weeks, or after the termination of the 483 years. Windle. The common interpretation is, that in the seventieth or last week the Messiah should be put to death. W. Lowth.

The commencement of the whole period of seventy weeks, or 490 years, being reckoned from the seventh year of Artaxerxes, falls upon the 457th year before the Christian era. To 457 years before the birth of Christ, add twenty-six years after the birth of Christ, which twenty-six is the number that 483 years, or sixty-nine weeks exceed 457 years, and we are brought to the beginning of John the Baptist's preaching of the advent of the Messiah: adding seven years, or one week, to the former, we come to the thirty-third year of our Lord, which was the year of Jesus Christ's death. In other words, compute 490 years, the whole seventy weeks, from the seventh of Artaxerxes; by subtracting 457 years (the space of time between that year and the beginning of the Christian era) from 490, there remain thirty-three, the year of our Lord's death. Bp. Chandler, Dean Prideaux. It was in consequence of this prophecy of Daniel concerning the seventy weeks, or 490 years, that the coming of the Messiah towards the end of that period was generally expected among the nations of the East. Bp. Hallifax.

—— shall — be cut off,] The Hebrew verb is by the Jewish rabbies interpreted of a death inflicted by the sentence of a judge, which sense they confirm by the use of it in a parallel place, Lev. xvii. 14, to which we may add 1 Sam. xxviii. 9. Our Saviour refers to this text, among others, Luke xxiv. 26, 46. W. Lowth.

The name Messiah was probably taken from this place of the Prophet Daniel. Dr. Isaac Barrow.

—— but not for himself:] "The Just suffering for the unjust," 1 Pet. iii. 18. W. Lowth.

—— and the people of the prince that shall come &c.] The Romans, under the conduct of Vespasian and his son Titus, who were the generals in the war, which caused the destruction of Jerusalem, and were both of them dignified with the title of prince or Cesar. After the Romans had burnt both city and sanctuary, they entirely destroyed them, so that, as Josephus relates, it could scarce be perceived the place had ever been inhabited. W. Lowth.

The Romans shall soon after come and destroy Jerusalem and the temple, and shall sweep away all before them, like some violent inundation of a flood; and from the beginning to the very end of this war, there shall be grievous desolations to this people. Bp. Hall.

27. And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause &c.] Most of the interpreters suppose the seventy weeks to be completed at the death of Christ. They accordingly suppose John the Baptist's preaching to have occupied three years and a half, before Christ entered on His prophetical office, and translate the following words, "in the half part of the week," understanding it of the latter half. The Hebrew word properly signifies "the half part," and is to be so understood by our translation, chap. xii. 7. W. Lowth.

—— he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease,] Christ, "by His one oblation of Himself once offered," shall put an end to all the sacrifices and oblations made in the Jewish temple. Compare Heb. x. 5, 6, &c. W. Lowth.

—— and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation,] He shall cause the sinful city Jerusalem to be overrun with the abominable legions of the Roman conquerors to the utter desolation thereof. Bp. Hall.

The Romans, after they had set the temple on fire, placed the idolatrous ensigns of their army over against the eastern gate of the temple, and offered sacrifice to them, as Josephus expressly tells us. The word "abominations" is commonly used for idols: see 1 Kings xi. 5, 7; 2 Kings xxiii. 13. And the "abomination of desolation," set upon the altar by Antiochus, 1 Mac. i. 54, is explained by the idol altar, ver. 59. So the "abominations" here spoken of properly signify the ensigns or standards of the Roman legions: each standard having stamped upon it the image of the tutelar god, to which the legion offered sacrifice. W. Lowth.

—— and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate.] All the judgments, which are determined, shall be fully consummated, and poured out upon this miserable city. Bp. Hall.

The words briefly allude to those terrible calamities, which made an entire destruction of that city and people, and were executed upon them in the most dreadful manner, that any nation ever suffered, and with the most evident tokens of the Divine vengeance. W. Lowth. See the notes on Deut. xxviii.

The events, which preceded and followed the coming and sufferings of the Messiah, having been so punctually fulfilled, afford a double confirmation of His being the very same Person prophesied of, and afterwards crucified; nor can they, with any probability of truth, be applied to any other. So that we may well say, This is the clearest and most express prediction in the whole Bible concerning the time of His coming and death. Wogan. Sir Isaac Newton justly represents this illustrious prophecy as the foundation of the Christian religion. Dr. Hales. And Archbishop Secker has recorded the declaration of a writer upon "the weeks," that "if he had hitherto lived an infidel, the conviction wrought in him by a just consideration of the certain sense and perfect completion of this Divine oracle was so full, that he should think it his duty to do and suffer all that was possible for human nature, supported by Divine grace, rather than forfeit his faith." Wintle.

Chap. X. This last vision, in the third year of Cyrus, not long before the Prophet's death, was ushered in with circumstances of peculiar solemnity; with the presence of Christ Himself and His angel, both appearing in human form. First, the spiritual High Priest, clothed in linen, as on the great day of atonement, appeared in glory to Daniel, and spoke to him: and when he heard the voice of His words, he fell into a trance with his face to the ground. The Prophet alone saw this great vision, for his trembling attendants fled to hide themselves, ver. 1—10. Dr. Hales.

Ver. 1. — he understood the thing, and had understanding of the vision.] He had a clear view of the succession of the Persian and Grecian monarchies, and of the series of the kings of Syria and Egypt under the latter of them: although the remaining parts of the vision were obscure, especially with respect to their final event. See chap. xii. 8. W. Lowth.

2. — I Daniel was mourning] The reason seems to have been, the interruptions that were caused in the building of the temple according to the decree of Cyrus two years before; and the disposition of some of his brethren, who chose rather to continue in the land of their captivity, than to go up to Jerusalem to hasten and forward that work. Wintle.

—— three full weeks.] In the Hebrew, as in the margin, "three weeks of days:" probably to distinguish them from the weeks of years prophesied of in the last chapter. W. Lowth.

3. I ate no pleasant bread, &c.] Meaning, that he kept a fast by abstaining from better sorts of food. Wintle.

5. — behold a certain man clothed in linen, &c.] Behold, the Son of God stood before me, in the form of a man clothed in pure white linen, to signify His perfect holiness; and His loins were girt about with a girdle of the finest gold. Bp. Hall.

He appeared in the habit of an high priest; see Exod. xxviii. 4, 39; xxix. 5. The description which St. John gives of Christ as High Priest of the Church, Rev. i. 13, corresponds with this place of Daniel; which proves, that the Person here described can be no other than the "Son of God:" which may be farther confirmed by comparing the Person described here, and chap. xii. 5, 6, with Rev. x. 2, 5, 6: who is there represented as "setting His right foot upon the sea, and His left upon the land," as sovereign Lord of both elements. Compare Matt. xxviii. 18. W. Lowth.

—— Uphaz:] See note on Jer. x. 9.

6. His body also was like the beryl, &c.] His body was of a bright celestial colour; and His face glorious and shining, like the appearance of lightning; His eyes, from which nothing can be hid, were beamy and piercing, like flames of fire; His arms and feet were resplendent, like to polished brass; to signify the pureness and unquestionable perfection of His proceedings; and the voice of His words was mighty and forcible. *Bp. 16 And, behold, one like the similitude of the sons of men touched my lips: then I opened my mouth, and spake, and said unto him that stood before me, O my lord, by the vision my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength.

17 For how can ‖ the servant of this my lord talk with this my lord? for as for me, straightway there remained no strength in me, neither is there breath left in me.

20 Then said he, Knowest thou wherefore I come unto thee? and now will I return to fight with the prince of Persia: and when I am gone forth, lo, the prince of Grecia shall come.

12. — from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand,] Previously to the communication of this and of the last vision, we find the Prophet waiting for the reception of the Divine intelligence with deep humiliation, and a suitable preparation of mind. Wintle.

—— I am come for thy words.] To give an answer to thy requests, by the direction of that Divine Person, upon whom I attend: ver. 5. See chap. viii. 16, and the notes there. W. Lowth.

13. But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me one and twenty days:] The Persians, upon the solicitation of the enemies of the Jews, had put a stop to the building of the temple all the time of Daniel's humiliation. W. Lowth. See below, the note on ver. 20.

—— Michael, one of the chief princes,] The context will lead to a discovery of the Personage, who is here named Michael. This Personage is superiour to Gabriel, for He comes to help him in the greatest difficulties; and Gabriel, the servant of the Most High God, sent forth, as such spirits are used to be, to minister for the elect people of God, declares that this Michael is the only supporter he has. He is also called "one of the chief princes," or "one of the capital princes," or "one of the princes that are at the head of all:" for this is the full, and not more than the full, import of the Hebrew words. Now the Princes, that are "first" or "at the head of all," are clearly no other, than the Three Persons in the Godhead. Michael therefore is one of them: and which of them there can be no doubt. Gabriel, speaking of Him to Daniel, calls Him "Michael your Prince," ver. 21, and "the great Prince which standeth for the children of thy people," chap. xii. 1; that is, not for the nation of the Jews in particular, but for children, the spiritual children, of that holy seed, the elect people of God: a description, which applies particularly to the Son of God, and to no one else. And in perfect consistence with this description of Michael in the book of Daniel, is the action assigned to Him in the Apocalypse, in which we find Him fighting with the old serpent, the deceiver of the world, and victorious in the combat. That combat who was to maintain, in that combat who was to be victorious, but "the Seed of the woman?" From all this it is evident, that Michael is a name for our Lord Himself, in His particular character of the Champion of His faithful people, against the violence of the apostate faction, and the wiles of the devil. Bp. Horsley.

—— I remained there with the kings of Persia.] I still continued to oppose any motions, which the chief men among the Persians might make in prejudice of the Jews. The word "king" is equivalent in Hebrew to prince or governour. See chap. vii. 17; Jer. xxv. 20, &c; 1 Kings xxii. 47. W. Lowth.

17. For how can the servant of this my lord talk with this my lord?] How can thy servant, a poor mortal man, maintain a discourse with a person of thy rank and dignity? The words may be translated thus, "How can the servant of this my lord talk with that my Lord?" that is, with the other Person, that first appeared to me with so majestick a presence, at whose sight I was perfectly confounded: ver. 5—9. W. Lowth.

20. — the prince of Persia: — the prince of Grecia] There is some doubt who are the persons here intended by "the princes of Persia and of Grecia." But since they fight with Michael, to those who are conversant with the prophetick style, and have observed the uniformity of its images, it will seem highly probable, that the angels which fight with Michael in the book of Daniel, are of the same sort with those who fight with Michael under the banners of the devil, in the 12th chapter of Revelation. "There was war in heaven: Michael and His angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels." The vision of the war in heaven, in the Apocalypse, represents the vehement struggles between Christianity and the old idolatry in the first ages of the Gospel. The angels of the two opposite armies represent two opposite parties in the Roman state, at the time the vision more particularly regards. Michael's angels are the party which espoused the side of the Christian religion, the friends of which had for many years been numerous, and became very powerful under Constantine the Great, the first Christian emperour. The dragon's angels are the party which endeavoured to support the old idolatry. And in conformity with this imagery of the Apocalypse, "the princes of Persia," in the book of Daniel, are to be understood, I think, of a party in the Persian state, which opposed the return of the captive Jews, first after the death of Cyrus, and again after the death of Darius Hystaspes. And "the prince of Grecia" is to be understood of a party in the Greek empire, which persecuted the Jewish religion after the death of Alexander the Great, particularly in the Greek kingdom of Syria. Bp. Horsley.

21. — in the scripture of truth:] Or, "in the writing of truth;" that is, what is certain and irrevocable. God's decrees are spoken of as if they were committed to writing, and registered in a book. See Deut. xxxii. 34; Ps. lvi. 8; Isa. lxv. 6; Mal. iii. 16. W. Lowth.

Chap. XI. This and the following chapter contain the substance of Daniel's last vision, or a series of prophetical story from the third year of Cyrus to the end of time. The dominion is soon made to pass from the Persians to the Grecians; the state of the Greek empire is continued through various changes and revolutions, and particularly with respect to Syria and Egypt, till at length it yields to the Romans. Several particulars afterwards follow that must relate to the fate of the Church of Christ; and the last chapter has a peculiar respect unto the "time of the end," to the end of all prophecy, or to the grand consummation of all things. Wintle.

It is the usual method of the Holy Spirit, to make the latter prophecies explanatory of the former; and revelation is "as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day," Prov. iv. 18. The four great empires of the world, which were shown to Nebuchadnezzar in the form of a great image, were again more particularly represented to Daniel in the shape of four great wild beasts. In like manner the memorable events, which were revealed to Daniel in the vision of the ram and the he goat, are here again more clearly and explicitly revealed in this vision by an angel; so that this latter prophecy may not improperly be said to be a comment and explanation of the former. Bp. Newton.

Ver. 1. Also I in the first year of Darius &c.] This verse should have been joined to the last chapter: the angel adds, that as he now joins in defending the cause of the Jewish nation, so, at the time of the overthrow of the Babylonish monarchy, he assisted in advancing Darius to the succession, which was the occasion of restoring the Jewish captivity. W. Lowth.

2. — Behold, there shall stand up &c.] The angel first prophesies of the Persian empire, which was then subsisting. "There shall stand up yet," that is, after Cyrus, the founder of the empire, who was then reigning, "three kings in Persia:" these were Cambyses, Smerdis the Magian, and Darius the son of Hystaspes. "And the fourth shall be far richer than they all." The fourth after Cyrus was Xerxes; of whom Justin truly remarks, that his riches were so abundant, that when rivers were dried up by his army, yet his wealth remained unexhausted. "And by his strength through his riches he shall stir up all," both subjects and allies, "against the realm of Grecia." The expedition of Xerxes into Greece is one of the most memorable events in ancient history. Herodotus affirms, that in raising his army he searched every place of the continent, and computes that the whole number of his armament amounted to more than five millions of men. After him no mention is here made of any other king of Persia. "It is to be noted," saith St. Jerome, "that the Prophet, having enumerated four kings of the Persians after Cyrus, slippeth over nine, and passeth to Alexander; for the prophetick spirit did not care to follow the order of history, but only to touch upon the most famous events." Xerxes was the principal author of the long wars and inveterate hatred between the Grecians and Persians; and, as he was the last king of Persia who invaded Greece, he is the last mentioned. The Grecians then in their turn invaded Asia; and Xerxes' expedition being the most memorable on one side, as Alexander's was on the other, the reigns of these two are not improperly connected together. Bp. Newton.

A farther reason may perhaps be assigned, why these kings of Persia only are mentioned, because they were all that should reign before Artaxerxes Longimanus, by whom the decree was issued, according to the prophecy of the seventy weeks, for rebuilding Jerusalem. Wintle.

3. And a mighty king &c.] That Alexander was "a mighty king" and conqueror; that he not only "ruled with great dominion" over Greece and the whole Persian empire, but likewise added India to his conquests; and that he "did according to his will," no one, not even his friends, daring to contradict and oppose him, or, if they did, like Clitus and Callisthenes, paying for it with their lives; are facts too well known to require any particular proof or illustration. Bp. Newton. See the notes on chap. vii. 6; viii. 5, 6.

4. And when he shall stand up, &c.] When he shall be in the height of his prosperity. W. Lowth. The particulars, foretold in this verse, were in a good measure suggested before, chap. viii. 8; see the note there. Thus was Alexander's kingdom "broken and divided, not to his posterity," but "was plucked up, even for others beside those." Bp. Newton.

5. And the king of the south shall be strong, &c.] Though the kingdom of Alexander was divided into four principal parts, yet only two of them are here mentioned, Egypt and Syria: partly because these two were by far the greatest and most considerable; but more particularly because Judea, lying between them, was sometimes in the possession of the kings of Egypt, and sometimes of the kings of Syria. It is in respect of their situation to Judea, that they are called the kings "of the south" and "of the north." "And the king of the south shall be strong, and one of his princes," (as the passage may be rendered after the Greek version,) that is, of Alexander's princes, "shall be strong above him." The "king of the south" was indeed very "strong;" for Ptolemy annexed Cyprus, Phenicia, Caria, and many islands, cities, and regions to Egypt; and likewise enlarged the bounds of his empire by the acquisition of Cyrene. But still "the king of the north," or Seleucus Nicator, was "strong above him," or stronger than he;

for, having annexed the kingdoms of Macedon and Thrace to the crown of Syria, he became master of three parts out of four of Alexander's dominions, and is represented by historians as "the conqueror of the conquerors," and "the greatest king after Alexander." Bp. Newton.

6. And in the end of years they shall join themselves together; &c.] After many years of hostility between the kings of Egypt and Syria, Ptolemy Philadelphus, the second king of Egypt, and Antiochus Theus, the third king of Syria, agreed to make peace upon condition, that Antiochus should put away his former wife Laodice and her two sons, and should marry Berenice the daughter of Ptolemy. "For the king's daughter of the south shall come to the king of the north to make" rights or agreements: and accordingly, Ptolemy Philadelphus brought his daughter to Antiochus Theus, and with her an immense treasure, so that he received the appellation of the dowry-giver. "But she shall not retain the power of the arm," that is, her interest and power with Antiochus; for after some time, he brought back his former wife Laodice with her children to court again. "Neither shall he stand, nor his arm," or his seed: for Laodice, fearing the fickle temper of her husband, lest he should recall Berenice, caused her husband to be poisoned; and neither did his seed by Berenice succeed him in the kingdom, but Laodice contrived and managed matters so that her eldest son Seleucus Callinicus was fixed on the throne of his ancestors. "But she shall be given up;" for Laodice, not content with poisoning her husband, caused also Berenice to be murdered. "And they that brought her:" for her Egyptian women, in endeavouring to defend her, were many of them slain with her. "And he that begat her," or rather, as it is in the margin, "he whom she had brought forth," for the son was murdered as well as the mother, by order of Laodice. "And he that strengthened her in these times," her husband Antiochus, as St. Jerome conceives; or those who took her part and defended her; or rather, her father, who died a little before, and was so very fond of her that he took care continually to send her fresh supplies of the water of the Nile, thinking it better for her to drink of that than of any other river, as Polybius relates. Bp. Newton.

7, 8, 9. But out of a branch of her roots &c.] Such wickedness was not to pass unpunished and unrevenged. Out of the same "root" with Berenice sprang Ptolemy Euergetes, her brother; who no sooner succeeded his father Ptolemy Philadelphus in the kingdom, than "he came with an army, and entered into the fortress," or fenced cities, "of the king of the north," that is, of Seleucus Callinicus, who with his mother Laodice reigned in Syria: and he "dealt," or acted, "against them, and prevailed" so far, that he took Syria, and Cilicia, and the upper parts beyond Euphrates, and almost all Asia. And when he had heard that a sedition was raised in Egypt, he plundered the kingdom of Seleucus, and took 40,000 talents of "silver," and "precious vessels," and images of their "gods" two thousand and five hundred. "So the king of the south came into the kingdom of the north, and then returned into his own land." He likewise "continued more years than the king of the north;" for Seleucus Callinicus died in exile of a fall from his horse, and Ptolemy Euergetes survived him about four or five years. Bp. Newton.

10. But his sons shall be stirred up, &c.] The sons of the king of the north should endeavour to vindicate and avenge the cause of their father and their country. The sons of Seleucus Callinicus were Seleucus Ceraunus and Antiochus the Great. The former, who succeeded his father on the throne, was indeed "stirred up, and assembled a multitude of great forces," in order to recover his father's dominions, but was poisoned by two of his generals after an inglorious reign of two or three years. Upon his decease his brother Antiochus was proclaimed king. The Prophet's expression is very remarkable, that "his sons should be stirred up, and assemble a multitude of great forces;" but then the number is changed, and only "one should certainly come, and overflow, and pass through." Accordingly Antiochus came with a great army, retook Seleucia, and recovered Syria. Then after a truce, wherein both sides treated of peace, but prepared for war, Antiochus "returned," and overcame in battle Nicolaus the Egyptian general, and had thoughts of invading Egypt itself. Bp. Newton.

——then shall he return, and be stirred up, even to his fortress.] Or, "he shall again be stirred up, &c." At the spring of the next year he shall take the field again, and encamp at Raphia, a frontier town upon the borders of Egypt. W. Lowth.

11. And the king of the south shall be moved with choler, &c.] Ptolemy Philopator, the king of Egypt, though a luxurious prince, was at length roused by the near approach of danger. And he "came forth:" he marched out of Egypt with a numerous army to oppose the enemy, and encamped not far from Raphia, which is the nearest town to Egypt after Rhinocorura. And there he "fought with him, even with the king of the north;" for thither likewise came Antiochus with his army, and a memorable battle ensued. "And he," the king of the north, "set forth a great multitude," amounting to 62,000 foot, 6000 horse, and 102 elephants. But yet "the multitude was given into his hand," that is, into the hand of the king of the south: for Ptolemy obtained a complete victory; and Antiochus, having lost about 10,000 foot, 300 horse, and 4000 prisoners, was obliged to solicit a peace. Bp. Newton.

12. And when he hath taken away the multitude, &c.] Ptolemy knew not how to make a proper advantage of his victory, but "his heart was lifted up" by success. Being delivered from his fears, he now more freely indulged his lusts; so that, instead of being "strengthened" by his victory, he provoked even his own subjects to rebel against him. But the Prophet in this passage more particularly foretold the case of his own countrymen. After the retreat of Antiochus, Ptolemy visited the cities of Cœle-Syria and Palestine, which had submitted to him; and among others in his progress he came to Jerusalem. He there offered sacrifices, and was desirous of entering into the holy of holies, contrary to the custom and religion of the place, being, as the writer of Maccabees says, greatly lifted up by pride and confidence. His curiosity was restrained with great difficulty, and he departed with heavy displeasure against the whole nation of the Jews. At his return therefore to Alexandria, he began a cruel persecution upon the Jewish inhabitants of that city, who had resided there from the time of Alexander, and enjoyed the privileges of the most favoured citizens. "And he cast down many ten thousands;" for it appears from Eusebius, that about this time forty thousand Jews were slain, or sixty thousand, as they are reckoned in St. Jerome's Latin interpretation. No king could be "strengthened" by the loss of such a number of useful subjects. The loss of so many Jews, and the rebellion of the Egyptians, added to the mal-administration of the state, must certainly very much weaken, and almost totally ruin, the kingdom. Bp. Newton.

13. For the king of the north shall return, &c.] After a peace of about fourteen years, in the course of which Ptolemy Philopator had died of intemperance, and was succeeded by his son Ptolemy Epiphanes, a child of four or five years old, Antiochus, having acquired "great riches," and collected many forces in an eastern expedition, which enabled him to "set forth a greater multitude than the former, returned:" not doubting to have an easy victory over an infant king. Bp. Newton.

14. And in those times there shall many stand up &c.] Not only Antiochus rose up against young Ptolemy, but others also confederated against him. The provinces, which were before subject to Egypt, rebelled; and Egypt itself was disturbed by seditions. Philip too, the king of Macedon, entered into a league with Antiochus, to divide Ptolemy's dominions between them. "Also the robbers of thy people:" it is literally "the sons of the breakers," the sons of the revolters, the factious and refractory ones, "of thy people," the Jews, who were at that time much broken into factions. These were to "exalt themselves to establish the vision:" accordingly they revolted from Ptolemy, and thereby contributed greatly, without knowing it, to the accomplishment of this prophecy concerning the calamities, which should be brought upon the Jewish nation by the succeeding kings of Syria. "But they shall fall:" for Scopas came with a powerful army from Ptolemy, and, in the absence of Antiochus, soon reduced the cities of Cœle-Syria and Palestine to their former obedience. Bp. Newton.

15, 16. So the king of the north shall come, &c.] Antiochus, wishing to recover the cities and countries, which Scopas had taken, came again into those parts; and having defeated Scopas, pursued him to Sidon, which he closely besieged, and at length compelled to surrender. This event probably was principally intended by his "casting up a mount, and taking the city of munitions," as in the margin; for Sidon was an exceeding strong city both in situation and fortifications: besides which, he took other "the most fenced cities," as in the text, as recited by the Greek and Roman historians. "The arms of the south could not withstand him, neither his chosen people;" neither Scopas, nor the other great generals, nor the choicest troops that were sent against him: but he "did according to his own will, and none" was able to "stand before him;" for he soon rendered himself master of all Cœle-Syria and Palestine. Among others the Jews also readily submitted to him: and thus he "stood in the glorious land," and his power was established in Judea, "which by his hand was consumed," the Jews suffering many things, and their country being wasted, during these hostilities. Bp. Newton.

17. He shall also set his face to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom,] Antiochus, not contented with having rent the principal provinces from Egypt, was forming schemes to invade the country itself with all his forces: "and upright ones with him," that is, the Jews, who marched under his banners, and are so called to distinguish them from the idolatrous soldiers. And so Antiochus would have seized upon Egypt by force; but, as he was meditating a war with the Romans, he judged it better to proceed by stratagem, and to carry on his designs by treaty, rather than by arms. For this purpose "he shall give him the daughter of women," his daughter so called, as being one of the most eminent and beautiful of women: accordingly Antiochus married his daughter Cleopatra to Ptolemy, and gave in dowry with her the provinces of Cœle-Syria and Palestine, upon condition of the revenues being equally divided between the two kings. All this he transacted with a fraudulent intention to "corrupt her," and induce her to betray her husband's interests to her father. But his design did not take effect; "she shall not stand on his side, neither be for him." Ptolemy and his generals were aware of his artifices, and therefore stood upon their guard: and Cleopatra herself affected more the cause of her husband than of her father; insomuch that she joined with her husband in an embassy to the Romans to congratulate them upon their victories over her father, and to exhort them, after they had expelled him out of Greece, to prosecute the war in Asia, assuring them at the same time, that the king and queen of Egypt would readily obey the commands of the senate. Bp. Newton.

18. After this shall he turn his face unto the isles,] Antiochus, having fitted out a formidable fleet, "turned his face unto the isles" of the Mediterranean, subdued most of the maritime places on the coasts of Asia, Thrace, and Greece, and "took" Samos, Eubœa, and "many" other islands. This was a great indignity and "reproach offered" to the Romans, when their confederates were thus oppressed, and the cities, which they had lately restored to liberty, were enslaved. "But a prince," or rather "a leader, a general," meaning the Roman generals, repelled the injury, and caused his "reproach to cease." After various defeats, Antiochus and his successors became tributary to the Romans; so truly and effectually did they not only "cause the reproach offered by him to cease," but, greatly to their own honour, "caused it to turn upon him." Bp. Newton.

Before CHRIST about 534. proach offered by him to cease; without his own reproach he shall cause it to turn upon him.

19. Then he shall turn his face toward the fort of his own land:] After the battle, that decided his fortunes, Antiochus fled away to Sardes, and thence into Syria, to Antioch, "the fort of his own land." Then marching into the eastern provinces, to collect there the arrears of tribute, and amass what treasure he could, in an attempt to plunder the rich temple of Jupiter Belus in Elymais, he was assaulted by the inhabitants of the country, and himself and all his attendants slain. Thus by an inglorious death he "stumbled and fell, and was no more found." Bp. Newton.

It is observable, that during the reign of Antiochus the Great, the Romans began to extend their conquests in the East, and they are by his means imperceptibly, as it were, introduced into the narration, of which they make so considerable a part in the sequel. This prince in many instances favoured the Jews, yet during the whole of his wars was generally the occasion of great distresses amongst them; and hence we have so long an account of him, from the tenth verse to the nineteenth. Wintle.

20. Then shall stand up in his estate a raiser of taxes in the glory of the kingdom:] Or rather, as in the margin, "one that causeth an exacter to pass over the glory of the kingdom." Seleucus Philopator succeeded his father Antiochus the Great in the throne of Syria; but he performed nothing worthy of the empire of Syria, and of his father. The tribute of a thousand talents, which he was obliged to pay annually to the Romans, was indeed a grievous burden to him and his kingdom; and he was little more than "a raiser of taxes" all his days. He was tempted even to commit sacrilege; for, being informed of the money that was deposited in the temple of Jerusalem, he sent his treasurer Heliodorus to seize it. This was literally "causing an exacter to pass over the glory of the kingdom," when he sent his treasurer to plunder that temple, which "even kings did honour and magnify with their best gifts," and where Seleucus himself, of his own revenues, bore all the costs belonging to the service of the sacrifices. "But within few days," or rather years, according to the prophetick style, he was destroyed; and his reign was of short duration in comparison of his father's; for he reigned only twelve years, and his father thirty-seven. Or perhaps the passage may be better expounded thus; that "within few days," or "years," after his attempting to plunder the temple of Jerusalem, he should "be destroyed;" and not long after that he was "destroyed, neither in anger, nor in battle," as all chronologers agree; neither in rebellion at home, nor war abroad; but by the treachery of his own treasurer Heliodorus. The same wicked hand that was the instrument of his sacrilege, was also the instrument of his death. Bp. Newton.

21. And in his estate shall stand up a vile person.] Antiochus Epiphanes, who succeeded to the kingdom, was at Athens, when his brother Seleucus died by the treachery of Heliodorus: and "the honour of the kingdom was not given to him," for Heliodorus attempted to get possession of it himself; another party declared in favour of Ptolemy Philometor, king of Egypt, whose mother Cleopatra was the daughter of Antiochus the Great, and sister of the late king Seleucus: and neither was Antiochus Epiphanes the right heir to the crown, but his nephew Demetrius, the son of Seleucus, then an hostage at Rome. However he "obtained the kingdom by flatteries." He flattered Eumenes king of Pergamus, and Attalus his brother, and by fair promises engaged their assistance. He flattered the Syrians, and with great show of clemency obtained their concurrence. He flattered the Romans also, and sent ambassadours to court their favour by presents and promises of fidelity. Thus he "came in peaceably:" and as he flattered the Syrians, the Syrians flattered him again, and bestowed on him the title of Epiphanes, or the illustrious: but the epithet of "vile," or rather "despicable," given him by the Prophet, agrees better with his true character. For he disgraced himself by such profligate, low, ridiculous, and indecent conduct, as induced Polybius, who was a contemporary writer, and others after him, instead of Epiphanes, or the illustrious, more rightly to call him Epimanes, or the madman. Bp. Newton.

He is called here "a vile person," not for any want of wit or parts, but for the extravagance of his life and actions. W. Lowth.

22. And with the arms of a flood shall they be overflown from before him,] Heliodorus, the murderer of Seleucus, and his partizans, as well as those of the king of Egypt, who had formed designs upon Syria, were vanquished by the forces of Eumenes and Attalus, and dissipated by the arrival of Antiochus, whose presence disconcerted all their measures. "The prince also of the covenant was broken:" that is, the high priest of the Jews. As soon as Antiochus was seated on the throne, he removed Onias from the high priesthood, and preferred Jason, the brother of Onias, to that dignity: but though he had "made a league" with Jason, the new high priest, he did not adhere to it faithfully, but acted "deceitfully;" and having deposed Jason, substituted Jason's younger brother, Menelaus, in his room. Bp. Newton.

23, 24. — for he shall come up,] Rather, "and he shall come up, and shall become strong with a small people." Antiochus Epiphanes had been many years an hostage at Rome; and coming from thence with only a few attendants, he appeared in Syria little at first, but soon received a great increase, "and became strong with a small people." By the friendship of Eumenes and Attalus he "entered peaceably," ver. 24, upon the upper provinces: as likewise upon the provinces of Cœle-Syria and Palestine. And wherever he came, he outdid his "fathers and his fathers' fathers" in liberality and profusion. He "scattered among them the prey, and spoil, and riches." The "prey" of his enemies, the "spoil" of temples, and the "riches" of his friends, as well as his own revenues, were expended in publick shows, and bestowed in largesses among the people. The writer of the first book of Maccabees affirms, that, in the liberal giving of gifts, "he abounded above the kings that were before him," 1 Mac. iii. 30. After some time, apprehensive of a war with Egypt, he went into Phenicia, to fortify his own "strong holds," and to "forecast his devices against" those of the enemy: thus he did "even for a time," and employed some years in his hostile preparations. Bp. Newton.

25, 26. And he shall stir up his power &c.] The transactions, here foretold, are thus related by the writer of the first book of Maccabees: "Now when the kingdom was established &c." see chap. i. ver. 16—19. "He shall stir up his power against the king of the south with a great army," says the Prophet: "he entered into Egypt with a great multitude," says the historian." "The king of the south shall not stand," says the Prophet; "Ptolemy was afraid and fled," says the historian. "Many shall fall down slain," says the Prophet; "and many were wounded to death," says the historian. The misfortunes of Ptolemy Philometor are by the Prophet ascribed principally to the treachery and baseness of his own ministers and subjects: "for they shall forecast devices against him; yea, they that feed of the portion of his meat shall destroy him." And it is certain, that Eulæus was a very wicked minister, and bred up the young king in luxury and effeminacy contrary to his natural inclination. Ptolemy Macron too, who was governour of Cyprus, revolted from him, and delivered up that important island to Antiochus; and for the reward of his treason was admitted into the number of the king's principal friends, and was made governour of Cœle-Syria and Palestine. Nay even the Alexandrians, seeing the distress of Philometor, renounced their allegiance; and taking his younger brother Euergetes or Physcon, proclaimed him king instead of the elder brother. Bp. Newton.

27. And both these kings' hearts shall be to do mischief, &c.] Ptolemy Philometor by some means, of which history does not inform us, came into the hands of Antiochus: and after Antiochus was come to Memphis, and the greater part of Egypt had submitted to him, he and Philometor did frequently eat and converse together "at one table;" but, notwithstanding this appearance of peace and friendship, "their hearts" were really bent "to do mischief," and they "spoke lies" the one to the other. For Antiochus pretended to take care of his nephew Philometor's interest, and promised to restore him to the crown, at the same time that he was plotting his ruin, and was contriving means to weaken the two brothers by a war against each other, that the conqueror, wearied and exhausted, might fall an easy prey to him. On the other side, Philometor laid the blame of the war on his governour Eulæus, professing great obligations to his uncle, and seemed to hold the crown by his favour, and at the very same time that he was resolved to take the first opportunity of breaking the league with him, and of being reconciled to his brother: and accordingly, as soon as ever Antiochus was withdrawn, he made proposals of accommodation, and by the mediation of their sister Cleopatra a peace was made between the two brothers, who agreed to reign jointly in Egypt and Alexandria. But still this artifice and dissimulation did not prosper on either side. For neither did Antiochus obtain the kingdom, neither did Philometor utterly exclude him, and prevent his returning with an army, as each intended and expected by the measures which were taken; for these wars were not to have an "end" till the "time appointed," which was not yet come. Bp. Newton.

28. Then shall he return into his land with great riches;] He did indeed "return with great riches;" for the spoils which he took in Egypt were of immense value. Returning thence, he set "his heart against the holy covenant:" for having heard of some disturbances, which had arisen at Jerusalem on a report of his death, and concluding that the whole nation of the Jews had revolted, he marched against Jerusalem; besieged the city, and took it by force of arms; slew 40,000 of the inhabitants, and sold as many more for slaves; polluted the temple and altar with swine's flesh, profaned the holy of holies by breaking into it, and took away the golden vessels and other sacred treasures to the value of 1800 talents. When he had "done" these "exploits," he "returned to his own land." Bp. Newton.

29, 30. At the time appointed] Namely, the time hinted at before, ver. 28, "he shall return &c." Antiochus, perceiving that the two brothers had provided for their mutual safety and interest by making peace, was so offended that he again invaded Egypt. But this expedition was not so successful as his "former" ones; because "the ships of Chittim," which brought the Roman ambassadours from Italy, to command a peace between the contending kings, "came against him." Antiochus was terrified, and withdrew his army. "Therefore he grieved and returned." He led back his forces into Syria: "and had indignation against the holy covenant;" for he vented all his anger upon the Jews, slaying great multitudes, plundering and burning the city, pulling down its walls and houses, shedding the blood of those who came to worship at the temple, defiling the sanctuary, and causing the whole service to be omitted. "So he did;" and after his "return" to Antioch he published a decree, which obliged all persons upon pain of death to conform to the religion of the Greeks: and so the Jewish law was abrogated, the heathen worship was set up in its stead, and the temple itself was consecrated to Jupiter Olympius. In the transacting and ordering of these matters, he "had intelligence with them that forsook the holy covenant," Menelaus and the other apostate Jews of his party, who were the king's chief instigators against their religion and their country. Bp. Newton.

31. And arms shall stand on his part, &c.] The last attack of Antiochus on the city and people of the Jews has been already noticed. Another power was introduced at the thirtieth verse, in the term "ships of Chittim;" and to this the narrative most probably now turns, and will be found applicable to the affairs and consequences of this fourth beast or kingdom to the end of the book, although there are various opinions concerning the application of this part of the prophecy. Wintle, Bp. Newton.

In the same year that Antiochus by command of the Romans retired out of Egypt, and set up the worship of the Greeks in Judea, the Romans conquered the kingdom of Macedon, the fundamental kingdom of the empire of the Greeks, and reduced it into a Roman province; and thereby began to put an end to the reign of Daniel's third beast. This is thus expressed by Daniel. And after him "arms;" that is, Romans "shall stand up." "Arms" are every where in this prophecy put for the military power of a kingdom; and they "stand up," when they conquer and grow powerful. Hitherto Daniel described the actions of the kings of the north and south; but upon the conquest of Macedon by the Romans, he left off describing the actions of the Greeks, and began to describe those of the Romans in Greece. They conquered Macedon, Illyricum, and Epirus, in the year of Nabonassar 580: thirty-five years after, by the last will and testament of Attalus the last king of Pergamus, they inherited that rich and flourishing kingdom; that is, all Asia westward of mount Taurus; sixty-nine years after they conquered the kingdom of Syria, and reduced it into a province, and thirty-four years after they did the like to Egypt. By all these steps the Roman "arms stood up" over the Greeks: and after ninety-five years more, by making war upon the Jews, "they polluted the sanctuary of strength, and took away the daily sacrifice, and then placed the abomination" of desolation. For this abomination was placed after the days of Christ, Matt. xxiv. 15; in the sixteenth year of the emperor Adrian, in the year of our Lord 132, they placed this abomination by building a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus where the temple of God in Jerusalem had stood. Thereupon the Jews under the conduct of Barchochab rose up in arms against the Romans, and in the war had fifty cities demolished, nine hundred and eighty-five of their best towns destroyed, and eighty thousand men slain by the sword: and in the end of the war, in the year 136, were banished Judea upon pain of death, and thenceforward the land remained desolate of its old inhabitants. Sir Isaac Newton, Bp. Newton.

32, 33. And such as do wickedly against the covenant &c.] The Roman magistrates and officers made use of the most alluring promises, as well as of the most terrible threatenings, to prevail upon the primitive Christians to renounce their religion, and offer incense to the statues of the emperors and images of the gods. Many were induced to comply with the temptation, and apostatized from the faith: but the true Christians, "the people that knew their God were strong," remained firm to their religion, and gave the most illustrious proofs of the most heroick patience and fortitude. It may be said also with the strictest truth and propriety of the primitive Christians, that being dispersed every where, and preaching the Gospel in all the parts of the Roman empire, they "instructed many," and gained a great number of proselytes to their religion: "yet they fell by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil, many days;" for they were exposed to the malice and fury of ten general persecutions, and suffered all manner of injuries, afflictions, and tortures, with little intermission for the space of three hundred years. Bp. Newton.

34, 35. Now when they shall fall, &c.] The Church had now laboured under long and severe persecutions from the civil power. The tenth and last general persecution was begun by Diocletian: it raged, though not at all times equally, ten years; and was suppressed entirely by Constantine, the first Roman emperour, who made open profession of Christianity: and then the Church was no longer persecuted, but was protected and favoured by the civil power. But still this is called only "a little help:" because, though it added much to the temporal prosperity, yet it contributed little to the spiritual graces and virtues, of Christians. It was attended with this peculiar disadvantage, that "many clave to them with flatteries." Many became Christians for the sake of temporal emolument, and pretended to be of the religion, only because it was the religion of the emperour. This is also called "a little help," because the temporal peace and prosperity of the Church lasted but a little while. The spirit of persecution presently revived; and no sooner were the Christians delivered from the fury of their heathen adversaries, than they began to quarrel among themselves, and to persecute one another. Such, more or less, has been the condition of the Church ever since: and, generally speaking, "those of understanding have fallen" a sacrifice to others, some of the best and wisest men to some of the worst and most ignorant. These calamities were to befall the Christians, "to try them, and to purge, and to make them white," not only at that time, but "even to the time of the end, because it is yet for a time appointed." Bp. Newton.

36. And the king shall do according to his will; &c.] The prophecy now proceeds to describe the principal author of the persecutions which should be permitted for the trial of the Church. A "king" or "kingdom," as before noticed, signifies any government, state, or potentate: and the meaning of this verse appears to be, that, after the empire was become Christian, there should spring up in the Church an antichristian power, that should act in the most absolute and arbitrary manner, exalt itself above all laws divine and human, dispense with the most solemn and sacred obligations, and in many respects enjoin what God had forbidden, and forbid what God had commanded. This power began in the Roman emperours, who summoned councils, and directed and influenced their determinations almost as they pleased. After the division of the empire, this power still increased, and was exerted principally by the Greek emperours in the East, and by the bishops of Rome in the West; as we shall see in the several particulars hereafter specified by the Prophet. This power too was to continue in the Church, and "prosper till the indignation be accomplished: for that that is determined shall be done." This must denote some particular period. Bp. Newton.

37. Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, &c.] He shall apostatize in some measure from the religion of his Christian fathers, as he actually did, both in the Greek and Latin Church, by worshipping "Mahuzzim" instead of the true God blessed for ever. "Nor shall he regard the desire of women," or conjugal affection: the meaning is, he shall neglect and discourage marriage, as both the Greeks and Latins did, to the great detriment of human society, and to the great discredit of the Christian religion. Thus did the power here described "magnify himself above all," even God Himself, by contradicting the primary law of nature; and making that dishonourable which the Scripture hath pronounced "honourable in all," Heb. xiii. 4. Bp. Newton.

38. But in his estate shall he honour the God of forces:] Or, "Mahuzzim;" that is, properly, "munitions, bulwarks, fortresses;" or, as the word may signify, "protectors, defenders, guardians." Them he should worship as God, or with God: and it is notorious, that the worship of saints and angels was established both in the Greek and Latin Church; and that their shrines and images were adorned with the most costly offerings, and "honoured with gold and silver, and with precious stones, and desirable things." What renders the completion of the prophecy still more remarkable is, that they were celebrated and adored under the title of Mahuzzim, of bulwarks and fortresses, of protectors and guardians, of mankind. Bp. Newton.

39. Thus shall he do in the most strong holds with a strange god, &c.] This verse contains other instances of his regard to Mahuzzim; but for the better understanding of this part of the prophecy, it may be proper to propose a more literal translation of it. "Thus shall he do: to the defenders of Mahuzzim, together with the strange god whom he shall acknowledge, he shall multiply honour; and he shall cause them to rule over many, and the earth he shall divide for a reward." That is, "He shall multiply honour" to the defenders and champions of Mahuzzim, as well as to Mahuzzim themselves: deifying Mahuzzim, he shall also glorify their priests and ministers: "and he shall cause them to rule over many, and the earth he shall divide for a reward." The defenders and champions of Mahuzzim were the popish ecclesiasticks and religious orders: and that they have been honoured and reverenced, and almost adored in former ages, that their authority and jurisdiction have extended over the purses and consciences of men, that they have been enriched with noble buildings and large endowments, and have had the choicest of the lands appropriated for church lands, are points of such publick notoriety, that they require no proof, as they will admit of no denial. Bp. Newton.

40. And at the time of the end shall the king of the south push at him: &c.] The minute and astonishing conformity of the foregoing prophetical description, ver. 31—39, throughout with the events, and its exact harmony with the parallel prophecies of Daniel himself and with corresponding passages in the New Testament, afford a high probability to the correctness of the interpretation, which Bp. Newton has supported with great learning and ability, and at considerable length, in his Dissertations on the Prophecies. The last part of this vision, ver. 40—45, appears to be unfulfilled. It is therefore "sealed" or "shut up" at present, till further light shall be furnished by the events. Dr. Hales.

Chap. XII. ver. 1. And at that time shall Michael stand up,] To defend the cause of the true people of God, and to destroy the enemies of the true religion. Wintle.

——and there shall be a time of trouble,] When the Jews shall be restored, there shall be such calamities as no nation hath ever before experienced, since men were formed into civil societies. Tribulations are often mentioned in Scripture, as preceding extraordinary events; see Ezek. xxx. 2, 3: and especially, as ushering in the kingdom of God, whether that kingdom relate to the first or second advent of the Messiah. See Isai. viii. 22; Jer. xxx. 7; Matt. xxiv. 21: at which last place an expression is used of like import with this of Daniel. This unusual and extraordinary time of trouble is supposed to correspond with that represented by St. John, to follow upon the pouring out of the seventh vial, Rev. xvi. 18: yet the people of God shall escape. Wintle.

——every one that shall be found written in the book.] Whosoever shall be registered or arranged in the class of the pious or faithful. At Ezek. ix. 4, the pious are said to be marked with the "thau" in their foreheads, like the capital "chi" of the Greeks; see Phil. iv. 3; Rev. iii. 5; xx. 15; where the book is called the "book of life." "Rejoice," says our Lord to His disciples, Luke x. 20, "because your names are written in heaven;" because ye are enlisted under the banners of the Gospel, called the kingdom of heaven, and are thereby entitled to its present graces, and if ye persevere with faith and constancy will be rewarded with its future glories. Wintle.

2. And many of them that sleep &c.] The prophecy, as we have seen, was brought down to the restoration of the Jews, and thereupon proceeds to the general restoration, or resurrection of all men, and the final judgment. The Jews themselves believed this doctrine, and had hopes therein founded on the promises of God to their fathers, Acts xxvi. 6; and there is no passage in the Old Testament that more strongly declares this truth than that before us. Wintle.

These expressions can with truth and propriety be applied only to the general resurrection of the just and unjust: and, though it may be said "many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake," yet that is no objection to the truth here delivered; for as Theodoret observed long ago, the Prophet had said "many" for "all," as St. Paul does in Rom. v. 19. The proper conclusion of all is the general resurrection, and the consequent happineſs of the wiſe and good: ver. 3, "And they that be wiſe ſhall ſhine as the brightneſs of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteouſneſs as the ſtars for ever and ever." Bp. Newton.

3. And they that be wiſe ſhall ſhine &c.] The words allude to chap. xi. 33, 35, and import, that they, who have been the great "lights" of the world, and have inſtructed others by their doctrine, and confirmed them in the truth by their ſufferings and example, ſhall have an eminently glorious reward at the day of judgment. So the martyrs are deſcribed as having a ſhare in "the firſt reſurrection," Rev. xx. 5. Our Saviour's words plainly allude to this text, Matt. xiii. 43. W. Lowth.

The Judge of all the earth will certainly do right. He hath given the fulleſt aſſurance that there is a reward for the righteous; and it is certain, that this reward will be augmented in proportion as men have been more extenſively uſeful, or have advanced the real and beſt intereſt of their fellow creatures. In the laſt verſe the reward and puniſhment are expreſſed generally as to their degree, and merely ſaid to be perpetual in their duration; in this they are exalted to the higheſt pitch of diſtinction in their degree, and their duration is expreſſed in the ſtrongeſt terms of pointing out eternity. The deſign of which is to convince the eminently virtuous, that they are in a more especial manner the favourites of Heaven, and may with greater confidence expect their reward. The glories of the future world are ſhadowed forth in Scripture by the loftieſt and moſt ſplendid images in this; but after all, ſo inadequate is language, and ſo inferiour the conceptions of the human mind to this great ſubject, that the fineſt deſcription of the joys of eternity is that negative one of St. Paul, which he hath in ſome meaſure borrowed from Iſaiah, "Eye hath not ſeen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him," 1 Cor. ii. 9. Wintle.

4. But thou, O Daniel, ſhut up the words, &c.] To "ſhut up" a book, and to "ſeal" it, is the ſame with concealing the ſenſe of it from common underſtandings: ſee chap. viii. 26. The ſame reaſon is aſſigned for this command in both places; namely, becauſe there would be a long interval of time between the date, and the final accompliſhment, of the prophecy: compare chap. x. 1. But the nearer that time approached, the more light ſhould men have for underſtanding the prophecy itſelf: as is implied in the following words, "many ſhall run to and fro, and knowledge ſhall be increaſed:" many ſhall be inquiſitive after truth, and keep correſpondence with others for their better information: and the gradual completion of ſome prophecies ſhall direct obſerving readers to form a judgment concerning thoſe particulars which are yet to be fulfilled. W. Lowth.

One cannot help obſerving here the analogy between God's word and works: not only operations of nature have been unravelled, but every uſeful art and invention traced out and brought to perfection by the continual labour and ſucceſſive induſtry of man. And the like gradual proceſs is obſervable with reſpect to the word of God: in its early communication it was wrapt up in myſtery, and ſurrounded by obſcurity, for this among other purpoſes, to excite the attentive obſervation of men, and engage their diligence; ſo that by affording proper employment for our active ſpirits, it may ſerve to train and habituate them to that temper and frame, which will be a ſuitable qualification for them in the future world; where we ſhall be continually exerciſed in acts of devotion and praiſe, and be making conſtant advances in knowledge, goodneſs, and happineſs. Wintle.

7. And I heard the man clothed in linen, &c.] And I heard Chriſt, the great Angel of the covenant, the eternal Son of God, anſwer him again; who, lifting up both His hands towards heaven, the place of His throne, ſware by Himſelf, and His eternal Father, and bleſſed Spirit. Bp. Hall.

"Holding up the hand" was a ceremony anciently uſed in taking an oath: ſee notes at Gen. xiv. 22; Deut. xxxii. 40. W. Lowth.

—— that it ſhall be for a time, times, and an half;] That is, as hath been before noticed, for three prophetick years and an half; and three prophetick years and an half are 1260 prophetick days; and 1260 prophetick days are 1260 years. The ſame time therefore is prefixed for the deſolation and the oppreſſion of the Eaſtern Church, as for the tyranny of the little horn in the Weſtern Church: and it is moſt remarkable, that the doctrine of Mohammed was firſt forged at Mecca, and the ſupremacy of the Pope was eſtabliſhed by virtue of a grant from that wicked tyrant Phocas, in the very ſame year of Chriſt 606. There is a farther notation of the time in the following words, "And when he ſhall have accompliſhed to ſcatter the power of the holy people, all theſe things ſhall be finiſhed:" when the Jews ſhall be recalled from their diſperſion, then all theſe things ſhall receive their full and final completion. The Prophet, not ſufficiently underſtanding this anſwer, inquired, ver. 8, What or how long ſhall be theſe latter times, or latter wonders? And it is anſwered again, ver. 11, that "from the time of the taking away the daily ſacrifice, and ſetting up the abomination that maketh deſolate, there ſhall be a thouſand two hundred and ninety days." The "ſetting up of the abomination of deſolation" appears to be a general phraſe, and comprehenſive of various events. It is applied by the writer of the firſt book of Maccabees, chap. i. 54, to the profanation of the temple by Antiochus, and his ſetting up the image of Jupiter Olympius upon the altar of God. It is applied by our Saviour, Matt. xxiv. 15, to the deſtruction of the city and temple by the Romans, under the conduct of Titus, in the reign of Veſpaſian. It may for the ſame reaſon be applied to the Roman emperour Adrian's building a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus, in the ſame place where the temple of God had ſtood: and to the miſery of the Jews, and the deſolation of Judea that followed. It may with equal juſtice be applied to the Mohammedans invading and deſolating Chriſtendom, and converting the churches into moſques: and this latter event ſeemeth to have been particularly intended in this paſſage. If this interpretation be true, the religion of Mohammed will prevail in the Eaſt the ſpace of 1260 years; and then a great and glorious revolution will follow; perhaps the restoration of the Jews, perhaps the destruction of Antichrist: but another still greater and more glorious will succeed: and what can this be so probably, as the full conversion of the Gentiles to the Church of Christ? For, (ver. 12,) "Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." Here then are three different periods assigned, 1260 years, 1290 years, and 1335 years: and what is the precise time of their beginning and consequently of their ending, as well as what are the great and signal events, which will take place at the end of each period, we can only conjecture, time alone can with certainty discover. Bp. Newton.

8. And I heard, but I understood not: &c.] The full discovery was not made to the Prophet, but reserved for future ages, till time should bring it to light. The question that follows, "What shall be the end of these things?" alludes to the like expression having been used in the preceding parts of this book, and especially at chap. x. 14. The inquiry is checked at the next verse, and an intimation given, that it is not so much for the use of the present as of future ages, that this revelation is made. The prophecy is of distant reference and interpretation; it is necessary therefore that it should be involved in obscurity. What is delivered may satisfy the minds of the pious and faithful; but it is not meant that the curious should be gratified, that human pride should be indulged, or that the counsels of God should be made subservient to the ambition of princes, or any sinister designs of man. Wintle.

9. And he said, Go thy way, Daniel: &c.] Such prophecies, as belong to things yet future, especially to the times and circumstances of those things, are few, if any of them, fit for the unlearned to pry into particularly. Nay, the learned themselves, if they are prudent also, will observe what answer the angel gave to the Prophet Daniel: "And I heard, but I understood not: then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said, Go thy way, Daniel: for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end." When the proper season comes, possibly in some cases not before the event hath interpreted them, the prophecies will prove their own reality by their clearness; and strengthen, perhaps in an hour of much need, "the patience and the faith of the saints," Rev. xiii. 10. Thus it happened to the Apostles. They understood not beforehand our Saviour's prediction, "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up." But "when He was risen from the dead, they remembered that He had said this unto them: and they believed the Scripture, and the word which Jesus had said," John ii. 19, 22. Abp. Secker.

10. Many shall be purified, &c.] The persecutions of the faithful are designed for the trial of their faith, and the purification of their lives; see chap. xi. 35. But as for those, who are obstinately bent upon following the corrupt practices, to which they have been accustomed, neither the exhortations nor threatenings of God's word, nor the judgments, which they see overtake others, will prevail with them to forsake their wicked practices. See Rev. ix. 20; xxii. 11. W. Lowth.

—— and none of the wicked shall understand; &c.] The holy writers often repeat this maxim, that an honest and good heart is a necessary qualification for receiving and understanding Divine truths. See Is. vi. 9, &c; Hos. xiv. 9; John viii. 47; x. 27; xviii. 37. W. Lowth.

It is not less our duty to subject all our vicious inclinations to the authority of holy writ, than our vain prejudices. For if we indulge but one, it will naturally bias us to reject, or misinterpret, whatever is inconsistent with it: and besides, we shall lose the hope of that illumination, without which we can apprehend nothing to good purpose. This is what the angel saith to Daniel, "None of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." And our Saviour promises only, that "if any man will do the will of God, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God," John vii. 17. Abp. Secker.

12. Blessed is he that waiteth, &c.] Some expositors suppose St. John to allude to these words, Rev. xx. 6, where he says, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection." In like manner the Prophet here pronounces those blessed, who, after a patient expectation of the fulfilling of God's promises, come to have a share in the enjoyment of them. W. Lowth.

13. But go thou thy way till the end be: &c.] Be content with that state and condition, which God shall appoint thee, till the finishing of all these wonderful events. W. Lowth.

The Prophet had been making inquiries after the end of these wonders; the angel had given him all the information that was needful either for himself or future times, and with this he dismisses him, subjoining at the same time a short epitome of his own fate; that, as he was now far advanced in life, he must expect soon to retire from this world; that he should rest in peace to the time of the end, when he should again be raised up and restored to life, and receive his final allotment from his righteous Judge, before whom he should stand in judgment at the last day, or "at the end of the days."

The word "lot" must here be meant in the good sense, that the Prophet should be ranked among the blessed, and partake of the heavenly inheritance, when the mystery of God shall be perfected. The expression seems to indicate a long space of time. Wintle.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

TO THE

TWELVE MINOR PROPHETS.

THE writings of the twelve Minor Prophets were in the Hebrew canon comprised in one book, which was called by St. Stephen "the Book of the Prophets;" Acts vii. 42, compared with Amos v. 25. By whom they were so compiled is uncertain; probably, however, they were collected together in that form by Ezra, or by some member of the Great Synagogue; but certainly above 200 years before the birth of Christ.

The twelve Minor Prophets were so called, not in respect to any supposed inferiority in their writings as to matter or style, but in reference to the brevity of their works. The shortness, indeed, of these prophecies seems to have been one reason for joining them together; by which means the volume of their contents was swelled to a greatness in some degree correspondent to their importance.

These twelve Prophets furnish us in scattered parts with a lively sketch of many particulars relative to other kingdoms; they describe in prophetick anticipation, but with historical exactness, the fate of Babylon, of Nineveh, of Tyre, of Sidon, and of Damascus. The three last Prophets especially illustrate many circumstances at a period, when the historical pages of Scripture are closed, and when profane authors are entirely wanting. They describe, under the most striking representations, the advent and character of the Messiah and His kingdom; and endeavour, by the most admirable instruction, to excite those religious sentiments, which would facilitate the reception of the Gospel. Dr. Gray.

HOSEA.

INTRODUCTION.

HOSEA has been supposed to be the most ancient of the twelve Minor Prophets; and indeed by some writers he is represented as having preceded all the Prophets, since he flourished about the middle of the reign of Jeroboam the Second, the son of Joash, king of Israel, and towards the commencement of that of Uzziah, who began to reign over Jerusalem about the year of the world 3194. According to some accounts of no great authority, he was of the tribe of Issachar, and of the city of Beleenor; others represent him to have been of the tribe of Judah. He was the son of Beeri, and entered on the prophetick office some time between the years of the world 3194 and 3219. He continued to prophesy above sixty years: during the successive reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and probably to about the third year of the reign of the last; or, if we reckon by the kings of Israel, he may be described as having flourished during the reign of Jeroboam and his successors, to the sixth year of Hoshea, which corresponds with the third year of Hezekiah. Hosea was therefore nearly contemporary with Isaiah, Amos, and Jonah. It is probable that he resided chiefly in Samaria; and that he was the first Prophet, of those at least whose prophecies we possess, that predicted the destruction of that country; which was effected soon after the Prophet's death by Shalmaneser, king of Assyria. Dr. Gray.

Hosea's principal subject is that which is the principal subject indeed of all the Prophets; the guilt of the Jewish nation in general, their disobedient refractory spirit, the heavy judgments that awaited them, their final conversion to God, their reestablishment in the land of promise, and their restoration to God's favour, under the immediate protection of the Messiah, in the latter ages of the world. He confines himself more closely to this single subject than any other Prophet. Comparatively, he seems to care little about other people. He wanders not, like Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, into the collateral history of surrounding heathen nations. He meddles not, like Daniel, with the revolutions of the great empires of the world. His own country seems to engross his whole attention; her privileges, her crimes, her punishment, her pardon. He predicts, indeed, in the strongest and the clearest terms, the ingrafting of the Gentiles into the Church of God: but he mentions it only generally; he enters not, like Isaiah, into a minute detail of the progress of the business. He alludes to the calling of our Lord from Egypt; and to the resurrection on the third day; and he celebrates, in the loftiest strains of triumph and exultation, the Saviour's final victory over death and hell. But yet, of all the Prophets, he certainly enters the least into the detail of the mysteries of redemption. We have nothing in him descriptive of the events of the interval between the two advents of our Lord: nothing diffuse and circumstantial, upon the great and interesting mysteries of the Incarnation, and the Atonement. His country, and his kindred, is the subject next his heart. Their crimes excite his indignation; their sufferings interest his pity; their future exaltation is the object on which his imagination fixes with delight. It is a remarkable dispensation of Providence, that clear notices, though in general terms, of the universal redemption, should be found in a writer so strongly possessed with national partialities. This Judaism, if I may so call it, seems to make the particular character of Hosea as a Prophet. Not that the ten tribes are exclusively his subject. His country is indeed his particular and constant subject; but his country generally, in both its branches, not in either taken by itself.

Hosea delights in a style, which always becomes obscure, when the language of the writer ceases to be a living language. He writes in short, detached, disjointed sentences; not wrought up into artificial periods. His transitions from reproof to persuasion, from threatening to promise, from terrour to hope, and the contrary, are rapid and unexpected. His similes are brief, accumulated, and often introduced without the particle of similitude. Yet these are not the vices, but the perfections of the holy Prophet's style: for to these circumstances it owes that eagerness and fiery animation, which are the characteristick excellence of his writings, and are so peculiarly suited to his subject. Bp. Horsley.

The book of Hosea is cited by St. Matthew as unquestionably the inspired production of a Prophet, Matt. ii. 15; as likewise by St. Paul, Rom. ix. 25, 26; 1 Cor. xv. 55; and, indeed, by Christ Himself, Matt. ix. 12, 13; xii. 7. Dr. Gray.

Chap. I. Under the figure of a wife living in adultery, and bearing illegitimate children, is represented the great idolatry of the children of Israel, which provoked God to cast them off; yet with the promise of repairing that loss, by bringing in the Gentiles into the Church, and afterwards uniting Israel and Judah under one head, the Messiah. The Prophet likewise foretells the extinction of Jehu's family. W. Loveth.

Ver. 1. — in the days of Uzziah, — and in the days of Jeroboam.] Jeroboam, the son of Joash, the second king of Israel of that name, and contemporary with Uzziah, is here mentioned, because this prophecy very nearly concerns the kingdom of Israel. There was no need of enumerating any of the succeeding kings of Israel, because, from the Prophet's mention of his prophesying from the times of Uzziah to those of Hezekiah, it follows that he prophesied all the reigns of Jeroboam's successors; the reign of Hezekiah bearing date from the third year of Hoshea, the last of the kings of Israel. W. Loveth.

2. — by Hosea.] To speak "to Hosea," ver. 1, and "by Hosea," in this verse, are phrases of different import. To speak to expresses, that to him the discourse was immediately addressed. To speak by, that through him it was addressed to others: and that the speech, so addressed to others, was not the Prophet's own, but God's; God using the Prophet as His organ of speech to the people. Bp. Horsley.

——go, take unto thee a wife of whoredoms and children of whoredoms.] That is, Marry a wife, who will afterwards, namely, after the birth of her first child, prove unfaithful to thy bed, and bear children begotten by others; for hereby will be most fitly, and even sensibly represented to the people of Israel their like base dealing with Me: inasmuch as the people of the land have committed the like great spiritual whoredom, departing from the Lord, and worshipping idols. Dr. Wells, W. Loveth.

Some commentators understand by "a wife of whoredoms" a wife, that had heretofore been noted for unchastity, howsoever now reclaimed. Bp. Hall, Junius.

3. So he went and took Gomer — which conceived, &c.] After the marriage the Prophet's wife bore three children. These children represent certain distinct parts or descriptions of the Jewish nation, of the whole of which the mother was the emblem. Of the three children, the eldest and the youngest were sons; the intermediate child was a daughter. The eldest appears to have been the Prophet's son; but the two last were illegitimate. Bp. Horsley.

4. — Call his name Jezreel;] The names, imposed upon the children by God's direction, sufficiently declare what particular parts of the Jewish nation were severally represented by them. The name of the first was Jezreel, importing "seed of God;" and the persons, represented by the Prophet's proper son, to whom the name is given, were all those true servants of God, scattered among all the twelve tribes of Israel, who, in the times of the nation's greatest depravity, worshipped the everlasting God, in the hope of the Redeemer to come. These were a holy seed; the genuine sons of God; begotten of Him to a lively hope, and the early seed of that Church, which shall at last embrace all the families of the earth. These are Jezreel, typified by the Prophet's own son and rightful heir, as the children of God, and heirs of the promises. Bp. Horsley.

—— I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu.] That is, the blood of the holy seed, the faithful servants of God, shed by the idolatrous princes of Jehu's family in persecution, and the blood of children shed in their horrible rites upon the altars of their idols. Bp. Horsley.

—— and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel.] It is said, that what is here threatened shall be done after "a little while" upon the house of Jehu; and it is added, as a consequence on it, or what should be effected together with it, or by it, that "the kingdom of Israel should cease." So he saith, "yet a little while." The time was not yet come, that it could be done, because God's promise to Jehu was, that "his children of the fourth generation should sit on the throne of Israel;" and the present king Jeroboam was but the third from him. In the time of Zachariah, who succeeded Jeroboam, and reigned but six months, what is here said was effected. And so both the promise before made, and the curse now denounced, were in their due time fulfilled. Dr. Edward Pocock.

5. And it shall come to pass at that day,] Quickly after the extinction of Jehu's family. W. Loveth.

—— I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.] See 2 Kings xv. 29; and xvii. 5, 6. The taking of several cities successively, and at last of the capital itself, was a "breaking of the bow of Israel," a demolition of the whole military strength of the kingdom "in the valley of Jezreel," where all those cities were situated. Bp. Horsley.

The bow, being in those times of great use in war, was figuratively and proverbially taken for all sorts of military arms and instruments; and also for all strength of war. Dr. Pocock.

daughter. And God said unto him, Call her name ‖ Lo-ruhamah: for † I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel; ‖ but I will utterly take them away.

7 But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and will save them by the LORD their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen.

8 ¶ Now when she had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she conceived, and bare a son.

9 Then said God, Call his name ‖ Lo-ammi: for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God.

6. — Call her name Lo-ruhamah:] All of the Jewish people, that were not Jezreel, the "seed of God," those who were not Israel, though they were of Israel, are typified by the two illegitimate children. The first of these, the daughter, was called Loruhamah. The sex of the child is the emblem of weakness. Her name signifies "unbeloved," or "unpitied;" or, as it is paraphrased in the margin of our Bible, in conformity with all the ancient versions, "not having obtained mercy." This daughter typifies the people of the ten tribes, in the enfeebled state of their declining monarchy, torn by intestine commotions and perpetual revolutions, harassed by powerful invaders, impoverished by their tyrannical exactions, and condemned by the just judgment of God to utter excision as a distinct kingdom, without hope of restoration: for so the type is explained by the Holy Spirit Himself. Bp. Horsley.

7. But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah,] It was an aggravation of the guilt of Israel, that idolatry was the very foundation of her polity. Her very existence, as a distinct kingdom, was founded on the worship of the calves, which was instituted by Jeroboam for preventing the return of the ten tribes to their allegiance to the house of David. The two tribes, on the contrary, remained loyally attached to David's family; and the idolatry, into which from time to time they fell, was rather the lapse of individuals, than the premeditated policy of the nation. Except in the reigns of one or two of their very worst kings, the publick religion was the worship of the true God, according to the rites of His own appointment, by a priesthood of His own institution. And this was probably the reason, that the kingdom of Judah, though severely punished, was however treated with longer forbearance; and, when the dreadful judgment came, in some respects with more lenity. Bp. Horsley.

—— and will save them by the Lord their God, &c.] This promise may be principally referred to their deliverance from captivity, not by human means, but by God's moving the heart of Cyrus to restore them, Ezra i. 1, &c. Dr. Pocock.

In the different treatment of the house of Judah and the house of Israel, we see the prophecy hitherto remarkably verified. After the excision of the kingdom of the ten tribes, Judah, though occasionally visited with severe judgments, continued however to be cherished with God's love, till they rejected our Lord. Then Judah became Lo-ammi; (see note on ver. 9:) but still continues to be visibly an object of God's love, preserved as a distinct race for gracious purposes of mercy. Bp. Horsley.

—— by the Lord their God,] Interpreters observe, that this expression may allude to the salvation to be accomplished by the Messiah, who is GOD as well as man; the Lord being spoken of as a distinct Person from the principal Author of the salvation here promised. Compare Is. xxxv. 4; xl. 9. W. Lowth.

There is one certain deliverance, promised to the Jews in one Prophet after another, by the name of "salvation by the Lord," by "the Lord God Himself," as superiour to and different from their former deliverances by flesh and blood; and this the Jews appropriate to the redemption of the Messiah. God saves, and God judges, by Him. And He is therefore termed "the Lord" in Mal. iii. 1, as being Emmanuel, the God, the Saviour with us. Bp. Chandler.

8, 9. — she conceived, and bare a son. Then said God, Call his name Lo-ammi:] The child conceived after Lo-ruhamah was weaned, must typify the people of the kingdom of Judah, in the subsequent periods of their history. Or rather, this child typifies the whole nation of the children of Israel, reduced, in its external form, by the captivity of the ten tribes, to that single kingdom. The sex represents a considerable degree of national strength and vigour, remaining in this branch of the Jewish people, very different from the exhausted state of the other kingdom previous to its fall. Nor have the two tribes ever suffered so total an excision. The ten were absolutely lost in the world soon after their captivity. But the people of Judah have never ceased totally to be. In captivity at Babylon they lived a separate race, respected by their conquerors. From that captivity they returned. They became an opulent and powerful state; formidable at times to the rival powers of Syria and Egypt; and held in no small consideration by the Roman people, and the first emperours of Rome. And even in their present state of ruin and degradation, without territory and without polity of their own, such is the masculine strength of suffering with which they are endued, they are still extant in the world, as a separate race, but not as God's people, otherwise than as they are reserved for signal mercy; God grant it may be at no very distant period! But at the present they are Lo-ammi, "Not My people." And so they have actually been more than seventeen centuries and a half; and to this condition they were condemned when this prophecy was delivered. Bp. Horsley.

9. — for ye are not my people,] That is, "Ye, O men of Judah, are not My people." Bp. Horsley.

10. Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, &c.] We learn from St. Paul, that Israel is a name, not only belonging to those, who are so according to the flesh, but comprehending all, that rightly believe in God, all the seed of Israel and Abrahum, as well that which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of all believers, as that which is of the flesh and of the law, Rom. iv. 11, 16; Gal. iii. 7. So that by the multitude of believers, as well of the Gentiles as of the Jews, is this to be made good, that "the number of the children of Israel should be as the sand of the sea." Dr. Pocock.

—— and it shall come to pass, that in the place &c.] That is, at Jerusalem, or at least in Judea, where this prophecy was delivered, and where the execution of the sentence took place. This prophecy appears to promise the restoration of the natural Israel of the house of Judah to their own land. Bp. Horsley.

Or, the promise may extend to others, as well as to them; even to as many of other nations, who had ever been looked on as "not God's people," as the whole Gentile world were; and that any where, in any place: even to "as many as the Lord our God should call," Acts ii. 39. Dr. Pocock.

11. Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, &c.] When "the fulness of the Gentiles is come in," this will be a means of converting the Jews, and bringing them into the Church: see Rom. ix. 26, 26. Either the prediction signifies, that upon this will follow the restoration of the Jewish nation, when they shall return into their own country from the several dispersions, where they were scattered, and become one nation or kingdom under the Messiah, their Head and King. Compare Ezek. xxxvii. 21, 22; Mic. ii. 13. W. Lowth. Or, the being "gathered together" denotes, not so much their coming together into one place, as consent and agreement of mind, the effect of which shall be, that they shall with one accord submit to one government. Dr. Pocock.

—— and appoint themselves one head.] The title of "Head" is often given to Christ in the New Testament: see Eph. i. 22; iv. 15; v. 23; Col. i. 18; so that in Him, who is our peace, all farther difference and enmity being taken away, both Jews and Gentiles are made one, Eph. ii. 15, 16, as one body under one head. Dr. Pocock.

—— and they shall come up out of the land:] Jerusalem being situated on an eminence, and in the heart of a mountainous region, which rose greatly above the general level of the country to a great distance on all sides, the sacred writers always speak of persons going to Jerusalem, as "going up." Bp. Horsley.

This mountain being a type of the Church of Christ, it is very proper and significant language to say of those, who should come into the Church, that they should "come up out of the land." Dr. Pocock.

—— for great shall be the day of Jezreel.] Great and happy shall be the day, when the holy seed of both branches of the natural Israel shall be publickly acknowledged of their God; united under one head, their King Messiah; and restored to the possession of the promised land, and to a situation of high preeminence among the kingdoms of the earth. Bp. Horsley. Or, taking the words in a spiritual sense, we may understand "the day of Jezreel" as comprehending the whole time of grace and salvation; all the time since the appearance of Christ, that "one Head," in whom they, of whom it is said "ye are not My people," are called "the sons of the living God," and are all gathered together, and ascend out of the world. Dr. Pocock.

Chap. II. ver. 1. Say ye unto your brethren, Ammi; and to your sisters, Ruhamah.] Although the Israelites, in the days of Hosea, were in general corrupt and addicted to idolatry, yet there were among them in the worst times some, who had not bowed the knee to Baal. These were always Ammi, and Ruhamah; God's own people, and a darling daughter. It is probable that God here commissions these faithful few to admonish the inhabitants of the land in general, of the dreadful judgments that would be brought upon them by the gross idolatry of the Jewish Church and nation. Speak to your brethren, O Ammi, (O My people,) and to your sisters, O Ruhamah, (O darling daughter.) Bp. Horsley.

2. Plead with your mother, &c.] Because by her false dealing with God, and alienating herself from God, she hath alienated His mind from her, and so far provoked Him, that He hath declared He will in severity of judgment proceed against her and her children; let her, that she may avert God's displeasure and reconcile Him again to her, turn to Him by repentance, and put away from her her idolatries, her spiritual fornications, and evil things; and let her children, that she may do so, and that they may escape God's judgments, plead with her, call on her so to do, and endeavour her reformation. This is plainly the scope of the words. The expressions are figurative. Dr. Pocock.

3. — and set her as in the day that she was born,] Bare, helpless, and unprotected. Dr. Pocock.

—— and make her as a wilderness, &c.] When a woman is the image of a country, or of a Church, that may be said of the woman, which, in unfigured speech, might be said of the country, or the Church she represents. The country might literally be made a waste wilderness, by unfruitful seasons, by the devastations of war, or of noxious vermin; a Church is made a wilderness and a parched land when the living waters of the Spirit are withheld. Bp. Horsley.

5. — she said, I will go after my lovers,] I will go after others, whom I esteem as my lovers: that is, I love rather to worship idol gods, as thinking them the gods that give me my bread, &c. Dr. Wells.

—— my drink.] "My liquors:" such as milk, honey, wine, &c. Bp. Horsley.

The base and degraded state of the Israelites is here very remarkable, in that they make no mention of those high spiritual privileges, which distinguished them from all other nations, of their laws and statutes, of God's grace and favour, and the light of His countenance, but have regard only to those things which concern their inferiour part, and are common to them with beasts. Those, whom Israel supposes to give her these things, are "her lovers," and to them she will surrender her affections. It is a further proof of her stupidity and aggravated ingratitude, that whereas it was God, who had furnished her with all these favours, as well as those of a more excellent nature, being glutted and intoxicated with abundance, she forgets God, and plainly denies Him to be the Author of them. Dr. Pocock.

6. — I will hedge up thy way &c.] See the like expressions in Lam. iii. 7, 9; Job xix. 8. Whence this appears to be a proverbial kind of speech, taken from what is usually done among men, when they would stop up a way, and hinder others from going in it, to put before it an hedge of thorns, or to cross it with a wall. Dr. Pocock.

—— with thorns,] See the note on Mic. vii. 4.

7. — then shall she say, I will go and return to my first husband;] She shall be forced to acknowledge, that when she clave unto God, who in lovingkindness had espoused her to Himself, and entered into covenant with her, and called her to His service, and is therefore called her "first Husband," it was much better with her than it is now. By the good providence of God such evils are often brought upon men, that by their calamities in this world they may be compelled to return to the service of God. Dr. Pocock.

— which they prepared for Baal.] Which they offered or consecrated to Baal. Abp. Newcome.

It was a grievous charge, which God here preferred against the Israelites, that His corn, and wine, and oil, and silver, and gold, which He had given them, they employed in the service of Baal, an abominable idol. If, when God giveth us wit, wealth, power, authority, health, strength, liberty, or any other good things, instead of using these things to His glory, and the relief of His servants, we abuse them to the service of those idols, which we have set up in our hearts, to our pride, our covetousness, or our sensuality, we are as liable to the charge as the Israelites were; as unjust, as profane, as unthankful in every respect as they. Bp. Sanderson.

9. Therefore will I return, and take away my corn &c.] That is, I will again take away My corn &c. The happy and prosperous condition of the people shall be changed into a general want and penury of all things necessary for their well being. Dr. Pocock. It appears from all the Prophets, and particularly from Amos and Joel, that the beginning of judgment upon the refractory, rebellious people, was in unfruitful seasons, and noxious vermin, producing a failure of the crops, dearth, murrain of the cattle, famine, and pestilential diseases. Bp. Horsley.

10. And now will I discover her lewdness] Or, as in the margin, "her folly," or "villany." By hiding My face from them, and depriving them of My blessings, I will make it appear how foolish, how shameful, how lewd, how vile and base they were in forsaking God and following idols. And this God threatens to do "in the sight," or presence, "of her lovers," that is, of her idols. Dr. Pocock.

11. I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her feast days, &c.] The publick festivals are frequently called days of joy and gladness: the observation of several of these festivals was retained in the worship of the golden calves: see 1 Kings xii. 32; Amos viii. 5. God here threatens them, that under their captivity they should have no opportunity to celebrate these festivals, since they had so much abused those solemn seasons of Divine worship. See chap. ix. 4, 5; Amos viii. 10. W. Lowth.

13. And I will visit upon her the days of Baalim,] I will punish her for all the idolatries she has committed from the days of Jeroboam, who first set up the worship of false gods. W. Lowth.

14. Therefore, behold, &c.] Here is a plain alteration of style from threatenings to promises; so that the first word should be rendered Nevertheless. See the note on Isa. xxx. 18. W. Lowth.

— I will allure her,] Or, persuade her. Though the word commonly signifies to inveigle, to deceive, it may be used by an easy metaphor in a good sense. Abp. Newcome.

— and bring her into the wilderness,] These words, joined with the preceding, should be understood in this manner: "I will allure her," by means of the persuasive doctrine of the Gospel; "and" for that end, or in order to produce that effect, "I will bring her into the wilderness:" meaning that this was the way or method by which He would prepare them to receive His persuasions. As the method, which God had used with the Israelites of old, for withdrawing them from the corruptions of Egypt, and making them His peculiar people, was by disciplining them in the wilderness; so He now says that He will employ the like method for weaning them from their idolatries, and inclining their hearts to Him; namely, by bringing them into a condition, as painful as that of their forefathers in the wilderness; a condition of captivity among the heathen, in which they should be disciplined in the knowledge of God and their dependence upon Him. Dr. Pocock.

— and speak comfortably unto her.] Speak what shall touch her heart, in her outcast state in the wilderness of the Gentile world, by the proffers of mercy in the Gospel. Bp. Horsley.

15. And I will give her her vineyards from thence,] I will not only speak kindly and comfortably to her, but by deeds also and benefits, actually bestowed upon her, will testify My favour towards her. These words of promise seem opposed to the former threat, "I will take away My wine in the season thereof," ver. 9; and "I will destroy her vines," ver. 12. "From thence" may signify either from that place, or from that time. Dr. Pocock.

— and the valley of Achor for a door of hope;] "The valley of Achor," that is, of tribulation, or consternation; alluding to the vale near Jericho, where the first Israelites, first setting foot within the Holy Land, were thrown into trouble and consternation; but immediately afterwards found it "a door of hope;" for from that time, Joshua having received fresh encouragement from God, drove on his conquests with uninterrupted success. In like manner the tribulations of the Jews, in their present dispersion, shall open to them the door of hope; and "she shall sing there," that is, in the wilderness, and in the vale of tribulation, under those circumstances of present difficulty mixed with cheering hope. Bp. Horsley.

— and she shall sing there, as in the days of her youth, &c.] These words are a continued allusion to the history of the Israelites of old, and to the great deliverance wrought for them in the time of Moses; "in the days of her youth," when, as Jeremiah limits the term, "she went after God in the wilderness," Jer. ii. 2. The promise "she shall sing," appears opposed to what was threatened in her state of rebellion, "I will also cause all her mirth to cease," ver. 11. Dr. Pocock.

16. — thou shalt call me] Here is a change from the third to the second person, not unusual in Scripture. Dr. Pocock. See the note from Bp. Lowth on Deut. xxxii. 5.

given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind," 2 Tim. i. 7. See Jer. xxii. 27. Bp. Horsley.

The word "Baali" often signifies an husband, and is particularly spoken of God, as He was by His covenant-relation an husband to His people; see Isa. liv. 5; Jer. iii. 14. But the word "Baal" having been so much profaned by being given to idols, He forbade it to be applied any more to Himself. As it follows, according to the sense of the next verse, He would utterly abolish the idols, the "Baalim," which they had before served, and leave no occasion for farther remembrance of them, such as the very use of the name, by which they were called, might be in danger of causing. W. Lowth, Dr. Pocock.

17. For I will take away &c.] He, from whom is both to will and to do, here promises His help and the assistance of His grace for the conversion of Israel, so that she, who was before wholly addicted and wedded to her Baals, might conceive a detestation of them, and an abhorrence even of their names. Compare Deut. xxx. 6; Zech. xiii. 2. Dr. Pocock.

18. And in that day will I make a covenant for them with the beasts of the field, &c.] That is, I will cause that they shall not do any injury, but shall be as harmless, as if they were bound by a covenant or league of peace. These expressions are figurative, and relate to the times of the Gospel. Compare Matt. xvi. 17, 18; Luke x. 19. Dr. Pocock.

——I will break — the battle] The Hebrews often use a verb, which is applicable to some of the substantives placed after it, but not to all. See Mic. vi. 15; Zeph. i. 17; Mal. iii. 5. Abp. Newcome.

19. And I will betroth thee unto me &c.] I will enter into a new covenant with My Church, consisting of the converted Jews, and increased by the coming in of the fulness of the Gentiles; wherein I will eminently display My attributes of righteousness and equity, of lovingkindness, mercy, and faithfulness. W. Lowth.

20. — and thou shalt know the Lord.] That is, by thy experience of His goodness and lovingkindness, "thou shalt know Him" to be the Lord Jehovah, the powerful God, who always makes good what He hath said, which is the chief meaning of the name Jehovah: or, thou shalt have, not only a bare knowledge of God, but at the same time such a due acknowledgment of Him, as influences the practice, and produces love correspondent to that which He displays. Such knowledge comprehends all the fruits of faith, and sincere obedience to His commandments. "Is not this to know me? saith the Lord," Jer. xxii. 16. Dr. Pocock.

21. — I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth; &c.] All creatures shall answer the desires and wants of My people: the heavens shall answer the wants of the earth, in sending down seasonable showers; and the earth shall answer the wants of mankind, in bringing forth corn, and wine, and other necessaries of life; and the very fruits of the earth shall answer the wishes of My people, now returned into their own land, by giving them due nourishment. The same sense is more plainly expressed in Zechariah, chap. viii, 12, "The seed shall be prosperous, &c." W. Lowth. In short, all second causes shall, by God's appointment, duly concur for the welfare and happiness of His then Christian Church, which may be fitly styled "Jezreel," according to their prayers, and upon their steady obedience to Him. Dr. Wells.

23. And I will sow her unto me in the earth;] Here is a plain allusion to the word "Jezreel," mentioned just before, which signifies the seed of God: the Prophet foretells a plentiful increase of true believers, like that of corn sown in the earth. Compare Zech. x. 9. W. Lowth.

The myriads of the natural Israel, converted by the preaching of the Apostles, were the first seed of the universal Church. And there is reason to believe, that the restoration of the converted Jews will be the occasion and means of a prodigious influx of new converts from the Gentiles in the latter ages, Rom. xi. 12, 15. Thus the Jezreel of the natural Israel from the first have been, and to the last will prove, a seed sown of God for Himself in the earth. Bp. Horsley.

Chap. III. ver. 1. — Go yet, love a woman &c.] This was probably the same woman, mentioned chap. i. 3; who upon her infidelity was parted from her husband. Still he had a kindness for her, and was willing to receive her on condition of her reformation. The Hebrew word, rendered "friend," is used for an husband, Jer. iii. 20; Cant. v. 16. W. Lowth.

——the children of Israel,] "Children of Israel," and "house of Israel," are two distinct expressions to be differently understood. "The house of Israel," and sometimes "Israel" by itself, is a particular appellation of the ten tribes, as a distinct kingdom from Judah. But "the children of Israel" is a general appellation for the whole race of the Israelites, comprehending both kingdoms. Bp. Horsley.

——and love flagons of wine.] By following those bodily delights and pleasures, such as drunkenness, gluttony, and the like, which the service of the heathen idols permitted, or required: or perhaps by partaking in the wine, which was drunk at the heathen sacrifices. Dr. Pocock.

2. So I bought her to me for fifteen pieces of silver, &c.] This was not a payment in the shape of a dowry; for the woman was his property, if he thought fit to claim her, by virtue of the marriage already had: but it was a present supply of her necessary wants, by which he acknowledged her as his wife, and engaged to furnish her with alimony, not ample indeed, but suitable to the recluse life which he prescribed to her. The parsimonious gift, a sum of money which was but half the price of a female slave, and a pittance of black barley bread, typified the hard fare, which the Israelites were to expect at the hand of God, in their state of exile. Bp. Horsley. In certain marriage contracts in the East, there is always the formality of a measure of corn mentioned over and above the stipulated sum of money. Sir J. Chardin.

3. — Thou shalt abide for me many days:] That is, Thou shalt stay sequestered, and as in a state of widowhood, till the time that I shall be fully reconciled to thee, and see fit again to receive thee to the privileges of a wife. Dr. Pocock.

—— thou shalt not be for another man:] The word "another" is not in the Hebrew: so the sentence may be thus translated, more agreeably to the original, Thou shalt not have an husband, neither will I have thee (to my wife). W. Lowth, Dr. Pocock. The condition of the woman, restrained from licentious courses, owned as a wife, but without restitution of conjugal rites, admirably represents the present state of the Jews, manifestly owned as a peculiar people, withheld from idolatry, but as yet without access to God through the Saviour. Bp. Horsley.

4. For the children of Israel shall abide many days &c.] This threatening has been most remarkably fulfilled upon the whole nation of the Jews, from the destruction of Jerusalem by Vespasian unto this day. W. Lowth.

—— without a king, and without a prince,] Without a monarch, and without any government of their own. Bp. Horsley.

—— without a sacrifice,] Deprived of the means of offering the typical sacrifices of the law, and having as yet no share in the true sacrifice of Christ. Bp. Horsley.

—— without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim:] These are mentioned as principal implements of idolatrous rites. And the sum of the fourth verse is this: that for many ages the Jews would not be their own masters; would be deprived of the exercise of their own religion, in its most essential parts; not embracing the Christian, they would have no share in the true, service; and yet would be restrained from idolatry, to which their forefathers had been so prone. Bp. Horsley.

5. — David their king:] See note on Jer. xxx. 9. As it is said in Isaiah, chap. xi. 10, that "the Gentiles should seek to the Root of Jesse," that is, the Messiah; so it is here said that the children of Israel shall seek the same Messiah as their King. Dr. Pocock.

Chap. IV. ver. 2. — they break out,] They are become profligate and impudent; they have broken out beyond all bounds, like swelling waters, gotten out of their banks, and overflowing the land. Dr. Pocock.

—— blood toucheth blood:] There are murders committed without intermission: one overtaketh and reacheth to another. Abp. Newcome.

3. — with the beasts of the field, &c.] The cattle and the fowls shall be affected by the scarcity with which God shall visit the land; and He will so dispose second causes, that even the fishes of the sea shall not supply the wants of His rebellious people. Abp. Newcome.

4. — let no man strive, nor reprove another:] Because the case of the people was desperate, and it would be lost labour to reprove them. W. Lowth.

—— strive with the priest.] To "strive," or contend, with the priest, the authorised interpreter of the law, and the typical intercessor between God and the people, was the highest species of contumacy and disobedience, and by the law was a capital offence: see Deut. xvii. 12. God tells the Prophet, that contumacy and perverseness, even in this degree, were become the general character of the people. That the national obstinacy and contempt of the remonstrances and reproofs of the Prophets were such as might be compared with the stubbornness of an individual; who at the peril of his life would arraign and disobey the judicial decisions of God's priests. Bp. Horsley.

It was in the prophetical times an expression signifying height of impiety, "Thy people are as they that strive with the priest." Seeing then God hath no less regard to His peculiar servants now then he had then; seeing they no less represent Him, and act by His authority now, than any did then; seeing their service is as precious to Him, and as much tendeth to His honour now, as the Levitical service then did; seeing He no less loveth order and peace in the Church, than He did in the Synagogue; we may well suppose it a no less heinous sin, and odious to God, to despise the ministers of Christ's Gospel, than it was before to despise the ministers of Moses's law. Dr. Isaac Barrow.

5. Therefore shalt thou fall:] The last sentence was addressed to the Prophet: "thy people," O prophet. This is to the people themselves: "Thou," O stubborn people. Bp. Horsley. See the note on Deut. xxxii. 5.

—— in the day, — in the night,] Neither the light shall afford thee a way of escaping the evil; nor the darkness cover thee from it. Dr. Pocock.

—— and I will destroy thy mother.] That is, thy mother city, the metropolis: namely, Jerusalem, the metropolis of the whole nation, or of the children of Israel. Bp. Horsley.

6. — for lack of knowledge:] The "knowledge" here spoken of, is not a speculative, but a practical, knowledge: not only a knowledge of the letter or sense of the law, but the framing of their lives according to it. The end of His giving them His laws and commandments was, that they might so know them, as to keep and do them: that was reckoned their "wisdom and understanding," Deut. iv. 6; and the doing according to His commandments He declares to be the knowledge of Him; Jer. xxii. 16. Dr. Pocock.

—— because thou hast rejected &c.] These denunciations are addressed to the high priest for the time being, as the representative of the whole order. The priests are taxed with negligence of their duty, in not teaching the people, and in suffering a general ignorance to prevail; and for this crime they are threatened with the abolition of their order. Bp. Horsley.

It is very observable, how the sin and the punishment run parallel, and are proportioned one to the other. The crimes objected are, that they "rejected knowledge," and that they "forgot the law of their God." The punishment proportioned to the first, that He also would "reject" them, that they should be "no priests to Him;" to the second, that He would also "forget their children." Dr. Pocock.

7. As they were increased, so they sinned against me:] The priesthood among the Jews was, by God's appointment, a situation of the highest rank and authority. The complaint is, that, in proportion as they were raised in dignity and power above the rest of the people, they surpassed the rest in impiety. Bp. Horsley.

8. They eat up the sin of my people, and they set their heart on their iniquity.] The meaning is, that it was their ordinary custom, under pretence of the right of their office, to receive from the people their sin offerings, and to feed upon them. At the same time, "they set their heart on their iniquity;" that is, they were desirous that the people should commit sin, that so the sin offerings might come in to them. Dr. Pocock.

9. And there shall be, like people, like priest:] As they are alike in sinning, so shall they be in punishment. W. Lowth.

11. —— take away the heart.] These words are expressed as a general sentiment of acknowledged truth: they are however to be particularly applied to the Israelites, and show the reason of their having so wickedly forsaken God, and "left off to take heed" to Him and His ways. They had devoted themselves to these sinful indulgences, the bad effects of which are, to "take away the heart" of men, to make them brutish in their understanding; and which accordingly had taken away their hearts, and wholly corrupted their minds and judgments, and deprived them of their reason. Dr. Pocock.

12. — their stocks, — their staff] Both these terms probably mean their wooden idols. Dr. Pocock.

13. — because the shadow thereof is good:] This suggests a natural cause, why graves and trees were scenes of idolatry in hot countries. Alp. Newcome.

—— therefore your daughters shall commit whoredom,] God delivers men up to "vile affections," as a punishment for their idolatry. See Rom. i. 26. W. Lowth.

14. I will not punish your daughters &c.] I will not chastise that in your children and wives, which ye, that are the parents and husbands, are willingly guilty of. Bp. Hall.

——, for themselves are separated] There is a change of person in the pronoun "themselves," whereas in the former part of the verse the second person is used, "your daughters," and "your spouses." A similar change occurs in the foregoing verse; from "they" to "your." Dr. Pocock. See the note on ver. 5.

—— harlots:] The Hebrew word here signifies such as prostituted themselves in an idol temple, in honour of the idol: such impure practices were frequent in the heathen temples dedicated to Venus, and such licentious deities: see Baruch vi. 43. W. Lowth.

15. Though thou, Israel, play the harlot, &c.] Here a transition is made, with great elegance and animation, from the general subject of the whole people, in both its branches, to the kingdom of the ten tribes in particular. Whatever the obstinacy of the house of Israel may be in her corruptions, at least let Judah keep herself pure. Let her not join in the idolatrous worship at Gilgal or Beth-aven, or mix idolatry with the profession of the true religion. As for Israel, I give her up to a reprobate mind. Then the discourse passes naturally to the detail and amplification of Israel's guilt. Bp. Horsley.

—— and come not ye unto Gilgal,] Come not ye, O men of Judah. Bp. Horsley.

Gilgal was a remarkable place for the renewing of the rite of circumcision, Josh. v. 9. There the people afterwards used to offer sacrifices, 1 Sam. xv. 21. After Jeroboam's establishment of idolatry, it was noted for the worship of false gods, as appears by comparing this text with chap. iv. 15; xii. 11; Amos iv. 4; v. 5. In those places of Amos, as well as in this verse, it is joined with Beth-el, noted for the worship of one of Jeroboam's calves; called Beth-aven here, and in chap. x. 5. Beth-el originally signifies "the house of God;" that name was given it by Jacob, because of God's appearing to him there; Gen. xxviii. 17. But when it became the seat of idolatry, it was called "Beth-aven," the house of vanity. W. Lowth.

—— nor swear, The Lord liveth.] Swear not the solemn oath of the living God in an idolatrous temple. Bp. Horsley.

wide common. They shall no longer be fed with care in the rich enclosures of God's cultivated farm; but turned out to browse the scanty herbage of the waste. That is, they shall be driven into exile among the heathen, freed from what they thought the restraints, and of consequence deprived of all the blessings and benefits, of religion. This dreadful menace is delivered in the form of severe derision: a figure much used by the Prophets, especially by Hosea. Bp. Horsley.

CHAP. V. ver. 1. — for judgment is toward you, because ye have been a snare &c.] That is, as dangerous and destructive as "snares" and "nets" spread by hunters and fowlers on the mountains, particularly those of Mizpah and Tabor. Dr. Pocock.

2. And the revolters are profound to make slaughter.] The ringleaders in idolatry, the chief "revolters" from My holy religion, lay deep designs to ensnare men's lives; though I by My Prophets and judgments have not forborne to utter vehement rebukes against them all. W. Lowth, Bp. Hall.

3. I know Ephraim,] I know him and his doings. W. Lowth.

It is not very material to determine, whether Ephraim is here taken more strictly for the one tribe; or in greater latitude for the whole ten tribes, thus denoting the sense as Israel in which case the naming of both is only a repetition of the same thing in different words for the sake of emphasis. Dr. Pocock.

5. And the pride of Israel doth testify to his face:] Their proud carriage, boldness, and insolence against God, and in their idolatrous courses, witnesseth "to their face" against them; that is, makes their wickedness and ill deserts openly known, and declares how worthy they are of punishment. Dr. Pocock.

——therefore shall Israel and Ephraim fall in their iniquity; &c.] The ten tribes, as distinguished from Judah, "shall fall" into the punishment due to them, miseries and calamities, "in their iniquity;" that is, for, or by reason of, their iniquity. And "Judah also shall fall with them;" Judah also, being partakers with them in their idolatry and other wickedness, shall partake with them in the like punishment. Sin shall have the like effect in both. Dr. Pocock.

6. They shall go with their flocks and with their herds to seek the Lord;] They shall at length offer sacrifices to Him in vain. Abp. Newcome. The prophecy looks forward to the times of Hezekiah and Josiah; declaring, that the attempts of those pious kings to restore the true worship will fail of any durable effect, and will not avail to reverse the doom pronounced upon the guilty people. Bp. Horsley.

They stopped their ears obstinately against Him, when He called on them, and proffered mercy in the day of mercy; He will now stop His ear against them, when they cry for it in the day of judgment. Dr. Pocock.

7. They have dealt treacherously against the Lord:] The Hebrew verb properly signifies the infidelity of a wife to her husband. W. Lowth.

——they have begotten strange children:] That is, children trained from their earliest infancy in the habits and principles of idolatry, and growing up aliens with respect to God, ("for all are not Israel which are of Israel,") alienated from Jehovah in their affections; and in their way of thinking, in their sentiments, and practices, mere heathen. Bp. Horsley.

——now shall a month devour them with their portions.] A very short time shall complete their destruction. "With their portions;" that is, their allotments. They shall be totally dispossessed of their country; and the boundaries of the separate allotments of the several tribes shall be confounded. Bp. Horsley.

8. Blow ye the cornet in Gibeah, &c.] Some suppose Gibeah and Ramah to have been two cities, not far distant from each other, situated in the lot of Benjamin, on the confines of both kingdoms: others suppose Gibeah to have been the bound of the kingdom of Judah, and Ramah that of the kingdom of Israel. According to the latter supposition, the alarm was to be sounded, that it might be taken by the people of both kingdoms: according to the former, that it might give notice to the places in the lot of Benjamin, and so to the kingdom of Judah, that the enemy were already come upon Israel, and were now so near, that the people of Judah also had reason to look to themselves. Dr. Pocock.

——after thee, O Benjamin.] The sense must be supplied by the enemy, or some such thing: The enemy is just behind thee. The conciseness and abruptness of the speech more effectually calls for attention in the person to whom it is addressed;

Before CHRIST about 760.

CHAP. VI.

1 An exhortation to repentance. 4 A complaint of their untowardness and iniquity.

COME, and let us return unto the LORD: about 760.
for he hath torn, and he will heal us;
he hath smitten, and he will bind us up.

2 [a] After two days will he revive us: in [a] 1 Cor. 15. 4.
the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight.

Behind thee, O Benjamin; look to thyself without more delay, beware, danger is at thy back, the enemy at thy heels. Dr. Pocock.

10. The princes of Judah were like them that remove the bound:] Literally, "the landmark;" concerning which crime, see Deut. xix. 14; and for the curse annexed to it, and its heinousness in God's sight, Deut. xxvii. 17. By the phrase in this place, "like them that remove the bound," we may understand that the princes of Judah put away, and passed over, all bounds prescribed to them both by the law of God, and by the laws of men. Dr. Pocock.

11. Ephraim is oppressed and broken in judgment.] He is "oppressed" with a heavy weight of calamity: he is crushed in his judicial contest with Me. Abp. Newcome.

—— because he willingly walked after the commandment.] This is commonly explained of Jeroboam's command to his subjects, of forsaking the worship of the true God; which command they readily complied with. Of the same kind "were the statutes of Omri," mentioned by Micah, chap. vi. 16. W. Lowth. God permitted or ordered those evils, which they suffered to befall them, because they willingly and obstinately forsook His commandments, to follow commandments contrary to His. Dr. Pocock.

12. — as a moth, — as rottenness.] The Hebrew word, rendered "a moth," means a worm, that breeds in clothes, and eats them: that rendered "rottenness," or "a worm," in the margin, means a worm, that breeds in wood, when it is old and rotten; or, as some think, rottenness itself. Dr. Pocock. The sense is, that God would, from small and unperceived beginnings, work a slow, but certain and complete destruction. Bp. Horsley.

13. — and sent to king Jareb:] It is probable, as commentators in general agree, that Judah is understood here before the verb "sent:" the sense seems to require it, as Judah is expressed before, in mentioning the evils that they felt, and after, ver. 14, in mentioning what should befall them. The person, to whom he sent, is uncertain: our translators shew that they thought the original capable of different interpretations, by rendering it "king Jareb" in the text, and "the king of Jareb," and "the king that should plead," in the margin. Dr. Pocock.

Jareb was either the name of an Assyrian king, or of an Assyrian city: see chap. x. 6. Abp. Newcome. Or, the phrase describes some powerful monarch, "the king, who takes up all quarrels," as it may be translated; that is, a king, who took upon him to interfere in all quarrels between inferiour powers, to arbitrate between them, and compel them to make up their differences upon such terms as he thought proper to dictate; whose alliance was of course anxiously courted by weaker states. Such was the Assyrian monarch in the times, to which this prophecy relates. His friendship was purchased by Menahem, king of Israel, 2 Kings xv. 19, 20; and in a later period solicited by Ahaz, chap. xvi. 5—9. Bp. Horsley.

—— yet could he not heal you, &c.] We have here the usual scriptural change of persons from "them" to "you." For an illustration of the facts alluded to, see the history, 2 Chron. xxviii. 16—20. Dr. Pocock.

15. I will go and return to my place,] The sense is, that Jehovah will withdraw the tokens of His presence from the Jewish temple. Bp. Horsley.

—— till they acknowledge their offence,] This is a proof of what God elsewhere declares, "that He hath no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way, and live." God withdraws Himself from His people, not that He would finally reject them, but that they might know their wickedness and folly in rejecting and forsaking Him, and so "acknowledge their offence, and seek His face." Dr. Pocock.

Chap. VI. The three first verses of this chapter should be joined to the preceding. The Prophet speaks in his own person to the end of the third verse. He takes occasion, from the intimation of final pardon to the penitent, given in the conclusion of God's awful denunciation of judgment, to address his countrymen in words of mild pathetick persuasion. Bp. Horsley.

Ver. 2. After two days — we shall live in his sight.] There appears in this place a very plain allusion to Christ lying dead in the grave for two days, and on the third rising again to life. The reference in the margin shews this to have been the opinion of our translators. Dr. Pocock.

Jehovah, who had departed, will return, and again exhibit the signs of His presence among His chosen people. So the Jews, converted and restored, will "live in His sight," or in His presence, and attain the true knowledge of God, which they never had before. The "two days" and the "third day" seem to denote three distinct periods of the Jewish people. The first day is the captivity of the ten tribes by the Assyrians, and of the two under the Babylonians, considered as one judgment upon the nation; beginning with the captivity of the ten, and completed in that of the two. The second day is the whole period of the present condition of the Jews, beginning with the dispersion of the nation by the Romans. The third day is the period yet to come, beginning with their conversion and restoration. This I take to be the sense of the prophecy, in immediate application to the Jews. Nevertheless, whoever is well acquainted with the allegorical style of prophecy, when he recollects, that our Saviour's sufferings were instead of the sufferings and death of sinners; that we are baptized into His death; and, by baptism into His death, are buried with Him; and that He, rising on the third day, raised us to the hope of life and immortality; will easily perceive no very obscure, though but an oblique, allusion to our Lord's resurrection on the third day; since every believer may speak of our Lord's death and resurrection, as a common death and resurrection of all believers. Bp. Horsley.

3. — his going forth is prepared as the morning;] His appearance, as our Deliverer, is fixed as the return of the morning: we shall be restored by Him from our calamities, as certainly as the rising of the sun chases away darkness. Abp. Newcome.

—— and he shall come unto us as the rain, &c.] See Deut. xi. 14. The periodical rains being looked upon as necessary causes of great blessings, other things also, which produced blessings in other kinds, whether temporal or spiritual, are often compared to such rains. See Deut. xxxii. 2; Ps. lxxii. 6; Prov. xvi. 15; Is. lv. 10, &c. Dr. Pocock.

4. O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee?] Here Jehovah takes up the discourse again in His own person. Bp. Horsley. God declares that the true cause of the impending evils was not any defect of mercy or providence in Him, who had used all probable means for bringing the people home to Himself, but was to be found in their own inveterate wickedness. If at any time, desiring to be relieved from some affliction, they made a shew of reformation, their goodness was not real, sincere, and permanent, but it soon failed: they were quickly weary of it, and returned to their evil ways. Dr. Pocock.

5. Therefore have I hewed them by the prophets; &c.] It is agreeable to the language of Scripture, to represent the Prophets of God as doing that, which they foretold should be certainly done. Dr. Pocock. See Jer. i. 10, and the note there.

—— and thy judgments are as the light that goeth forth.] God having admonished, reproved, and threatened the people, in order to recall them, but without effect, they cannot accuse Him of cruelty in inflicting the judgments which He threatens: such judgments are evidently deserved; their justice is as clear as the sun, "as the light that goeth forth;" as manifest as that is to all. Dr. Pocock.

6. For I desired mercy, and not sacrifice;] That is, rather than sacrifice: I am better pleased with true goodness, than with the exactest observance of the external duties of religion, unless they proceed from a sincere principle of obedience: see Mic. vi. 6—8. The Jews are accustomed to express comparisons by negatives, or rejecting the things less worthy. Compare Joel ii. 13, and John vi. 27. W. Lowth. The parallel line clearly shews that by "not sacrifice" is to be understood in preference to sacrifice. Abp. Newcome.

The words appear to anticipate an answer of the people, that they were not so unworthy as they were accused of being, since they were constant in offering all sorts of sacrifice to God; but God replies, that sacrifices were not all that was required of them, for that He delighted not in such things for themselves, but only in respect to other things, which by them were testified, and with which they ought to be accompanied. That sacrifices, when rightly offered, were acceptable to Him, appears from His numerous precepts concerning them in the law. Dr. Pocock.

—— the knowledge of God] Not an inactive speculative knowledge, but such knowledge as testifies itself by the keeping of God's commandments. By "mercy" may be understood all the duties of the second table; and by "the knowledge of God" all those of the first. Dr. Pocock. This is the general rule, comprehending the sum of all the practical precepts of the Prophets. Bp. Horsley.

7. But they like men have transgressed the covenant:] Either "like men" in general, whose quality it is to be false and treacherous in observing covenants; which aggravates the accusation, that they, God's peculiar people, should be as regardless of their plighted faith, as other nations, that were strangers to Him and aliens from His covenant: or, "like Adam," as in the margin. Dr. Pocock.

—— there have they dealt treacherously against me.] "There," in the covenant; that is, in that matter wherein they ought to have been especially faithful. Dr. Pocock.

8. Gilead is a city of them that work iniquity,] Gilead, or Ramoth Gilead, was a city of refuge, Deut. iv. 43; and such also was Sichem, Josh. xx. 7: both therefore inhabited by priests and Levites. The Prophet means to represent the priests as seducers of the people to that idolatry, which proved the ruin of the nation. Bp. Horsley.

9. — murder in the way by consent:] That is, they associate themselves for murdering such as fall in their way, as troops of robbers lay wait for any passenger to spoil him. One of the marginal readings, "with one shoulder," imports the same thing, namely, "by consent," like men putting their shoulders together to move some great weight. But if the other reading in the margin, "in the way to Shechem," be taken, it describes the place where such murders and outrages were committed by those idolatrous priests and their associates from Gilead. Dr. Pocock. See the foregoing note.

11. Also, O Judah, he hath set an harvest for thee,] Also, O Judah, corrupted Israel hath prepared a harvest of revenge for thee, in sowing the seeds of idolatry in thee. Bp. Hall. "When I returned the captivity of My people:" or, more plainly, "When, or whereas, I would have turned away the captivity of My people;" that is, I would upon their repentance have averted My judgments, which will end in their captivity. W.-Lowth, Dr. Wells.

the like; then their wickedness farther appeared, in that they would not hearken to His word, nor be amended, but more obstinately persisted in their evil courses. Israel, Ephraim, and Samaria, design altogether, as either of them might do singly, the whole body, consisting of both prince and people. Dr. Pocock.

3. They make the king glad with their wickedness, &c.] They study to please their kings and great men, by complying with the idolatry which they have set up. W. Lowth. "Their lies" mean their perfidies towards God, in deserting His service for idolatry. Bp. Horsley.

4. They are all adulterers, &c.] They are as much inflamed with lust, "as an oven heated," or over-heated, "by the baker, who (therefore) ceaseth from raising" or making any more fire, "after he hath kneaded the dough, until it be leavened." Dr. Wells.

5. In the day of our king &c.] On the king's birth-day, or his coronation-day, or some other solemn festival kept in his honour, the great men gave themselves to immoderate drinking, enticing their king to do the same, till he so far forgot himself, as to give the hand of fellowship to vain persons. Dr. Pocock. Those, who in their cups made a jest of the true religion, and derided the denunciations of God's Prophets, he distinguished with the most familiar marks of his royal favour. Bp. Horsley. Some recent and notorious act of contempt to God, or to His Prophets, or to publick justice, appears here to be alluded to. Abp. Newcome.

6. For they have made ready their heart like an oven, &c.] As an oven conceals the lighted fire all the night, while the baker takes his rest, and in the morning vomits forth its blazing flame; so all manner of concupiscence is brooding mischief in their hearts, while the ruling faculties of reason and conscience are lulled asleep, and their wicked designs wait only for a fair occasion to break forth. Bp. Horsley.

7. They are all hot as an oven, &c.] "All," that is, the whole body of the people. Of this general corruption the pernicious effects are such as concern, not only private persons, but the publick welfare, to the disturbance of all order and government, which must necessarily result from the destruction and untimely end of the "judges:" by which some understand the inferior magistrates, others the kings, who are presently more particularly mentioned. Dr. Pocock.

—— all their kings are fallen:] The prophecy looks forward to the fall of the six last kings in uninterrupted succession, Zechariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, Pekah, Hoshea. Bp. Horsley.

8. Ephraim, he hath mixed himself among the people; &c.] For Ephraim, he hath mixed himself with heathens, and is a professed associate with them: Ephraim is grown irresolute in his religion; like a cake that is half dough, and half baked; so is he, half Israelite, half Pagan. Bp. Hall. One thing on one side, another on the other. Burnt to a coal at bottom; raw dough at the top. An apt image of a character that is all inconsistencies. Bp. Horsley.

—— a cake not turned.] All along the Black sea, from the Mœotic lake to the Caspian sea, in Chaldea, and in Mesopotamia, except in towns, the people often make their bread about an inch thick: this they lay on a corner of the hearth, and cover it with hot embers and ashes: in a quarter of an hour they turn it. Bp. Pococke.

9. Strangers have devoured his strength,] Such nations, as either violently assaulted or spoiled him, or such as he applied to for help: as the Assyrians, chap. v. 13; and in this chapter, ver. 11, the Egyptians, Assyrians, and others. These "devoured his strength," his wealth, his riches, and treasure; the flower also of his men, and the fruits of his land. Dr. Pocock. Yet all these afflictions do not make him sensible of the disastrous state of his affairs, and that the hand of God is against him. W. Lowth.

—— gray hairs] The tokens of decay of natural strength, and of tendency to dissolution. Dr. Pocock.

11. Ephraim also is like a silly dove without heart:] That is, "without understanding:" see Jer. v. 21. As "a silly dove," affrighted at her nest, flies to one place and to another for security, and there often falls into some net or snare, and meets with greater danger than she would have found at home; so Ephraim, being troubled with the great evils which he felt or feared at home, forsook God and His protection, and called on Egypt and Assyria for help, but instead of it met with greater injury. Dr. Pocock.

12. — I will chastise them, as their congregation hath heard.] As they have heard their punishments declared in the prophetical denunciations in the books of Moses, which were read in their synagogues every sabbath day. Bp. Horsley.

13. — though I have redeemed them, yet they have spoken lies against me.] Though I have redeemed them out of Egypt, (see Mic. vi. 4,) and afforded them many other signal deliverances, yet they have not given Me the glory, but have represented Me by their golden calf, and have "changed My truth into a lie," Rom. i. 25. W. Lowth. See the note on ver. 3.

14. And they have not cried unto me with their heart, &c.] Though they have made shew of some great repentance and humiliation, howling and crying upon the beds of their distress, yet they have not with their hearts unfeignedly sought unto me. Bp. Hall. Even when they assembled themselves for fear of dearth and famine, to pray for plenty, for corn and wine, even then did they continue to rebel against God. Dr. Pocock.

15. Though I have bound and strengthened their arms, &c.] Though I have bound up their wounds, and given them new strength and vigour, yet they are continually devising some new idolatrous invention, whereby they may dishonour Me. W. Lowth. Or, as in the margin, "though I have chastened, &c." Whether I have inflicted punishment on them, or shewed them favour, they rejected Me for their idols. Abp. Newcome.

16. They return, but not to the most High:] A distinction is here made between a true and a false, or hypocritical conversion. It is not said that they returned not at all, that they made no shew of repentance; but that they returned not home to the Lord; which is what He requires of true converts: "If thou wilt return, O Israel, saith the Lord, return unto Me," Jer. iv. 1. This is well given notice of by our translators, in supplying the word "but," which is not in the original, "They return, but not to the most High." Dr. Pocock.

——they are like a deceitful bow:] Like an ill-contrived bow, which never directs the arrow to the mark. W. Lowth. Their intentions, which are pretended to be directed to God, are indeed carried quite another way. Dr. Pocock.

——this shall be their derision in the land of Egypt.] Their blasphemies, and other enormities, shall be a just cause of reproach to them, when they are exiles in Egypt, whither many of them fled, or were carried away captive. See chap. ix. 3, 6. Compare chap. viii. 13; and see the note on Ezek. xxxvi. 20. W. Lowth.

Chap. VIII. ver. 1. Set the trumpet to thy mouth.] This is a manifest allusion to the custom of calling the people together by this means. It is not necessary to suppose, that the Prophet was really to sound a trumpet, but rather that he should call upon the people with all possible earnestness and vehemence. Compare Is. lviii. 1. Dr. Pocock. Call the people to war: the Assyrian enemy shall come, like an eagle, against the professed Church of God, the people of Israel. Bp. Hall.

2. Israel shall cry unto me, My God, we know thee.] Israel shall feignedly cry unto Me, and challenge favour from Me; and say, My God, we make profession of Thy name. Bp. Hall.

3. Israel hath cast off the thing that is good:] Either God Himself, who is simply and absolutely "good," Matt. xix. 17: or such things as are pleasing to God, and therefore "good" as bringing men near to Him, such as His law, His worship, the performance of their duty to Him, and the observance of His ways and commandments. Dr. Pocock.

4. They have set up kings, but not by me: &c.] In the description of those things, which provoked God to inflict His judgments upon Israel, He declares their apostasy from Him, first in civil matters, then in matters of their religion. Dr. Pocock.

——princes, and I knew it not:] That is, God did not own or approve of what they did. Dr. Pocock.

5. Thy calf, O Samaria, hath cast thee off:] The calf or idol, that the Israelites worshipped, is said to cast them off, inasmuch as it was of no avail to them. Dr. Pocock, Dr. Wells.

6. For from Israel was it also:] This, their calf and calf-worship, is, as all other idols and idolatry, of mere human invention, framed by the Israelites, according to the thoughts of their own hearts, and the device of their own hands; and not agreeable to the will and command of God. Dr. Pocock.

7. For they have sown the wind, &c.] And as for them, they shall even reap as they have sown; they have sown the wind, and they shall reap a whirlwind; they have trusted to vanity, and they shall receive loss and disappointment: a famine shall come upon them: the grain that they have sown, shall yield no stalk; or, if it have a stalk, yet that stalk shall yield no ear; or if an ear, yet that ear shall yield no substance of meal; or, if it do yield any, the strangers, their enemies, shall swallow it up. Bp. Hall.

8. Israel is swallowed up:] Though they be not brought to utter destruction and annihilation, yet they shall be so "swallowed up," as it were, by other nations, among whom they shall be dispersed, that they shall retain neither the condition, nor the name of Israel, as the people of God, or a people at all of their own jurisdiction. This hath been long since plainly verified in the ten tribes, which have been for so many years so lost among the Gentile nations, that even the very name of them is perished, and no one can say where they are. Dr. Pocock.

——as a vessel wherein is no pleasure.] As broken vessels that are put to base uses. Bp. Hall.

from what God had denounced against them. Dr. Pocock. This is not yet the going into captivity. The captivity, though near at hand, is yet to come. This going up is past. It is a voluntary going up, and a crime. The captivity is the punishment. Bp. Horsley.

—— a wild ass alone by himself.] See the note on Job xi. 12. With respect to the expression "alone by himself," it may be observed, that though wild asses be often found in the desert in whole herds, yet it is usual for some one of them to break away, and separate himself from his company, and run alone at random by himself. Dr. Pocock. See also the note on Job xxxix. 6.

—— Ephraim hath hired lovers.] This alludes to the general profusion of the government in forming foreign alliances, in which the latter kings, both of Israel and Judah, were equally culpable: as appears by the history of the collateral reigns of Ahaz and Pekah. Their allies are called "lovers;" for every forbidden alliance with idolaters was a part of the spiritual incontinence of the nation. Bp. Horsley. Nothing could be more flagitious, than that the hire should be given by the adulteress. See Ezek. xvi. 33. Abp. Newcome.

10. Yea, though they have hired &c.] Though they have hired allies among the heathen nations, now will I gather them, in order to deliver them into captivity, and they shall sorrow in a little time for the burden of captivity, &c, put on them by the king of Assyria. "A little" in this place should be "in a little time." The king of Assyria is styled "the king of princes," as having kings and princes for his tributaries. Dr. Wells, W. Lowth.

11. Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin, altars shall be unto him to sin.] Or a punishment for his sin. He shall fall from one degree of wickedness and idolatry to another; and his sin shall bring with it its own punishment. W. Lowth.

12. I have written to him the great things of my law, &c.] I have given unto them My royal law, and have left it recorded for them, that it might be to them a perpetual direction: but they have slighted it, as if it were a thing that concerned them not. Bp. Hall.

13. They sacrifice flesh &c.] Though, pretending to worship God, they offered many sacrifices, yet they offered them with evil intentions, namely, to glut and feast themselves, but not appease or please Him: and therefore it is added, "the Lord accepteth them not." Dr. Pocock.

—— they shall return to Egypt.] Or, be reduced to an abject oppressed condition, like that of the Egyptian servitude. Bp. Horsley.

14. For Israel hath forgotten his Maker, and buildeth temples; &c.] For Israel hath forgotten his Maker, and, contrary to His commandment, buildeth temples to idols: and Judah, contrary to the command of the same God, hath multiplied fenced cities, as trusting in his own strength: but I will send the Assyrian, as a fire, upon the cities of Israel, and the Chaldean into the cities of Judah, and they shall consume and waste the palaces thereof. Bp. Hall.

Chap. IX. ver. 1. Rejoice not, O Israel, for joy,] It should seem that this prophecy was delivered at a time when the situation of publick affairs was promising: perhaps after some signal success, which had given occasion to publick rejoicings. Bp. Horsley. Or, the joy here mentioned may properly mean those rejoicings, commonly made among all people at the end of harvest, when the Gentiles offered sacrifices of thanksgiving for the plenty they enjoyed. W. Lowth.

—— as other people:] Those national successes, which might be just cause for rejoicing to other people, are none to thee: for thou liest under the heavy sentence of God's wrath for thy disloyalty to Him; and all thy bright prospects will vanish, and terminate in thy destruction. The Gentiles were not guilty in an equal degree with the Israelites; for although they sinned, it was not against the light of Revelation, in contempt of the warnings of inspired Prophets, or in breach of any express covenant. Bp. Horsley.

—— thou hast loved a reward upon every cornfloor.] Meaning, that they considered the good things, which they received, as "a reward" for the service which they paid to their false gods. Dr. Pocock.

2. The floor and the winepress shall not feed them, &c.] The Prophet here tells them, they might think they had obtained their "reward." For their crops were indeed abundant; nevertheless they would not be the better for the plenty of their land. Bp. Horsley.

3. —— the Lord's land;] The land, which the Lord sware to their fathers to give them, Deut. xxx. 20; and which He did accordingly give them, still reserving the ownership of it to Himself. See Lev. xxv. 23. Dr. Pocock.

—— Ephraim shall return to Egypt, &c.] This returning of theirs into Egypt seems to be the flight of several of them thither, to avoid the destruction brought by the Assyrians upon their nation, when the rest were either slain, or carried captives from "the Lord's land" into Assyria and other countries, where they were "wanderers among the nations," ver. 17. Dr. Pocock.

—— and they shall eat unclean things in Assyria.] Their circumstances in captivity shall not permit them to observe the rules of the law relating to unclean meats, and they will be forced to eat of such meats as have been offered to idols. Compare Dan. i. 8; Ezek. iv. 13. W. Lowth.

explanation of that threatening denounced, chap. iii. 4, that they should be "without a sacrifice:" they should have no opportunity in their captivity to offer meat offerings or drink offerings to God, as they did upon the high places, or in their idolatrous temples; see Amos iv. 4, 5: and sometimes, perhaps, in the temple at Jerusalem; see ver. 15. They themselves shall be in the condition of mourners for the dead, and by that means be unqualified to offer any thing to God; nor will their offerings be acceptable: see Deut. xxvi. 14. W. Lowth.

—— the bread of mourners;] See the note on Jer. xvi. 7.

—— for their bread for their soul shall not come into the house of the Lord.] Either they shall not offer in the house of the Lord oblations for making atonement or expiation for their souls: or by "bread for their soul" may be understood such as is necessary for preserving and keeping them alive; and then the meaning is, their bread shall be for their eating, but shall not come into the house of the Lord. Dr. Pocock.

5. What will ye do in the solemn day, &c.] Ye shall have no opportunity of observing any of your solemn feasts in your captivity: see chap. ii. 11. W. Lowth.

6. For, lo, they are gone &c.] They shall flee into Egypt, hoping there to find refuge and safety from destruction: but they shall die there; "Egypt shall gather them up," for burial, as the words appear to be explained in the following, "Memphis shall bury them." Memphis, or Moph in the Hebrew, was a chief city or metropolis of Egypt, called Noph in Isaiah, chap. xix. 13; Jer. ii. 16; Ezek. xxx. 13, &c. Some suppose it to be the place now called Cairo. For the sense here given to "gather," see Jer. viii. 2; Ezek. xxix. 5. Dr. Pocock. The Arabs call Cairo Menoph at this day. Abp. Newcome.

—— the pleasant places for their silver,] The closets or cabinets, where they were wont to hide their treasures and jewels. Bp. Hall. The general sense of this passage is very clear. It describes the extreme devastation of the country by the Assyrian conquest, under the image of weeds growing up in the dwellings, deserted by their owners, and stripped of their costly and elegant furniture of silver. Bp. Horsley.

7. — the prophet is a fool, the spiritual man is mad,] The days are at hand which shall make the Israelites sensible, that not a word of God shall want its effect, and that His Prophets were true Prophets, but their false prophets, to whom the Israelites hearkened, were indeed "fools" and "madmen." And this should come to pass "for the multitude of their iniquity," whereby they shewed themselves to "hate" God, and made themselves hateful to Him. Dr. Pocock.

8. The watchman of Ephraim was with my God: &c.] The Prophet, whom God sent to them, such as Hosea himself, or any other formerly sent, and by them rejected, was "with God;" a true Prophet of His, and faithful in the discharge of His commission. Dr. Pocock. The true Prophet, like a watchman sent by God, gave warning to Israel of their approaching calamities: see Jer. vi. 17; Ezek. iii. 17; xxxiii. 2; Micah vii. 4. But the words of the false prophet are like "a snare" laid on purpose to entrap men into mischief and destruction. See chap. v. 1. And his false prophecies he utters purely out of "hatred" to God and His worship, and to deter those that hearkened to him from attending upon God's service at the temple. W. Lowth.

9. — as in the days of Gibeah:] The men of Gibeah are described in the same characters as those of Sodom are; compare Judges xix. 22, with Gen. xix. 4: to which they added the villany of forcing the Levite's concubine, Judges xix. 25. W. Lowth.

10. I found Israel like grapes in the wilderness; &c.] Israel was no less pleasing to Me at the first, than ripe grapes would be to a thirsty traveller in a dry wilderness: I esteemed your forefathers, those fruitful Patriarchs, as the most choice and firstripe figs; but their sinful progeny fell off and degenerated to idolatry, applying themselves to that shameful idol; and chose to themselves several abominable deities, according as they were affected to the parties that worshipped them. Bp. Holl.

"The wilderness" is rightly connected with "grapes," and is not to be connected with "Israel." Bp. Horsley.

—— as the firstripe.] The early figs are very desirable, and much esteemed in those countries. See Jer. xxiv. 2; Is. xxviii. 4. Dr. Pocock.

—— unto that shame;] See the note on Jer. iii. 24.

11. As for Ephraim, their glory shall fly away &c.] Barrenness is threatened with peculiar propriety, as the judgment for the worship of the idol here mentioned. Bp. Horsley.

13. Ephraim, as I saw Tyrus, is planted in a pleasant place:] The situation of Ephraim, and particularly of the royal city of Samaria, situate in that tribe, is as pleasant as that of Tyre: see Ezek. xxvii. 3. W. Lowth.

wombs and dry breasts; that they may never bring forth or nourish up children to idolatry or slaughter. Bp. Hall.

15. All their wickedness is in Gilgal:] These words may seem a reply from God to the Prophet's petition; shewing that His decreed judgments should not in any degree be taken off from them, by reason of their unworthiness and great provocations. Dr. Pocock.

—— for there I hated them:] Rather, "therefore there I hated them;" He hated them there, because they sinned there: or "surely there I hated them." The word "there" is emphatical. In that very place, where heretofore I shewed them such tokens of My love and gracious presence, even there I have since hated them, or now hate them. Dr. Pocock.

Gilgal was the place where the armies of Israel, upon their entering Canaan, first encamped; where Joshua set up the twelve stones, taken by God's command out of the midst of Jordan, in memorial of the miraculous passage through the river. There the first passover was kept, and the fruits of the promised land first enjoyed. There the captain of the host of Jehovah appeared to Joshua. There the rite of circumcision, which had been omitted during the forty years of the wandering of the people in the wilderness, was renewed. And, in the days of the Prophet Samuel, Gilgal appears to have been an approved place of worship and burnt offering. But in latter times, it appears from Hosea and his contemporary Amos, that it became a place of great resort for idolatrous purposes. And these are the wickednesses in Gilgal, of which the Prophet here speaks. Bp. Horsley.

16. — yet will I slay &c.] The scope of these words is to set forth the diminution of Israel, as to their glory, number, strength, and power, by a firm decree from God, This is according to the curse anciently denounced against them in the law, that, if they should become disobedient, and walk contrary to Him, then He would make them "be left few in number," Lev. xxvi. 22; Deut. iv. 27; xxviii. 62. Dr. Pocock.

17. My God] As if He were only the God of the Prophet, who cleave to Him, not of the people, who had by their disobedience departed from Him. Dr. Pocock.

—— and they shall be wanderers among the nations.] And so they became, and so they continue to this day, "wandering among the nations," so as scarce to be found out, having no settled place of their own, no where that they can be called a people, or are as such acknowledged. Dr. Pocock. See the notes on Deut. xxviii. 64, 65, 67.

Chap. X. ver. 1. Israel is an empty vine, &c.] Israel is a vine indeed, but a fruitless one; or, if he bear fruit, it is to himself, for the advancing of his own profit and pleasure; as his wealth and abundance increaseth, so doth his idolatry; look how much he is pampered with his store, so much more doth he spend upon his goodly images. Bp. Hall.

The fruit here spoken of is not the fruit of good works, but the fruit of national prosperity; increasing population, abundant crops, numerous flocks and herds, publick opulence, military strength. Bp. Horsley.

2. Their heart is divided;] Between God and their idols: pretending to worship God, but not sincerely in sincerity to Him, nor giving Him their whole heart: "halting between" Him and Baal, 1 Kings xviii. 21. Dr. Pocock.

3. For now they shall say, We have no king, &c.] It shall shortly come to pass, that the enemy prevailing against them and their king, as despairing men, rather than true penitents, they shall be constrained to say, "We have no king," or are as if we had none, none that can save us, he being taken and not able to defend himself; see ver. 7, and 2 Kings xvii. 4: and deservedly is this happened unto us, "because we feared not the Lord;" we have forsaken Him, and made Him our enemy, and "what" good "then shall a king do to us?" Dr. Pocock.

4. They have spoken words.] Evil words; (Dr. Pocock:) empty words. Abp. Newcome. What follows may be understood as taxing them generally with "swearing falsely;" such as swearing by false gods; or binding themselves to something needless, impossible, or unlawful; or breaking the promises which they had ratified by oaths. Dr. Pocock.

—— thus judgment springeth up &c.] In consequence of their carelessness about their covenants, as a punishment of their fraudulent dealings, the "judgment" of God falls upon them as severe and bitter as "hemlock." Dr. Pocock.

5. The inhabitants of Samaria shall fear &c.] Samaria here signifies the kingdom of Israel, of which Samaria was the capital city. See chap. viii. 5, 6. The inhabitants of that kingdom shall be seized with fear and confusion, when the calf of Beth-el (see Jer. iv. 15) shall be carried away as a present to Shalmaneser, ver. 6: when he made the king and kingdom tributary, 2 Kings xvii. 3. W. Lowth.

—— because of the calves of Beth-aven:] There is little doubt but the same is here meant as "the calf of Samaria," chap. viii. 5, 6. Dr. Pocock. The plural number is used, because the calf of Beth-el (here called Beth-aven, as having become the temple of an idol) was in its size, and the riches of the temple, the principal image. The word therefore may be rendered, "the great calf." Bp. Horsley.

of the Eastern people, as also of the Romans, to carry away the gods of conquered countries. Abp. Newcome.

7. As for Samaria, her king is cut off &c.] The king spoken of is with reason generally understood to have been Hoshea, the son of Elah, under whom and with whom Samaria was destroyed; see 2 Kings xvii. Dr. Pocock.

8. The high places also of Aven,] That is, of Beth-aven, ver. 5, and chap. iv. 15; or Beth-el; which, being by reason of the great wickedness there committed, so unworthy of its first name, "the house of God," is in contempt first called "the house of iniquity," and now "iniquity" itself in the abstract: this being the signification of "Aven." Dr. Pocock.

—— and they shall say to the mountains, Cover us; &c.] The inhabitants shall be so terrified with the sword of the enemy, that they shall wish themselves under ground, and speak to the hills and mountains to fall upon them, and shelter them from that fury. Bp. Hall. This sublime description of fear and distress our Lord had in view, Luke xxiii. 30; which may be a reference and not a quotation. Abp. Newcome.

9. O Israel, thou hast sinned from the days of Gibeah:] See chap. ix. 9. Some render it "more than in the days of Gibeah." W. Lowth. The sin of Israel now exceeds the sins of those sinful times, when "every man did what was right in his own eyes," and it seemed right in the eyes of the whole tribe of Benjamin to protect the outrage of the Sodomites of Gibeah. See Judges xix. Bp. Hurstey.

—— there they stood:] "There," that is, upon that occasion; namely, the quarrel with the tribe of Benjamin, on account of the outrage of the men of Gibeah. "They stood," that is, the Israelites see themselves in array for the attack. Bp. Horsley.

—— the battle in Gibeah against the children of iniquity did not overtake them.] Notwithstanding some losses, small in comparison with that of the tribe of Benjamin, which was all but cut off, God gave the Israelites success in that righteous war. Bp. Horsley.

10. It is in my desire that I should chastise them;] Though God had hitherto spared them, and they therein grew insolent and secure, yet He now declares His determinate purpose of punishing them, and shews by what means and where or why He would do so. Dr. Pocock.

—— when they shall bind themselves in their two furrows.] The Greek translation gives a plainer and easier sense, according to the reading in the margin, "When I shall bind them," as it were, hand and foot, to deliver them into the hands of the Assyrians, who "shall be gathered against them," "for their two transgressions;" namely, the calves of Dan and Beth-el. Dr. Wells, W. Lowth.

11. And Ephraim is as an heifer that is taught, &c.] The sense would run easier if we read it, Ephraim is as an heifer that is teachable. So I passed over her fair neck: I caused Ephraim to ride; Judah did plow, and Jacob did break the clods. God here sets forth the gentle and easy methods He used to bring both Israel and Judah to a sense of their duty; treating them with gentleness, as a husbandman does young bullocks or horses, stroking them, and encouraging them, till they are accustomed to the yoke; then He gave them His laws, and prescribed them rules for the several duties and offices of life, and expected they should bring forth fruit answerable to the several helps and advantages which He had given them. W. Lowth.

—— I will make Ephraim to ride;] Rather, I rode upon Ephraim, after the manner of husbandmen, who are used to ride upon their bullocks. Grotius.

12. Sow to yourselves in righteousness.] He proceeds in the same figure of language, expressing in terms belonging to common husbandry such duties as were required of them in their spiritual husbandry, or service of God. The people, who were before compared to an heifer, are here spoken to, as the husbandman, the sower, and reaper. We may understand, as introductory to this verse, some such words as, And I said, Sow &c. Dr. Pocock.

—— reap in mercy;] This is a promise, that if they did "sow in righteousness," they should "reap in mercy;" that is, they should experience that measure of mercy, whereby God above their desert rewards those, who sincerely endeavour to do His commandments. Dr. Pocock. The whole verse may be thus paraphrased: Give yourselves to all holy and conscientious endeavours: sow to yourselves in holiness and righteousness, and reap mercy and lovingkindness from the Lord; break up the fallow grounds of your hearts by a true and serious repentance; for it is time for you to turn to the Lord, and to seek to recover His favour; so far, as that He may rain upon you the showers of His grace and mercy, whereby ye may appear righteous in His sight. Bp. Hall.

13. Ye have plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity;] In the former verse he shewed, what God commanded them to do: here, in the like figurative expressions, he shews what they had done. Dr. Pocock. But alas, contrary to My commandments, ye have ploughed up deep furrows of wickedness, and have reaped a large crop of iniquity. Bp. Hall. As your thoughts and designs have been evil, such has been the fruit and reward of your labours: compare chap. viii. 7. And "ye have eaten the fruit of lies:" ye have received the just reward of your idolatries. See the note on chap. vii. 3. W. Lowth.

14.— as Shalman spoiled Beth-arbel] The allusion is to a military exploit, not elsewhere recorded or mentioned in Scripture, but doubtless well known in Hosea's time; in which some powerful conqueror prosecuted his victory with extreme cruelty, and spared neither sex nor age. The Israelites are threatened with a like calamity. Dr. Pocock, Bp. Horsley.

15. So shall Beth-el do unto you] God sent the evils; the Assyrian, His instrument, inflicted them: but Beth-el is said to do to the people, what they suffered, because their idolatry and great wickedness there moved God to bring the destroyer against them. Dr. Pocock.

—— in a morning shall the king of Israel utterly be cut off.] Suddenly shall Hoshea be deprived of his kingdom, and an end put to the whole state and government of Israel. See Ps. xlvi. 5; xc. 14; cxliii. 8; Jer. vii. 13; xxxv. 15. W. Lowth.

Chap. XI. ver. 1. When Israel was a child, then I loved him,] When the people was in the state of childhood; that is, in the patriarchal times, and during their continuance under the Egyptian bondage. W. Lowth.

—— and called my son out of Egypt.] Israel is called God's "son," and His "firstborn," Exod. iv. 22, 23; and therein was an eminent figure of the Messias, in whom all God's promises are fulfilled. This prophecy is applied by St. Matthew, chap. ii. 15, to our Lord's return out of Egypt, after His flight thither in His infancy: and the literal sense of the words does more properly belong to Him, than to Israel; which is observable in many other prophecies, which can but improperly be applied to those, of whom they were spoken; and, taking them in their true sense, are only fulfilled in Christ. See particularly Ps. xxii. 16, 18. W. Lowth.

2. As they called them, &c.] The more earnestly the Prophets called on them to cleave steadfastly to the true God, ver. 7, the more they were bent to depart from Him to the worship of idols. W. Lowth.

3. I taught Ephraim also to go,] See Deut. i. 31; viii. 2. W. Lowth.

—— but they knew not that I healed them.] They considered not that the health and safety they enjoyed was bestowed by Me. W. Lowth.

4. I drew them with cords of a man,] That is, such cords as are proper to draw men with, as they are men, endued with reason, to discern between good and evil, and with freedom of will to choose the one before the other; and with such a temper and agreement of both, that what we apprehend to be good, that we freely choose, and refuse what we think to be evil. Accordingly God sets before us good and evil, and both in such a light that we may clearly discern the difference between them, and choose the good before the evil. Thus He draws us with cords, suitable to man's constitution; in explanation He adds, "with bands of love," or with expressions of His love and kindness towards us. In this way one man commonly draws another: how much more can Almighty God do it, who hath the hearts of all men in His hand, and the greatest favours to bestow which man can possibly desire? This is the meaning of the Apostle, "that the goodness of God leadeth us to repentance," Rom. ii. 4. It doth not force or drag us, but it leads us to repentance, and so to Christ. Dp. Beveridge. Not violently forcing them into His service, but striving to win them over with gentle invitations, and great favours and benefits, such as usually most powerfully work on reasonable men, and bind them to their benefactor. Dr. Pocock.

—— take off the yoke] Or, "lift up," as in the margin. The expression of "lifting up" the yoke refers, as is well observed by Abp. Newcome, and before him by Bishop Lowth on Isaiah, chap. i. 3, to the custom of raising the yoke forward, to cool the neck of the labouring beast. Bp. Horsley.

5. He shall not return into the land of Egypt,] They were desirous of making their escape thither, and many families perhaps effected it: see chap. ix. 6. But here it is threatened, that the nation in a body should not be permitted so to escape, because they refused to return to God. Bp. Horsley.

6. —— his branches,] That is, his people. Dr. Wells.

8. How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? &c.] God's mercies are here pathetically described as contending with His justice, to shew that He does not willingly afflict or grieve the children of men, Lam. iii. 33. W. Lowth.

When nothing will do, with what difficulty and reluctance does God deliver up His people into the hands of their enemies? "How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? &c." What a conflict is here! What tenderness and yearning of His bowels towards them! He cannot find in His heart to give them up, till He is forced to it by the last necessity. Abp. Tillotson.

—— mine heart is turned within me, &c.] These words would seem to import a change of mind and purpose in any but God, whose counsels man's words cannot duly express, nor his understanding fully comprehend. Dr. Pocock.

9. I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger,] I do not give way to a blind rage, as men often do: but as God, an unchangeable, and will still fulfil My gracious promises made to Abraham and his people, of being their God. Compare Mal. iii. 6. W. Lowth.

—— I will not return to destroy] When I come a second time, it will not be to destroy. An indirect promise of coming again, not for judgment, but for mercy. Bp. Horsley.

—— and I will not enter into the city.] A second time, in order to make an utter destruction. W. Lowth, Dr. Wells.

10. They shall walk after the Lord:] They shall follow God's call, and comply with His commands, when He shall convert them by an efficacious call of His providence, or powerful preaching of the Gospel. W. Lowth. These words may be understood as a prophecy of the conversion of the remainder of Israel to Christ, and the settling of them in a spiritual kingdom: which prophecy has been already in great measure made good, by the calling in of many of them at Christ's first coming, and the preaching of the Gospel; and is still fulfilling, and to be fulfilled, till His second coming, by the conversion of as many of them as the Lord shall call in the interval between His two comings. Near his second coming it is a received opinion, that there shall be a signal conversion of them. Dr. Pocock.

—— he shall roar like a lion.] "He," that is, Christ, "the Lion of the tribe of Juda," Rev. v. 5. The same, whom it is said that "they shall walk after;" that is to say, Jehovah, the LORD, the true and essential God. Dr. Pocock. The roaring is unquestionably the sound of the Gospel; and that sound was to begin to be uttered by the voice of the incarnate God Himself. Bp. Horsley.

—— then the children shall tremble from the west.] At this efficacious call of God, His children shall come in haste from the several places of their dispersion, and particularly from the western parts of the world, see Zech. viii. 7, called "the sea" in the original, and expressed in Isaiah by "the islands of the sea:" see Is. xi. 11; xxiv. 14. W. Lowth. "The children" mean primarily and more immediately the Israelites in dispersion abroad out of their own country, Deut. xiv. 1; and together with them such of the Gentiles, as with them should be called by "the roaring of the lion," the preaching of the Gospel, to the partaking of the common faith and salvation. Dr. Pocock. It is impossible to render in English the full force of the original word, which we translate "tremble." It expresses the rapid motion of birds in the air upon fluttering pinion. Bp. Horsley.

11. They shall tremble as a bird out of Egypt, &c.] The Israelites were dispersed, as into other remote parts denoted by "the west," or "the sea," so also into Egypt, whither diverse of them betook themselves, and into Assyria, whither they were carried captives. By the naming of these places may be well understood all other countries where any of them should be: from whence it is here promised that they should make speed to come in unto God in their due time. Dr. Pocock.

—— and I will place them in their houses.] As doves naturally resort to the houses they are used to, see Is. lx. 8, so shall these return and settle in their own native country; see Ezek. xxviii. 25. W. Lowth. Or, instead of regarding these words as a promise of bringing the Jews back to their own land, it may be better to look upon them as promising spiritual good things under expressions taken from temporal: so that by "placing them in their houses" may be meant the bringing them into the Church, and there putting them in a sure and settled state; a state of quiet and security like that of a person fixed in his own house. Dr. Pocock.

12. Ephraim compasseth me about with lies, &c.] In the mean time, Ephraim makes a profession of My name, but false and counterfeit: and the house of Israel serves Me, but in hypocrisy. Bp. Hall.

—— but Judah yet ruleth with God, &c.] But Judah still orders his kingdom in God's appointed way, retaining kings of the lineage of David, and preserving a lawful priesthood; and by so doing is "faithful with the saints," that is, with his holy forefathers Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and with his other progenitors and holy men; or, as in the margin, is "faithful with the Most Holy," still adhering to the worship of God. Dr. Pocock.

CHAP. XII. ver. 1. Ephraim feedeth on wind, &c.] A proverbial expression to signify labour in vain, or pursuing such measures as will bring damage rather than benefit. W. Lowth.

—— lies and desolation;] Multiplying his falsehood, he multiplies the causes of his own destruction. Bp. Horsley.

—— oil is carried into Egypt.] They project how to make themselves strong by their leagues with the Assyrians; and they send of their most precious presents to insinuate with the Egyptians. Bp. Hall.

3. He took his brother by the heel &c.] From the mention of Jacob in the foregoing verse, the Prophet takes occasion to put his posterity in mind of the particular favours God had bestowed upon his posterity for his sake. His taking his brother by the heel in the womb, denoted, that he obtained the right of the firstborn, and deprived his brother of it. W. Lowth.

The taking of his brother by the heel, is not mentioned in disparagement of the Patriarch. On the contrary, the whole of these two verses is a commemoration of God's kindness for the ancestor of the Israelites, on which the Prophet founds an animated exhortation to them, to turn to that God, from whom they might expect so much favour. This favour of God for Jacob displayed itself when he was less than an infant; for before he was born he took his brother by the heel; and, in his adult vigour, he was endued with such strength, as to prevail against an angel. Bp. Horsley.

4. —— there he spake with us;] That is, God spake with us in the loins of Jacob. The things spoken certainly concerned Jacob's posterity, as much as, or more than, himself. Bp. Horsley.

5. —— the Lord is his memorial.] That is, God's memorial: His appropriate, perpetual, incommunicable name, expressing His essence. Bp. Horsley. See Exod. iii. 15.

6. Therefore turn thou to thy God: &c.] Thou therefore, O Israel, encouraged by the memory of God's love for thy progenitor, and by the example which thou hadst in Him, of the efficacy of weeping and supplication, turn to thy God in penitence and prayer, and in the works of righteousness; and ever, under all circumstances, and at all times, look out for His mercy and aid, and be not weary with expectation of His coming. *Bp. 7. He is a merchant,] Or, as it is in the margin, according to all the ancient versions, except the Chaldee, "He is Canaan." God says to the Prophet, Instead of turning to Me, and keeping to works of mercy and justice, he is a mere heathen huckster. Thou hast miscalled him "Jacob." He is "Canaan." Not Jacob, the godly, the heir of the promise. But Canaan, the cheat, the son of the curse. There is an ambiguity in the original, where the word is both a proper name, and an appellative signifying a merchant. Bp. Horsley, Dr. Pocock.

8. And Ephraim said, Yet I am become rich, &c.] These words declare the strange pride and insolence of Ephraim, refusing to forsake their evil ways, but pleasing and applauding themselves in them, as having been found by experience good and profitable. Dr. Pocock.

—— iniquity — that were sin.] According to a Jewish commentator, the Hebrew word for "iniquity" denotes something more grievous than that for "sin;" so that the sense may be, they shall find in me neither great iniquity, nor so much as any light ordinary sin. Or the word for "that" may be rendered by and or or. Dr. Pocock.

9. And I that am the Lord thy God from the land of Egypt &c.] I, who brought thee out from Egypt, and have still continued My favours towards thee, will in aftertimes return thy captivity. W. Lowth.

The words may be understood, not of a temporal deliverance, commemorated by feast and times of rejoicing, particularly that of tabernacles; but of deliverance from spiritual bondage by Christ, and of admission into the Church of Christ. Dr. Pocock. Concerning the feast of tabernacles, see the notes on Lev. xxiii. 40; Nehem. viii. 17, 18.

10. — and used similitudes, by the ministry of the prophets.] Commanding the Prophets to perform symbolical actions; as, in the case of Isaiah, going naked; Jeremiah, binding himself; Ezekiel, lying on one side; not mourning for his wife; Hosea's marriage; and many other instances. Bp. Horsley.

11. Is there iniquity in Gilead? &c.] The tribes settled about Gilead, beyond Jordan, were already captivated by Tiglath-pileser. God by the Prophet declares, that idolatry, still practised in Gilgal, was equally abominable, and would bring down similar judgments upon the remaining tribes, on the west of Jordan. Bp. Horsley.

—— as heaps in the furrows of the fields.] As frequent every where as clods in the furrows of the fields. Bp. Hall. Their altars stand so thick that they are as discernible as stones gathered up and laid in heaps in the fields. W. Lowth.

12, 13. And Jacob fled into the country of Syria, &c.] So opposite to thine was the conduct of thy father Jacob, that he fled into Syria to avoid an alliance with any of the idolatrous families of Canaan; and, in firm reliance on God's promises, submitted to the greatest hardships. And, in reward of his faith, God did such great things for his posterity, bringing them out of the land of Egypt, and leading them through the wilderness like sheep, by the hand of His servant Moses. Bp. Horsley.

14. Ephraim provoked him to anger &c.] Notwithstanding all My favours, shewn to these people and their ancestors, they have highly provoked Me by their idolatries and other sins. Therefore shall their wickedness be the cause of their destruction; and as they have reproached and dishonoured God by word and deed, God shall, as a just recompense, make them a reproach and byword among the heathen. See chap. vii. 6; Deut. xxviii. 37: compare Dan. xi. 18. W. Lowth.

Chap. XIII. ver. 1. When Ephraim spake trembling, &c.] While Ephraim behaved himself humbly towards God, as his father Jacob, with weeping and supplication, chap. xii. 4, he was in great power, authority, and dignity in Israel: but when he offended, by proudly forsaking God, and worshipping that shameful idol Baal, he lost his former preeminence, and grew contemptible: his strength immediately declined, and gave manifest symptoms of ruin and destruction. Dr. Pocock, W. Lowth. He was consigned to destruction from his enemies. Abp. Newcome.

2. — kiss the calves.] That is, worship the calves. Among the ancient idolaters, to kiss the idol was an act of the most solemn adoration. Thus we read of "all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him." Tully mentions a brasen statue at Agrigentum, in which the workmanship of the mouth was visibly worn by the frequent kisses of the worshippers. And in allusion to this rite, the holy Psalmist, calling upon the apostate faction to avert the wrath of the incarnate God, by full acknowledgment of His Divinity, bids them "kiss the Son," that is, worship Him. Bp. Horsley.

4. Yet I am the Lord thy God &c.] In thy distress thou betookest thyself to other gods, expecting relief from them; but thou shalt find, that none will be able to save thee but Myself, whenever thou wilt sincerely turn to Me: compare chap. xii. 9; Is. xliii. 11. This and the following verse are an introduction to the gracious promises that follow, ver. 9—14; and chap. xiv; and import, that God will never utterly forget the promises made to their fathers. See Rom. xi. 29. W. Lowth.

6. — therefore have they forgotten me.] "Therefore," for that very reason. My kindness itself was the occasion of their ingratitude; for, in the pride of heart, which the miraculous supply of their wants for so long a time produced in them, they forgot their Benefactor. Bp. Horsley.

11. I gave thee a king in mine anger,] When the Israelites desired to have a king, they forgot that they had a king already; the Lord of all the earth condescending to be in a peculiar manner their immediate Sovereign. Their petition for a king was in contempt of that sovereignty of God; and this was the circumstance, by which they incurred God's displeasure in that petition. I would observe, that the seven verses of this chapter, from the fifth to the eleventh inclusively, form a section which regards the whole race of Israel in general. At the twelfth verse the prophecy turns again on Ephraim in particular. Bp. Horsley.

— I gave thee a king in mine anger, and took him away in my wrath.] Or, "will take him away." I complied with your request in giving you a king Saul, though I was justly displeased at it: see 1 Sam. viii. 7; x. 19. And of later times I have suffered you to set up new kings, after you had murdered their predecessors; see chap. viii. 4: and now I will take away your present king Hoshea, and at the same time put an end to your kingdom and nation. W. Lowth.

12. The iniquity of Ephraim is bound up; his sin is hid.] Usually such things as are bound up or tied together, and hid or laid up in some safe or secret place, are not neglected or forgotten, but laid aside in order that they may be forthcoming and produced, when occasion shall require. God therefore, in these terms expressing His dealing with Ephraim as to their sins, manifestly declares, that though His judgments do not immediately seize them, yet their iniquity is not forgotten by Him, but will in due time be brought to light and punished. The expressions may be illustrated by Deut. xxxii. 34, 35; Job xiv. 17. Dr. Pocock.

13. — he is an unwise son; for he should not stay long &c.] The old translation renders it more plainly; "Else he would not stand still like a stillborn child." As a child, if it could be supposed to have understanding, would deliver itself out of the straits of the womb, and not tarry there to the manifest danger of itself and the mother; compare 2 Kings xix. 3: so if Ephraim or Israel had acted wisely, they would have prevented their approaching destruction by a speedy reformation. W. Lowth.

14. I will ransom them from the power of the grave; &c.] If we apply this to Ephraim or the Israelites, spoken of before, it may signify, Though they be in never so hopeless and desperate a condition, God will in due time deliver them out of it. See the like expressions, Ps. lvi. 13; lxxi. 20; lxxxvi. 13. W. Lowth.

But the words are rather to be understood as a promising new and extraordinary benefits, obtained and conferred by our Saviour Jesus Christ, and not limited either to Jews or Israelites, but together with them reached forth to all sorts of men. Dr. Pocock.

—— the grave;] Or "hell," as the Hebrew word also signifies. "The grave" is the common receptacle of the bodies of the dead: and by "ransoming from the power of the grave" is meant, a freeing of the bodies of those who are ransomed in due time from the grave by a joyful resurrection. Dr. Pocock. But it should be rendered "hell," for the Hebrew word for the grave is different, and the two names are never confounded by the sacred writers. No two things indeed can be more distinct. By "hell" is meant in this passage, not the place where the damned are to suffer their torment, but the invisible place, where the departed souls of the deceased remain, till the appointed time shall come for the reunion of soul and body. This is the "hell" of the Old Testament; though, by an abuse of the word, the place of torment is the first notion it presents to the English reader. But the English word "hell" properly imports no more than the invisible or hidden place, from the Saxon word "helan," to cover over: (see the note from Parkhurst on Job xxvi. 5, 6.) In the New Testament, we find the word "hell" in our English Bibles in twenty-one passages in all. In nine of these it signifies a place of torment; namely, in these: Matt. v. 22, 29, 30; x. 28; xviii. 9; xxiii. 15, 33; Mark ix. 47; Luke xii. 5. In the other twelve, simply the region of departed spirits. And in the same sense it is to be taken in the Apostles' Creed, "He descended into hell:" of this place we know little, except that to those, who die in the Lord, it is a place of comfort and rest; not a paradise of eternal sleep and senselessness, but a place of happy rest and tranquil hope. In the prophetick imagery it is often mentioned as a dark cave deep in the bowels of the earth. Sometimes it is personified, as in this passage. Bp. Horsley.

—— O death, I will be thy plagues; &c.] The Apostle's triumphant exclamation in the passage referred to in the margin is an indirect allusion to this text of Hosea. Bp. Horsley.

—— repentance shall be hid from mine eyes.] That is, God will never repent of His determination of ransoming and redeeming them; He will certainly make it good. Dr. Pocock.

15. Though he be fruitful among his brethren, &c.] But now this as the case stands with Ephraim, though he be fruitful among his brethren, yet I will fetch the Assyrian upon him, &c. Bp. Hall. The word "Ephraim" denotes fruitfulness; see Gen. xli. 52. This tribe answered his name, being the most numerous and potent of all the ten tribes. W. Lowth.

The frequent and sudden transitions from threatening to promise, from indignation to pathetick persuasion, and the contrary, produce much obscurity in the latter part of this Prophet; which however disappears, when breaks are made in the proper places. In the thirteenth verse, the peril of Ephraim's situation, arising from his own hardened thoughtlessness, is described in the most striking images. In the fourteenth, God the Saviour comforts him with the promise of the final deliverance and salvation. In this verse is introduced a new threatening, with which the chapter ends. Bp. Horsley.

—— he shall spoil the treasure of all pleasant vessels.] "He;" either Jehovah, or the conqueror represented under the image of the wind. "All pleasant vessels;" every article of ornamental furniture, of costly materials and exquisite workmanship. Bp. Horsley.

If sin be not followed by repentance, and a thorough renunciation of all former lusts, habits, and customs, it will be visited with a destruction, like that of Samaria, which is here foretold, and about four years after was fulfilled. Our Saviour has made the application on another like occasion, and we ought all to lay it to heart, that "except we repent, we shall all likewise perish." Wogan.

Chap. XIV. Having denounced in the foregoing chapters heavy judgments against Israel for their idolatry and other sins, the Prophet now shows that the only way to prevent or escape the judgments of God is by repentance, which he earnestly exhorts them to take. Dr. Pocock.

Ver. 1. O Israel.] The whole family of Israel, in both its branches, is addressed. Bp. Horsley.

2. Take with you words,] That is, a set form of supplication. That set forms were in use among the Jews in the earliest ages, upon all solemn occasions, is evident from various passages of Holy Writ. Bp. Horsley, Dr. Pocock.

—— so will we render the calves of our lips.] The meaning is, We will, instead of offering sacrifices, render the confession of our lips. Dr. Pocock. "Lips" are here put for praises and thanksgivings uttered by the lips. This kind of figure, which puts the cause or instrument for the effect, is very frequent with the sacred writers. Bp. Horsley.

3. Asshur shall not save us; &c.] The first part of the people's repentance is described as consisting in a reliance solely upon God's protection, and not putting any trust in human strength: and then in renouncing all idolatrous worship. The Israelites had formerly made an alliance with the Assyrians; see chap. v. 13; viii. 9; xii. 1: and they are often upbraided by the Prophets for their courting foreign alliances, and particularly strengthening themselves with horses from Egypt or Assyria. See Is. xxx. 16; xxxvi. 8; 2 Chron. xvi. 7. W. Lowth.

—— for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy.] God is often said to take especial care of "the fatherless." He gives particular command "not to afflict any fatherless child," Exod. xxii. 22; He doth "execute the judgment of the fatherless," Deut. x. 18; He is therefore styled "the helper of the fatherless," Ps. x. 14; and "a Father" to them, Ps. lxviii. 5; and it is delivered as an expression of exceeding great anger towards the people, that "He will not have mercy on their fatherless," Is. ix. 17. The Israelites therefore, being now in such a condition, as may be well signified by the appellation of "fatherless," are taught to take with them in their address to God that name, of great efficacy in moving Him to mercy, and even, as it were, challenging it as a privilege. Dr. Pocock.

4. I will heal their backsliding, &c.] God's gracious answer to the professions of repentance; assuring them of His being reconciled to them, and, as a token of it, freeing them from their sins and the consequent punishment due to them; compare chap. xi. 7: and embracing them with a true love and affection, without any remembrance of their former provocations. W. Lowth.

If all the Israelites had turned to the Lord their God at the preaching of the Gospel, and believed in His Christ, they would have found this promise made good to them all. As many of them, as were converted to Him, enjoyed the benefit of it, where or however they were dispersed; and doubtless shall still do so, as many as shall at any time come in to Him, wheresoever they remain. Dr. Pocock.

5. I will be as the dew unto Israel: &c.] I will be comfortable and refreshing unto Israel, even as the dew is to the summer grass: so that he shall grow up in beauty as the lily, and in strength and height as the cedar in Lebanon. Bp. Hall. Most interpreters understand Lebanon to be here figuratively taken for the forests growing on it. Dr. Pocock.

—— as the lily,] After the first rains in the autumn, the fields about Aleppo every where throw out the autumnal lily daffodil; and the few plants, which had stood the summer, now grow with fresh vigour. Dr. Russell.

6. — his smell as Lebanon.] The mountain is celebrated by travellers for the fragrance of the greens, that clothe its sides. Maundrell found the great rupture, "which runs at least seven hours travel directly up to the sea, and is on both sides exceeding steep and high, clothed with fragrant greens from the top to the bottom." Bp. Horsley.

7. They that dwell under his shadow shall return;] Most interpreters translate the sentence thus: They shall return, and

Before CHRIST about 725.

‖ Or, he sows.

¶ Or, memorial.

‖ grow as the vine: the ‖ scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon.

8 Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have heard him, ¶ and observed him: I am like a green fir tree. From me is thy fruit found.

9 Who is wise, and he shall understand these things? prudent, and he shall know them? for the ways of the LORD are right, and the just shall walk in them: but the transgressors shall fall therein.

dwell under His shadow: that is, they shall return into their own country, and rest safely under the shadow or protection of the Almighty. Compare Ps. xci. 1; and see the note on chap. i. 11. W. Lowth. Or the words are more properly a description of the happy and prosperous condition, which shall be enjoyed by those who dwell under the shadow of the Church, the Israel of God. Dr. Pocock.

—— as the wine of Lebanon.] The Phenician wines in general were esteemed by the ancients, especially those of Tripolis, Tyre, and Berytus, places at the foot of Lebanon, or very near it: and the wines of that country still preserve their character. Niebuhr says, "The wine of Mount Lebanon, long since celebrated by the Prophet Hosea, is still excellent." Bp. Horsley.

8. Ephraim shall say, What have I to do &c.] This verse contains the prophecy of a dialogue between God and Ephraim, or Israel His people, after their conversion. They begin with declaring their utter aversion to idolatry; see ver. 3. To which God graciously replies, that He has "heard" them confessing their sins, and expressing their abhorrence of them, (comp. Jer. xxxi. 18,) and that He will "observe" them, that is, will guide them with the eye of His providence and mercy. W. Lowth.

—— I am like a green fir tree.] I shall be to thee as a tall and shady fir tree; and, whatsoever fruit thou yieldest, it shall be of My giving. Bp. Hall.

9. —— for the ways of the Lord are right,] That is, His commandments. The just shall walk safely by obeying them; the transgressors shall fall, by virtue of the same commandments, in consequence of their transgression. Grotius.

INTRODUCTION.

THERE is little doubt that Joel lived in the reigns of Uzziah king of Judah, and of Jeroboam II. king of Israel, who flourished as contemporary sovereigns between the years of the world 3194 and 3219; and that he delivered his prophecies soon after Hosea had commenced his ministry: though some Jewish and Christian writers have assigned to him a later period; some placing him in the reign of Jotham; others in that of Joram; and others contending that he prophesied under Manasseh, or Josiah; the last of which monarchs began to reign about 640 years before the birth of Christ.

Joel was the son of Pethuel, or Bethuel, and, according to some reports, of the tribe of Reuben. He is related to have been born at Bethoron; which was probably the lower or nether Bethoron, a town in the territory of Benjamin, between Jerusalem and Cesarea. Of the particulars of his life, or of the age to which he attained, we have no account. Dorotheus relates only, that he died in peace at the place of his nativity.

The Book appears to be entirely prophetick; though Joel, under the impression of foreseen calamities, describes their effects as present, and by an animated representation anticipates the scenes of misery which lowered over Judea, chap. i. 4—7, 10, 16—20. Though it cannot be positively determined to what period the description contained in the first chapter may apply, it is generally supposed that the Prophet blends two subjects of affliction in one general consideration or beautiful allegory; and that under the devastation to be produced by locusts in the vegetable world, he pourtrays some more distant calamities to be produced by the armies of the Chaldeans in their invasion of Judea.

In the second chapter the Prophet proceeds to a more general denunciation of God's vengeance; which is delivered with such force and aggravation of circumstance, as to be in some measure descriptive of that final judgment, which every temporal dispensation of the Deity must faintly prefigure. The severe declarations of Joel are intermingled with exhortations to repentance, and to the auxiliary means of promoting its effects, fasting and prayer; as also with promises of deliverance, and of a prosperity predictive of evangelical blessings.

In consideration of these important prophecies, we need not wonder that the Jews should have looked up to Joel with particular reverence, or that he should be cited as a Prophet by the evangelical writers; chap. ii. 32, compared with Rom. x. 13; Acts ii. 16—21. Dr. Gray.

In his style Joel is peculiarly elegant, perspicuous, diffuse, and fluent; he is also in a high degree sublime, bold, and animated. In his first and second chapters he shews how well prophetical poetry succeeds in description; how greatly it delights in metaphors, comparisons, and allegories. Nor is the arrangement of his subjects less beautiful than the colouring of his language: the amplification of calamities; exhortation to repentance; the promise to the penitent of earthly as well as heavenly blessings; the restoration of the Israelitish prosperity; the punishments inflicted on their adversaries. However, both in this and in other places, when we extol perspicuity of elocution, and beauty of composition, we do not deny that there is sometimes great obscurity in the matter: which may occasionally be observed in the conclusion of this prophecy. Bp. Lowth.

Chap. I. ver. 2. Hear this; ye old men, &c.] The Prophet declares the unexampled severity of the present judgment, by appealing to the memory of the ancients, and the observation of the present generation, whether they ever knew or heard of any thing like it, so that it deserved to be recorded as a warning to aftertimes. Compare chap. ii. 2. W. Lowth.

4.—the palmerworm—the locust—the cankerworm—the caterpiller.] Four kinds of noxious creatures are here described, the Hebrew names of which appear to be derived from their destructive qualities. It is uncertain what names they ought to bear in our own, and other European languages. Our translators have very well rendered them by the names of such known creatures, as concur in hurting and devouring the fruits of the earth, so that whatever escapes one, is destroyed by another. Dr. Pocock.

5. Awake, ye drunkards,] It may seem probable, that the sin of drunkenness was then among others much indulged in, and

CHAP. II.

1 He sheweth unto Zion the terribleness of God's judgment. 12 He exhorteth to repentance, 15 prescribeth a fast, 18 promiseth a blessing thereon. 21 He comforteth Zion with present, 28 and future blessings.

---

rendered the people sottish and stupid, as drunkards usually are, so that they regarded neither the work of the Lord, nor their own good. To them therefore He appears more particularly to address Himself, as having by that odious sin drawn down the present judgment on themselves and their country. The word "awake" is used to denote the drunkard's insensibility to his danger in Prov. xxiii. 35; and elsewhere it signifies a man's recovery from security in other sins: Rom. xiii. 11; Eph. v. 14. Dr. Pocock.

6. — a nation] Locusts, poetically so called. Abp. Newcome. As the Prophet applies the term, "a nation," to the locusts, and Solomon calls the ants "a people," Prov. xxx. 25, so Homer has "the nations of swarming bees," and "the numerous nations of swarming flies;" and Orpheus expressly mentions "an innumerable nation of locusts." Parkhurst.

—— is come up] A future event, which might be averted by repentance, chap. ii. 12, &c, is spoken of as having already taken place, to enliven the description by setting the images before the eyes of the reader. Abp. Newcome.

—— whose teeth are the teeth of a lion,] The same comparison is used in Rev. ix. 8; and denotes the great power of doing mischief possessed by these little vermin. Elsewhere, things which have great force to do hurt, are compared to the teeth of a lion, Ecclus. xxi. 2; Ps. lviii. 6. Dr. Pocock.

7. He hath laid my vine waste, &c.] See the notes on Exod. x. 4, 15.

—— the branches thereof are made white.] By reason of the bark being eaten from the boughs. Bp. Hall.

8. Lament like a virgin &c.] The words are an apostrophe to the land of Judea: the Prophet puts her in mind that she ought to be deeply affected with the sore strokes of the Divine vengeance, and express her inward sense of those calamities with the same outward expressions of mourning, as a young virgin that was betrothed to an husband would lament his untimely loss. "The husband of her youth," is a woman's first husband; as the "wife of his youth," Mal. ii. 15, is a husband's first wife. W. Lowth.

9. The meat offering &c.] The earth yieldeth not so much as wherewith to make a meat offering or drink offering unto the Lord; the corn and the wine and the oil are utterly consumed; so that the priests, the Lord's ministers, have just cause to mourn. So also verses 10—13. Bp. Hall.

14. Sanctify ye a fast, &c.] In order to deprecate God's wrath, and avert His judgments. See chap. ii. 15, 16. W. Lowth. The word "sanctify" seems to require, how the people were to prepare themselves for the enjoined fast, and to behave themselves in it; namely, with more than ordinary sanctity and holiness, not thinking it sufficient only to abstain from meat and drink, which is sufficient to denominate a man to fast, but withal to abstain from sin and wickedness, which is requisite to a holy and religious fast, such as is the duty and sign of an humble penitent, and is alone acceptable to God. Dr. Pocock.

—— into the house of the Lord your God,] See 1 Kings viii. 37. W. Lowth.

17. — the barns are broken down;] The receptacles for the fruits of the earth are not repaired, because there is nothing to treasure up in them. Abp. Newcome.

19. — for the fire hath devoured the pastures &c.] For the scorching drought hath devoured all the herbage of the wilderness, and the fiery beams have burnt up all the trees of the field. Bp. Hall. The wilderness is sometimes opposed to the hills or mountains, and then it signifies the plains, and places for pasture. See Is. lxiii. 13; Jer. ix. 10. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 800.

BLOW ye the ‖ trumpet in Zion, and sound an alarm in my holy mountain: let all the inhabitants of the land tremble: for the day of the LORD cometh, for it is nigh at hand;

‖ Or, cornet.

2 A day of darkness and of gloominess, a day of clouds and of thick darkness, as the morning spread upon the mountains: a great people and a strong; there hath not been ever the like, neither shall be any more after it, even to the years † of many generations.

† Heb. of generation and generation.

3 A fire devoureth before them; and behind them a flame burneth: the land is as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them a desolate wilderness; yea, and nothing shall escape them.

4 The appearance of them is as the appearance of horses; and as horsemen, so shall they run.

5 Like the noise of chariots on the tops of mountains shall they leap, like the noise of a flame of fire that devoureth the stubble, as a strong people set in battle array.

Before CHRIST about 800.

6 Before their face the people shall be much pained: all faces shall gather † blackness.

7 They shall run like mighty men; they shall climb the wall like men of war; and they shall march every one on his ways, and they shall not break their ranks:

8 Neither shall one thrust another; they shall walk every one in his path: and when they fall upon the ‖ sword, they shall not be wounded.

‖ Or, dart.

9 They shall run to and fro in the city; they shall run upon the wall, they shall climb up upon the houses; they shall enter in at the windows like a thief.

10 The earth shall quake before them;

Chap. II. ver. 1. Blow ye the trumpet in Zion, &c.] The Prophet describes the locusts and caterpillars as God's "army," ver. 11; in pursuance of which metaphor he exhorts the people to prepare to meet them, in the same terms as if they were alarmed to encounter an enemy, which was by sounding a trumpet. See Jer. iv. 5, 6, 19. This ceremony was not only used to give notice of an approaching enemy, but likewise to publish the times of the solemn assemblies for the worship of God: see Numb. x. 3, 9, 10. And this is the chief use they were to make of it upon this occasion; see ver. 15. For there was no other way to avert the impending judgment, but humbling themselves before God with fasting and prayer. W. Lowth.

—— the day of the Lord] A day, in which He will send very terrible judgments on the land, and take vengeance on them for their sins. Dr. Pocock.

2. A day of darkness] A very calamitous day, bringing with it much mischief and distress, which are figuratively set forth by darkness, as a state of prosperity is by light. See Amos v. 18, &c. By some interpreters "darkness" here is understood properly for darkness in the air, caused by what should then befall them in their land. Compare Exod. x. 15. Dr. Pocock. See on that passage the note from Dr. Shaw, whose testimony concerning locusts "darkening the sun" is confirmed by various authors, ancient and modern.

—— as the morning spread upon the mountains:] As a morning cloud spread upon the mountains, which hides the sun and the heavens, and threatens the certain coming of showers. Dr. Pocock.

—— a great people and a strong:] The Prophet speaks of the locusts in such military terms, and represents them like such a formidable army, that it has induced several learned men to think, that they are put by a figure to denote real armies. Another opinion is, that we are to understand the locust, canker-worm, palmer-worm, and caterpiller, spoken of ver. 4 of the preceding chapter, in a literal sense; and that the military terms, which are used, may by the authority of parallel passages in Scripture be applied to them. Reading.

—— there hath not been ever the like, &c.] See Exod. x. 14. In both places we are to take it for a proverbial expression, to set forth the extraordinary greatness of the judgment. Compare 2 Kings xviii. 5; xxiii. 25. W. Lowth.

3. A fire devoureth before them; &c.] They consume like a general conflagration, as Pliny says, "burning things up by their touch." Sir Hans Sloane, in his Natural History of Jamaica, says, "They destroy the ground not only for the time, but burn trees for two years after:" and Ludolphus, in the History of Ethiopia, "Wheresoever they feed, their leavings seem as it were parched with fire." Abp. Newcome.

—— as the garden of Eden] A proverbial expression for a place of pleasure and fruitfulness, as we commonly use the word Paradise. See Gen. xiii. 10; Is. li. 3. W. Lowth.

—— nothing shall escape them.] That is, nothing which the ground produces. Abp. Newcome. Different authors give accounts similar to Dr. Shaw's in the note on Exod. x. 15, concerning the devastation occasioned by locusts among all sorts of vegetable productions, not only herbage, corn, pulse, the fruits and leaves, the buds and very bark of trees, but even the hemp, notwithstanding its great bitterness, and the reeds with which the African huts are thatched.

5. Like the noise of chariots &c.] See Rev. ix. 9; Nahum iii. 2. Bochart says, that a swarm of locusts make so loud a noise, when they move, that they may be heard six miles off. Abp. Newcome.

—— like the noise of a flame of fire &c.] The noise in the former comparison seems to be made by their motion; this is probably meant of the noise made by their chewing or eating. Dr. Pocock.

Cyril, quoted by Bochart, says of them, that while they are breaking their food with their teeth, the noise is like that of flame driven about by the wind. Abp. Newcome.

Dr. Chandler, in his Travels in Asia Minor, takes notice of the prodigious crackling and noise which accompanied an accidental fire, which was kindled in the long parched grass near Troas, and devoured all before it. Parkhurst.

6. —— all faces shall gather blackness.] The alteration in the countenance was to indicate the inward pain. Dr. Pocock. Compare Jer. viii. 21; Nahum ii. 10. W. Lowth.

7. They shall run like mighty men; &c.] They shall march in such a swift and orderly manner, that no place shall be inaccessible to them, nor any force be able to withstand them. W. Lowth.

8. Neither shall one thrust another;] Many writers mention the order of locusts in their flight and march; and their manner of proceeding directly forwards, whatever obstacles were interposed. Abp. Newcome. See Dr. Shaw's note on Exod. x. 15.

—— and when they fall upon the sword, they shall not be wounded.] This refers to the scales with which locusts are covered as with a coat of mail. Abp. Newcome.

9. They shall run to and fro in the city; &c.] Compare Exod. x. 5, 6. Jerome saith of locusts, that there is nothing inaccessible to them; they seize, not only on the fields, corn, and trees, but also enter cities, houses, and the most private chambers. Dr. Pocock.

lowing clause express great consternation and calamity. The two other clauses may well have a literal sense; see the note on ver. 2: or they may denote, in a strong eastern manner, devastation spread through a whole country. Abp. Newcome.

11. And the Lord shall utter his voice before his army:] Like a leader or general, He shall command or encourage this His army, and can make the meanest parts of the creation the instruments of His vengeance. God's voice sometimes denotes His anger: the most terrible way of declaring His will is when He speaks to us by His judgments. Compare chap. iii. 16; Amos i. 2; Jer. xxv. 30. The time of God's particular judgments, as well as that of His general one, is commonly expressed by the "day of the Lord," the former being an earnest and imperfect representation of the latter. W. Lowth.

12. Therefore also now, saith the Lord, &c.] The sins of the people were the cause, which merited this dreadful visitation: and the way to remove it was for the people to repent of their sins, by open confession and acknowledgment of them, by a deep humiliation and sorrow for them, and by utterly renouncing and forsaking them. This is the great reason of the Prophet's discourse, and the main point which he pursues throughout it. Reading.

—— turn ye even to me with all your heart,] Let not your heart be divided between God and your idols or other sins, but let it be given wholly up to Him. God requires in our love and service of Him, that it be "with all our heart, with all our soul, and with all our might," Deut. vi. 5; "and with all our mind," as our Saviour adds in repeating that first and great commandment, without obeying which no other can be duly observed, Mark xii. 30. Without being actuated by the heart, all performances of the outward man are insufficient and vain, or rather they are displeasing. But when the heart shall have duly performed its part, the outward man is not left unconcerned, but hath his part also to perform, in order to express how the inward man of the heart is really affected: and so by the joint concurrence of both true conversion or repentance is made up. The Prophet therefore to the inward affection of the whole heart adds those outward acts, which are to accompany and express it, "fasting, and weeping, and mourning." Dr. Pocock.

He that would so turn to the Lord, as to find mercy with Him, must not turn from one sin to another, or from one sect to another, or from one religion to another only; but he must turn from all his sins, from all his former wicked ways and unrighteous thoughts, and must "turn unto the Lord with all his heart:" that is, our hearts must be wholly inclined to God, and our souls be offered up as a whole burnt offering unto Him, without any mental reservation or hypocritical equivocation. There is no agreement between Christ and Belial, between God and sin in the same heart. Bp. Beveridge.

13. And rend your heart, and not your garments,] Not merely your garments. See Gen. xxxvii. 29, 34; Job i. 20; 2 Sam. i. 11.

—— repenteth him of the evil.] See the notes on Gen. vi. 6.

14. Who knoweth if he will return &c.] Who knoweth whether your humiliation may not yet prevail with Him, and cause Him to withdraw His judgments, and instead thereof to bestow a blessing of plenty upon us; so that there may be both matter and occasion for the sacrifices of our thanksgiving unto the Lord? Bp. Hall.

16. Gather the people, &c.] As their sin and its punishment was national, extending to all ranks and degrees of people, the repentance and humiliation was to be as extensive and general. All are summoned; none exempted. Wogan.

17. — between the porch and the altar.] The altar of burnt offerings stood before the porch of the temple; 2 Chron. viii. 12; and the mid-space in the open court was naturally a place of great concourse, that the prayers of the people might accompany the sacrifice. Abp. Newcome.

—— and let them say, Spare thy people, O Lord,] It was usual to prescribe certain forms of prayer or praise to the priests in their publick ministrations; see Hosea xiv. 2; 1 Chron. xvi. 36. Such was this here mentioned, wherein they beseech God to deliver His people, not for any merit of theirs, but for the glory of His own name, lest the neighbouring heathens should take occasion to blaspheme His name, as if He were not able to protect His people. Compare Ps. xlii. 10; lxxix. 10; cxv. 2. W. Lowth.

—— that the heathen should rule over them:] Or, as in the margin, "should use a by-word against them;" that is, should make them the subject of scorn and derision, as if they were forsaken by the God whom they worshipped. W. Lowth.

The translation "rule over them" may be supported; because, when they were distressed by the locusts, they would be an easier prey to an enemy: but to "make a proverb of them" is the more natural translation. Abp. Secker.

18. Then will the Lord be jealous for his land,] He will be moved with great affection for it, so as to take away what is injurious to it, and to seek its good, that it continue not desolate and a reproach to its enemies. Dr. Pocock.

20. — and his stink shall come up, &c.] That a strong and pestilential smell arises from the putrid heaps of locusts, whether driven upon land or cast up from the sea, in which they have perished, appears from the testimony of many writers. Among various other authorities to the same effect, St. Jerome is quoted by Bochart as saying, that in his time those troops of locusts, which covered Judea, were cast by the wind into the sea; and that, when the waters threw them up, their smell caused a pestilence. Thevenot says of them, "They live not above six months: and when dead, the stench of them so corrupts and infects the air, that it often occasions dreadful pestilences." Abp. Newcome.

— because he hath done great things.] Or rather, "although he hath done great things." Though this army of insects, by Divine appointment, has made such destruction in the land, yet shall it come to this shameful end. W. Lowth. Or, "because He doth or shall do great things;" He, that is, Jehovah. Junius, Castalio.

23. — for he hath given you the former rain] In the margin, "a teacher of righteousness:" a translation, which the words will well bear; and which is given in many versions, and by many expositors of great note and learning, most of whom understand it as a prophecy of the Messiah. Dr. Pocock.

— the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month.] See the notes on Deut. xi. 14; xxviii. 12; 1 Sam. xii. 17. The first month was Nisan, answering partly to our March, and partly to April.

25. — I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten,] That is, I will repair the damage, which the land has for several years received from the ravages of those devouring creatures. Dr. Pocock.

— my great army.] We have here a key to the grand and beautiful description which runs through these two chapters. Every reader must be struck with the poetical and sublime manner, in which the allegory is conducted. There is not a more splendid piece of poetry extant. Abp. Newcome.

27. And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel,] In order to a removal of the threatened evils, the people are exhorted to turn unto God by serious repentance, and are promised that on so doing they should be received again into His favour, and owned for His people. Dr. Pocock.

28. — I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; &c.] The plentiful effusion of the Holy Spirit is mentioned by the Prophets as the peculiar character of the Gospel state: and it is elsewhere compared to the pouring out of waters upon a thirsty land, whereby it becomes fruitful. See Is. xliv. 3; liv. 13; Jer. xxxi. This text is applied by St. Peter to the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the first believers, Acts ii. 17. "All flesh" comprehends the Gentiles as well as the Jews: which promise we see was punctually fulfilled, Acts x. 44; xi. 17. W. Lowth.

This prophecy is one of the clearest and most undoubted of any that foretold the establishment of the new law. It hath been fulfilled in the Christian Church two ways: first, by the extraordinary effects of such a general effusion of the Holy Spirit, whereby the Apostles and primitive saints were empowered to work miracles, speak with diverse tongues, and foretell future events; and, secondly, in the more ordinary gifts of Divine grace, bestowed upon all Christians. Wogan.

29. And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids &c.] Not only, no particular sex or age, but also no particular condition, should render persons incapable of receiving the good gifts of God's Spirit "in those days;" that is, under the kingdom of Christ. See Gal. iii. 28; 1 Cor. vii. 22. Dr. Pocock.

30. And I will shew wonders in the heavens &c.] The Prophet, having foretold in the clearest terms the general effusion of the Holy Spirit, which was to characterize the Gospel dispensation, concludes this chapter with a striking description of the destruction of Jerusalem, which followed soon after, and punished the Jews for their obstinate rejection of the sacred influence: speaking in terms, which, as well as those of our Saviour that resemble them, have a double aspect, and refer to a primary and a final dispensation. Compare Matt. xxiv. 29. Dr. Gray.

Very great slaughter, and the burning of many towns, and even of a part of Jerusalem itself, preceded the destruction of the city and the temple, and the total subversion of the Jewish polity, by the Romans. Abp. Newcome.

31. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood,] That is, into the colour of blood. Harmer. These expressions may be understood of the "fearful sights, and great signs from heaven," Luke xxi. 11, which alarmed the minds of the Jews before the taking of Jerusalem by Titus. Abp. Newcome. Or, as some expositors think, they are meant, not literally, but metaphorically; and denote such calamities as should deprive the people of all sight of comfort. Dr. Pocock. See the notes on Isaiah xiii. 10, 13.

— before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come.] These wonderful things were in part shewn at the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus; but they shall be fully and perfectly completed towards the end of the world, before the last judgment; which time deserves signally to be called "the day of the Lord," and "the great day," for the great things that shall be done in it; and "the terrible day," for all the judgments that are in it to be executed upon all the people who have ever lived in the world. Dr. Pocock.

3 And they have cast lots for my people; and have given a boy for an harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they might drink.

32. — whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord] St. Paul, Rom. x. 13, explains this of such persons as give themselves up to Christ, and profess themselves His disciples; that being the most effectual means of escaping the judgments coming upon the unbelieving Jews, and likewise of being "delivered from the wrath to come:" see Luke xxi. 22; 1 Thess. ii. 16. W. Lowth.

This "calling on the name of the Lord," mentioned by the Prophet, and applied by the Apostle to Jesus Christ, plainly proves that Jesus is the Lord Jehovah, and that He is to be invoked as the proper object of prayer. Wogan. See the note on Rom. x. 13.

——for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance,] These words may be understood figuratively of the Church of God; which, having been first seated in mount Zion and Jerusalem, and thence extended all the world over, Luke xxiv. 47, carried the name thereof along with it. Dr. Pocock.

——and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call.] Namely, such as should embrace the Gospel, and thus escape the dangers and destruction which would seize on others. Dr. Pocock.

Chap. III. ver. 1. — in those days, and in that time,] The time called "the last days," chap. ii. 28, according to St. Peter's interpretation, Acts ii. 17, which comprehends all that time which reaches from the first to the second appearance of the Messiah: see the note upon Isa. ii. 2. The context shews that here is probably meant the latter part of these last days or times. W. Lowth.

——when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem,] That is, when all the Jews then living, wheresoever dispersed, shall be converted to Christianity, and thereupon shall be brought back by God to their own country of Judah, and shall again inhabit Jerusalem. Dr. Wells. Or the words may be interpreted, not literally of bringing back the Jews to their ancient seat, but of freeing them from the captivity of sin, and the yoke of the Mosaical law. Dr. Pocock.

2. I will also gather all nations,] Taking the words in a spiritual sense, such as are enemies to God's Church, and the true Christian religion. Thus the Jews felt His judgments by the destruction of their city and commonwealth, soon after Christ's first coming; and at His second coming punishment shall be inflicted on all the wicked. Dr. Pocock.

——the valley of Jehoshaphat,] That is, the place where the Lord will execute judgment; for so the word "Jehoshaphat" signifies, being compounded of Jehovah, and shaphat, which means to judge. The expression likewise alludes to the valley of Berachah, as it was afterwards called, 2 Chron. xx. 26, which was famous for the victory gained there by Jehoshaphat and his people over a great confederacy of their enemies. This valley was not far from Jerusalem, if it be the same with that described Zech. xiv. 4. W. Lowth, Dr. Wells.

——and will plead with them there] God pleads with men, and vindicates the cause of oppressed truth and innocence by His judgments. Then their own consciences fly in the face of the guilty, and force them to acknowledge the justice of their punishments. Compare Ezek. xvii. 20; xx. 35; xxxviii. 22. W. Lowth.

3. And they have cast lots for my people; &c.] And they have scornfully and proudly tyrannized over My people, and have cast lots upon them, as some slight commodities for sale or exchange; and have given a boy for the price of their lust to a harlot, and sold a girl only for a cup of wine to drink. Bp. Hall.

The way of dividing captives by lot appears to have been in use of old among nations: compare Nahum iii. 10; Obad. ver. 11. Dr. Pocock.

4. Yea, and what have ye to do with me, O Tyre, and Zidon,] When the Babylonians, the appointed instruments of My vengeance, afflict My land, why do you also and the bordering nations assist them? Do you take this occasion of avenging the former victories of My people over you? If so, this your act of revenge shall be speedily punished. Abp. Newcome.

5. Because ye have taken my silver and my gold, &c.] The temple was despoiled of its ornaments, either through the necessities or wickedness of the kings of Judah, several times; see 2 Kings xii. 18; xviii. 16; 2 Chron. xxviii. 24. It was likewise plundered by the Chaldeans often; once in the reign of Jehoiakim, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 7; then in the short reign of Jehoiachin, 2 Kings xxiv. 13, before the last destruction of it, 2 Kings xxv. 17, 18. Some part of the furniture might perhaps be sold to the merchants of Tyre and Sidon. W. Lowth.

6. The children also of Judah — have ye sold] It was customary for the merchants of the neighbouring countries to buy the children of Israel for slaves, in order to sell them again. See 1 Mac. iii. 41. Javan, that is, Greece, particularly dealt in that sort of traffick, Ezek. xxvii. 13. W. Lowth.

7. Behold, I will raise them out of the place whither ye have sold them, &c.] Grotius thinks that this promise concerning the children of Judah was made good under Alexander the Great and his successors, who in favour of the Jewish nation restored to liberty many Jews who were captives or in servitude in Greece: and that the threatening in the next verse concerning the persecutors of the Jews had its effect when the same Alexander took Gaza, Sidon, and Tyre. Others think the fulfilling of these things may be referred to the times of Cyrus or of the Maccabees. The general import of the passage is, that though God sometimes suffers His people to be trampled on, and contemptuously used, and injuriously treated by His and their enemies, yet He will in due time deliver them from the hand of their enemies, to whom He will render a just reward, proportionable to the wrong that they have done to His people. Dr. Pocock.

9. Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles:] After these particular threatenings against Tyre and Sidon, and the neighbouring coast, the Prophet returns to what he had mentioned, ver. 2, concerning the heathen or unbelieving world, gathering themselves either to oppose the Jews in their return homeward, or some other way to hinder the growth of Christ's kingdom. W. Lowth.

—— Prepare war, &c.] The Prophet in an ironical and insulting manner encourages them to make their utmost efforts to oppose the designs of Providence: but it should be all in vain. See the like expressions, Isa. viii. 9, 10; Jer. xlvi. 3, 4; Ezek. xxxviii. 7. W. Lowth.

11. — thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord.] According to this rendering of the passage, interpreters understand by "mighty ones" the angels of God, sent down to defeat His enemies. But in the margin it is rendered, "the Lord shall bring down;" and in our older English Bibles, "then shall the Lord cast down the mighty men:" that is, such as, presuming on their might, rebelliously exalted themselves against God and His people. Dr. Pocock.

12. — there will I sit to judge all the heathen round about.] God here speaks after the manner of men, with whom it is usual for the judge, examining matters and giving sentence, to sit: not as if sitting and standing were postures properly attributed to God. Dr. Pocock.

13. Put ye in the sickle, &c.] God will give His commands to the angels, who are "the reapers," Matt. xiii. 39, to cut off the wicked by a speedy destruction; for their iniquities are come to maturity, and are ripe for judgment. Compare Jer. li. 33; Hos. vi. 11; Matt. xiii. 38, 41; Rev. xiv. 15. W. Lowth.

14. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision:] O what multitudes, what infinite multitudes of wicked sinners, shall then and there be adjudged! Bp. Hall. "The valley of decision" is so called, because God will there decide on those assembled before Him, and pass judgment on them according to their deeds; for which reason it was before called "the valley of Jehoshaphat." Dr. Pocock. See the second note on ver. 2.

15. The sun and the moon shall be darkened, &c.] This particular judgment shall be a forerunner of the general one, when the whole frame of nature shall be dissolved. Particular judgments upon kingdoms and nations are often described in such terms as properly belong to the general judgment. W. Lowth. The words, in their plainest and most literal exposition, seem to denote such prodigies as shall precede or attend the last dreadful day, and among them a real alteration in the shining of the sun, moon, and stars, not used here, as they are elsewhere, for comparative expressions, but to signify what shall then really and actually be. Dr. Pocock.

16. The Lord also shall roar out of Zion,] Where He shall give tokens of His especial residence. W. Lowth. Or, by Zion and Jerusalem may be understood heaven, the seat of His glory, the representation of which was formerly in the sanctuary. Heb. xii. 22. Bp. Hall, Dr. Pocock. God's anger, when He speaks to us by His judgments, is fitly compared to the roaring of a lion: see Jer. xxv. 30; Amos i. 2; iii. 8. W. Lowth.

—— and the heavens and the earth shall shake:] Great commotions or convulsions of states and governments are expressed by "shaking the heavens and the earth:" compare Ezek. xxxviii. 19; Haggai ii. 6, 22. But here the words may be understood in a literal sense, because the action here described in this chapter is a forerunner and token of the approaching day of judgment. W. Lowth.

17. — then shall Jerusalem be holy, &c.] This character belongs to the "new Jerusalem." Compare Isa. xxxv. 8; lii. 1; lx. 21; Rev. xxi. 27. Or it may be understood of the earthly Jerusalem, as the metropolis of the converted world. As the inhabitants themselves shall be holy, so the city shall be called the "Holy City," as in former times it was; see Dan. ix. 16; Zech. viii. 3: compare Isa. xxiv. 23; Micah iv. 7; Obad. ver. 17. It shall be no longer subject to be polluted or oppressed by unbelievers: compare Nahum i. 15. W. Lowth.

18. And it shall come to pass in that day, &c.] And it shall come to pass in those last times, wherein the Gospel shall be published, that God shall give plenty of spiritual nourishment to His Church; so that every part thereof shall abound with effectual help and means of salvation: and from thence shall flow forth those waters of life, which shall water and refresh the souls of all the faithful followers of God. Bp. Hall.

—— and shall water the valley of Shittim.] See the note from

Before CHRIST about 800. 19 Egypt shall be a desolation, and Edom shall be a desolate wilderness, for the violence against the children of Judah, because they have shed innocent blood in their land.

20 But Judah shall ‖ dwell for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. Before CHRIST about 800.

21 For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed: ‖ for the LORD dwelleth in Zion.

‖ Or, abide.

‖ Or, even I the LORD that dwelleth in Zion.

Bp. Bagot on Ezek. xlvii. 1. The distance of this place from Jerusalem may denote the large extent of God's blessing: or the nature of the place, which was dry and barren, and productive of nothing but thorns and rushes, may, under the figure of its being watered by the fountain from the house of the Lord, signify the efficaciousness of the grace of God conveyed by the Gospel. Dr. Pocock.

19. Egypt — Edom] These two people were remarkable for their enmity to the Jews: they are taken in the general sense for the enemies of God's people: see the note upon Isa. xi. 14. W. Lowth.

20. But Judah shall dwell for ever, &c.] Many interpreters understand this not literally of Judah and Jerusalem, but figuratively of the Church of God: and affirm that the promise is made good even in this world, by Christ's ruling in the midst of His enemies, and protecting His Church amidst her daily afflictions; but that it shall be fully performed in heaven, when, being placed out of all fear of danger, we shall eternally reign with Christ. Dr. Pocock.

21. For I will cleanse their blood &c.] I will thoroughly cleanse them from their sins and pollutions; which shall not rise up any more in judgment against them. W. Lowth.

INTRODUCTION.

AMOS appears to have been contemporary with Hosea, but it is uncertain which was the first favoured by Divine revelations. They both began to prophesy during the time that Uzziah and Jeroboam the Second reigned over their respective kingdoms; and Amos saw his first vision "two years before the earthquake," Amos i. 1; which, as we learn from Zechariah, chap. xiv. 5, happened in the days of Uzziah. Amos, however, began to prophesy some time between the year of the world 3194 and 3219. Some have confounded him with the father of Isaiah.

The Prophet Amos was a native of Tekoa, a small town in the territory of Judah, about four leagues southward from Jerusalem, and six southward from Bethlehem, Amos i. 1; 2 Chron. xi. 5, 6; adjacent to a vast wilderness, where probably he exercised his profession.

Amos was an herdsman, and a gatherer of sycamore fruit, chap. vii. 14. In the simplicity of former times, and in the happy climates of the East, these occupations were by no means considered in that degrading light in which they have been viewed, since refinement hath introduced a taste for the elegant arts of life. He was no Prophet, as he informed Amaziah, chap. vii. 14, neither was he a Prophet's son: that is, he had no regular education in the schools of the Prophets, but was called by an express irresistible commission from God (chap. iii. 8; vii. 15) to prophesy unto His people Israel. The Holy Spirit did not disdain to speak by the voice of the most humble man; and selected His ministers as well from the tents of the shepherd, as from the palace of the sovereign, 1 Cor. i. 27—29: respecting only the qualities, and not the conditions, of His agents, inasmuch as He was capable of inspiring knowledge and eloquence where they did not previously exist.

Amos undoubtedly composed his prophecies in their present form. He speaks of himself as the author of them, chap. vii. 8; viii. 1, 2; and his prophetick character is established, not only by the admission of his book into the canon, and by the testimony of other writers, Tobit ii. 6; Acts vii. 42, 43; xv. 15—17; but by the exact accomplishment of many prophecies which he delivered. His work consists of several distinct discourses; the particular period of their delivery cannot now be ascertained. They chiefly respect the kingdom of Israel, though he sometimes inveighs against Judah, and threatens the kingdoms that bordered on Palestine; as the Syrians, Philistines, Tyrians, Edomites, Ammonites, and Moabites. He predicts, in clear terms, the captivities and the destruction of Israel, to be preceded by fearful signs on earth, and in the heavens, chap. viii. 8—13; concluding with assurances that God would not utterly destroy the house of Jacob; but after sifting, as it were, and cleansing the house of Israel among the nations, God should again raise up the tabernacle, that is, the kingdom of David, to be enlarged to more than its first splendour by the accession of Gentile subjects; and to be succeeded by the establishment of that government, which the Prophet describes under poetical images as a blessed dispensation of security, abundance, and peace, chap. ix. 11—15. Dr. Gray.

This Prophet borrows many images from the scenes in which he had been engaged; but he introduces them with skill, and gives them force and dignity by the eloquence and grandeur of his manner. We shall find in him many affecting and pathetick, many elegant and sublime passages. No Prophet has more magnificently described the Deity; or more gravely rebuked the luxurious; or reproved injustice and oppression with greater warmth and a more generous indignation. Bishop Lowth, an eminent judge and master of style, pronounces him nearly equal to the very first Prophets in elevation of sentiments and loftiness of spirit, and scarcely inferior to any in splendour of diction and beauty of composition. Abp. Newcome.

CHAP. I.

Before CHRIST 787.

1 Amos sheweth God's judgment upon Syria, 6 upon the Philistines, 9 upon Tyrus, 11 upon Edom, 13 upon Ammon.

THE words of Amos, who was among the herdmen of Tekoa, which he saw concerning Israel in the days of Uzziah king of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel, two years before the [a] earthquake.

Before CHRIST 787.

[a] Zech. 14. 5.

2 And he said, The LORD will [b] roar from Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the habitations of the shepherds shall mourn, and the top of Carmel shall wither.

[b] Jer. 25. 30. Joel 3. 16.

Chap. I. ver. 1. — the herdmen of Tekoa.] See the introduction.

—— concerning Israel] The prophecy relates chiefly to the ten tribes, or kingdom of Israel: though the Prophet briefly denounces God's judgments, not only against Judah, but likewise against the Syrians, Philistines, and other neighbouring people. W. Lowth.

—— earthquake.] This earthquake is referred to Zech. xiv. 5: and probably, as Bp. Lowth thinks, Is. v. 25, Josephus describes some of its effects: he attributes it to Uzziah's invasion of the priests' office, recorded 2 Chron. xxvi. 16. Abp. Newcome.

2. — The Lord will roar from Zion, &c.] This phrase occurs Joel iii. 16. See also Jer. xxv. 30. The meaning is, that God will soon spread terrour, like beasts of prey when they roar; chap. iii. 8: in other words, that He will soon display His power in executing judgment. The particular judgment here threatened is a drought. See chap. iv. 6; vi. 12. Abp. Newcome.

Before CHRIST 787.

3 Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Damascus, ‖ and for four, I will not ‖ turn away the punishment thereof; because they have threshed Gilead with threshing instruments of iron:

‖ Or, to a...for four.

† Or, convert it, or, let it be quiet: and so ver. 6, &c.

4 But I will send a fire into the house of Hazael, which shall devour the palaces of Ben-hadad.

5 I will break also the bar of Damascus, and cut off the inhabitant from ‖ the plain of Aven, and him that holdeth the sceptre from ‖ the house of Eden: and the people of Syria shall go into captivity unto Kir, saith the LORD.

§ Or, Bikath-aven.

‖ Or, Beth-eden.

6 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of * Gaza, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they ‖ carried away captive the whole captivity, to deliver them up to Edom:

* 2 Chron. 28. 18.

‖ Or, carried them away with an entire captivity.

7 But I will send a fire on the wall of Gaza, which shall devour the palaces thereof:

8 And I will cut off the inhabitant from Ashdod, and him that holdeth the sceptre from Ashkelon, and I will turn mine hand against Ekron: and the remnant of the Philistines shall perish, saith the Lord GOD.

Before CHRIST 797.

9 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Tyrus, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they delivered up the whole captivity to Edom, and remembered not † the brotherly covenant:

† Heb. the covenant of brethren.

10 But I will send a fire on the wall of Tyrus, which shall devour the palaces thereof.

11 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Edom, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because he did pursue his brother with the sword, and † did cast off all pity, and his anger did tear perpetually, and he kept his wrath for ever:

† Heb. corrupted his compassions.

12 But I will send a fire upon Teman, which shall devour the palaces of Bozrah.

13 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of the children of Ammon,

3. — For three transgressions of Damascus, and for four,] The Prophet begins with denouncing judgments against foreign countries, and then comes to Judah and Israel. The first he threatens is "Syria," the head or capital city of which was "Damascus," (see Isaiah vii. 8.) for the several transgressions, which they had committed, expressed by "three transgressions and four." See Job v. 19. W. Lowth.

—— they have threshed Gilead &c.] This alludes to the threshing-wain described Is. xli. 15. It moved on wheels which had teeth, and at once forced out the grain, and cut the straw. Abp. Newcome. The cruelties exercised by Hazael and Ben-hadad, kings of Syria, are here intended. See 2 Kings x. 32, 33; xiii. 3—7. W. Lowth.

4. — I will send a fire] To which God's judgments are often compared: the word is taken in this general sense in the following verses. W. Lowth.

5. I will break also the bar of Damascus,] I will send an enemy that shall break or force open the gates of Damascus, though never so strongly barred or barricadoed. Dr. Wells.

—— the plain of Aven,] Or, Beth-aven: the word signifies "the plain of vanity;" whence some conjecture it was a place in Syria, remarkable for idolatry, as Beth-el is called Beth-aven for that reason, Hos. v. 8. W. Lowth.

—— the house of Eden:] This is equivalent to "the house of pleasure:" so it may denote one of the pleasant palaces belonging to the king of Syria, described by "him that holdeth the sceptre." But "Eden" was likewise a country bordering upon Syria, mentioned 2 Kings xix. 12; Ezek. xxvii. 23. See note there. Mr. Maundrell in his Travels observes, that not far from Damascus there is a plain still called the "valley of Bocat," which he supposes the same with Bikath-aven, here mentioned: and there is a place at this time called "Eden" near it. W. Lowth.

—— Kir,] Probably a city of Elymais; Is. xxii. 6. The completion of this prophecy is recorded 2 Kings xvi. 9. Abp. Newcome.

6. — Gaza,] This city was situated on the coast of Palestine, and is one of those threatened by Joel, chap. iii. 6. W. Lowth. Hezekiah smote it, 2 Kings xviii. 8: Pharaoh king of Egypt smote it, Jer. xlvii. 1: Alexander the Great took it, as related by Quintus Curtius. Abp. Newcome.

—— they carried away captive the whole captivity, &c.] The Philistines, as well as the people of Damascus, used great cruelties against the Israelites, but in a different way. The Damascenes slew those whom they took; the Philistines sold them, without any hope of future deliverance, to the Edomites, the most deadly enemies of the people of God. Dawes.

8. — Ashdod, &c.] "Ashdod," or Azotus, "Ashkelon," or Ascalon, and "Ekron," as well as Gaza, were chief towns of the Philistines. Gath, which was formerly another principal town, and the capital of a lordship or petty kingdom, 1 Sam. vi. 17, 18, is not here mentioned, as having been lately taken by Uaziah, the reigning king of Judah, as was Ashkelon afterwards, 2 Chron. xxvi. 6, whereby this prophecy was in part quickly fulfilled. Dr. Wells. All Syria was subdued by Pharaoh-necho; and again, as far as Pelusium, by Nabuchodonosor, as Josephus relates. Berosus also mentions that Nabuchodonosor conquered Syria and all Phenicia. Abp. Newcome.

9. — Tyrus,] This is probably to be understood of the destruction of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar, foretold by Isaiah, chap. xxiii; by Jeremiah, chap. xlvii. 4, where it is joined, as here, with the Philistines; and by Ezekiel, chap. xxvi, xxvii. W. Lowth.

—— remembered not the brotherly covenant:] Made by Hiram with David and Solomon. See 2 Sam. v. 11; 1 Kings v. 1; ix. 13.

11. — he did pursue his brother with the sword,] The two nations were descended from Jacob and Esau, who were brethren. It is probable that before Amos prophesied, the Edomites had often distressed Judah and Israel in times of calamity. That this was their custom, see 2 Chron. xxviii. 17. But the words may be spoken prophetically of the conduct which the Edomites would pursue at the taking of Jerusalem by the Babylonians, Obad. 11—14; Ezek. xxv. 12; xxxv. 5; Ps. cxxxvii. 7. Abp. Newcome.

12. — I will send a fire &c.] Nebuchadnezzar subdued the Edomites, Jer. xxv. 9, 21; xxvii. 3, 6. Judas Maccabeus obtained a great victory over them, 1 Mac. v. 3; probably after they had left the Nabatheans in consequence of a sedition, and had settled to the south of Judah: for it seems that the Babylonian conquests had compelled them to take refuge in that part of Arabia. Afterwards Hyrcanus reduced them under subjection, and permitted them to remain in their country, on condition that they conformed to the Jewish laws: see the note on Obad. ver. 2. Teman and Bozrah were cities of Idumea. Abp. Newcome.

13. — of the children of Ammon,] Hazael king of Syria grievously afflicted the Israelites that lay eastward of Jordan, particularly the Gileadites; see 2 Kings x. 33. The low condition, to which these countries were reduced, might probably encourage and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they have ‖ ripped up the women with child of Gilead, that they might enlarge their border:

‖ Or, divided the mountains.

14 But I will kindle a fire in the wall of Rabbah, and it shall devour the palaces thereof, with shouting in the day of battle, with a tempest in the day of the whirlwind:

15 And their king shall go into captivity, he and his princes together, saith the LORD.

CHAP. II.

1 God's wrath against Moab, 4 upon Judah, 6 and upon Israel. 9 God complaineth of their unthankfulness.

THUS saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Moab, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because he [a] burned the bones of the king of Edom into lime:

[a] 2 Kings 3. 27.

2 But I will send a fire upon Moab, and it shall devour the palaces of Kirioth: and Moab shall die with tumult, with shouting, and with the sound of the trumpet:

3 And I will cut off the judge from the midst thereof, and will slay all the princes thereof with him, saith the LORD.

Before CHRIST 787.

4 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Judah, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they have despised the law of the LORD, and have not kept his commandments, and their lies caused them to err, after the which their fathers have walked:

5 But I will send a fire upon Judah, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem.

6 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Israel, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because [b] they sold the righteous for silver, and the poor for a pair of shoes;

[b] Chap. 8. 6.

7 That pant after the dust of the earth on the head of the poor, and turn aside the way of the meek: and a man and his father will go in unto the same ‖ maid, to profane my holy name:

‖ Or, young woman.

8 And they lay themselves down upon clothes laid to pledge by every altar, and they drink the wine of ‖ the condemned in the house of their god.

‖ Or, such whom fined, or, mulcted.

the Ammonites to possess themselves of Gilead, which lay near their own borders, and to destroy the inhabitants in the cruel manner here described. Compare Jer. xlix. 1; Zeph. ii. 8; Hos. xiii. 16. W. Lowth. The histories of those times, transmitted down to us, are so concise, that we often want information concerning the particular facts alluded to. Abp. Newcome.

14. — Rabbah,] This was the capital city of the Ammonites, who were conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. xxvii. 5, 6. Abp. Newcome.

—— with a tempest in the day of the whirlwind:] The destructions of war are often compared to the devastations caused by whirlwinds and tempests: see Is. v. 26; Jer. xxv. 32; Dan. xi. 40; Zech. ix. 14. W. Lowth.

Chap. II. ver. 1. — Moab,] As Moab and Ammon were nearly related, and bordered upon each other, so they are usually joined together in the threatenings of the Prophets: see Jer. xlviii, xlix; Ezek. xxv. 1—8; Zeph. ii. 8. W. Lowth. For the origin of these two people, see Gen. xix. 37, 38. Their country lay to the east of the Dead sea. Abp. Newcome.

—— because he burned the bones of the king of Edom into lime:] That is, into ashes, out of contempt and inhumanity. This is in all probability to be looked on as a distinct fact from that related in 2 Kings iii. 27, the circumstances being so widely different. Kirioth was the chief city of Moab. Dr. Wells.

3. — the judge] This word denotes the supreme magistrate or governour, see Deut. xvii. 9, and is here equivalent to the king. Compare Mic. v. 1. W. Lowth. Moab was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. xxvii. 3, 6. Abp. Newcome.

6. — Israel,] Amos first prophesied against the Syrians, Philistines, Tyrians, Edomites, Ammonites, and Moabites; who dwelt in the neighbourhood of the twelve tribes, and had occasionally become their enemies and oppressors. Having thus taught his countrymen that the providence of God extended to other nations, he briefly mentions the idolatries and consequent destruction of Judah, and then passes on to his proper subject, which was to exhort and reprove the kingdom of Israel, and to denounce judgments against it. The reason why that kingdom was particularly addressed seems to have been, that Pul invaded it in the reign of Uzziah, 2 Kings xv. 19; and that in less than half a century after the first Assyrian invasion, it was subverted by Shalmaneser, 2 Kings xvii. 6. Abp. Newcome.

The particular sins, for which the Israelites are threatened with punishment, were, first, Their notorious cruelty and oppression in the corrupt administration of justice; Secondly, Their covetousness, in perverting justice for the most paltry recompence; Thirdly, Their licentious and incestuous commerce. Dimsne.

7. That pant after the dust of the earth on the head of the poor,] All their desire is after this unprofitable dust of the earth, silver and gold, which they eagerly desire to gain, even by trampling on the heads of the poor. Bp. Hall. Or the sense may be taken according to the Latin version, "Who tread down the heads of the poor into the dust of the earth;" that is, they throw them into the dust, and then trample upon them. W. Lowth.

—— turn aside the way of the meek:] That is, from right and justice: see chap. v. 12; Is. x. 1; xxxi. 21. Abp. Newcome.

—— to profane my holy name:] To treat Me as if I was not a holy and fearful God, Ezek. xx. 39; or, by giving occasion of reproach among the heathen, Ezek. xx. 9. Abp. Newcome.

8. And they lay themselves down &c.] This is to be understood of the feasts, which were made of part of their idolatrous sacrifices, and were eaten in some of the apartments of their temples, according to the custom both of the Jews and Gentiles: see 1 Sam. ix. 12, 13, 22; Is. lvii. 7; Ezek. xxiii. 41. The Prophet reproves them, not only for partaking of things offered to idols, but likewise for making use of other men's furniture, left in their hands for a pledge, to set off their idolatrous entertainments. Here was another instance of their unmercifulness, to detain pledges received from the poor, contrary to law, Exod. xxii. 26. See note upon Ezek. xviii. 7. The Jews as well as the Romans used to lie along at their meals on couches, as appears by this verse; compare chap. vi. 4. This custom continued in aftertimes, as appears by several places in the Gospels, where it is in the original, "lay down to meat;" though our translation renders it "sat down to meat." The custom of sitting at meals seems to have been the more ancient of the two. See Gen. xliii. 33; 1 Sam. ix. 22; xvi. 11; xx. 25. W. Lowth.

—— and they drink the wine of the condemned:] The drink offerings made with wine were a necessary part of the sacrifices; some of them were reserved for the entertainment that followed:

Before CHRIST 787.

9 ¶ Yet destroyed I the [c] Amorite before them, whose height was like the height of
[a] Numb. 21. 24. Deut. 2. 31. Josh. 24. 8. the cedars, and he was strong as the oaks; yet I destroyed his fruit from above, and his roots from beneath.
[d] Exod. 12. 51. 10 Also [d] I brought you up from the land of Egypt, and led you forty years through the wilderness, to possess the land of the Amorite.

11 And I raised up of your sons for prophets, and of your young men for Nazarites. Is it not even thus, O ye children of Israel? saith the LORD.

12 But ye gave the Nazarites wine to [e] Chap. 7. 12. drink; and commanded the prophets, [e] saying, Prophesy not.

‖ Or, I will press your place, as a cart full of sheaves presseth. 13 Behold, ‖ I am pressed under you, as a cart is pressed that is full of sheaves.

14 Therefore the flight shall perish from the swift, and the strong shall not strengthen his force, neither shall the mighty deliver † himself:

† Heb. his soul, or, life.

15 Neither shall he stand that handleth the bow; and he that is swift of foot shall not deliver himself: neither shall he that † Heb. strong of his heart. rideth the horse deliver himself.

16 And he that is † courageous among the mighty shall flee away naked in that day, saith the LORD.

Before CHRIST 787.

CHAP. III.

1 The necessity of God's judgment against Israel. 9 The publication of it, with the causes thereof.

HEAR this word that the LORD hath spoken against you, O children of Israel, against the whole family which I brought up from the land of Egypt, saying,

2 You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will † punish you for all your iniquities.

† Heb. visit upon.

3 Can two walk together, except they be agreed?

4 Will a lion roar in the forest, when he hath no prey? will a young lion † cry out of his den, if he have taken nothing?

5 Can a bird fall in a snare upon the earth, where no gin is for him? shall one take up a snare from the earth, and have taken nothing at all?

‖ Or, not risen together.

6 Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and the people ‖ not be afraid? shall there be evil in a city, ‖ and the LORD hath not done it?

‖ Or, and shall not the LORD do somewhat?

see Exod. xxxii. 6. And this was provided out of the fines of such as had been unjustly condemned, ver. 6. W. Lowth.

9. Yet destroyed I the Amorite before them, &c.] The sins of the Israelites against God are here amplified by the sundry and great benefits of God towards the Israelites: first by the utter destruction of the powerful and valiant nation of the Amorites; and then by the blessings, which He bountifully bestowed upon them, as in their deliverance from Egypt, and their establishment in the promised land, ver. 10, so also in the guidance which He vouchsafed them by means of Prophets and holy men devoted to His service, ver. 11. But these benefits they neglected or despised, especially those of a spiritual kind; enticing the Nazarites to break their vow of abstinence, Numb. vi. 2, &c. and forbidding the admonitions of the Prophets, ver. 12. Dameus.

13. Behold, I am pressed under you, &c.] I am ever overlaid with your wickedness: it is with Me as with a cart that is overpressed with a load of sheaves, which goes heavily, and is ready to break under the burden. Bp. Hall.

14. Therefore the flight shall perish from the swift, &c.] That is, God shall render ineffectual all their resources and methods of escape; whether they be natural, as swiftness of foot and strength of body, or acquired by industry, diligence, and wit, as power and authority among others, skill in battle, or riches, and horses trained for war. Hence appears the vanity of all human devices set up in opposition to the judgments of God. Nothing but God's mercy can deliver us from His justice; and that mercy is to be obtained only by true repentance through the promises of God in Christ Jesus. Dameus.

Chap. III. ver. 1. — against the whole family &c.] All that family, of which Jacob or Israel was the head: "family" is equivalent to people, here and in the following verse; and so it is taken, Jer. i. 15; viii. 3; x. 25; Nahum iii. 4; Zech. xiv. 18. W. Lowth.

2. You only have I known &c.] You only have I chosen from all other nations for My peculiar people, and have bestowed most cost and care upon you: therefore, since you have abused My mercies and rebelled against Me, ye shall be surely punished. Bp. Hall. The more and the greater are the benefits of God towards a people, so much the more shameful is their ingratitude in despising God, and their sin the greater and more heinous. Dameus.

3. Can two walk together, except they be agreed?] Will common reason permit two to walk friendly together, unless they be real friends? In like manner it is altogether unreasonable for you to think, that I will deal with you as your friend, while ye thus sin against Me, and so act as those who hate Me, or are My enemies. Dr. Wells.

4. Will a lion roar in the forest, when he hath no prey?] As a lion doth not use to roar but when he hath his prey in view, so neither doth God denounce His judgments, unless your sins have made you proper objects of His displeasure. W. Lowth. Naturalists assert, that, when the lion sees his prey, he roars before he rushes on it, and that at this roaring many animals shew great fear. Abp. Newcome.

5. Can a bird fall in a snare upon the earth, where no gin is &c.] As birds are not caught without the net of the fowler being already set and laid; and as the fowler doth not take up his nets, before he has secured a prey; so neither doth God threaten these things, without being prepared to execute His judgments; nor will He withdraw His hand, but will punish you, except ye repent. Dameus.

6. Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and the people not be afraid? &c.] Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, to summon the inhabitants to the walls, yet the people find no cause of the fear of an enemy? no more would God by His Prophets denounce these imminent judgments, if there were not just cause to expect and fear their speedy execution: and who shall or can execute them, but the just and powerful hand of God? Can there be any evil of punishment in the city, yea in the world, which is not of His sending, His inflicting? Bp. Hall. Shall the evil of earthquakes, of unfruitful seasons, of hostile incursions, befall My people without My special appointment? Abp. Newcome.

By the "evil" here spoken of is not to be understood sin, or the evil of guiltiness, but affliction or trouble, or the evil of punishment; for God is not either the author or the cause of our sin, but we ourselves. Compare James i. 13, 14; Hos. xiii. 9. Daneus.

Before CHRIST 787.

7. Surely the Lord God will do nothing, &c.] There was a succession of Prophets among the Jews from Samuel's time, till the captivity: the people commonly consulted them upon extraordinary occasions, and they gave them counsel and direction what was proper to be done. See chap. ii. 11; 1 Kings xxii. 13; 2 Kings iii. 11; xxii. 13; Jer. xxi. 2; Ezek. xx. 1, &c. The want of this prophetical gift was much lamented in the times of the captivity. See Ezek. vii. 26; Lament. ii. 9; Ps. lxxiv. 9. W. Lowth.

8. The lion hath roared, &c.] The awful admonitions uttered by the Prophets are as natural a consequence of God's command, as tear is of the lion's roaring. Abp. Newcome.

9. Publish in the palaces at Ashdod, &c.] God calls upon the heathen to be witnesses of His judgments upon His own people, that they may take warning thereby: particularly He gives notice to the "Philistines" and "Egyptians," the Jews' inveterate enemies, that they may assemble themselves, and with pleasure behold the ravages and oppressions which their insulting adversaries will bring upon the kingdom of Israel. W. Lowth.

12. — As the shepherd taketh out of the mouth of the lion &c.] As the shepherd, when a lion hath been devouring amongst his flock, finds some mangled remnants of a leg or an ear, which he carries home, to shew the spoil that hath been done by that fierce beast; so shall it be with Israel: of all the body of Samaria, there shall be some one or two left undevoured, for proof of the general slaughter and captivity. Bp. Hall.

—— that dwell — in the corner of a bed,] It means, that not many of those, who dwell and live delicately in Samaria, shall be able to deliver themselves from destruction. The delicacy and luxuriousness of their lives is described by their beds and couches, on which they daily lie and repose themselves. Daneus, Dr. Wells, Abp. Newcome.

Those now most at their ease shall be delivered to their enemies, like sheep to the lion: and scarce any of them be rescued from his jaws.

We learn from Bp. Pococke, Maundrell, Hanway, and other travellers, that in the East the place of honour, the most easy, voluptuous, indulging station, is the corner; and that it is the position in which great men usually place themselves. The word rendered "bed," may be understood of a divan or sofa. Harmer, Parkhurst, Fragments to Calmet. See the note on Deut. iii. 11, from Fragments to Calmet.

—— and in Damascus in a couch.] That is, who are now in high honour in their own, or indulging in foreign luxuries in other countries. Damascus was a most delightful place; and, as Amos delivered this prophecy "in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel," chap. i. 1, "who recovered Damascus for Israel," see 2 Kings xiv. 28, it is probable that many of the richer Israelites might choose to dwell there. Parkhurst.

14. — I will also visit the altars of Beth-el: &c.] I will reckon with Israel for his idolatries in Dan and Beth-el, and for those altars which he hath erected there, and will cause those miserected altars to be beaten down to the ground. Bp. Hall. See 1 Kings xii. 29, 32. The destruction of the altar at Beth-el is also foretold, chap. v. 5, and is perhaps referred to in Jer. xlviii. 13. Abp. Newcome.

15. And I will smite the winter house with the summer house;] See the note on Jer. xxxvi. 22.

——the houses of ivory] The Romans anciently ornamented their houses with ivory: and the Eastern people might possibly do the same. Sir J. Chardin says, "the ceilings of the Eastern houses are of Mosaick work, and for the most part of ivory:" and Dr. Russell notices, that "ivory is likewise employed at Aleppo in the decoration of the more expensive apartments." Harmer. Such houses were probably called "ivory houses," just as the emperour Nero's palace, mentioned by Suetonius, was named "golden," because it was "overlaid with gold." Parkhurst.

Chap. IV. ver. 1. Hear this word, ye kine of Bashan, &c.] Hear this, O ye great and rich men of Samaria, that feed full and carelessly, like the kine in the fat pastures of Bashan: ye, who oppress the poor, and crush the needy; and say to your princes and judges, Set deep fines, and condemn freely, that we may feast upon the offences of the people. Bp. Hall.

The luxury and insolence of oppressors is often compared to the wantonness of full-fed cattle: see Ps. xxii. 12; lxviii. 30. Bashan was remarkable for the richness of its pastures, and its breed of cattle: Numb. xxxii. 4; Deut. xxxii. 14; Ezek. xxxix. 18. W. Lowth.

2. — he will take you away with hooks,] Invaders and spoilers are elsewhere compared to fishers: see Jer. xvi. 16; Hab. i. 15. W. Lowth.

3. And ye shall go out &c.] The Prophet tells the people, that they shall with all possible haste make their escape at the several breaches which shall be made in the walls of Samaria. Compare 2 Kings xxv. 4; Ezek. xii. 12. W. Lowth.

— and ye shall cast them into the palace,] The sentence may be thus translated, "Ye shall cast out yourselves," that is, ye shall with haste betake yourselves "to Harmon;" so the Latin Vulgate. W. Lowth.

4. Come to Beth-el, and transgress; &c.] Go ye up now, O ye foolish Israelites, to your Beth-el, if you please, and sin your fill: go up to Gilgal, and glut yourselves with the full scope of your iniquities; bring those your morning sacrifices, which are due unto God, bring and offer them to your idols; and that, which the law of God requires of you, for the maintenance of His Levites, (that is to say,) lay aside the tithes every third year for sacred use, do ye that to the priests of your idols: so also ver. 5. Bp. Hall.

A permission, spoken by way of sarcasm and irony, sharply upbraiding them as incorrigible, and not to be reformed by all the reproofs and admonitions that had been given them: like that of Ezekiel, chap. xx. 39, "Go ye, serve every one his idols." W. Lowth.

5. — proclaim and publish the free offerings:] Or "free-will offerings," Lev. xxii. 18, 21. These offerings were partaken of by the sacrificers; whence they gave notice of their intention to their friends, and invited them to the feast: see Deut. xii. 6, &c. W. Lowth.

6. And I also have given you &c.] After declaring the presumptuous idolatry of the Israelites, the Prophet describes their obstinate continuance in it, which was such, that they could not be withdrawn from it by any afflictions or punishments, and be turned to worship and serve the true God. In this and the following verses are enumerated the several afflictions, with which they were visited: such as famine, ver. 6; drought, ver. 7, 8; destruction of the fruits of the earth, ver. 9; pestilence, war, and defeat, ver. 10; and the overthrow of some of their cities, ver. 11. At the end of each of these punishments, it is to be observed, that the Prophet adds in the name of the Lord, "yet have ye not returned unto Me." This addition shews, that the mind of the Israelites was not only careless and unmoved amid these great miseries and calamities, but that it was also desperate and gone past recovery in their idolatry, which they could not by any means be wrought on to cast off, and so return by true repentance to the knowledge and worship of God. Dan.ceus. It is the desire of God to reclaim men by afflictions, which for this purpose He sent among the Israelites. Bp. Hall.

12. Therefore thus will I do unto thee,] Since thou hast slighted all these judgments, I am resolved to execute upon thee the severest of all My vengeances; and since thou hearest I have taken up this determination to proceed against thee, therefore prepare thyself, O Israel, to meet thy God with unfeigned humiliation and repentance. Bp. Hall. Or the phrase, "Prepare thyself to meet thy God," may be understood as signifying, Prepare to meet My wrath; that is, expect the most terrible punishment. See Abp. Tillotson's note at the end of the chapter.

13. For, lo, he that formeth the mountains, &c.] For well thou knowest, there is no hoping to resist the power of the Almighty: it is He that formeth the mountains, and infuseth the spirit into man, and knoweth and declareth the thoughts of man's heart, as well as what Himself intends to do with him; it is He that can cloud the brightest day at pleasure, and can bring down the highest and strongest fortifications upon earth: He is the Lord of hosts; all things are at His command. Bp. Hall, Dr. Stokes.

In this chapter God upbraids His people several times with this, as the great aggravation of their sins, that they continued impenitent under all those terrible judgments, which He had sent upon them. "I have sent among you," says He, "want of bread,"

Before CHRIST 787.

CHAP. V.

1 A lamentation for Israel. 4 An exhortation to repentance. 21 God rejecteth their hypocritical service.

HEAR ye this word which I take up against you, even a lamentation, O house of Israel.

2 The virgin of Israel is fallen; she shall no more rise: she is forsaken upon her land; there is none to raise her up.

3 For thus saith the Lord GOD; The city that went out by a thousand shall leave an hundred, and that which went forth by an hundred shall leave ten, to the house of Israel.

4 ¶ For thus saith the LORD unto the house of Israel, Seek ye me, and ye shall live:

[a] Chap. 4. 4.

5 But seek not [a] Beth-el, nor enter into Gilgal, and pass not to Beer-sheba: for Gilgal shall surely go into captivity, and Beth-el shall come to nought.

6 Seek the LORD, and ye shall live; lest he break out like fire in the house of Joseph, and devour it, and there be none to quench it in Beth-el.

7 Ye who turn judgment to wormwood, and leave off righteousness in the earth,

9 That strengtheneth the † spoiled against the strong, so that the spoiled shall come against the fortress.

† Heb. spoil.

10 They hate him that rebuketh in the gate, and they abhor him that speaketh uprightly.

† Heb. vineyards of desire.

12 For I know your manifold transgressions and your mighty sins: they afflict the just, they take ‖ a bribe, and they turn aside the poor in the gate from their right.

13 Therefore the prudent shall keep silence in that time; for it is an evil time.

14 Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live: and so the LORD, the God of hosts, shall be with you, as ye have spoken.

15 [e] Hate the evil, and love the good, and establish judgment in the gate: it may be that the LORD God of hosts will be gracious unto the remnant of Joseph.

and then "pestilence," and then "the sword," and last of all a terrible "fire," which had almost consumed them. "I have overthrown some of you, as God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, and ye were as a firebrand plucked out of the burning; yet have ye not returned unto Me," ver. 11. And because all these judgments had not been effectual to reclaim them, He tells them, that He was resolved to go on in punishing; and therefore He bids them to expect it, and prepare themselves for it: "Therefore thus will I do unto thee, O Israel: and because I will do this unto thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Israel," ver. 12. When God hath begun to punish a people, and they are not amended by it, the honour of His justice is concerned to proceed, and not to give over. By every sin that we commit, we offend God; but if He smite us, and we stand out against Him, then do we contend with Him, and strive for mastery. And when the sinner is upon these stubborn and insolent terms, then "prepare to meet thy God;" a bitter sarcasm, as if man could be a match for God, and a poor weak creature in any wise able to encounter Him, to whom power belongs. There is a severe expression concerning God's dealing with such perverse and obstinate sinners, Ps. xviii. 26, "with the froward Thou wilt shew thyself froward;" or, as the words may more properly and conveniently be rendered, "with the froward Thou wilt wrestle." God will not be outbraved by the sins of men; and therefore, if we continue impenitent, we have all the reason in the world to expect, that God should go on to punish. Abp. Tillotson.

Chap. V. ver. 1. — against you,] Rather, "over you." The allusion is to the lamentations made at funerals: see ver. 16; Jer. ix. 17; Ezek. xix. 1; xxvii. 2. So the Prophet bemoans the state of the kingdom of Israel, as dead and irrecoverably lost. W. Lowth.

3. — The city that went out by a thousand shall leave an hundred, &c.] So few shall be left alive, after the hard and long sieges of the Assyrians, that in those cities of Israel, out of which a thousand able men were wont to go forth to war, there now shall be left but a hundred, &c. Bp. Hall.

4, 5. — Seek ye me, — But seek not Beth-el, &c.] The Israelites are here commanded to seek the Lord, and to abstain from idols, such as were then in Beth-el, Gilgal, and Beer-sheba: and the admonition is enforced by two powerful considerations, that if they "seek the Lord, they shall live;" that is, shall enjoy life, and salvation, and deliverance from their troubles; but that if they seek their idols, they shall be cut off together with those objects of their idolatrous worship. Dancus.

7. Ye who turn judgment to wormwood,] Ye, who corrupt judgment, and make it grievous and hateful to My people. Bp. Hall.

8. — that maketh the seven stars &c.] Who maketh the great frame of the heavens, and all the glorious stars therein; who turneth the blackest night into a clear morning, and causeth the brightest day to end in a dark night; who causeth the waters of the sea to overswell their banks, and to drown the face of the earth. Bp. Hall. See Job ix. 9, and the note there from Chapelow.

10. — that rebuketh in the gate,] That judgeth uprightly, and freely and impartially rebuketh the wicked man on the bench of justice. Bp. Hall. See the notes on Gen. xxiii. 10; Job v. 4.

13. — the prudent shall keep silence in that time; &c.] Seeing that his admonitions will do no good to men wholly devoted to their own ways of unlawful gain, and will be injurious to such as rebuke them. Dr. Stokes.

14. — as ye have spoken.] Ye are wont to boast of your interest in the Lord, and of the promises made by Him to your fathers. Obedience is the condition required on your part to qualify you for His favour. W. Lowth.

17. And in all vineyards shall be wailing.] Where there used to be shouting and rejoicing, when the summer fruits were gathered in. See Is. xvi. 10; xxv. 30; xlviii. 33. W. Lowth.

18. Woe unto you that desire the day of the Lord! &c.] Woe to those among you, that mock at the tidings of this sad day of the Lord, and scornfully ask, why it doth not come, and when it will come! they shall find that it will come, little to their comfort; they shall find it is not a day for mirth or pleasure, but for heaviness and sorrow. Bp. Hall. Compare the passages in the margin.

19. As if a man did flee from a lion, &c.] It shall be with you as with a man, who, flying from a lion, meets in his way with a bear; and, to escape both, flies into a house, and, laying his hand upon the wall, to get over, is bitten by a serpent; so shall you, shunning one danger, fall into another. Bp. Hall.

20. Shall not the day &c.] A strong affirmation is conveyed in this question. Darkness is naturally put for calamity, and light for gladness. Abp. Newcome.

21—24. These four verses convey the same sense as Is. i. 11—16; Jer. vi. 20; vii. 21—23; Hos. vi. 6; viii. 13: all which places import, how little valuable are the external rites of religion, unless they are accompanied with universal obedience. W. Lowth.

23. — thy songs; — thy viols.] The usual accompaniments of sacrifices among both Jews and heathens. Abp. Newcome. The psalms and hymns were sung in the temple with instrumental musick. W. Lowth.

24. But let judgment run down as waters, &c.] Instead of relying upon mere outward offerings in honour of Me, take care that justice be impartially administered, so that every one may partake of it as of the waters of a river; and take care also, that all live holy and righteous lives, so that their good example may, like a mighty stream, bear down all wickedness before it. Dr. Wells.

25, 26. Have ye offered &c.] Have ye not forty entire years together, in the wilderness, bewrayed your averseness from Me, and your inclination to idolatry? Was it to Me, that in this while ye offered your sacrifices, O ye house of Israel? No: howsoever ye pretended to bear My tabernacle, yet indeed ye did your services and oblations to your god Moloch, and the other images of those planetary gods whom ye worshipped. Bp. Hall.

In the former verse, the emphasis lies in the word "Me." Did ye offer such sacrifices as were acceptable to Me: such entire and undivided service as I enjoined? In the latter verse God is introduced as replying; No, ye sometimes carried about Moloch in his shrine or tabernacle. Abp. Newcome. "The tabernacle of Moloch" was a shrine, with the image of the deity placed within it: such were the silver shrines of Diana, Acts xix. 24; and the Themse or Lectice among the Romans. These their votaries carried in procession; as a solemn piece of worship, or pledge of the presence of their gods among them. See Is. xlvi. 7. Moloch is an idol often mentioned in Scripture. Chiun is generally supposed by learned men to be the same with Saturn. The same idol was called Remphan, or Rephan, by the Egyptians. W. Lowth.

26. — the star of your god.] The heathens had images that represented the heavenly bodies; see 2 Kings xxiii. 11; 2 Chron. xxxiv. 4: so the image of Chiun represented the star of Saturn, as that of Moloch did the sun. W. Lowth. Or, probably here is an allusion to the figure of a star, fixed on the head of an image of a false god. Abp. Newcome.

The sorts of idolatry here recited are not to be restrained to the time, during which the Israelites lived in the wilderness, but are to be extended over the whole space which passed from their coming out of Egypt to the time of Amos. Dawson.

27. Therefore will I cause you to go &c.] That is, Because of the little sincerity and devotion, with which your forefathers formerly performed their sacrifices to Me, and with which you perform them at present. The Prophets often upbraid the Jews with the sins of their forefathers, and threaten them with remarkable judgments on that account, when their posterity continue in the same or worse impiety. See Hos. ix. 9, 10; x. 9. Compare Matt. xxiii. 35. W. Lowth.

—— beyond Damascus,] To which city it seems probable that Hazael carried many captives, 2 Kings x. 32, 33. But now the Israelites were to be led away captives into Assyria and Media, 2 Kings xv. 29; xvii. 6. Abp. Newcome.

Chap. VI. ver. 1. — which are named chief of the nations, &c.] Sion or Jerusalem, and Samaria, are the chief seats of the two kingdoms of Judah and Israel, whither is the greatest resort of the whole nation. The word rendered "nations" usually signifies the heathens, but sometimes denotes the Jews. W. Lowth. Others refer this passage to the nobles, wise, and great men, of every place: men that were heads among their own people. Poole.

2. — Calneh, — Hamath — Gath.] Calneh was a city in the region of Babylon, Gen. x. 10; and, as it seems, lately subdued by the Assyrians. Hamath was a Syrian city on the Orontes. It was conquered by Jeroboam, 2 Kings xiv. 25; and by the Assyrians, 2 Kings xix. 13. "Gath of the Philistines" was taken by Uzziah, in whose reign Amos prophesied, 2 Chron. xxvi. 6. Abp. Newcome.

5. — like David;] Abusing his holy example, in applying to purposes of wantonness and riot what he consecrated and dedicated to God. It is the abuse of musick which is here condemned. Dimmock.

6. That drink wine in bowls,] The Prophet alludes, either to the quantity drunk, or more probably to the magnificence of the drinking vessel. Harmer.

—— they are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph.] They do not humble themselves under God's afflicting hand, nor lay to heart the miseries the Divine judgments have brought upon the kingdom of "Israel," called by the name "Joseph," and "the house of Joseph," chap. v. 6, 15. W. Lowth.

Wine, and musick, and gorgeous apparel, and delicate fare, are things which God in His goodness hath created, and given to the children of men for their comfort; and they may use them lawfully, and take comfort in them as their portion: but he that shall use any of them intemperately, or unseasonably, or vainly, or wastefully, abuseth both them and himself. And therefore we shall often find both the things themselves condemned, and those that used them blamed, in the Scriptures. Besides the text, see Is. iii. 18—23; Luke xvi. 19; vi. 25. And yet none of all the things, here condemned, were or are in themselves unlawful: it was the excess only, or other disorder in the use of them, that made them obnoxious to reproof. In many things of this sort we may easily err, in point either of judgment, or of practice, or of both, if we do not wisely distinguish the use from the abuse. Often, because the abuses are common and great, we peevishly condemn in others the very use of some lawful things. Often again, because there is evidently a lawful use of the things, we impudently justify ourselves in the very abuse of them. In the former case we infringe our brethren's liberty; in the latter we pollute our own. The best and safest way for us in all indifferent things is this: to be indulgent to others, but strict to ourselves: in allowing them their liberty with the most, but taking our own liberty ever with the least. Bp. Sanderson.

8. — I abhor the excellency of Jacob,] Whatever the kingdoms of Israel and Judah value themselves for, is hateful to Me, as having been abused by them, and made instrumental in dishonouring Me. W. Lowth.

9. — if there remain ten men in one house, that they shall die.] Those that escape the hands of the enemy, shall die by pestilence or famine during the siege. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

10. And a man's uncle shall take him up, &c.] A man shall not have a brother or a son left, to do him the last offices of his burial; but if his uncle or his kinsman shall undertake to bring out his corpse, he that is the overseer of these funeral rites, joining with him in that work, shall say to that one which is left alive in the house, Is there any one remaining of the whole number of the family? and he shall say, No. Then shall the other answer again, Rest thou humbly and silently in the just pleasure of the Almighty: this is His work: as for us, our sins have been so grievous, that in conscience thereof, it is not for us to call on the name of the Lord for a release or mitigation of His judgment. Bp. Hall.

11. —the great house &c.] Universal ruin shall be spread through the city by the enemy. Or the earthquake may be alluded to. Abp. Newcome.

12. Shall horses run upon the rock? &c.] Is it possible, that horses should run upon the steep and craggy cliffs? or can it be, that the husbandman should drive his plough through those hard rocks? so impossible is it, that ye Israelites should continue to prosper while ye remain thus sinful; for ye have corrupted judgment and justice, and made it hateful and deadly to the innocent. Bp. Hall. See Bp. Lowth's note on Is. v. 28.

6 The LORD repented for this: This also shall not be, saith the Lord GOD.

7 ¶ Thus he shewed me: and, behold, the Lord stood upon a wall made by a plumbline, with a plumbline in his hand.

—— horns] That is, dominion. See the notes on 1 Sam. ii. 1. 14. — I will raise up against you a nation,] That is, the Assyrians, who should afflict them from one end of the land to the other. "The entering in of Hamath" was the northern border of their country; and "the river of the wilderness" is the same with "the river of Egypt," the boundary of Judea on the south, Gen. xv. 18. W. Lowth.

The sins here described, as especially provoking God's indignation, are, First, the injustice and violence committed by the rich and great: Secondly, A sensual and voluptuous life, high living, the love of pleasure and diversions, and pride: Thirdly, Insensibility under God's corrections and the examples of His wrath. These were the sins for which the Jews perished, and which bring down His vengeance upon such as are guilty of them. We ought therefore most carefully to avoid them. To this end let us consider, that these sins not only expose men to temporal punishments, but make them subject still more unavoidably to the punishments of the world to come; and that injustice, a love of pleasures, impenitence, and incorrigibleness, are still more displeasing to God in Christians, than they were in the Jews; because the Gospel does so expressly command, and by the most powerful motives engage us, to renounce the desires of the flesh, and to live in charity, temperance, and humility. Ostervald.

Chap. VII. ver. 1. — after the king's mowings.] Or, "feedings:" agreeably to the remark of Mr. Stuart, that in general they now not their grass, to make hay, as we do; but cut it off the ground, either green or withered, as they have occasion to use it. Harmer, Fragments to Calmet.

3. The Lord repented for this: &c.] To affect the mind of the Prophet, and by him that of the people, God displays different judgments, and shews His clemency by forbearing to execute them upon the intercession of Amos: it being His sole intention to represent there modes of punishment, and not to inflict them. Abp. Newcome.

4. — behold, the Lord God called to contend by fire, &c.] The second vision represents a more furious enemy, that consumed all before him, like a flaming fire, an element that hath no mercy. Dr. Stokes.

7, 8. — the Lord stood upon a wall made by a plumbline,] God's judgments are sometimes represented by a "line" and a "plummet," to denote that they are measured out by the exactest rules of justice: see 2 Kings xxi. 13; Is. xxviii. 17. The instruments which are designed for building are sometimes used to mark out those places, which are to be pulled down and destroyed; see 2 Sam. viii. 2; Is. xxxiv. 11; Lam. ii. 8. The vision imports, that as God formerly built up His people, He would now pluck them down and destroy them. See Jer. i. 10; xxxi. 28. W. Lowth.

8. — Amos, what seest thou?] This is said to excite the Prophet's attention. Abp. Newcome.

—— I will not again pass by them any more:] I will not any more pardon and pass by their wickedness. Bp. Hall. In this third vision the Prophet is informed, that now God Himself examines and tries the doings of the Israelites according to the exact or perfect rule of His justice, as prescribed to them in His law; and that He will give sentence upon them according to this rule, and not according to the mildness and gentleness of His mercy, which he had before exercised towards them, but which they had abused by becoming worse instead of better. Now therefore He will no more pardon and pass over them, but will call all things to a just account, as carpenters and builders are accustomed to try and examine all things by line and by level. Dameus.

9. And the high places &c.] "The high places of Isaac" were the altar and grove at Beer-sheba, where Isaac dwelt and built an altar, Gen. xxvi. 25; xlvi. 1: this place was afterwards abused to idolatry, chap. v. 5. "The sanctuaries of Israel" were the places set apart for idolatrous worship, such as Beth-el, Gilgal, and Beer-sheba, chap. iii. 14; v. 5. The word "sanctuary" is used for an idolatrous temple, Is. xvi. 12. W. Lowth.

—— I will rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword.] This was fulfilled when Shallum conspired against Zachariah the son of Jeroboam, and slew him, 2 Kings xv. 10: he was the last that reigned of that family. W. Lowth.

10. Then Amaziah the priest of Beth-el] This Amaziah was a priest, not of the tribe of Levi, but such an one as those were, whom Jeroboam, the first of that name, had consecrated to per-

Before CHRIST 787. sent to Jeroboam king of Israel, saying, Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the house of Israel: the land is not able to bear all his words.

11 For thus Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land.

12 Also Amaziah said unto Amos, O thou seer, go, flee thee away into the land of Judah, and there eat bread, and prophesy there:

13 But prophesy not again any more at Beth-el: for it is the king's ‖ chapel, and it is the † king's court.

‖ Or, sanctuary. † Heb. house of the kingdom.

14 ¶ Then answered Amos, and said to Amaziah, I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was an herdman, and a gatherer of ‖ sycomore fruit:

‖ Or, wild figs. † Heb. from behind.

15 And the LORD took me † as I followed the flock, and the LORD said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel.

16 ¶ Now therefore hear thou the word of the LORD: Thou sayest, Prophesy not against Israel, * and drop not thy word against the house of Isaac.

* Ezek. vi. 2.

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Thy wife shall be an harlot in the city, and thy sons and thy daughters shall fall by the sword, and thy land shall be divided by line; and thou shalt die in a polluted land: and Israel shall surely go into captivity forth of his land. Before CHRIST 787.

—— Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the house of Israel:] That is, in Beth-el, where is the greatest confluence of thy subjects. Bp. Hall.

11. — Jeroboam shall die by the sword,] This was a plain perverting of the Prophet's words; for he did not prophesy against the king himself, but against his family and posterity. W. Lowth.

12, 13. Also Amaziah said unto Amos, O thou seer, &c.] Retire home to thy own country of Judah, and there maintain thyself, and there bestow thy pains and admonitions; but venture not any more to vent thy prophecies in Beth-el; for thou knowest the condition of this place; it is both the king's sanctuary for his devotion, and the king's court for state; meddle not any more with prophesying here, lest thou provoke the king's anger against thee. Bp. Hall.

14. — I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son;] I was not a Prophet by profession, nor bred up in the schools of the Prophets, as usually were those who took the prophetical office upon them. See 2 Kings ii. 5, &c; iv. 38; vi. 1. W. Lowth. Amos says, that he had no pretensions to the office or title of a Prophet by birth, succession, or education; but since it had pleased God to lay upon him, by a special commission, the necessity of prophesying, he must obey the Divine call rather than the command of the king. Dr. Stokes.

—— sycomore fruit:] A sort of wild fig, called by some the Egyptian fig. W. Lowth. See the note on 1 Kings x. 27.

15. And the Lord took me as I followed the flock,] Thus he was taken to the office of a Prophet, as David had been to that of a king: see Ps. lxxviii. 70, 71. Danæus. And as Moses also had been before him. See the note on Exod. iii. 1.

16. — drop not thy word &c.] Do not let fall the menaces of judgment upon the chosen people of God. Bp. Hall.

17. — Thy wife shall be an harlot in the city,] When Beth-el shall be taken by the Assyrians, (see Hos. x. 5, 6,) the soldiers shall abuse thy wife, and treat her as a common prostitute; as a just punishment of her idolatry, which is spiritual whoredom: "thy sons and thy daughters shall fall by the sword" of the Assyrians, as a recompense for thy infidelity concerning My prophecy, that the house of Jeroboam shall fall by the sword, ver. 9; "thy land shall be divided by" measuring it, as usual, with a "line" or cord, among those to whom the king of Assyria shall give it, as a suitable punishment for thy contradiction of My prophecy concerning the conquest of this kingdom by the Assyrians: "and thou shalt die in a polluted land," or in a land where idolatry prevails, and where it will be impossible to converse without committing legal impurity, because thou hast been instrumental in keeping the people of Israel in idolatry, whereby this kingdom is polluted: and the people of "Israel shall surely go into captivity forth of his land," because they have hearkened unto thee rather than unto God, speaking to them by His Prophets. Dr. Wells, W. Lowth.

Chap. VIII ver. 1, 2. — behold a basket of summer fruit. &c.] The basket of ripe summer fruit which Amos saw in this fourth vision, was to denote that Israel's sins were now ripe for judgment; as the time of judgment is elsewhere expressed by an harvest or a vintage. See Joel iii. 13. The two Hebrew words for "summer fruit" and "an end" have an affinity in sound, which gives occasion to a play on the words not unusual in Scripture. W. Lowth. See Jer. i. 11, and the note there.

3. And the songs of the temple shall be howlings in that day,] Instead of the songs and musick of the temples of Beth-el and other high places, there shall be nothing but howlings and shriekings of those that are slain. Bp. Hall.

5. Saying, When will the new moon be gone,] When shall we have done with these solemn feasts, wherein we are not allowed to buy and sell? would God these new moons and sabbaths were once past, that we might sell our corn at a high rate; making the measure of the wheat small, and the weights, wherewith the silver is weighed, great and heavy; and falsifying the balances by deceit-

7 The LORD hath sworn by the excellency of Jacob, Surely I will never forget any of their works.

8 Shall not the land tremble for this, and every one mourn that dwelleth therein? and it shall rise up wholly as a flood; and it shall be cast out and drowned, as by the flood of Egypt.

9 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord GOD, that I will cause the sun to go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in the clear day:

10 And I will turn your feasts into mourning, and all your songs into lamentation; and I will bring up sackcloth upon all loins, and baldness upon every head; and I will make it as the mourning of an only son, and the end thereof as a bitter day.

11 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the Lord GOD, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the LORD:

Before CHRIST 787.

12 And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the LORD, and shall not find it.

13 In that day shall the fair virgins and young men faint for thirst.

14 They that swear by the sin of Samaria, and say, Thy god, O Dan, liveth; and, The manner of Beer-sheba liveth; even they shall fall, and never rise up again.

‖ Or, chapiter, or, knop.

‖ Or, wound them.

Bp. Hall. That is, in plain terms, they had rather be defrauding neighbours, than serving God. Bp. Beveridge.

The "ephah" was the measure, wherewith they sold, containing about one of our bushels: this they made smaller than the just standard. The "shekel" was the money they received as the price for their goods: by "falsifying the balances" when they weighed it, and so requiring it to be greater than it should be according to the standard weight of a shekel, they diminished its just value. So in both ways they overreached those who dealt with them. See Mic. vi. 11. Dr. Wells, W. Lowth.

6. That we may buy the poor for silver, &c.] That we may cause the poor to sell themselves to our servitude for a little silver, as being not able to sustain themselves; and that we may buy the needy for a pair of shoes, even for the basest necessaries: yea, and that, by this means, we may put off at an unreasonable rate the very refuse and offal of the wheat. Bp. Hall.

7. The Lord hath sworn by the excellency of Jacob,] That is, by Jacob's most eminent and incommunicable One, or by Jacob's holy One: see chap. iv. 2. Jos. Mede. By Himself, who is truly the glory of Jacob or Israel, see Ps. lxviii. 34; whatever other excellency or advantage they may make the subject of their glory. See chap. vi. 8. W. Lowth.

8. — it shall rise up wholly as a flood;] This deluge of sin in the nation shall make her punishment overflow, and overwhelm her in every part. Dr. Stoker.

—— it shall be cast out and drowned, as by the flood of Egypt.] Or rather, the river of Egypt. The inhabitants of the land shall be cast out of their possessions, or the land itself shall be swallowed up by the invading Assyrians, as Egypt is by the inundation of the river Nile. W. Lowth.

9. — I will cause the sun to go down at noon,] Your sorrow shall be so extreme in that day, and that day shall be to you so black and gloomy, as if the sun were gone down at noonday, and as if darkness had covered the earth in the clearest day. Bp. Hall. Calamitous times are expressed by the failing of the light of the sun, and the day's being overspread with darkness. See Is. xiii. 10; lix. 9, 10; Jer. xv. 9; Joh v. 14; xxii. 11. W. Lowth.

11. — I will send a famine in the land, &c.] Not a famine of material bread, &c, but a spiritual famine of the word of God, which alone is able to feed and save your souls. Bp. Hall. It was usual among the Jews to resort to the Prophets for counsel under any difficulty. See chap. ii. 11; Ezek. xiv. 7; xx. 1. Amos tells them, that in a little time there will be no Prophets for them to consult; and this shall be a just punishment for their despising the former Prophets, and their instructions. This was fulfilled upon the whole nation at the time of the Babylonish captivity: see Lam. ii. 9; Ps. lxxiv. 9; Ezek. vii. 26. And after their return from captivity they had no succession of Prophets, from the time of Malachi till the coming of Christ. See 1 Mac. iv. 46; ix. 27. W. Lowth.

12. — from sea to sea, &c.] That is, from the east sea, namely, either the sea of Galilee, or the Salt sea, to the west, or Mediterranean sea; and "from the north even to the east" again; that is, all through the kingdom. Dr. Wells.

13. In that day shall the fair virgins and young men faint for thirst.] They who are in the bloom of their youth, and in the strength of their age, shall faint and be dispirited, like those that want necessary refreshment. Compare Jer. xlviii. 18. W. Lowth.

14. They that swear by the sin of Samaria, &c.] Those idolatrous Israelites, that swear by the molten images of Samaria, and say, As the god which is worshipped in Dan, and the author of the religion of Beer-sheba liveth; even they shall fall into utter perdition, and never rise again. Bp. Hall.

"The sin of Samaria" was the calf, set up at Beth-el by Jeroboam, who committed a great sin in so doing, and made Israel to sin, 1 Kings xii. 30; xiv. 16: compare Mic. i. 5. "The manner," or way, "of Beer-sheba" is rendered "the god of Beer-sheba" in the Greek version, which expresses the sense rather than the words. The "way" or "manner," signifies the same with "the way of worship:" in this sense it is probably taken, Hos. x. 13; and the phrase is often used so in the Acts; particularly chap. xix. 23; xxiv. 14. Here it is taken figuratively for the god or object of their worship. Beer-sheba was a place noted for idolatry, as hath been observed upon chap. v. 5. W. Lowth.

The punishment, which is here threatened upon the people for their sins, is, that God would "send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the word of the Lord." Let us learn hence, that the most terrible chastisement God can inflict upon a people is to deprive them of His word, and no longer to send His faithful servants among them: and therefore, that those, who enjoy these precious advantages, ought to esteem them above all things, and make a good use of them, lest they be deprived of them by the just judgment of God. Outersaid.

Chap. IX. The Prophet sees a fifth vision, representing the final destruction of the kingdom of Israel; but he concludes his prophecy with promises of restoring the kingdom of David, and the Jewish nations under the Messias, when the Church shall be enlarged by the Gentiles coming into it. W. Lowth.

† Heb. upon whom my name is called. 12 That they may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen, † which are a severe blow was by the Divine command to be inflicted on those who were thought to be most eminent, and most able to support and give aid to the temple and the whole nation to whom it belonged. Dr. Stokes.

—— and cut them in the head, all of them;] That is, I will destroy all the chief of the kingdom of Israel. Dr. Wells. The "head" corresponds to the "lintel" in the foregoing clause. Abp. Newcome. As if he had said, Let them that are in the highest place, the guides and governours of the people, have the first and greatest blow, that in them others may see their doom. And after that, "I will slay the last of them" also, the lowest of the people, "with the sword" of a cruel enemy. Dr. Stokes.

2. Though they dig into hell, &c.] Though they hide themselves in the deepest holes or caverns of the earth, (see Is. ii. 19;) or take refuge in the highest fortresses, they shall not escape My vengeance. W. Lowth.

3. — the serpent,] The word is used for a water-animal, Is. xxvii. 1; and appears to be here used for some carnivorous fish. W. Lowth.

The general meaning of these verses is, that whatever places of refuge the Israelites may seek, their attempts at hiding themselves shall be ineffectual: for the hand of God, which is every where present, will draw them from thence, and give them over to their enemies. Dunnus.

6. It is he that buildeth his stories in the heaven,] An awful description of God's irresistible power, discovering itself in the works of the creation, particularly in His appointing several regions of the air, as so many apartments that lead to the highest heavens, the seat of His own glory. See Ps. civ. 3. W. Lowth.

—— and hath founded his troop in the earth;] The old English translation hath rendered the sense very perspicuously thus: "And hath laid the foundation of His globe of elements in the earth." The word, rendered "troop," signifies the collection of elements and other creatures, which furnish the earth, expressed by a word, which we render "the host," Gen. ii. 1. W. Lowth.

7. Are ye not as children of the Ethiopians unto me, &c.] Is there any reason in you, O ye children of Israel, why I should respect you more than the very Ethiopians? Why should I make any difference betwixt you and the very Philistines? If you say that I brought up Israel out of Egypt, so also did I bring the Philistines out of Caphtor, and the Syrians from Kir. Bp. Hall.

The sense seems to be, Trust not in your ancestors, who were so highly favoured by Me; your vices have made you vile in My sight. Trust not in My deliverance of you from the land of Egypt. Other nations have been transplanted into fertile countries, as well as you; and particularly your neighbouring enemies. Abp. Newcome.

8. — saving that I will not utterly destroy &c.] God still promises to preserve a remnant in the midst of His heaviest judgments, that He may perform to them the promises made to their fathers. See Jer. xxx. 11; Joel ii. 32; Rom. xi. 28, 29. W. Lowth.

9. — yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth.] I will mingle or scatter the Israelites among all nations, just as good and bad grain are mingled in a sieve; but will so order it that none of the good grain shall be lost, or fall to the ground. Compare Matt. iii. 12. W. Lowth.

11. In that day] When I come to make a remarkable difference between the good and the bad, ver. 9. W. Lowth.

—— the tabernacle of David] Under the figure of rebuilding a tabernacle, that was partly demolished by force, partly decayed with age, the Prophet foretells the restoring of the kingdom of David to one of his seed after it should be fallen into a very low condition, and the enlargement of his subjects in the room of those, who had shaken off their obedience. Bp. Chandler.

12. That they may possess the remnant of Edom, &c.] That My apostles and servants, and their successors, whom I shall use in the restoration of the Church, may take a kind of spiritual possession of the Gentiles in My name, (bringing them within the pale of the Church and fold of the great Shepherd of our souls:) even of the greatest enemies of the Church, as the Edomites were of the Jews: at least of a remnant of them, that is, so many as shall return by true repentance and obedience from their opposition to the truth. Dr. Stokes.

Before CHRIST about 787. called by my name, saith the LORD that doeth this.

13 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that † soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop ‖ [z] sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt.

† Heb. draweth forth.
[z] Joel 3. 18.

14 And I will bring again the captivity of my people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. Before CHRIST about 787.

15 And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the LORD thy God.

—— saith the Lord that doeth this.] After the restoration of the Jews from their captivity, the Messiah came, and the Gentiles were admitted into His Church: and on the future grand restoration of the Jews, the borders of the Christian Church will be enlarged among the Gentiles, Rom. xi. 12, 15. Abp. Newcome.

13. — the plowman shall overtake the reaper, &c.] Rather, "the plowman shall meet the reaper;" that is, there shall be such an increase of the fruits of the earth, that as soon as the harvest is got in, it will be time to plow for the next year, which was not usual in those hot countries, where the corn was ripe early in the summer, in the month of May, or June at farthest. And "the treader of grapes" shall meet "him that soweth seed;" that is, the vintage shall be so plentiful, that whereas it used to begin in August, it shall not be over till seedtime, the earliest season of which was November. W. Lowth. It is a lively way of expressing, that the harvest and vintage should be copious and long in gathering. Abp. Newcome. And together with plenty of all outward blessings, it prefigures the abundance of God's spiritual graces, and the great harvest of the Church, of which our Saviour Himself speaks, Matt. ix. 37, in such figurative expressions as were familiar to the oriental writers. Poole, Dr. Stokes.

—— the hills shall melt.] They shall flow, as it were, with the abundance of wine produced on them, Joel iii. 18. Mountains and hills are the proper places for vineyards. Abp. Newcome. See the note on Joel iii. 18.

15. — they shall no more be pulled up out of their land.] But shall dwell in it secure from any annoyance of enemies. Compare Jer. xxiii. 6; xxxii. 41; Ezek. xxxiv. 28; Joel iii. 20; Mic. iv. 4; Zeph. iii. 13. W. Lowth.

We have here a prophecy, that the ruin of the house and kingdom of David should precede the coming of the Messiah; who should at His coming repair the breaches thereof, and build it again. The captivity of Zedekiah by the Chaldees perfected the fall of David's kingdom, which could not rise before the return from that captivity, and was to rise, as seems to be implied, before a new captivity began. After the Babylonian captivity was over, none of David's race was in any account. Edom was not "possest" by any of Zorobabel's descendants, nor were "the heathen called by God's name" through their means; till God gave unto Jesus the throne of His father David, and for the suffering of death exalted Him to His right hand, to be a Saviour and a Prince. His coming was "for the fall and rising again of many in Israel," and by the preaching of His Apostles the Gentiles were converted, and made part of His kingdom, out of which the Jews had excluded themselves. But "the days come," when this shall appear to be more visibly the kingdom of David, by the coming of the body of the Jews into it, and probably by His literally "planting them" again in their "land," as His principal subjects, from whence they shall be no more ejected. Bp. Chandler.

OBADIAH.

INTRODUCTION.

THIS Prophet hath furnished us with no particulars of his own origin or life, any more than of the period in which he was favoured by the Divine revelations. That he received a commission to prophesy is evident; as well from the admission of his work into the sacred canon, as from the completion of those predictions which he delivered.

It is probable that he flourished about the same time with Ezekiel and Jeremiah; and the best opinions concur in supposing him to have prophesied a little after the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, which happened about the year of the world 3416. He predicted therefore the same circumstances which those Prophets had foretold against the Edomites, who had upon many occasions favoured the enemies of Judah; and who, when "strangers carried their forces away captive, and foreigners cast lots upon Jerusalem," had rejoiced at the destruction, and insulted the children of Judah in their affliction, ver. 11—14; Ps. cxxxvii. 7.

The Prophet, after describing the pride and cruelty of the Edomites, declares that though they dwelt in fancied security among the clefts of the rocks, yet the "men of Teman should be dismayed," and "every one of the mount of Esau should be cut off by slaughter;" and that the men who had confederated with them against Jacob, and been supported by them as their allies, should inflict the punishment of their malevolence. The Prophet concludes with consolatory assurances of future restoration and prosperity to the Jews, to whom should arise deliverance from Zion: saviours who should judge the nations; and a spiritual kingdom, appropriated and consecrated to the Lord.

The Prophet's work is short, but composed with much beauty: it unfolds a very interesting scene of prophecy, and an instructive lesson against human confidence and malicious exultation. Dr. Gray.

[s] 1 Tim. 4. 16. Jam. 5. 20.

[t] Luke 1. 33.

---

12. — thou shouldest not have looked on the day of thy brother] Thou oughtest not to have taken pleasure at the sight of thy brother's calamity. So the expression of "looking upon an enemy" signifies the beholding his fall with satisfaction, Ps. liv. 7; lix. 10; xcii. 11; cxii. 8. Compare Micah iv. 11; vii. 10. W. Lowth.

16. For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, &c.] As you of Edom shall drink of the cup of My indignation upon, or rather because of, My holy mountain, and the holy land of Judea, which you have persecuted, so shall all those nations, that joined with you in your offences, ever taste of the same cup, till they have drunk it up, and be as if they had never been. Dr. Stokes.

17. But upon mount Zion shall be deliverance, &c.] This was remarkably verified at the first preaching of the Gospel, when God's law came forth from Zion, Isa. ii. 3; Joel ii. 32; Ps. cx. 2. W. Lowth.

18. And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, &c.] This was fulfilled in part by Hyrcanus and the Maccabees, 1 Mac. v. 3: but was to be accomplished more fully in a mystical sense by the destruction of the enemies of the Church. Poole.

19. And they of the south &c.] Edom lay to the south; the Philistines to the west; Ephraim to the north; and Gilead to the east. Abp. Newcome. These words import the conquests of the Jews over their idolatrous neighbours in every direction. W. Lowth. Or, the enlargement of the Church of Christ in the times of the Gospel. Poole.

20. — the captivity of Jerusalem, which is in Sepharad, shall possess the cities of the south.] Others translate the passage, as in the margin, "The captivity of Jerusalem shall possess that which is in Sepharad, and the cities of the south." If the word be taken as an appellative, it signifies a border, and may denote that part of Arabia which bordereth upon the south of Judea, or the "cities of the south," here mentioned. W. Lowth.

21. And saviours shall come up on mount Zion &c.] By "saviours" may be understood the leaders of the Jews, who should fight their battles, and vanquish their enemies, denoted by the inhabitants of the "mount of Esau." In this sense the word "saviour" is taken, Judg. iii. 9; Isa. xix. 20. Or we may understand the word in a spiritual sense, for the preachers of salvation, whose office it is to convert unbelievers and "aliens to the commonwealth of Israel." Compare ver. 17, and Amos ix. 12. W. Lowth.

JONAH.

INTRODUCTION.

THOUGH Jonah be placed fifth in the order of the Minor Prophets, he is generally considered as the most ancient of all the Prophets whose writings we possess, not excepting Hosea. Jonah was the son of Amittai, of the tribe of Zabulon; and was born at Gathhepher, in that tribe: see 2 Kings xiv. 25; Josh. xix. 13. St. Jerome informs us, that the Prophet's sepulchre was shewn there in his time; and there the natives still believe it to exist.

Jonah is generally supposed to have flourished in the reigns of Joash and Jeroboam the Second, kings of Israel; the former of whom began to reign in the year of the world 3163, the latter died in the year of the world 3220.

Among other testimonies given to the prophetick character of Jonah, may be reckoned that of Tobit, who professed a firm confidence in the accomplishment of Jonah's prediction against Nineveh, and whose son, indeed, afterwards lived to witness its completion, Tob. xiv. 4—6, 15. The sacred writers likewise, and our Lord Himself, speak of him as a Prophet of considerable eminence; 2 Kings xiv. 25; Matt. xii. 39, 41; xvi. 4; Luke xi. 29; see also 2 Esdras i. 39.

The style of Jonah is narrative and simple; the beautiful prayer contained in the second chapter has been justly admired. The book furnishes us with a fine description of the power and mercies of God. Dr. Gray.

Before CHRIST about 862.

CHAP. I.

1 Jonah, sent to Nineveh, fleeth to Tarshish. 5 He is beswinged by a tempest, 11 thrown into the sea, 17 and swallowed by a fish.

NOW the word of the LORD came unto ‖ Jonah the son of Amittai, saying, ‖ Called, Matt. 12. 39. Jonas. * Gen. 10. 11, 12. chap. 3. 3.

2 Arise, go to Nineveh, that * great city, and cry against it; for their wickedness is come up before me.

3 But Jonah rose up to flee unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD, and went down to Joppa; and he found a ship going to Tarshish: so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD.

† Heb. cast forth.

4 ¶ But the LORD † sent out a great wind into the sea, and there was a mighty tempest in the sea, so that the ship † was like to be broken.

Before CHRIST about 862.

† Heb. thought to be broken.

5 Then the mariners were afraid, and cried every man unto his god, and cast forth the wares that were in the ship into the sea, to lighten it of them. But Jonah was gone down into the sides of the ship; and he lay, and was fast asleep.

6 So the shipmaster came to him, and said unto him, What meanest thou, O sleeper? arise, call upon thy God, if so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not.

7 And they said every one to his fellow, Come, and let us cast lots, that we may know for whose cause this evil is upon us. So they cast lots, and the lot fell upon Jonah.

8 Then said they unto him, Tell us, we

Chap. I. ver. 2. Arise, &c.] Arise, go to Nineveh, the great city of the Assyrians, and denounce My judgments against it, for their wickedness is grown to that height, that I can no longer forbear it. Bp. Hall.

3. But Jonah rose up to flee] Jonah might consider this mission as an uncommon, unprofitable, and dangerous one. He certainly thought that his veracity as a Prophet would be affected by God's merciful change of purpose, chap. iv. 2. This and other parts of his conduct deserve censure. But men endued with extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, and made the instruments of declaring God's will to mankind, have occasionally been subject to great human infirmities, and have even contracted great guilt. See 1 Kings xiii. 18, 20; Matt. vii. 22; Acts xv. 39; 1 Cor. xiii. 2; Gal. ii. 11. Abp. Newcome.

—— Tarshish] See note at 1 Kings x. 22. It is probable that there were more places than one named Tarshish. The greater part of learned persons have judged that the place here meant was Tartessus upon the river Bætis in Spain; and, if Jonah thought to secure himself by distance from the presence of the Lord, he could not have a place more proper for his purpose, as it was one of the most remote in the then known world. Bryant.

—— from the presence of the Lord.] That is, from the place where God usually had shown Himself present by revealing His word and will to His Prophets. Perhaps he might think that God would not insist upon the execution of His commission, when he was in a strange country, where were no Prophets nor prophetick impulses. Poole.

5. — into the sides of the ship;] The word, rendered "ship," is expressed by a different word in this and the two immediately preceding verses. It seems to denote a roofed or ceiled room or cabin in the ship, to the sides of which conveniences, something like the mangers in stables, might be fixed for the sailors to lie down in. Parkhurst.

7. — and the lot fell upon Jonah.] By the special appointment of Providence, and in pursuance of His designs. Dancus.

pray thee, for whose cause this evil is upon us; What is thine occupation? and whence comest thou? what is thy country? and of what people art thou?

9 And he said unto them, I am an Hebrew; and I fear the LORD, the God of heaven, which hath made the sea and the dry land.

† Heb. with great fear.

10 Then were the men † exceedingly afraid, and said unto him, Why hast thou done this? For the men knew that he fled from the presence of the LORD, because he had told them.

11 ¶ Then said they unto him, What shall we do unto thee, that the sea † may be calm unto us? for the sea ‖ † wrought, and was tempestuous.

† Heb. may be silent from us!
‖ Or, grew more and more tempestuous.
† Heb. went.

12 And he said unto them, Take me up, and cast me forth into the sea; so shall the sea be calm unto you: for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

13 Nevertheless the men † rowed hard to bring it to the land; but they could not: for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous against them.

† Heb. digged.

14 Wherefore they cried unto the LORD, and said, We beseech thee, O LORD, we beseech thee, let us not perish for this man's life, and lay not upon us innocent blood: for thou, O LORD, hast done as it pleased thee.

Before CHRIST about 862.

15 So they took up Jonah, and cast him forth into the sea: and the sea † ceased from her raging.

† Heb. stood.

16 Then the men feared the LORD exceedingly, and † offered a sacrifice unto the LORD, and made vows.

† Heb. sacrificed a sacrifice

17 ¶ Now the LORD had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah. And [b] Jonah was in the † belly of the fish three days and three nights.

a unto the LORD, and vowed vows.
[b] Matt. 12. 40. & 16. 4. Luke 11. 30.
† Heb. bowels.

CHAP. II.

1 The prayer of Jonah. 10 He is delivered from the fish.

THEN Jonah prayed unto the LORD his God out of the fish's belly,

[a] Ps. 120. 1.

2 And said, I [a] cried ‖ by reason of mine affliction unto the LORD, and he heard me;

‖ Or, out of mine affliction.

9. — I fear the Lord, the God of heaven.] Rather, Jehovah, the God of heaven: Jehovah being the peculiar name by which the true God was distinguished from the gods and lords of the heathens. W. Lonth.

10. Then were the men exceedingly afraid, &c.] Then, when Jonah had told the men both his nation, and his religion, and his profession, and his heinous sin in fleeing from the charge that God had laid upon him, they were exceedingly afraid: as being stricken with the sense both of their own danger and of compassion towards a person of such quality, who had so freely confessed himself and his offence. Bp. Hall.

12. —for I know that for my sake &c.] He was convinced by the nature of the calamity, and by the lot having pointed him out, (ver. 7,) that all the evil proceeded from him, and he was impelled by Heaven to make this salutary proposal, that the whole might not perish. Bryant.

14. Wherefore they cried unto the Lord, &c.] They were convinced, by Jonah's account of himself, that the God whom he worshipped, ver. 9, had brought this tempest upon them. So they made their petitions to Him. W. Lonth.

—— lay not upon us innocent blood:] Punish us not as murderers of an innocent man; for we judge from the whole transaction that we are conforming ourselves to Thy will. Abp. Newcome.

16. Then the men feared the Lord &c.] They were convinced of the power and greatness of that God, whom Jonah worshipped; which appeared both in raising this storm, and in so suddenly laying it: and accordingly they "offered a sacrifice unto the Lord, and made vows," or, as the words may be more plainly translated, they "offered sacrifices unto the Lord, that is, they made vows" to do it at the first opportunity. W. Lonth.

The miracle of preserving Jonah served to spread the knowledge of Jehovah. The whole transaction had this tendency, ver. 16; and it also taught Jonah, and in him the whole prophetical order, God's power and determination to enforce His commands. Abp. Newcome.

17. Now the Lord had prepared &c.] The second chapter would have more properly begun here, as it does in the Oriental versions. Dr. Wells.

—— Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights.] The Hebrew language has no word to express what we call a natural day; what therefore the Greeks express by a word, which literally rendered means night-day, they denote by "a day and a night." Therefore the space of time consisting of one whole revolution of twenty-four hours, and part of two others, is fitly expressed in that language by "three days and three nights." Such a space of time our Lord lay in the grave: and Jonah, who was an eminent figure of Him in this particular, was probably no longer in the fish's belly. W. Lonth.

As the things, which befell the Church at large, happened to them for ensamples to the whole congregation of Christian people; so the things, which befell the Prophets of old, happened for ensamples of the Saviour Himself: that His character and history, as the true Son of God who should come into the world, might be infallibly ascertained and demonstrated by a comparison with the various characters of those who had been most eminent in the Church of old. This consideration will reconcile us to some strange things, which might appear very unreasonable, if they were considered only in themselves. How monstrous would it seem in any other history, that a man should be buried in the body of a fish, and cast up alive again after three days upon the dry land! But if this strange thing happened, that it might afterwards be compared with the return of Jesus Christ from the dead for the salvation of all mankind, then the preservation of Jonah becomes fit and reasonable; it being of infinite importance to the world, that the fact of Christ's resurrection, when it should happen, should be admitted and believed: and so the case was worthy of the Divine interposition. Jonah was not preserved by a miracle for his own sake, but for a sign, to instruct the people of God in the truth of their salvation, and in the peculiar means or mode of it. Our Saviour Himself hath instructed us to make this use of Jonah's history, Matt. xii. 39, 40. Jones of Nayland.

Chap. II. ver. 1. Then Jonah prayed &c.] This prayer hath much more the appearance of a thanksgiving after a deliverance; and indeed could scarce be used before, whatever change be made in the tenses, unless we suppose it prophetical of the deliverance. Had it not been inserted in the history, many things in it would be understood metaphorically, as in the Psalms. Abp. Secker. It appears to be the prayer of Jonah, as he wrote it after he came out of the fish, but as he had conceived it before in the fish's belly. Daneus.

Before CHRIST about 862. out of the belly of ‖ hell cried I, and thou heardest my voice.

‖ Or, the grave. † Heb. heart.

3 For thou hadst cast me into the deep, in the † midst of the seas; and the floods compassed me about: all thy billows and thy waves passed over me.

4 Then I said, I am cast out of thy sight; yet I will look again toward thy holy temple.

CHAP. III.

1 Jonah, sent again, preacheth to the Ninevites. 5 Upon their repentance, 10 God repenteth.

AND the word of the LORD came unto Jonah the second time, saying,

2 Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee.

3 So Jonah arose, and went unto Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD. Now Nineveh was an † exceeding great city of three days' journey. † Heb. of God.

4 And Jonah began to enter into the city a day's journey, and he cried, and said, Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

2. — out of the belly of hell.] Out of that place of unspeakable horrour, wherein I was for the time buried, as in the belly of a living and moving grave. Bp. Hall. The word rendered "hell" signifies the state of the dead. It may be most properly rendered the "grave" here, as in the margin: the belly of the fish was to Jonah as a grave. W. Lowth.

4. Then I said, I am cast out of thy sight; &c.] My first apprehensions were, that as I had justly forfeited Thy favour by my disobedience; so Thou wouldest cast me out of Thy protection; see ver. 7, and compare Ps. xxxi. 22: yet upon recollecting myself, I thought it my duty not to despair of Thy mercy, but direct my prayer towards Thy heavenly habitation. See ver. 7. W. Lowth.

6. — the bottoms of the mountains;] The bottom of the sea, where the foundations of the mountains lie. See Ps. xxiv. 2. W. Lowth.

—— the earth with her bars was about me for ever:] I thought that the earth had barred me out, and excluded me wholly from ever seeing the firm land again. Dr. Stokes.

8. They that observe lying vanities forsake their own mercy.] They that trust in idols, often called by the names of "vanity" and "lies," (see Ps. xxxi. 6; Jer. x. 8; xvi. 19;) forsake Him, who alone is able to shew them mercy, and protect them in the time of danger. W. Lowth. In Ps. cxliv. 2, according to the marginal translation, the Psalmist calls God "his mercy," or the Author of mercy to him. See also Ps. lix. 10, 17. Abp. Newcome.

10. And the Lord spake unto the fish, &c.] God's almighty power is represented in Scripture as bringing things to pass by His bare will and command: see Gen. i. 3; Rom. iv. 17. W. Lowth. See also the note on Gen. i. 3.

The fish obeyeth and delivereth Jonah, that hereby we also may learn to obey God, and to acknowledge all things to be subject to His power, and to reverence and stand in awe of Him, and to worship and fear Him. Danæus.

Chap. III. ver. 3. — Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city of three days' journey.] Diodorus Siculus informs us, that Nineveh was 480 furlongs in compass, which makes sixty of our miles: so that it was bigger than Babylon, which, according to his account, was but forty-eight. Diodorus's account agrees with the description the Prophet gives us, that it was "three days' journey" in compass. Twenty miles was a day's journey in common computation for a foot-traveller. W. Lowth.

4, 5. And Jonah began to enter &c.] And when Jonah had spent one day in his preaching, and had gone through one third part of the city, crying, and saying, There are yet but forty days to come, ere Nineveh, except it repent, shall be destroyed; the people of Nineveh believed that word of God, delivered to them by His Prophet, &c. Bp. Hall.

The fame of the wonderful works, which God had wrought for the Jews, was spread over the Eastern parts of the world. This might make the Ninevites hearken to a man of that nation, that came to them as sent by God. And it is likely that he gave them an account of the miraculous circumstances which attended his own mission. But without question a sense of their own guilt, and their deserving whatever punishment Heaven could inflict, was a principal reason that moved them to have a regard to the Prophet's message. And by the men of Nineveh's repenting "at the preaching of Jonas," God designed to upbraid the stubbornness of His own people, and shame them, as it were, into repentance, for fear the men of "Nineveh should rise in judgment with them," as our Saviour speaks of the Israelites in His own time, Matt. xii. 41. W. Lowth.

4. — Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.] That is, unless it repent. In the whole course of Scripture, God's threatenings, and His promises also, have ever a condition annexed to them in His purpose: which condition, though it be not ever, indeed but seldom, expressed, yet is it ever included, and so to be understood. All God's promises, however absolutely expressed, are made on the condition of obedience: and all His threatenings, however absolutely expressed, on the condition of impenitence. See Jer. xviii. 8; Ezek. xxxiii. 11. When He says, Abimelech shall die for taking Sarah, understand it, unless he restore her; see Gen. xx. 3, 7: "Forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown," understand it with this reservation, unless they repent. The Ninevites understood it so; else it had been in vain for them to have repented at all, out of an hope of preventing the judgment by their repentance, as their speeches shew that they did. For "who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from His fierce anger, that we perish not?" ver. 9. Bp. Sanderson.

6. — the king of Nineveh.] Archbishop Usher supposes this laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth, and sat in ashes.

7 And he caused it to be proclaimed and † published through Nineveh by the decree of the king and his † nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste any thing: let them not feed, nor drink water:

8 But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God: yea, let them turn every one from his evil way, and from the violence that is in their hands.

9 [b] Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not?

10 ¶ And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil, that he had said that he would do unto them; and he did it not.

CHAP. IV.

1 Jonah, repining at God's mercy, is reproved by the type of a gourd.

BUT it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he was very angry.

2 And he prayed unto the LORD, and said, I pray thee, O LORD, was not this my saying, when I was yet in my country? Therefore I [a] fled before unto Tarshish: for I knew that thou art a [b] gracious God, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repentest thee of the evil.

3 Therefore now, O LORD, take, I beseech thee, my life from me; for it is better for me to die than to live.

4 ¶ Then said the LORD, ‖ Doest thou well to be angry?

5 So Jonah went out of the city, and sat on the east side of the city, and there made him a booth, and sat under it in the shadow, till he might see what would become of the city.

prince to have been Pul, the king of Assyria, Nineveh being then the capital city of that empire. W. Lowth.

7. — neither man nor beast,] Abstaining for some time from our daily food signifies most naturally that we are unworthy of it, and can take no comfort in it, whilst we are under the Divine displeasure. And as anciently every thing of importance was denoted, especially in the Eastern countries, by actions as well as by words, this was probably the original purpose, for which men used fasting. And it was then sometimes extended to children and cattle, in token that the parents and owners of them had forfeited the dearest blessings and most valuable conveniences of life. See also Joel ii. 16; Judith iv. 10. Abp. Secker.

7. — taste any thing:] The Eastern mode of fasting was abstinence from food till the evening, 2 Sam. i. 12. Abp. Newcome.

8. — let — beast be covered with sackcloth,] In token of publick sorrow and humiliation. W. Lowth.

—— and cry mightily unto God: yea, let them turn &c.] Natural religion instructed them, that their earnest prayers without true amendment would not avail them before God: nor would their repentance be thought sincere, unless they restored to the true owners what they had gained by violence and injustice. W. Lowth.

10. — and God repented of the evil, &c.] See the note on ver. 4. A sincere and effectual repentance will stay God's hand, and infallibly turn Him from the fierceness of His anger: insomuch that after He had declared and denounced the very day for the destruction of Nineveh, yet as soon as "He saw their works, that they turned from their evil way," He presently "repented of the evil, &c." In this case God does not stand upon the reputation of His Prophet, by whom He had sent to them so peremptory a message; but His mercy breaks through all considerations, and rejoiceth against judgment: for He cannot find in His heart to ruin those, who by the terror of His judgments will be brought to repentance. Abp. Tillotson.

This is ever God's manner, when men change their deeds, to change His doom; when they renounce their sins, to recall His sentence; when they repent of the evil they have done against Him, to "repent of the evil that He had said that He would do unto them." Search the Scriptures; and say if things run not thus, as in the most ordinary course; God commandeth, and man disobeyeth; man disobeyeth, and God threateneth; God threateneth, and man repenteth; man repenteth, and God forbeareth. Nineveh, prepare for desolation; for now but "forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown:" but Nineveh fasted, and prayed, and repented; and Nineveh stood after more than twice forty years. Generally, God never yet threatened any punishment upon person or place, but, if they repented, He either withheld it, or deferred it, or abated it, or sweetened it to them: for the most part proportionably to the truth and measure of their repentance, but always, so far as in His infinite wisdom He hath thought good, He hath remitted somewhat of the threatened severity and rigour. Bp. Sanderson.

Chap. IV. ver. 2. — I knew that thou art a gracious God, &c.] I knew by Thy declarations to Moses, (Exod. xxxiv. 6,) and by several instances of Thy mercy, that Thou dost not always execute the punishments which Thou threatenest against sinners. W. Lowth.

3. — better for me to die than to live.] Under the imputation of being a false prophet. W. Lowth.

4. Then said the Lord, Doest thou well to be angry?] Dost thou think this is a just cause for thee to be moved with anger, for that I have spared the Ninevites? Bp. Hall. Jonah seems to have thought, that his veracity as a Prophet, and the honour of his office, were affected. His impatience here, and at ver. 8, was highly reprehensible. Abp. Newcome.

5. So Jonah went out of the city,] Rather, Now Jonah had gone out of the city: for the particulars related in the foregoing verses happened after his departing out of the city, and sitting somewhere in view of it, expecting some extraordinary judgment should come upon it: but being disappointed, he broke out into that expostulation with God already mentioned. W. Lowth.

—— a booth,] The original word signifies an artificial covert, as a tent or booth; and also a natural one, as in Jer. xxv. 38; Job xxxviii. 40. Abp. Newcome.

The words, "the Lord prepared a gourd," may signify that He had prepared one. It is probable, that this gourd was the booth, under which Jonah sheltered himself from the heat: the perishing of which must of course have given him great pain, especially when we consider the intolerable heat of the country: which is so excessive, that Thevenot informs us he was prevented by it from going to visit the reputed tomb of Jonah on the east side of the Tigris. Harmer.

6. — a gourd,] It is not agreed among interpreters what particular plant is meant. Dr. Wells. Bochart and others suppose the Ricinus or Palma Christi to be meant: and the height of him from his grief. So Jonah † was exceeding glad of the gourd.

7 But God prepared a worm when the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd that it withered.

8 And it came to pass, when the sun did arise, that God prepared a ‖ vehement east wind; and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and wished in himself to die, and said, It is better for me to die than to live.

9 And God said to Jonah, ‖ Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd? And he said, ‖ I do well to be angry, even unto death.

10 Then said the LORD, Thou hast ‖ had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it grow; which † came up in a night, and perished in a night:

that plant, which is the same as that of the olive, the largeness of its leaves, which are like those of the vine, and the quickness of its growth, are said to favour this supposition. We may however justly attribute a miraculous growth to the plant which shaded Jonah. Abp. Newcome.

—— to deliver him from his grief.] That is, from the displeasure, which he had conceived, ver. 1: to abate the heat, and thus to ease his mind by easing his body. Or, to deliver him from his affliction, or distress, on account of the heat. Abp. Newcome.

—— So Jonah was exceeding glad of the gourd.] Take we heed, that we place not our felicity in the enjoyment, or please ourselves too much in the confidence, or allow ourselves overmuch freedom in the use, of any creature; lest as Jonah was overjoyed when the gourd sprang up, and overvexed when it withered, so the loss of what we overvalued while we had it, overwhelm us with grief and impatience, when we must part from it. Bp. Sanderson.

8. — a vehement east wind.] The winds in those hot countries, when they blow from the sandy deserts, are often more suffocating than the heat of the sun, and make the sunbeams give a more intense heat. The word, translated "vehement," signifies also "silent," as it is rendered in the margin. In that sense it denotes such a wind, as causes a small motion in the air, and makes it sultry hot. W. Lowth.

9. — And he said, I do well to be angry, even unto death.] And he said, in such weakness and rash passion, I have just cause to be angry, even to such a degree as to wish myself dead. The Prophet here records his own impatience, as Moses and other holy writers have done, without concealing any circumstance of it. Bp. Hall, W. Lowth.

10, 11. Then said the Lord, Thou hast had pity &c.] Then said the Lord, I have done this purposely to shew thee thine own errour and weakness: thou hadst pity on a sorry plant, which cost thee no labour, which received no life from thee, which suddenly came up, and suddenly vanished. And should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are sixscore thousand infants, that have not lived to offend, and much cattle, which are not capable of offence? How much are these better than the senseless plants of the earth! And these are the work of My hands, and have cost Me much care and regard, and such as require time and leisure for their perfection; bethink thyself therefore, how just reason I have to be angry at thy unmercifulness, which art angry at My forbearance of Nineveh. Bp. Hall.

—— Thou hast had pity on the gourd,] Jonah seems to have been grieved that so extraordinary and beautiful a plant perished: as well as for the loss of its shelter. Abp. Newcome.

11. — sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left] That is, infants, who "have no knowledge between good and evil," as it is expressed, Deut. i. 39; Is. vii. 15, 16. If we compute these at a fifth part of the inhabitants, the city will have contained six hundred thousand persons. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

A great consideration with God, in His sending of publick calamities, is the multitude of the sufferers; and that not only the guilty, but the innocent also, without a special and miraculous Providence, must be involved in a common calamity. Abp. Tillotson.

—— and also much cattle?] In the large circuit of Nineveh, as in that of Babylon, space was probably left for cattle to feed. Abp. Newcome. God's providence extends its care to beasts as well as men; see Ps. xxxvi. 6; civ. 27, 28: so that He is willing to spare them, as well as the more noble parts of creation. W. Lowth. In this declaration of God's unwillingness to destroy Nineveh, that compassion of the Creator, which extends to the meanest rank of His creatures, is expressed with wonderful tenderness: and from this, in common with other considerations, it is not extravagant to imagine, that mankind are no less in proportion accountable for the ill use of their dominion over creatures of the lower rank of beings, than for the exercise of tyranny over their own species. Guardian.

MICAH.

INTRODUCTION.

MICAH was unquestionably the author of this Book; and he speaks in that character, chap. iii. 1, 8. He calls himself a Morasthite, chap. i. 1; and is supposed to have been a native of Morasthi, a village situated near the city of Eleutheropolis, in the southern part of Judah; a place distinguished by St. Jerome from Mareshah, mentioned in this book, chap. i. 15, and in Joshua, chap. xv. 44.

Micah speaks only of the kings of Judah; and he prophesied in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, contemporary with whom were Pekah and Hoshea, the two last kings of Israel. Micah then began to prophesy soon after Isaiah, Hosea, Joel, and Amos; and he prophesied between the year of the world 3245, when Jotham began to reign, and the year of the world 3305, when Hezekiah died: but probably not during the whole of that period.

Micah, who received the Divine revelations by vision, was appointed to preach both against Israel and Judah; and executed his commission with great animation and zeal. One of his predictions is related to have saved the life of Jeremiah: who under the reign of Jehoiakim would have been put to death for prophesying the destruction of the temple, had it not appeared that Micah had foretold the same thing under Hezekiah about one hundred years before, Mic. iii. 12. Micah is mentioned as a Prophet in the book of Jeremiah, chap. xxvi. 18, compared with Mic. iii. 12; and in the New Testament, Matt. ii. 5, and John vii. 42. He is imitated by succeeding Prophets, as he himself had borrowed the expressions of those who preceded, or flourished at the same time with him. Our Saviour Himself, indeed, condescended to speak in the language of the Prophet.

The Prophet predicted in clear terms the invasions of Shalmaneser and Sennacherib, and their triumph over Israel and Judah; the captivities, dispersion, and deliverance of Israel; the cessation of prophecy; the destruction of Assyria and of Babylon, the representatives of the enemies of the Christian Church; the birth of the Everlasting Ruler at Beth-lehem Ephratah; the establishment and exaltation of Christ's kingdom over all nations; the influence of the Gospel; and the destruction of Jerusalem, chap. iii. 12. Dr. Gray.

The style of Micah is nervous, concise, and elegant; often elevated and poetical, but sometimes obscure from sudden transitions of subject. The contrast of the neglected duties of justice, mercy, humility, and piety, with the punctilious observance of the ceremonial sacrifices, affords a beautiful example of the harmony which subsists between the Mosaick and the Christian dispensations, and shews that the Law partook, in some degree at least, of that spiritual nature, which more immediately characterizes the religion of Jesus. Bp. Tomline.

Chap. I. ver. 1. — concerning Samaria and Jerusalem.] Concerning both the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, of which Samaria and Jerusalem were the capital cities. W. Lowth.

2. Hear, all ye people; hearken, O earth, and all that therein is:] By "people," may be understood either the people of those countries, or of all others: and so by "earth," either particularly that land, or the whole habitable world, and "the fulness thereof," that is, as it is well expressed, "all that therein is," all the inhabitants, that fill and occupy it. The people of that land are more peculiarly spoken to, and God's judgments are now particularly denounced against them: yet what is said or done is for an example to all other. Dr. Pocock.

—— and let the Lord God be witness against you,] I call Him to witness, that I have forewarned you of the judgments that hang over your heads, unless you speedily repent. And He Himself will become a witness against you, and convince you of your sins, in such a manner that you shall not be able to deny the charge. Compare Ps. l. 7; Mal. iii. 5. W. Lowth.

—— from his holy temple.] Either from the temple at Jerusalem; or, as most generally understood, from heaven, called His "temple," Ps. xi. 4, of which the earthly temple was a representation. Dr. Pocock. See Jonah ii. 4, and the note there.

3. — the Lord cometh forth out of his place,] God, who is every where present, is said more particularly to be there, where He more peculiarly exhibits His majesty and glory; and He is said to "come forth out of His place," and to "come down" to any other place, when He gives more apparent tokens of His presence by acts of mercy or judgment. Dr. Pocock.

—— and tread upon the high places of the earth.] Subduing places of the greatest strength, and bringing down men of the highest rank. See Amos iv. 13. W. Lowth.

6. For the transgression of Jacob is all this, &c.] And all these judgments shall be for the idolatries of Israel and Judah. What then, or who, is the author of this great sin of Israel? Is it not the mother city Samaria, whose princes have erected and maintained those golden calves? And who is the author of those offensive high places of Judah? Is not Jerusalem, and those her kings, who have set them up and countenanced them? Bp. Hall.

It is the case of most kingdoms, that they are much influenced by the spirit and genius of their principal cities. And so it was with the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, of which Samaria and Jerusalem were the respective heads. These two cities were two fountains of corruption, which infected all the surrounding countries. The transgression of Samaria was Baal and the golden calves; the transgression of Jerusalem was her high places, where idolatries were practised. Thus the Prophet lays his general charge: he will come to particulars presently. But he begins with religious abuses, because they are the spring and root of all other wickedness. Reading.

6. — as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard:] As a heap of stones laid together carelesly in the field, or as those hillocks of earth which are cast up for the planting of a vineyard. Bp. Hall.

7. — all the hires thereof] See Hoseas ii. 12, where the idolatrous people are taxed for saying of their vines and fig trees, "These are my rewards" or hire, "that my lovers," that is, my idols, "have given me:" see also verses 5, and 8. Hence it appears, that by "hires," may be understood all their wealth and good things, which they looked on as the gifts of their idols, and the rewards of their idolatrous service. Dr. Pocock.

—— for she gathered it of the hire of an harlot, &c.] She imagines that she gaineth her wealth as a reward of her idolatry, and it shall "return," or be made a prey to idolatrous Assyrians. W. Lowth.

8. — like the dragons,] See the notes on Job xxx. 29; Lam. iv. 3.

—— mourning as the owls.] Or ostriches, for so the ancient interpreters generally render it. It is affirmed by travellers of good credit, that ostriches make a fearful screeching lamentable noise. Dr. Pocock. During the lonesome part of the night they often make a very doleful and hideous noise, as if they were in the greatest agonies: an action beautifully alluded to here. Dr. Shaw.

9. — he is come &c.] That is, the enemy: or, "it is come," namely, the evil condition spoken of. Dr. Pocock.

10. Declare ye it not at Gath, weep ye not at all:] See 2 Sam. i. 20. The people are counselled not to make known their calamity by any publick expression of sorrow, as "weeping," &c, lest their enemies should rejoice at it. Dr. Pocock.

—— Aphrah] The word "Aphrah" signifies dust; the Prophet probably uses it here for Ophrah, a town in the tribe of Benjamin, that the name may better suit their condition. W. Lowth. There, that is, farther off from the Philistines, and that they may not take notice of it, silently mourn, or "roll thyself in the dust." The Prophet in this and the following verses reckons up several places, whether belonging to Israel or Judah, by alluding to the names of which he expresses their present or future condition, together with others not named, even the whole land. Dr. Pocock.

11. — thou inhabitant of Saphir,] Saphir signifies fair or elegant. It is taken by some for the proper name of a city; by others for Samaria, or Jerusalem. Whatever be the place intended, these words denounce, that to it and its inhabitants shame and confusion shall take place of their former beauty and glory. The other names also some apply to Samaria and Jerusalem; but the exposition is plainer, by taking them for proper names of places. Dr. Pocock.

—— the inhabitant of Zaanan came not forth &c.] The meaning of this difficult passage seems to be, That when the inhabitants of Beth-ezel, which was first taken by the enemy, were led away "mourning, the inhabitants of Zaanan came not forth" to bewail with them, or comfort or help them, as standing on their own guard against the enemy, or knowing that the same calamity should quickly befall themselves, and so they should have to bewail their own disasters. For "he shall receive of you his standing;" of you, O inhabitants of Zaanan, though you remain longer than those of Beth-ezel, yet "he," that is, the enemy, "shall receive his standing," that is, the reward for his labour and time spent in besieging and taking you: your spoil shall be his recompense. Dr. Pocock.

Zaanan was in the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 37: Beth-ezel near Jerusalem, Zech. xiv. 5. Abp. Newcome.

12. For the inhabitant of Maroth waited carefully for good:] The words may be better translated, Although the inhabitant of Maroth waited for good, yet evil &c. W. Lowth.

Maroth seems to be a city in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem, or one that had dependence on it, and so could not but be involved in her calamity. Dr. Pocock. A city of like name is placed in the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 59. Abp. Newcome.

away hastily, taking the advantage of your remoteness: try if you can thus avoid the judgment, who were the authors of sin to the rest of Judah, next after the revolt of the ten tribes to their molten calves. Lachish was the first of the tribe of Judah, that both received and diffused the infection to the daughter of Zion; the idolatries of Israel were first found in thee, O Lachish. Bp. Hall.

14. Therefore shalt thou give presents &c.] Therefore shalt thou be fain to give vain presents unto the Philistines to help thee: thou shalt have recourse to those false and lying succours, which have been ever deceitful to the kings of Judah, and so shall be still unto thee. Bp. Hall.

Moresheth-gath appears to have been a place or city, probably near or belonging to Gath of the Philistines. Achzib is the name of a town, mentioned with Mareshah, Josh. xv. 44, as belonging to the tribe of Judah: and there is another of the same name, mentioned Josh. xix. 29, and Judg. i. 31, as belonging to or bordering upon the tribe of Asher. The word Achzib signifies a lie, which signification is alluded to in the menace against it. Dr. Pocock. W. Lowth.

15. Yet will I bring an heir] Namely, an enemy, that shall take possession of the people and all that they have, as if it were his inheritance. Here is an allusion to the name "Mareshah," which includes in it the signification of inheritance. This city is supposed by most interpreters to be the country of the Prophet. Dr. Pocock.

—— he shall come unto Adullam the glory of Israel.] He, that is, the glory and God of Israel, executing His justice upon the people, and thereby manifesting His glory, shall come even as far as to Adullam, in the inmost part of the kingdom of Judah, giving all into the hand of the enemy. See the margin. Bp. Hall, Dr. Pocock. Or, he, namely, the enemy, the heir of Mareshah, shall come to Adullam, which may have been called "the glory of Israel," on account of its situation, strength, or beauty, or for some reasons, now not well known. It was a royal city, Josh. xii. 15; taken by Joshua, and transferred to the tribe of Judah, chap. xv. 35; made a city of defence by Rehoboam, 2 Chron. xi. 7; and it had villages belonging to it, Nehem. xi. 30. Dr. Pocock.

16. Make thee bald, &c.] In the mention of Adullam and other particular places, the whole land is understood: and it is accordingly here called upon, to give itself entirely up to sorrow and mourning, and to express its grief by all the customary outward signs. See Jer. vii. 29; Amos viii. 10; Job i. 20. Dr. Pocock.

—— enlarge thy baldness as the eagle;] When he sheds his plumage, Ps. ciii. 5. Bochart observes, that at these times eagles are said to be bald. Abp. Newcome.

Chap. II. ver. 1, 2. The Prophet proceeds to shew, how justly deserved were the punishments, denounced against Israel and Judah, by a declaration of some of the sins of which their inhabitants were guilty. Dr. Pocock.

3. — Behold, against this family do I devise an evil.] As they devise mischief against others, so will I devise an evil against them, as a due punishment for their sin. As they have unjustly deprived others of their inheritance, so a conquering enemy shall dispossess them, and carry them into captivity. See the following verse. The word "family" is equivalent to people, as appears from Jer. i. 15. W. Lowth.

4. — shall one take up a parable &c.] Men shall take up a parable, a doleful song with parabolical and figurative expressions. Dr. Pocock. See the notes on Numb. xxiii. 7; Job xxvii 1.

—— he hath changed the portion of my people: &c.] He hath removed His people out of their ancient inheritance, that portion which He Himself had allotted them, and hath given it away to other owners. W. Lowth.

5. Therefore thou shalt have none that shall cast a cord by lot in the congregation of the Lord.] Therefore, when this judgment shall be effected, there shall none remain of you, who shall have any lot or inheritance in the land of Israel. Bp. Hall. The words are an address to the whole people, denouncing the irrecoverable loss of their country, and that they should no more return to it, to be therein the congregation of the Lord, and to divide it among themselves by the "cord" or measuring line. Dr. Pocock.

6. Prophesy ye not, say they to them that prophesy:] They do not care to hear the Prophets speak ungrateful truths: see Isai. xxx. 10; Amos vii. 16. W. Lowth.

—— they shall not prophesy to them, that they shall not take shame.] Or, rather, "for they will not take shame." It is to no purpose to prophesy to them, for they still persist in a shameless course of sin. Compare Zeph. iii. 5; Jer. vi. 15. W. Lowth.

7. O thou that art named the house of Jacob,] But dost not in thy doings make good that name, "is the spirit of the Lord straitened?" Is His mercy, His will or power of promising good things by His Prophets, and effecting them, now restrained more than formerly, when He did both, that now thou receivest only threatening messages by His Prophets? "Are these His doings?" Was He wont thus to deal? Or, are these punishments and judgments, which He denounceth, His constant works, or works in which He delighteth? Are they not rather, what you by your sins, as it were, force Him to do? "Do not My words do good to him that walketh uprightly?" Doth He not promise good things, and give them to him that is upright and walketh in good ways? Dre. Pocock and Wells.

9. Even of late my people is risen up as an enemy: &c.] Now of late My people, as if they needed no enemy, are turned enemies to each other: ye strip the garments from the backs of travellers, that pass by securely, without any thought of such cruel and hostile measures. Bp. Hall.

The words rendered "robe," and "garment," appear to signify, the former a looser garment thrown over the rest, the latter a closer one more fitted to the body. Compare Matt. v. 40; Luke vi. 29. Dr. Pocock.

9. The women of my people have ye cast out &c.] By your sins ye cause them to go into captivity. Abp. Newcome.

—— from their children have ye taken away my glory for ever.] The glory, which I had bestowed on them by becoming their God, by placing them in a pleasant land, and by protecting and blessing them when they adhered to Me, Ps. xc. 16; Exek. xvi. 14. Abp. Newcome.

10. Arise ye, and depart; &c.] Away, therefore, arise and get you into captivity; for this land is no place for you: since ye have thus defiled it with your sins, it shall cast you out, and deliver you up to be destroyed by your enemies. Bp. Hall.

11. If a man walking in the spirit and falsehood &c.] Or, "in the spirit of falsehood." W. Lowth. Or, as in the margin, "walk with the wind, and lie falsely." Dr. Pocock. I know well enough how I might please you: if a man would walk in a vain light fashion, and yield to prophesy nothing but lies unto you, and sooth you in gluttony and drunkenness, and tell you of that free scope ye shall have to wine and strong drink; he should be a welcome Prophet to this people. Bp. Hall.

—— wine and of strong drink;] See the note on Is. xxiv. 9.

12. I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee; &c.] There are strange mixtures in Micah, as well as in Hoseа and others, of promises with complaints and threatenings. Some interpret ver. 12, as the words of the false prophet spoken of just before: and some think ver. 12, 13, a threatening that God will shut them up to be besieged and led captive. But Jer. xxxi. 10, which is very like ver. 12, is a promise: see also chap. iv. 6 of this prophecy. And so is Is. lii. 12, which is like the end of ver. 13. Abp. Secker.

The words are a promise of mercy, such as is often subjoined to the threatenings of impending judgment. This promise relates to the general restoration of the Jewish nation, which yet is here and elsewhere confined to that remnant that shall escape the punishments that will come upon the rebellious. See the note upon chap. iv. 7. W. Lowth. It is generally understood by Christians of a spiritual deliverance of the Jews by Christ, and the calling of them into His kingdom, and gathering them into His Church, together with the called of the Gentiles, as "one flock" into one fold, under "one Shepherd." See John x. 16. Dr. Pocock.

13. The breaker is come up before them:] He that shall break the bonds of their captivity, or break through all obstacles that hinder their return home. The Jewish commentators generally understand "the breaker," and "their king" that follows, of the same person, namely, the Messiah: to whom the title of "breaker" may well agree, for his "breaking down" all obstacles, "the middle wall of partition between Jews and Gentiles," Eph. ii. 14; and breaking open the gates of death and hell, and thereby opening the gates of heaven, so that His flock may go in and out, and find pasture, He going before them, and His sheep following Him, John x. 4, 9. W. Lowth, Dr. Pocock.

—— they have broken up, &c.] The expressions allude to a flock of sheep, which, as soon as a passage is opened for one to get out, do all of them follow. W. Lowth.

—— and their king shall pass before them, and the Lord] Or, "even the Lord on the head of them." The Messiah, who is both their Lord and King, shall lead and conduct them as their Captain and General. Compare Isaish iii. 12; Hoseа i. 11. W. Lowth.

Chap. III. ver. 1. — Hear, — O heads of Jacob, — Is it not for you to know judgment?] Men of their birth and station were more especially bound to know and practise the law of God, which enjoined them to treat the inferior people as their brethren, to seek their welfare, to give them the fruits of their labours, to render to every man his due, a living price for his goods, and just wages for his work. Reading.

2, 3. — who pluck off their skin &c.] Who offer all cruelty and violence to the people; like some unfaithful shepherd, who, instead of feeding his flock, deals with them according to the literal sense of the words, that he may thereby luxuriously pamper himself. Dr. Pocock.

Before CHRIST 710. they have behaved themselves ill in their doings.

4. — as they have behaved themselves ill in their doings.] As they have shewed no pity to others, God will shew no pity to them. W. Lowth. God often proportions the punishment to the sin, rendering, as the Jews speak, measure for measure. Dr. Pocock.

5. — that bite with their teeth, and cry, Peace; &c.] Who, so that they may be fed with the largesses of the people, cry, Peace and happiness; but if their mouths are not filled with gifts, are ready to load their niggardly hearers with threats of judgments. Bp. Hall.

6, 7. Therefore night shall be unto you, &c.] Such confusion shall seize upon them, by reason of the calamities signified by the terms "night," "darkness," and the like, that it shall be with them as with men in utter darkness, who know not which way to turn themselves, much less can pretend to direct others: thus shall they be "ashamed" and "confounded," their impostures being made manifest to all. Dr. Pocock.

8. But truly I am full of power &c.] Full of the Spirit of God, and, by virtue of that, "full of power," freely and without partiality to utter the Divine message; and "of judgment," by which to discern between right and wrong; and "of might," to utter His commission without fear of men or their greatness. Dr. Pocock.

10. They build up Zion with blood, &c.] They build them stately houses in Zion and in Jerusalem with those sums which they have extorted by their oppressions of the innocent. Bp. Hall.

—— the prophets thereof divine for money:] See ver. 5; Jer. v. 31; vi. 13. This is to be understood of the false prophets. See Zeph. iii. 4; Zech. xiii. 2. W. Lowth.

12. Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed &c.] This prophecy had its utmost completion in the final destruction of the city and temple by the Romans; see Jer. xxvi. 18. The word "heaps" alludes to heaps of stones laid up together in fields newly plowed; see chap. i. 6. "The mountain of the house" is mount Moriah, where the temple, the house of the Lord, stood. W. Lowth.

Chap. IV. According to God's usual method, who in the midst of judgment remembers mercy, to the grievous judgments before denounced, gracious promises of great mercy are here subjoined. In the foregoing words He threatens utter desolation to the mountain of the Lord; here He promises a gracious restoration, establishment, and exaltation: in the former, obstinate sinners are given to understand the severity of God's unavoidable judgments to them; in the latter, penitent believers are given to expect His mercies, which never fail those who are qualified to receive them. Dr. Pocock.

Ver. 1. — in the last days &c.] The times of the Messiah; see the notes on Is. ii. 2, &c. W. Lowth.

4. But they shall sit every man under his vine &c.] Micah has repeated Isaiah's prophecy of the establishment of the kingdom of Christ, and of its progress to universality and perfection, in the same words, with little and hardly any material variation. But it is to be observed, that he has here improved the passage, by adding a verse or sentence, for imagery and expression worthy even of the elegance of Isaiah. Bp. Lowth.

5. For all people will walk &c.] While those, that are without the pale of the Church, walk after the false religion of their idol gods, we will walk in the profession of the holy truth of God for

Before CHRIST 710. the name of the LORD our God for ever and ever.

6 In that day, saith the LORD, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted;

[a] Zeph. 3. 19. 7 And I will make her that [a] halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the LORD [b] shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever.

[b] Dan. 7. 14. Luke 1. 33.

8 ¶ And thou, O tower of the flock, the strong hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem.

9 Now why dost thou cry out aloud? is there no king in thee? is thy counseller perished? for pangs have taken thee as a woman in travail.

10 Be in pain, and labour to bring forth, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail: for now shalt thou go forth out of the city, and thou shalt dwell in the field, and thou shalt go even to Babylon; there shalt thou be delivered; there the LORD shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies. Before CHRIST 710.

11 ¶ Now also many nations are gathered against thee, that say, Let her be defiled, and let our eye look upon Zion.

12 But they know not the thoughts of the LORD, neither understand they his counsel: for he shall gather them as the sheaves into the floor.

" In the name," that is, in the profession of Jehovah, who has such mercies in store for us. Abp. Newcome.

This will be remarkably fulfilled at the general conversion of the Jews, when this prophecy shall receive its utmost completion. W. Lowth.

6. — will I assemble her that halteth,] Though I have broken the power of My people, removed them into captivity afar off, and afflicted them, yet will I restore them to their country, I will send them the Messiah, and will be always their King. Abp. Newcome. This prophecy was fulfilled by Christ's bringing "the lost sheep of the house of Israel" into His fold, by His own preaching and that of His Apostles and Disciples; see Matt. xv. 24; x. 6, &c. Dr. Pocock. Or it will hereafter be fulfilled by the calling of the Jews from their several dispersions into the Church. W. Lowth.

7. — I will make her that halted a remnant,] A part of them shall be preserved, in whom the future designs of My providence shall be accomplished. Abp. Newcome.

—— her that was cast far off a strong nation:] Signifying, either that the Church, in regard to her spiritual strength, should grow to such a height and greatness, that the gates of hell should not be able to prevail against it: (Dr. Pocock:) or that the Jews, when they return from their several dispersions, (see ver. 6,) shall be victorious over all their enemies. Compare chap. v. 8; Ezek. xxxviii, xxxix; and see Obad. ver. 18. W. Lowth.

—— and the Lord shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever.] Zion is to be taken spiritually for the Church, over which Christ reigneth and shall reign for ever. Dr. Pocock. Or, the prophecy may be hereafter literally fulfilled at the restoration of the Jews. Abp. Newcome.

8. — O tower of the flock,] By this is most probably intended the tower of David, or rather all Jerusalem itself, which was, as it were, the tower and fold of God's flock, Israel. The same is called in the words subjoined, "the strong hold of the daughter of Zion." Dr. Pocock.

—— unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion:] By "the first dominion" may be understood, such a kingdom and dominion as the Jews enjoyed at first under David and Solomon; or the chief dominion; or that the dominion should in that first place come to the daughter of Zion or Jerusalem. For the first interpretation of the words, see Luke i. 32, 33: for the second, see Dan. vii. 14; Rom. x. 18; and compare Ps. cx. 1; Matt. xxii. 44; xii. 42; Rev. xvii. 14; xix. 16; i. 5: and for the third, Luke xxiv. 47; Acts xiii. 46. The words, however interpreted, are a prophecy concerning Christ and His dominion. Dr. Pocock.

10. Be in pain, and labour to bring forth, &c.] O My Church of Judea, be grieved and pained for a time; for thou shalt be driven forth of thy cities, and carried away into the captivity of Babylon, but thou shalt not long lie under this affliction: the Lord thy God shall fetch thee hence in His appointed time, and shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies; and all this shall be, in a type of the state and deliverance of My Church, from the hands of their spiritual enemies. Bp. Hall.

The Jews' captivity is expressed by their "going out of the city, and dwelling in the field;" because their city and temple being destroyed, they should live in an obscure state, without any visible form of government or worship. The same condition is elsewhere expressed by their living "in the wilderness:" see the note upon Ezek. xx. 15, and Hos. ii. 14. So the Church under persecution is described as "flying into the wilderness," Rev. xii. 14. W. Lowth.

11. — many nations &c.] The Idumeans, Ammonites, Moabites, Philistines, Babylonians. Abp. Newcome. This verse contains an expression of the desires of the heathen nations, that all manner of mischief and shame might befall Zion to her utter desolation. Dr. Pocock. To "look upon our enemies," is to behold their fall with delight. Compare chap. vii. 10; and see the note on Obadiah, ver. 12. W. Lowth.

12. But they know not the thoughts of the Lord,] They are ignorant of God's purpose, which is to punish them with an entire destruction, after He hath executed His judgments upon His own people. See Jer. xxv. 27—29. Great calamities are compared to the threshing of corn in a floor: see the following verse; and the note upon Is. xxi. 10. W. Lowth.

13. Arise and thresh, O daughter of Zion: &c.] The expressions allude to the manner of treading out the corn in the Eastern countries by the feet of oxen: see Deut. xxv. 4. The word "horn" means the horny substance on the feet of the cattle, and is equivalent to the "hoofs," which follow. W. Lowth.

It is observed by some concerning this prophecy, that it will be in fulfilling to the second coming of Christ: "For He must reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet," 1 Cor. xv. 25. In that day certainly it will appear, how the things here spoken, as every other word of God, have without the failing of one tittle been fully made good, though perhaps, till then, men will not well agree concerning the manner, or time of their fulfilment. Dr. Pocock.

‖ Or, rule.

Chap. V. ver. 1. Now gather thyself in troops, O daughter of troops; &c.] This verse is to be understood of some foreign invasion of Judea by a nation that had numerous troops, and may relate to the conquest of Judea by the Babylonians. "The daughter of troops" is a phrase of the same kind as the daughter of affliction; that is, one surrounded by affliction: so "the son of death" is one condemned to die, 1 Sam. xx. 31; Ps. cii. 20. "Smiting on the cheek" signifies treating one in a despiteful manner, Lam. iii. 30; Matt. v. 39. "The judge of Israel" is equivalent to the king of Israel: see Amos ii. 3. W. Lowth. Hoshea may be supposed to have suffered such contumely when Samaria was taken, 2 Kings xvii. 6; or Zedekiah, on the taking of Jerusalem, 2 Kings xxv. 7. Abp. Newcome.

2. But thou, Beth-lehem Ephratah, &c.] The Prophet, having intimated what contempt should befall the family of David, subjoins, according to God's usual method, a declaration of the dignity which they should attain to, in the time of their restoration from the Babylonish captivity. Dr. Pocock.

Ephrath, or Ephratah, was another name for Beth-lehem in the tribe of Judah. See Gen. xxxv. 19. And both names are joined together to distinguish it from another Beth-lehem, situate in the tribe of Zebulun, mentioned Joshua xix. 15. It is called "little among the thousands;" that is, among the families or cities of Judah. Compare Judg. vi. 15; 1 Sam. x. 19. The expression is taken from the first division of the people into thousands, hundreds, and other subordinate divisions. See Exod. xviii. 21—25. Both the city and family of David were in a mean condition at the time of Christ's birth; whereupon the Blessed Virgin in her song thankfully commemorates God's extraordinary favour in honouring that low estate to which they were reduced, with the birth of the Messiah, Luke i. 48, 52, 53. W. Lowth.

—— though thou be little among the thousands of Judah,] Every tribe was of old divided into so many thousands, as shires in England are into hundreds, over which presided a leader to command them in battle. Beth-lehem was too small in people to be reckoned as one of these thousands, or to be numbered singly in the army against the enemy; but is promised the advantage over them all in giving birth to the "Ruler in Israel," who is superiour to all the princes of the thousands; even that Son of David, "whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." Bp. Chandler.

—— out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel;] The Scribes and Pharisees understood this prophecy of the birth of the Messiah, as appears from Matt. ii. 5, 6; and so did the generality of the Jews of that age, who speak of it as an undoubted truth, that "Christ was to come of the seed of David, and out of the town of Beth-lehem where David was," John vii. 42. The Chaldee agrees with their sentiments, and expressly applies the prophecy to the Messiah; and our Lord was born at Beth-lehem by an especial act of Providence, that this prophecy might plainly be fulfilled in Him. See Luke ii. 4. "To come forth" is the same as to be born. See Gen. x. 14; xvii. 6; xxv. 25; 1 Chron. ii. 53; Is. xi. 1. W. Lowth.

—— whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting:] The Prophet proceeds in describing Him, who was to "come out of Beth-lehem," and to be "Ruler in Israel," by another more eminent coming or going forth, even from all eternity. This is so signal a description of the Divine generation before all time, or of that going forth from everlasting of Christ, the eternal Son of God, God, of the substance of the Father, begotten before the worlds, who was afterwards in time (according to the prediction that He should "come forth out of Beth-lehem") made man, of the substance of His mother, and born in the world, that the prophecy evidently belongs only to Him, and could never be verified of any other. Dr. Pocock.

The plural form may denote the eminence of Christ's eternal generation. Abp. Secker. It is a common Hebraism, to denote the eminency or continuation of a thing or action by the plural number, "God shall judge the world with righteousnesses and equity," Ps. xcviii. 9; or most righteously and equitably. "The angers of the Lord," Lam. iv. 16; "wisdoms," Prov. i. 20; for the high degree of both. Bp. Chandler.

This famous prophecy of Micah appears to have given occasion to the manner of speaking, used by our Church in her second Article, where she speaks of the Son of God, as "begotten from everlasting." Waldo.

3. Therefore will he give them up, &c.] But in the mean time He shall suffer His Israel to be grievously afflicted, &c: Bp. Hall. The particle, rendered "therefore," should be translated "nevertheless," here and in some other places, as Dr. Pocock observes. Notwithstanding the promise of so great a blessing, God will give up His people into the hands of their enemies, or leave them to be exercised with troubles and afflictions, till the appointed time of their deliverance cometh, which shall be greater than that from Babylon. See chap. iv. 10. This deliverance may be understood of the Church bringing forth children by the preaching of the Gospel; see Gal. iv. 27; but will be more fully completed in the general restoration of the Jewish nation, to be expected in the latter ages. Compare Is. lxvi. 7, 8. W. Lowth.

—— then the remnant of his brethren shall return unto the children of Israel.] Or, "shall be converted with the children of Israel." W. Lowth. The promise of Him was not only to Israel according to the flesh, but "to all (also) that were afar off, even as many as the Lord our God should call," Acts ii. 39; and all these are called "the remnant of his brethren," even those that were before "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel," and afar off, are now in Christ made one with them, Eph. ii. 12, &c; all brethren among themselves, and all brethren to Christ their Ruler. Having taken on Him their nature in the flesh, He is not ashamed to call them so, as the Apostle speaks, Heb. ii. 11, confirming it out of Ps. xxii. 22: and Christ Himself vouchsafes to call all true believers by this title, Matt. xii. 46; Luke viii. 21. Dr. Pocock.

4. And he shall stand and feed &c.] He shall persist and continue to feed; that is, He shall carefully, watchfully, and tenderly supply all the wants of His subjects, as a good shepherd doth those of his sheep: compare John x. 9, 14. And this He shall do "in the strength of the Lord," not as an ordinary man, but as One, who hath extraordinary and plainly Divine power conferred on Him from the Lord; compare Matt. xxviii. 18; and "in the majesty of the name of the Lord His God," so as plainly to evince, that the majestick name of the Lord His God is in Him, (see Exod. xxiii. 21), that God hath glorified Him, and is glorified in and by Him, John xiii. 31, 32: and under the protection of His great power and majesty, "they" His subjects "shall abide," shall be in a sure and steadfast condition, secure against all other powers; compare John x. 11, 12, 28—30: "for now," when He shall enter on His rule, "shall He be great unto the ends of the earth," extending His name, glory, and dominion as wide as the world, and to the utmost parts thereof: compare Matt. xxviii. 19, 20; Acts i. 8; Rom. x. 18. Dr. Pocock. The last clause is alluded to by the angel, "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, &c," Luke i. 32. He is dignified with such titles, as were never given to any creature, as the Apostle at large proves, Heb. i. 4, &c. Compare Is. liii. 13, and see the note there. W. Lowth.

5. And this man shall be the peace,] A Jewish expositor observes, that this passage is to be understood of the Messiah, because He shall be the cause of peace, as it is said, "and He shall speak peace unto the heathen," Zech. ix. 10. And therefore our Lord Christ being the true Messiah, of Him, agreeably to the words here, it is said, "He is our peace," Eph. ii. 14. At His birth the heavenly host proclaimed "peace on earth," Luke ii. 14; and He, while on earth, came and preached "peace to them which were afar off, and to them that were nigh," Eph. ii. 17: and when He was again to leave the world, He bequeathed peace to His disciples, "gave it to them, and left it with them," John xiv. 27. Of Him therefore it might be truly said by way of prophecy, "This man shall be peace," or "the peace." Dr. Pocock.

This sentence may be best explained as connected with the foregoing verse. W. Lowth.

This prophecy of Micah is perhaps the most important single prophecy in the Old Testament, and the most comprehensive, respecting the personal character of the Messiah, and His successive manifestations to the world. It crowns the whole chain of prophecies descriptive of the several limitations of the blessed "Seed of the woman" to the line of Shem, to the family of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to the tribe of Judah, and to the royal house of David, here terminating in His birth at Beth-lehem, "the city of David." It carefully distinguishes His human nativity from His eternal generation; foretells the rejection of the Israelites and Jews for a season; their final restoration, and the universal "peace" destined to prevail throughout the earth in "the regeneration." It forms therefore the basis of the New Testament, which begins with His human birth at Beth-lehem, the miraculous circumstances of which are recorded in the introductions of St. Matthew's and St. Luke's Gospels; His eternal generation, as "the Word," in the sublime introduction of St. John's Gospel; His prophetick character, and second coming, illustrated in the four Gospels and Epistles, ending with a prediction of the speedy approach of the latter in the Apocalypse, Rev. xxii. 20. Dr. Hales.

—— when the Assyrian shall come into our land: &c.] The sense, which Mr. Mede has given to this passage, appears most agreeable to the scope and design of the following part of the chapter. He expounds the place of the general destruction of some remarkable enemy, or enemies to God and His truth, which should come to pass before the consummation of all things: an event foretold in several places of Scripture. See Ps. cx. 5, 6; Is. xxvi. 20, 21; xxxiv. 1, &c; lxvi. 16; Jer. xxx. 7, 10; Ezek. xxxviii, xxxix; Joel iii. 9, 14; Obad. ver. 15, &c; Zeph. iii. 8; Hag. ii. 22; Zech. xii. 1; xiv. 8; Rev. xix. 19; xx. 9. This enemy is probably called by the name of the Assyrian in Isaiah, chap. xiv. 25, as well as by Micah here. See the note upon that place. Mr. Mede ingeniously conjectures, that this name was given him by these two Prophets, because that ever since the invasion of Sennacherib, the very name of Assyrian carried terror along with it, being esteemed by the Jews as their most formidable enemy. W. Lowth.

—— seven shepherds, and eight principal men.] Or, rule Under His conduct we shall be furnished with commanders sufficient to oppose the enterprises of the enemy. "Shepherds" as elsewhere equivalent to princes or generals: see Jer. vi. 3; xxii. 34; Nahum iii. 18. The words "seven" and "eight" are use for an indefinite number: see Eccles. xi. 2. So once and twice are used, Job xxxiii. 14; v. 19; Prov. vi. 16. W. Lowth.

6. And they shall waste — in the entrances thereof:] In its borders, where its garrisons are, and its chief strength lies. Assyria is called "the land of Nimrod," because he was the first king of the country: see Gen. x. 11, where the marginal reading is right. W. Lowth.

According to the figurative signification of the words, embraced by most Christians, the meaning of this passage is evident, that by the might and power of Christ, and such as shall be by Him qualified and commissioned for the spreading and maintaining of His truth, all that oppose it shall be brought under and made to yield as certainly as when an enemy, such as the Assyrian then was to Israel, is by many commanders and their forces beaten in his own country, and with his own weapons, forced from him and turned back upon himself, (see the margin,) so that he shall not be able to create farther disturbances. Dr. Pocock.

—— thus shall he deliver us from the Assyrian, &c.] By these means shall Christ deliver us from the hands of such enemies as shall assault us, so that we shall not have need to fear them. Dr. Pocock.

7. And the remnant of Jacob shall be &c.] The remnant of the dispersed Jews upon their conversion shall be the instruments of converting those Gentiles among whom they live: and may there fore be fitly represented by the dews and rains which come from heaven, and make the earth fruitful. W. Lowth.

—— that tarrieth not for man, &c.] The dews and rains are the gift of God, and are here distinguished from those fountains and canals of water, which men convey into their fields and gardens by their own industry. W. Lowth.

8. And the remnant of Jacob shall be — as a lion &c.] This has been most eminently and fully made good by the establishing of Christ's spiritual kingdom among men, and by the conquest obtained by His little flock over sin, the world, and the devil. Dr. Pocock.

10, 11. — I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee, &c.] These words are a promise of peace and security, and an encouragement to rely on God alone, without dependence on ordinary human helps. Much the like words are applied to the peaceable condition of the kingdom of Christ by Zechariah, chap. ix. 10. Dr. Pocock. See also Hos. i. 7.

12—14. And I will cut off witchcrafts &c.] The Prophet may be supposed to mention here those sins wherein the Jews of his own age were chiefly faulty, thereby to signify, that in aftertimes, when the promises here mentioned should be fulfilled, such offences should not be found among them. Compare Is. ii. 6—8, with the context here. We may in general take notice, that the destruction of idolatry is often mentioned in the Prophets as a principal circumstance in their descriptions of the flourishing state of the Church, which should come to pass in aftertimes. W. Lowth.

14. — so will I destroy thy cities.] It is supposed by some interpreters, that in ver. 11 are meant cities of defence, and here cities of idolatrous worship, in which were their groves and idol-temples. Dr. Pocock.

15. And I will execute vengeance &c.] When I have purged My people from their corruptions, I will severely vindicate their cause to the utter destruction of all their unbelieving enemies. W. Lowth.

Chap. VI. ver. 1. — Arise, contend thou before the mountains, &c.] Arise, saith God to me, and call the very senseless earth, even the hills and mountains, to record what I have to say against My people. Bp. Hall. See the notes on Deut. iv. 26; Is. i. 2.

The manner of raising attention in the two first verses by calling on man to urge his plea in the face of all nature, and on the inanimate creation to hear the expostulation of Jehovah with His people, is truly awakening and magnificent. The words of Jehovah follow in the 3d, 4th, and 5th verses. And God's mercies having been set before His people, one of them is introduced in a beautiful dramatick form, as asking what his duty is towards so gracious a God, ver. 6, 7. The answer follows in the 8th verse, in the words of the Prophet. Abp. Newcome.

5. O my people, remember now what Balak king of Moab consulted, &c.] Remember what answers I put into the mouth of Balaam, the son of Beor: how I drew blessings even from his mouth upon you, instead of curses, which Balak would have hired him to utter against you: remember all My gracious dealings with you in all the passages of the wilderness, even from Shittim unto Gilgal, till the very entrance into the land of promise; that ye may acknowledge the righteous proceedings of the Lord with you. Bp. Hall.

To make the sense of the words "from Shittim unto Gilgal" complete, we must supply it from the beginning of the verse, as in the Chaldee Paraphrase, "Remember what I have done for you from Shittim unto Gilgal;" that is, from your encampment in the plains of Moab, near Shittim, east of Jordan, (where they sinned in the matter of Peor, Numb. xxv. 3, 18, and deserved to be cut off, had not God been merciful to them,) until your encampment at Gilgal on the other side of Jordan in the land of Canaan. At Shittim they abode till after Moses's death, Josh. iii. 1: thence Joshua conducted them over Jordan. As therefore in the former words they are reminded of the great things which God did for them under the conduct of Moses; so in these they are reminded of His benefits to them under the conduct of Joshua; and so, in short, of all that He did from His first beginning to redeem them from bondage, and bringing them out of Egypt through the Red sea, through the desert, and through Jordan, till He had settled them in the promised land. All these things might convince them of "the Lord's righteousness;" of His great goodness towards them, and of His faithfulness in fulfilling the promises made to their fathers. W. Lowth, Dr. Pocock.

6. Wherewith shall I come before the Lord, &c.] This abrupt passionate form of speech seems to require something to be understood, for the purpose of connecting it with the preceding words. It is spoken by the Prophet, as in the person of the people, replying to the appeal of God: and it is either an acknowledgment of their guilt, and an expression of their desire to repent, if they knew what would be accepted by God; or it is a justification of themselves, intimating that if they had been defective in their duty, and thereby displeasing to God, it was done, not willingly, but through ignorance. Dr. Pocock.

Or, the words are part of a private conference between Balaam and Balak, which Moses has omitted, as foreign to the subject of his history; but which the Israelites ought to have holden in remembrance, and in which the idolatrous king inquires of God's Prophet, in what way he, the king, might make expiation for his offences. Bp. Horsley.

—— shall I come before him with burnt offerings, &c.] The constant sacrifice, that was offered to God by way of acknowledgment of His dominion over His creatures: "with calves of a year old," which was the sin offering, that the high priest offered for himself. Or will He rather accept of those great and costly sacrifices, which were offered upon publick and solemn occasions, such as that which Solomon offered at the dedication of the temple? "Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil?" Or if none of these will do, shall

I try to atone Him after the manner of the heathen, by the dearest thing in the world, the firstborn of my children? "shall I give my firstborn, &c?" If God was to be appeased at all, surely they thought it must be by some of these ways; for beyond these they could imagine nothing of greater value and efficacy. Abp. Tillotson.

7. — shall I give my firstborn] The strength and stay of the family. W. Lowth.

8. He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; &c.] Both the dictates of reason, and the laws of God, sufficiently inform men what are the substantial parts of their duty; namely, the practice of justice and mercy, and a reverent behaviour towards God. W. Lowth. The Prophet here tells them, that they were quite out of the way in thinking to pacify God upon the terms proposed; that there are other things, much better and more pleasing to Him than these sacrifices. For some of them were expressly forbidden by God, as the offering up of children: and for the rest, they were not good in themselves, but merely by virtue of their institution, and because they were commanded. But the things, which He would recommend to them, are such as are good in their own nature, and required of us by God on that account. "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good." Abp. Tillotson. We have reason all to apply to ourselves these words of the Prophet. For though it still be true, that some ages of the world have been dark, and others blinded with false lights; that some men naturally see little, and others are strangely given to see wrong; yet, in general, the duties of life are level to the capacities of all men: and especially among Christians, but, above all, Christians so peculiarly blessed with the means of instruction as we of this nation are, no one can possibly, without either deliberate obstinacy or intolerable negligence, continue unacquainted with what he is bound to do, or the recompense he is to expect, if he do it not. Abp. Secker.

—— and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do &c.] The whole of man's duty is here summed up in three parts. 1st, To "do justly," is to give to every one, whether superiours, equals, or inferiours, their due; to do in all things what is equal and right, not oppressing any, nor defrauding them in any kind of dealing, not to hurt them by word or deed, nor injure them in their persons, estates, or good name, or any thing belonging to them. 2dly, To "love mercy," is not only to give to every one what he might in justice require, but to be kind, merciful, compassionate, exercising all acts of charity and beneficence willingly, cheerfully, and without expecting recompense. 3dly, To "walk humbly with thy God," is to frame the life and conversation with a view to God's commandments, in a dutiful performance of His will, in a patient resignation to His dispensations, and in a ready assent to His revealed truths. The two first parts comprise the duties of the second table; the third, those of the first: together they are a summary of all the Ten Commandments; and the performance of them is "more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifice," Mark xii. 33. Dr. Pocock.

9. The Lord's voice crieth unto the city, &c.] The voice of the Lord calleth by me His Prophet to the city of Jerusalem; and those, that are wise-hearted, will have a due and awful respect to Thy name, O Lord: hear, O Jerusalem, hear thou the sad news of that sharp rod of affliction, which is prepared for thee; and consider who it is that hath appointed it for thy correction. Bp. Hall.

10. Are there yet the treasures of wickedness &c.] From hence to the end is a detail of the then reigning sins among the Jews; more particularly the ten tribes, who had separated themselves by an avowed schism from the unity of the Church. He taxes them with covetousness, base dishonesty, falsehood and deceit, injustice and oppression in their commerce and dealings with men, and as notorious a falsehood towards God by profaneness and irreligion; keeping rather the impious and idolatrous statutes of Omri and Ahab, than the Divine law delivered by Moses. Wogan.

14. — and thy casting down &c.] Thy casting down shall be in the midst of these own streets: thou shalt fall, even within thine own walls; and thou shalt take hold of thy children to deliver them from the enemy, but thou shalt not rescue them; and those, whom thou hast obtained to deliver from the present slaughter, will I soon after give up to the sword. Bp. Hall.

16. — Omri, — Ahab,] It is said of Omri, that he "did worse than all that were before him," 1 Kings xvi. 25: and his son Ahab added the worship of Baal to the idolatry of the golden calves, ver. 31; which is spoken of there as the worst degree of idolatry, because it was the introducing of an heathen idol, whereas the golden calves were only an idolatrous representation of the true God. Manasseh followed Ahab in his wickedness: see 2 Kings xxi. 3. W. Lowth.

——therefore ye shall bear the reproach of my people.] The Prophet still directs his discourse to the great and rich men, ver. 12. 15; and tells them, that since they have given the chief occasion to those reproaches which unbelievers have thrown out upon God's people, as if they were rejected and cast out by Him, therefore they shall bear the principal share of that shame and contempt wherewith their enemies shall treat them. Compare Ps. xlii. 10; Is. xxv. 8. W. Lowth.

8 ¶ Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy: when I fall, I shall arise; when I sit in darkness, the LORD shall be a light unto me.

9 I will bear the indignation of the LORD, because I have sinned against him, until he plead my cause, and execute judgment for me: he will bring me forth to the light, and I shall behold his righteousness.

14 ¶ ‖ Feed thy people with thy rod, the flock of thine heritage, which dwell solitarily in the wood, in the midst of Carmel:

‖ Or, Rule.

Chap. VII. ver. 1, 2. — I am as when they have gathered the summer fruits, &c.] As the early fig of excellent flavour cannot be found in the advanced season of summer, or the choice cluster of grapes after vintage; so neither can the good and upright man be discovered by diligent searching in Israel. This comparison is beautifully implied. Abp. Newcome.

3. — so they wrap it up.] They make the matter intricate, so that men may not easily discern between the right and the wrong, nor distinguish one from the other. Dr. Pocock.

4. — sharper than a thorn hedge:] Some of the fences in the Holy Land perfectly answer these passages of the Jewish Prophets, that speak of hedges made of thorny plants, and the sharpness of the thorns on those then in use. See Hos. ii. 6; Prov. xv. 19. Harmer.

—— the day of thy watchmen and thy visitation cometh;] The time of vengeance, foretold by thy Prophets: or the time of vengeance, denounced upon thy princes and magistrates. Dr. Pocock, W. Lowth.

7. Therefore I will look unto the Lord; &c.] The times being so corrupt, and such danger to be apprehended from all sorts of men, so that no reliance could be placed on those who ought to be a man's greatest supports, ver. 5, 6; the Prophet speaking as of himself, in the person probably of the nation in captivity, sets the example of declaring his confidence in God.

Having hitherto denounced judgments, now, according to the custom of the Prophets, he draws towards his conclusion with consolatory words and promises. Dr. Pocock.

10. — mine eyes shall behold her: &c.] As the heathen beheld the desolation of God's Church and temple with delight, chap. iv. 11, so shall it come to my turn to see God's judgments executed upon the Babylonish empire, and that brought down to as low a condition as ever they had reduced God's people. W. Lowth.

The prophecy was fulfilled, when Babylon was taken, and the empire destroyed by the Medes and Persians, Dan. v. 30, 31: and it is observable, that that great turn of fortune was made in the very night, when Belshazzar and his nobles insulted afresh, and lifted up themselves against God and His people. Dr. Pocock.

11. In the day that thy walls are to be built, &c.] When God shall visit His people, and repair their decayed estate, (compare Amos ix. 11,) then the tyrannical edicts of their persecutors shall be utterly abolished. This may partly relate to the recalling of those edicts which put a stop to the rebuilding of the city and temple of Jerusalem. See Ezra iv. 23, 24; vi. 14; Neh. ii. 8, 17. W. Lowth. Or, it may mean the decree of God denounced by His Prophets concerning the punishment of the Jews. Dr. Pocock.

12. In that day also he shall come &c.] Concerning the phrase "in that day," see the note on Is. iv. 2. By the single person "he" is meant the people, or the dispersion of Israel. The words imply, that the Jews should return from their several dispersions, where they were scattered: though not till after the land, for the evil of their doings, should have been desolate, according to the marginal reading of the next verse. W. Lowth. Dr. Pocock.

This prophecy was made good by the restoration of the Jews, and their coming again from all parts to Jerusalem, after the land had been for seventy years desolate for their sins: it may have been fulfilled in a higher sense by the setting up of the Church, the kingdom of Christ; and by so many nations being called into it by the preaching of the Gospel. Dr. Pocock. Perhaps also it looks forward to a future restoration of the Jews. W. Lowth.

The verse is thus perspicuously paraphrased by Bishop Hall: "In the mean time, namely, of the desolation of the land, O God, take Thou care of Thy people: O do Thou feed and govern them

Before CHRIST 710. let them feed in Bashan and Gilead, as in the days of old.

15 According to the days of thy coming out of the land of Egypt will I shew unto him marvellous things.

16 ¶ The nations shall see and be confounded at all their might: they shall lay their hand upon their mouth, their ears shall be deaf.

[c] Ps. 72. 9. 17 They shall lick the [c] dust like a serpent, they shall move out of their holes like ‖ worms of the earth: they shall be afraid of the LORD our God, and shall fear because of thee.

‖ Or, creeping things.

18 Who is a God like unto thee, that [d] pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy. Before CHRIST 710.

[d] Exod. 34. 6, 7.

19 He will turn again, he will have compassion upon us; he will subdue our iniquities; and thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea.

20 Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old.

by Thy gracious protection; lead Thou this flock of Thine heritage, which now dwell solitarily in the wilderness of their captivity, into the midst of Thy fruitful pastures of Carmel; let them feed in the rich fields of Bashan and Gilead, as in former times." The words imply a gracious promise of return made to the nation, or at least the church of the Jews, out of captivity to their own land; and that, under the protection of God, they should abundantly enjoy all things conducing to their well-being, set forth under the similitude of sheep feeding in rich pastures. However, all these good things promised to the Jews are in a higher manner made good to the Church of Christ, and all faithful believers, rescued from sin and Satan, and brought back into the fold; who, as He saith, shall be saved under His protection, and go in and out, and find pasture. Dr. Pocock.

15. According to the days of thy coming out of the land of Egypt &c.] Thy prayer is heard, saith the Lord; I will do thus for thee, O My people; and, as I did in the days of thy coming out of Egypt do marvellous things for thee, so will I do again. Bp. Hall. The words are generally considered as spoken in the person of God in answer to the petition of the Prophet, "Feed Thy people &c." See Jer. xvi. 14, 15; xxiii. 7, 8. The words, both here and in Jeremiah, direct us to a wonderful deliverance to be wrought by Christ, for a fuller and higher completion of these prophecies than was effected by the deliverance of the Jews either from the Egyptian bondage, or Babylonish captivity, though the words point more immediately at those. Dr. Pocock.

16, 17. The nations shall see and be confounded &c.] These two verses express the great astonishment and confusion which should be experienced by the enemies of God's people, at seeing the tokens of Divine favour appearing so conspicuously in their behalf. W. Lowth.

17. — and shall fear because of thee.] Here is a change of persons: for the Prophet, filled with admiration, suddenly addresses his speech to the Lord, of whom he was before speaking. Dr. Pocock.

18. — the remnant of his heritage?] Those Jews, who are reserved to be partakers of the benefits, which shall be made good to that nation on their conversion and restoration. Compare chap. iv. 7; v. 7, 8. By receiving them into His former favour on their repentance, He will fulfil His gracious declaration to Moses, Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7. W. Lowth. Though God chastise the people of His inheritance, and cut off the wicked from among them, yet a holy seed, a remnant, shall be preserved and saved, Rom. ix. 27; and to these is the promise here made, not to all in general. Dr. Pocock.

19. — thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea.] Thou wilt utterly abolish them, that they shall not have dominion over us, as Thou didst destroy Pharaoh and his army in the Red sea. This victory will be obtained by the merits of Christ, and the grace of the Gospel: see Col. ii. 14; Rom. vi. 14. W. Lowth.

20. Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, &c.] These words contain a promise of Christ, that Seed of Abraham, in whom all the kindreds of the earth were to be blessed, with all the benefits of His redemption; and were by Him fulfilled by rescuing all that come to Him for redemption, both Jews and Gentiles of all nations, out of the hands of worse enemies than the Babylonians, by making them citizens of the heavenly Jerusalem, and conferring on them all spiritual blessings. Compare Luke i. 54, 55, and 68—75. God's "truth to Jacob," and His "mercy to Abraham," is thus fully performed in Christ; and will be in performing unto the world's end, by His calling into His Church both Jews and Gentiles, and offering them His salvation, and blessing them with all spiritual blessings.

It is the observation of an ancient Jewish author, that there is not any denunciation of hard things to Israel, which is not concluded with promises of mercy. Among other instances from Moses, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Jeremiah, he brings this conclusion of Micah's prophecy. And very remarkable indeed is this conclusion, which, to shew how greatly God delights in mercy, is uttered in words giving assurance of mercy, not only to Israel after the flesh on their repentance, but to all who shall, by faith in Christ the promised Seed, lay hold on His promise made to Abraham, and in Him to all the kindreds of the earth. So that the Gentiles also reading it cannot but glorify God, and rejoice with His people, and sing unto Him that hymn, which the Apostle shews to be suited to them, "O praise the Lord, all ye nations: praise Him, all ye people. For His merciful kindness is great toward us: and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever Praise ye the Lord;" Rom. xv. 9, 10, 11; Ps. cxvii. Dr. Pocock.

The following Chapter from Micah is appointed as a Proper Lesson.

CHAP. VI. - XXth Sunday after Trinity, - - - Evening.

NAHUM.

INTRODUCTION.

NAHUM describes himself as an Elkoshite; which some have considered as a patronymick expression, conceiving it to imply his being a descendant of Elkosha; but which is generally supposed to intimate that he was born at Elkosh, or Elkosha, a small village in Galilee, of which St. Jerome professes to have seen the ruins. Dr. Gray.

It may be concluded from chap. ii. 2, that Nahum prophesied after the captivity of the ten tribes. Josephus places him in the reign of Jotham, and says, that his predictions came to pass one hundred and fifteen years afterwards. According to our best chronologers, this date would bring us to the year in which Samaria was taken. And I agree with those who think that Nahum uttered this prophecy in the reign of Hezekiah, and not long after the subversion of the kingdom of Israel by Shalmaneser. Abp. Newcome.

The illustrious prophecy foretelling the future downfall of the Assyrian empire, remarkably accomplished in little more than a century after it was delivered, affords a signal evidence of the inspiration of Nahum; and a striking lesson of humility to human pride. It must have furnished much consolation to the tribes who were carried away captive by the king of Assyria, as well as to those of Benjamin and Judah; and all must have rejoiced with the hope of deliverance, to hear that their conquerors should in time be conquered, their city levelled to the dust, and their empire overturned. The Book in which these interesting prophecies are contained, is justly considered by Bishop Lowth as a complete and perfect poem, of which the conduct and imagery are truly admirable.

The fire, spirit, and sublimity of Nahum, are unequalled. His scenes are painted with great variety and splendour. The opening of his work, in which he describes the attributes of God, is august; and the preparations for the attack, as well as the destruction of Nineveh, are represented with singular effect. The art, with which the immediate destruction of the Assyrians under Sennacherib is intermingled with the future ruin of the empire, affords a very elegant specimen of the manner in which the Prophets delight to introduce present and distant events under one point of view. The allegorical pictures in this Book are remarkably beautiful, chap. ii. 7, 11, 12.

Neither history nor tradition furnishes us with any account of Nahum, or of the period of his death. His tomb, or pretended tomb, was formerly shewn in a village named Bethogabra, now called Giblin, near Emmaus. Dr. Gray.

CHAP. I.

The majesty of God in goodness to his people, and severity against his enemies.

THE burden of Nineveh. The book of the vision of Nahum the Elkoshite.

2 ‖ God is [a] jealous, and the LORD revengeth; the LORD revengeth, and † is furious; the LORD will take vengeance on his adversaries, and he reserveth wrath for his enemies.

3 The LORD [b] is slow to anger, and great in power, and will not at all acquit the wicked: the LORD hath his way in the whirlwind and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of his feet.

Before CHRIST about 713.

4 He rebuketh the sea, and maketh it dry, and drieth up all the rivers: Bashan languisheth, and Carmel, and the flower of Lebanon languisheth.

5 The mountains quake at him, and the hills melt, and the earth is burned at his presence, yea, the world, and all that dwell therein.

6 Who can stand before his indignation? and who can † abide in the fierceness of his anger? his fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by him.

Chap. I. The conduct and imagery of this prophetical poem are truly admirable. The commencement grandly sets forth the justice and power of God, tempered by lenity and goodness, ver. 2—8. A sudden address to the Assyrians follows; and a prediction of their perplexity and overthrow, as devisers of evil against the true God, ver. 9—11. Jehovah Himself then proclaims freedom to His people from the Assyrian yoke, and the destruction of the Assyrian idols, ver. 12—14. Upon which the Prophet in a most lively manner turns the attention of Judah to the approach of the messenger, who brings such glad tidings; and bids her celebrate her festivals, and offer her thank offerings without fear of so powerful an adversary. Abp. Newcome.

Ver. 1. The burden of Nineveh.] The heavy tidings that God sent to Nineveh, and to the whole kingdom of Assyria. Bp. Hall. The repentance of the Ninevites upon the preaching of Jonah appears to have been of no long continuance. For not many years after we find the Prophet Nahum foretelling the total and entire destruction of the city. His whole prophecy relates to this single event; and the city was accordingly destroyed by the Medes and Babylonians. In whose reign it was taken, and who were the persons that commanded in this expedition, are points concerning which authors are not agreed. Bp. Newton. God pardons men, and bears with them, upon their humiliation; but when they return to their iniquities, He at last executes the decrees of His justice. Osterwald.

13 For now will I break his yoke from off thee, and will burst thy bonds in sunder.

14 And the LORD hath given a commandment concerning thee, that no more of thy name be sown: out of the house of thy gods will I cut off the graven image and the molten image: I will make thy grave; for thou art vile.

CHAP. II.

The fearful and victorious armies of God against Nineveh.

‖ HE that dasheth in pieces is come up before thy face: keep the munition, watch the way, make thy loins strong, fortify thy power mightily.

‖ Or, The disperser, or, Assaulter.

2 [a] For the LORD hath turned away ‖ the excellency of Jacob, as the excellency of Israel: for the emptiers have emptied them out, and marred their vine branches.

[a] Is. 10. 12. ‖ Or, the pride of Jacob as the pride of Israel.

3 The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are ‖ in scarlet: the chariots shall be with ‖ flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken.

‖ Or, dyed scarlet. ‖ Or, fiery torches.

4 The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways: † they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings.

8. But with an overrunning flood he will make an utter end of the place thereof.] An army's overrunning a country is often compared to an inundation: see Is. viii. 7, 8; Dan. ix. 26; xi. 10, 22, 40. Thus God will bring the great city of Nineveh to utter ruin, so that there shall be no remains of it in aftertimes. W. Lowth. See the notes on chap. ii. 6; and chap. iii. 17—19.

9. — affliction shall not rise up the second time.] I will make an utter destruction all at once: "When I begin, I will also make an end," as it is expressed 1 Sam. iii. 12. W. Lowth.

10. For while they be folden together as thorns, &c.] While they combine themselves, and plot together in wickedness, as thorns are folded up together in a hedge; and while they are consorting together in their drunkenness and excess; then, even then, shall the judgment of God fall upon them, and devour them as the fire consumes the dry stubble. Bp. Hall. Diodorus Siculus, who ascribes the taking of Nineveh, and the subversion of the Assyrian empire, to Arbaces the Mede, assisted by Belesis the Babylonian, relates, that while all the Assyrian army were feasting for their former victories, those about Arbaces, being informed by some deserters of the negligence and drunkenness in the camp of the enemies, assaulted them unexpectedly by night, and falling orderly on them disorderly, and prepared on them unprepared, became masters of the camp, and slew many of the soldiers, and drove the rest into the city. Bp. Newton.

11. There is one come out of thee,] That is, thou hast produced such an one. Such were Pul, 2 Kings xv. 19; Tiglath-pileser, chap. xv. 29; Shalmaneser, chap. xvii. 6; and Sennacherib, chap. xviii. 17; xix. 23. Abp. Newcome.

12. — Though they be quiet,] Though the Assyrians be secure. Bp. Hall.

13. For now will I break his yoke from off thee,] The Jews paid tribute to the Assyrians, 2 Kings xviii. 14, and the Israelites were under actual captivity among them at this time. Abp. Newcome.

Chap. II. In the next place, Nineveh is called on to prepare for the approach of her enemies, as instruments in the hand of Jehovah; and the military array and muster of the Medes and Babylonians, their rapid approach to the city, the process of the siege, the capture of the place, the captivity, lamentation, and flight of the inhabitants, the sacking of the wealthy city, and the consequent desolation and terrour, are described in the true spirit of Eastern poety, and with many pathetick, vivid, and sublime images, ver. 1—10. A grand and animated allegory succeeds this description, ver. 11, 12: which is explained, and applied to the city of Nineveh, in ver. 13. Abp. Newcome.

Ver. 1. He that dasheth in pieces] An enemy, that will break down thy walls, and destroy thine inhabitants, O Nineveh. W. Lowth. The army of the Babylonians and Medes. Abp. Newcome.

—— keep the munition, &c.] Strengthen thy garrisons, guard thy passes, stir up all thy strength and courage. W. Lowth.

2. For the Lord hath turned away the excellency of Jacob, &c.] But, notwithstanding all thy preparation and warlike forces, he shall prevail against thee, O Nineveh; for if the Lord have turned away the excellency of Jacob and Israel, and hath given it over to the spoil of the Assyrians, who have destroyed their vineyards, how much more will He deface the glory of Nineveh! Bp. Hall. Some translate the words thus: The Lord hath returned, or will revenge the pride or injurious dealings against Jacob, and the pride against Israel; that is, He will requite the injuries and oppressions, which Sennacherib and Shalmaneser, the kings of Assyria, have exercised upon Judah and Israel. W. Lowth.

3. The shield of his mighty men &c.] Thine enemy of Babylon shall come fiercely upon thee, and with great pomp of terrour: the shield of his mighty warriours shall glitter with brightness; his valiant men shall be decked with scarlet. Bp. Hall. This may be understood either of the colour of their shields and clothes, when they were made, or of their being dyed in blood afterwards: compare Is. lxiii. 2. W. Lowth.

—— the fir trees shall be terribly shaken.] The earth and woods adjoining shall shake with the noise. Bp. Hall. Or by "fir trees" are meant the spears and lances made of fir, so long and large that they looked like so many trees. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 718.

5 He shall recount his ‖ worthies: they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the † defence shall be prepared.

6 The gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be ‖ dissolved.

8 But Nineveh is ‖ of old like a pool of water: yet they shall flee away. Stand, stand, shall they cry; but none shall ‖ look back.

9 Take ye the spoil of silver, take the spoil of gold: ‖ for there is none end of the store and glory out of all the † pleasant furniture.

11 Where is the dwelling of the lions, and the feedingplace of the young lions, where the lion, even the old lion, walked, and the lion's whelp, and none made them afraid?

12 The lion did tear in pieces enough for his whelps, and strangled for his lionesses, and filled his holes with prey, and his dens with ravin.

Before CHRIST about 718.

13 Behold, I am against thee, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will burn her chariots in the smoke, and the sword shall devour thy young lions: and I will cut off thy prey from the earth, and the voice of thy messengers shall no more be heard.

5. He shall recount his worthies: &c.] The king of Nineveh shall muster his choicest troops, but they shall be disordered and discomfited. W. Lowth.

6. The gates of the rivers shall be opened, &c.] According to this, Diodorus informs us, "that there was an old prophecy that Nineveh should not be taken till the river became an enemy to the city; and in the third year of the siege, the river being swoln with continual rains, overflowed part of the city, and broke down the wall for twenty furlongs; then the king, thinking that the oracle was fulfilled and the river become an enemy to the city, built a large funeral pile in the palace, and, collecting together all his wealth, and his concubines, and eunuchs, burnt himself and the palace with them all; and the enemy entered the breach that the waters had made, and took the city." What was therefore predicted in the first chapter was literally fulfilled, "with an overrunning flood He will make an utter end of the place thereof," ver. 8. Bp. Newton.

7. — Huzzab] By this word the Chaldee understands the queen of Nineveh: but it probably means Nineveh itself, for it denotes a strong and impregnable fortress. W. Lowth.

— as with the voice of doves,] Birds remarkable for their melancholy note. Compare Is. xxxviii. 14; lix. 11. W. Lowth.

— tabering upon their breasts.] Beating on their breasts in great anguish, as if they were playing on a tabret. Harmer.

8. But Nineveh is of old like a pool of water:] So called perhaps from the multitude of its inhabitants. Grotius.

9. Take ye the spoil of silver, &c.] Go then, ye Babylonians, take ye the spoil of the silver and gold, which the fearful citizens have left behind them. Bp. Hall. The Prophet here promises the enemy much spoil of gold and silver: and we read in Diodorus, that Arbaces carried many talents of gold and silver to Ecbatana, the royal city of the Medes. Bp. Newton.

11. Where is the dwelling of the lions, &c.] Where now is the place that was the feared dwelling of the lion-like Assyrians? What is become of the place where the old lion, even the tyrants of Assyria, walked, and where his princes made themselves so secure, that nothing could affright them? Bp. Hall.

13. — the voice of thy messengers shall no more be heard.] Thou shalt no more send ambassadours to distant countries, either to encourage thine allies, or to terrify thine enemies. See Is. xviii. 2. W. Lowth.

Chap. III. In this chapter the Prophet denounces war against Nineveh for her perfidy and violence; and strongly places before our eyes the number of her chariots and cavalry, her burnished arms, and the great and unrelenting slaughter which she spread around her, ver. 1—3. He assigns her idolatries as one cause of her ignominious and unpitied fall, ver. 4—7. He describes No Amon, her rival in populousness, confederacies, and situation, as sharing a like fate with herself, ver. 8—11; and beautifully illustrates the case with which her strong holds should be taken, ver. 12; and the feebleness of her people during the siege, ver. 13. He pronounces that all her preparations, her numbers, her opulence, her multitude of chief men, would be of no avail, ver. 14—17. He foretells that her tributaries would desert her, ver. 18. He concludes with a triumphant exclamation, the topicks of which are the greatness and incurableness of her wound, and the just triumph of others over her, on account of her extensive oppressions, ver. 19. Abp. Newcome.

Ver. 1. — the prey departeth not;] They are still carrying on their conquests, and never cease to get new spoils from such as they newly conquer. Dr. Wells.

3. — their corpses;] The dead bodies slain by them. These three verses are a description of Nineveh, as it was in the time of the Prophet. Abp. Newcome. Or else they are prophetical of the enemy coming against it: and then the sense will be, Vengeance is near thee: I do already hear the noise of the Babylonian whips, in the hands of the charioteers, driving furiously against thee, &c. *Bp. —— that selleth nations through her whoredoms, &c.] That makes whole nations a prey to their enemies, by teaching them the arts of softness and effeminacy, and so rendering them weak and defenceless. Bochart thinks it Diospolis near Mendes, which appears from Strabo to have been situated near lakes. Herodotus says, that the Egyptians called Jupiter by the name of Amon. Channels of water from the Nile may have passed through this city. Lakes are called "seas" by the Hebrews. Abp. Newcome. See the note on Jer. xlvi. 25.

12. All thy strong holds shall be like fig trees &c.] As ripe figs drop off when they are shaken, so shall thy strong holds fall into the hands of the enemy, upon the first assault. W. Lowth. The image, though a common one, is very lively and expressive. Abp. Newcome.

13. — the fire shall devour thy bars.] See chap. i. 5; ii. 6. According to these prophecies the city was to be destroyed by fire and water: and we see in Diodorus, that by fire and water it was destroyed. See the note on chap. ii. 6. Bp. Newton.

14. Draw thee waters for the siege, &c.] Go to then, furnish thyself with provision for a siege; fill thy cisterns with water; fortify thy strong holds; make ready store of bricks, to repair thy battered walls. *Bp. 15. — it shall eat thee up like the cankerworm:] Either, the enemy shall eat thee up as easily as the cankerworm eats the green herb; or, thou shalt as soon be devoured as cankerworms are destroyed by storms, rain, fire, or change of weather. Poole.

16. Thou hast multiplied thy merchants] Neither art thou any better for those multitudes of merchants, that pertain unto thee: for they, like to those cankerworms, when they have spoiled what they may in their deceitful trade, fly away from thee, and leave thee destitute. So also ver. 17. Bp. Hall.

17. Thy crowned are as the locusts,] Thy rulers. Bp. Hall. The word appears to signify the officers in the Ninevites' army. These the Prophet compares to locusts and grashoppers. W. Lowth. On cold days the locusts lie inactive in the inclosures of fertile spots: but on the shining of the sun, which dries their wings and enables them to fly, they disappear. The word "grashoppers," though not accurate, we are obliged to use for variety. The Hebrews have many names for the different species of locusts. Abp. Newcome.

18. Thy shepherds slumber, O king of Assyria:] Diodorus Siculus, speaking of the siege in which Nineveh fell, says, that when the enemy had shut up the king in the city, many nations revolted, each going over to the besieger, for the sake of their liberty: that the king despatched messengers to all his subjects, requiring forces from them to assist him: and that he thought himself able to endure the siege, and remained in expectation of the armies which were to be raised throughout the empire; relying on an oracle, that the city could not be taken till the river should become its enemy. Abp. Newcome.

† Heb. wrinkling. 19 There is no † healing of thy bruise; thy wound is grievous: all that hear the bruit of thee shall clap the hands over thee: for upon whom hath not thy wickedness passed continually? Before CHRIST about 713.

19. There is no healing of thy bruise;] In this passage, as well as in chap. i. 8, and ii. 11, 13, the Prophet foretells the total and entire destruction of this city. The Prophet Zephaniah likewise, in the days of Josiah king of Judah, foretells the same sad event, chap. ii. 13, 14, 15. But what probability was there, that the capital city of a great kingdom, a city which was sixty miles in circumference, a city which contained so many thousand inhabitants, a city which had walls, according to Diodorus Siculus, a hundred feet high, and so thick that three chariots could go abreast upon them, and fifteen hundred towers at proper distances in the walls of two hundred feet in height: what probability was there that such a city should ever be totally destroyed? And yet so totally was it destroyed, that the place where it was situated is hardly known.

The city was taken and destroyed by the Medes and Babylonians: and what probably helped to complete its ruin and devastation was the enlarging and beautifying of Babylon soon after by Nebuchadnezzar. From that time no mention is made of Nineveh by any of the sacred writers: and the most ancient of the heathen authors, who have occasion to say any thing about it, speak of it as a city that was once great and flourishing, but now destroyed and desolate. Great as it was formerly, so little of it was remaining that authors are not agreed even about its situation: probably we may conclude, from the general suffrage of ancient historians and geographers, that it was situated upon the river Tigris: but yet no less authors than Ctesias and Diodorus Siculus represent it as situated on the river Euphrates. Lucian, who flourished in the second century after Christ, affirms, that Nineveh was utterly perished, and there was no footstep of it remaining, nor could you tell where it was once situated: and the greater regard is to be paid to Lucian's testimony, as he was a native of Samosata, a city upon the river Euphrates; and coming from a neighbouring country, he must in all likelihood have known whether there were any remains of Nineveh or not. There is at this time a city called Mosul, situate upon the western side of the Tigris, and on the opposite eastern shore are ruins of a great extent, which are said to be the ruins of Nineveh. But it is more than probable, that these ruins are the remains of the Persian Nineveh, built between the third and the seventh century after Christ, and not of the Assyrian. Even the ruins of old Nineveh have been, as I may say, long ago ruined and destroyed; such "an utter end" hath been made of it, and such is the truth of the Divine predictions! Bp. Newton.

HABAKKUK.

INTRODUCTION.

SOME writers, whose relations are probably founded on traditionary accounts, describe Habakkuk as a native of Bethzakar; and affirm, that he was of the tribe of Simeon. Some suppose him to have flourished in the reign of Manasseh; others in that of Josiah; and some have placed him so late as Zedekiah: but the most approved opinion is, that he prophesied under Jehoiakim, who ascended the throne in the year of the world 3395, and reigned over Judah eleven years.

As the Prophet makes no mention of the Assyrians, and speaks of the Chaldean invasions as near at hand, chap. i. 5; ii. 3; iii. 2, 16—19, he probably lived after the destruction of the Assyrian empire in the fall of Nineveh, in the year of the world 3392, and not long before the devastation of Judea by the victories of Nebuchadnezzar. Habakkuk was then nearly contemporary with, and predicted the same events as Jeremiah; and he probably lived to witness the completion of that part of his prophecy which related to the afflictions of his country. Dr. Gray.

The Prophet Habakkuk stands high in the class of the Hebrew poets. The beautiful connexion between the parts of his prophecy, its diction, imagery, spirit, and sublimity, cannot be too much admired. Abp. Newcome.

It should seem from the title prefixed, and from the intimation subjoined to the last verse of the Prayer in the third chapter, as well as from the word Selah, which occurs three times in the chapter, that the Prayer was set to musick; and perhaps performed in the service of the temple; and it was possibly delivered in a kind of measure. The style of the whole Book is poetical; but more especially this beautiful and perfect ode, which is decorated with every kind of imagery and poetical embellishment. Habakkuk is imitated by succeeding Prophets, and is cited as an inspired person by the Evangelical writers, Heb. x. 37, 38; Rom. i. 17; Gal. iii. 11; Acts xiii. 41; compared with Hab. i. 5. Dr. Gray.

Chap. I. ver. 2. O Lord, how long shall I cry, and thou wilt not hear?] The Prophet proposes the common objections against Providence, taken from the prosperity of the wicked, and the oppression of the righteous, which has been a stumblingblock even to good men. See Jer. xii. 1; Job xii. 6; xxi. 7; Ps. xxxvii, and lxxiii. W. Lowth.

5. Behold ye among the heathen, &c.] But, to take away the ground of all this complaint, behold, O ye degenerated people of the Jews, and look upon those heathens whom ye hate and contemn; and wonder at that, which I will bring to pass by their hands against you, even a work, which to your incredulity and self-confidence will appear incredible. Bp. Hall.

6. — I raise up the Chaldeans, that bitter and hasty nation,] Who shall make several incursions into Judea, and at last utterly conquer it. See 2 Kings xxiv, xxv. They are here said to be cruel in their temper, and vigorous in their warlike enterprises; compare ver. 8. W. Lowth.

9. They shall come all for violence: &c.] They shall come purposely to waste and spoil: their very looks shall blast all before them, like an east wind: and they shall carry away a number of captives, as the sand of the sea for multitude. Bp. Hall.

10. — they shall heap dust, and take it.] They shall cast up mounds against the strong holds, and so take them: see Jer. xxxii. 24; xxxiii. 4. W. Lowth.

11. Then shall his mind change, &c.] This may be spoken of the Chaldean nation at large. Abp. Newcome.

12. Art thou not from everlasting, &c.] The Prophet, having had this revelation from God, that the Chaldeans should be the ministers of His vengeance against sinful Judah, falls into an holy expostulation with Him about these dispensations. As if he had said, O everlasting God, whose word is unchangeable as Thyself; "Thou art of purer eyes, than to behold evil" in Thine own chosen people; why hast Thou ordained these Chaldeans for their judges, a faithless race of men, who without scruple devour those that are more righteous than themselves, and prey upon them as freely as the fisherman, who takes all that comes to his net; and after all the victories which Thou givest them, they have no notion of Thy providence, but impute their success to the power and wisdom of their own false gods? Reading.

13. Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil,] The holy and pure nature of God is at the greatest distance from evil, and at the greatest contrariety to it. He is so far from having any inclination to evil, that it is the only thing in the world, to which He hath an irreconcilable antipathy. This the Scripture frequently declares to us, and that in a very emphatical manner. Ps. v. 4: "Thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness: neither shall evil dwell with Thee." The words are a diminution, and less is said than is intended by them: the meaning is, that God is so far from taking pleasure in sin, that He hath a perfect hatred and abhorrence of it. And here in the Prophet Habakkuk, "Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on iniquity." As, when men hate a thing to the highest degree, they turn away their eyes, and cannot endure to look upon it: light and darkness are not more opposite to one another, than the holy nature of God is to sin. "What communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial?" 2 Cor. vi. 14, 15. Abp. Tillotson.

16. Therefore they sacrifice unto their net, &c.] They boast themselves in their strength, and deify themselves for their valour. Abp. Newcome.

17. Shall they therefore empty their net, &c.] Wilt Thou therefore, O Lord, still suffer them to empty their net for a new draught? Wilt Thou not restrain them from making spoil of the nations round about continually? Bp. Hall.

Chap. II. To the expostulation, which closes the former chapter, the Prophet tells us here in the second, that he waited most attentively for the answer of God, and received it with a command to write it upon tables so plain, "that he may run that readeth it," or may easily run it over without hesitation, it being so legible. And the substance of the Divine answer is this: That the Chaldeans were indeed such men, as the Prophet had represented them; and that therefore, when God had used them as rods for the chastisement of His people, He would throw them into the fire and utterly consume them. This burden of the Babylonians begins at the fifth verse. The low and shameful condition, into which the king of Babylon should sink, is described in the following verses by the remarks, which his conquered and captive nations should make upon him, "taking up a taunting proverb against him, and saying, Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his! &c." Reading.

Ver. 1. I will stand upon my watch, — tower, &c.] It was the business of a watchman in the time of war to descry from an eminent station what messengers were coming, and to make known the message as soon as possible: see 2 Kings ix. 17, &c. The Prophet puts himself in such a posture, that he may receive God's answer to the foregoing complaints. W. Lowth.

2. — make it plain upon tables,] Things were written on tables of wood, stone, or brass, on purpose to preserve the knowledge of them to posterity: these tables were hung up in publick places, for the cognizance of every person, that frequented those places; as laws and treaties were wont to be posted up in temples and market-houses, where was the greatest concourse of people. Bp. Chandler.

3. — the vision] Or prophecy, which follows from the fourth to the twentieth verse. Abp. Secker.

For this vision is not presently to be fulfilled, but hath a time set and determined, wherein it shall be accomplished: at the expiring whereof it shall be manifestly verified to the world. Bp. Hall.

4. Behold, his soul which is lifted up is not upright in him: &c.] In any case, give thou full belief to this word of the Lord: for behold, that man who withdraweth his soul from trusting unto God, and will be raising to himself projects of his own, as he is unsound and faithless to God, so is he accordingly displeasing to Him: but the just and upright man will depend upon the promises of God, and speed thereafter; for his faith in God shall both uphold his life here, and crown it with glory hereafter. Bp. Hall.

—— the just shall live by his faith.] A Christian's life is a life of faith, according to this saying of the Prophet, which is thrice quoted by the Apostle, with reference to the life that now is, as well as that which is to come. As it is by faith that the just shall come to heaven, and live there, so it is by faith that they live here upon earth too. And it is their living by faith upon earth whereby they come to live in heaven. There they live by sight and not by faith: but that we shall never do, except we first live by faith and not by sight. Bp. Beveridge.

5. Yea also, because he transgresseth by wine, &c.] Know therefore, that this proud Babylonian, under whom thy nation shall suffer, shall at last be punished in his own kind, &c. Bp. Hall. The Prophet, having assured the Jews of a deliverance in God's appointed time, proceeds now to denounce His judgment against the Babylonian monarchy, speaking of it as comprised under one person at the head of it: see the note upon chap. i. 11. Here he describes him as one intoxicated with his successes, and not knowing how to set any bounds to his ambition; but still as his conquests enlarge, his desire of having more increases. Hell or death, and the grave, are proverbial emblems of an insatiable temper: see Prov. xxvii. 20; xxx. 16. W. Lowth.

—— he is a proud man,] That is, he is intoxicated with his power and dominion; compare Dan. iv. 30; "neither keepeth at home," meaning, that the king of Babylon confines not himself to a peaceable settlement or residence in his own dominions; but "who," as it follows, "enlargeth his desire as hell," &c. Parkhurst.

6. — laden himself with thick clay!] His gold and silver, which is nothing originally but earth or clay, shall turn to no benefit, but be rather his burden; adding weight to his sins and punishment. W. Lowth.

8. — because of men's blood,] Shed by thee. "The land" is the land of Judea; "the city," the city of Jerusalem. Abp. Newcome. "The violence of the land," or "against the land:" as in Joel iii. 19; Obad. ver. 10. Abp. Secker.

11. For the stone shall cry out of the wall, &c.] For, if men shall hold their peace, the very stones out of the wall, which thou hast raised by this cruelty, shall cry out against thee; and the beam out of the timber-work shall second this clamour against thine injustice and violence. Bp. Hall.

13. — is it not of the Lord of hosts &c.] The foregoing and the following verses contain the denunciations of God's judgments upon Babylon, for her pride and cruelty, her luxury and idolatry. And this is an answer to Habakkuk's expostulation, why God punished Israel by the sword of the Chaldeans: it was not that He exalted that people for any superiour worth in them; for, on the contrary, they were now almost ripe for destruction, and should survive their triumphs over the Jews but a very short time. For, saith he, "is it not of the Lord of hosts that the people shall labour in the very fire," or rather shall labour for that which shall be fuel for the fire, "and weary themselves for very vanity?" meaning, that all the pains, the Chaldeans took in enlarging and beautifying their famous Babylon, should be soon lost in the flames that should consume it, even as they had consumed the cities of Judah. Reading.

14. For the earth shall be filled &c.] God's power and providence shall be widely displayed in the destruction of Babylon, in the humiliation of Nebuchadnezzar, and in the captivity and restoration of His people. Abp. Newcome. Especially as these events are described in the Prophets, as earnests and types of God's judgments upon His enemies, and His favour to His Church under the Gospel. W. Lowth.

15, 16. Woe unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, &c.] Grotius justly observes, that these two verses contain an allegory. The Chaldeans gave to the neighbouring nations the cup of idolatry and of deceitful alliance; and in return they received from Jehovah the cup of His fury. Abp. Newcome.

—— and the spoil of beasts, which made them afraid.] The relative "which," added by our translators, obscures the passage, which might be more plainly rendered, "The spoil of beasts shall make them, or make thee afraid;" as the Septuagint and Chaldee read the text, with very little alteration. W. Lowth. Surely the violence done to Lebanon shall cover thee, and the destruction of beasts shall make thee afraid. Abp. Newcome. The cause here assigned for the destruction of the Chaldeans, is their cruelty against the people of God, and the spoiling of all Judea, which is here figuratively signified under the name of Lebanon. Daneus.

18. — the molten image, and a teacher of lies,] The image teaches lies, or gives false notions of the Deity. Abp. Secker.

20. But the Lord is in his holy temple: &c.] That is, The Lord is He, of whom alone we are to ask happiness: His holy temple the place, where alone we are to find it. This is the right aim, this is the true end of man. Whereas he, that seeks felicity in the creature, looks for it in the wrong place: he, that asks it from a false god, applies to one that hath it not to give. "Let all the earth" then, this vain world and all its vain pretences to felicity, "keep silence before God;" while all false objects of worship, and all worshippers of false gods, stand mute before Him; convicted and convinced that the dispensing of happiness, as well as the punishing of the guilty, is the sole prerogative of God; that without holiness none can see Him; without seeing Him none can be happy.

This chapter may be considered as a vindication of the wisdom and justice of God in the government of the world: particularly in that seeming inequality of His providence towards good and bad men in this life, which has so often staggered the reason, and sometimes the faith, of many pious persons. We are here taught, that the certain consequence of all vice and wickedness is shame and misery. "Woe," or punishment, is the constant attendant on every sin: how slow soever its pace may be, it never fails to overtake it: so that however evil men may happen to flourish, it is but for a time. "The prosperity of fools shall destroy them," Prov. i. 32. Their very success in sin shall prove their destruction. This consideration must therefore compel us to conclude, that such persons are so far from being happy in their most prosperous state, and so far beneath our envy or applause, that they justly merit our pity and compassion, as of all men the most miserable. Wogan.

Chap. III. ver. 1. A prayer of Habakkuk the prophet upon Shigionoth.] Or, as the marginal reading explains it, "according to the tunes, called in Hebrew, Shigionoth;" which were musical compositions used in the publick service of the temple. Compare the title of Ps. vii. It is called a prayer, because it begins in the form of a supplication; although the following parts are rather in the nature of an hymn or thanksgiving. W. Lowth. The word Shigionoth may denote a musical instrument of great compass, with which the Jews accompanied this piece of poetry. Abp. Newcome.

This chapter affords a remarkable instance of that sublimity which is peculiar to the ode, and which is principally owing to a bold and yet easy digression or transition. The Prophet, foreseeing the judgments of God, the calamities which were to befall his country from the Chaldeans, and afterwards the punishments which awaited the Chaldeans themselves; partly struck with terrour, and partly inspirited by confidence in the Divine mercy, beseeches God that He would hasten the redemption and deliverance of His people, ver. 2. Perceiving at once the similarity between the Babylonish and Egyptian captivities, and how much the deliverance experienced under the latter would animate the hopes of a second similar deliverance; he does not dwell on particular resemblances, but bursts out at once with unexpected impetuosity, in allusion to the Egyptian deliverance, "God came from Teman, &c." He preserves throughout the whole passage the same magnificence with which he begins, choosing the noblest images which so copious a subject could supply, and illustrating them with the most splendid colours, and in the most elevated style. The singular elegance of the conclusion crowns the magnificence of the whole; and, were it not that antiquity here and there throws a veil of obscurity over it, there could not be conceived a more perfect and masterly poem of the kind. Bp. Lowth.

2. O Lord, I have heard thy speech, and was afraid: &c.] O Lord, I have heard the words spoken by Thee, concerning the future captivity of Thy people, and was much troubled with them: and now, O Lord, since they must lie under this grievous affliction for a time, make good upon them the work of Thy gracious preservation of them; uphold them, while those years of their misery continue; let Thy merciful protection be made known to the world. Bp. Hall.

3. God came from Teman, &c.] Bp. Lowth observes, that this is a sudden burst of poetry, in the true spirit of the ode: the concealed connexion being, that God, who had formerly displayed such power in delivering the Israelites from Egyptian slavery, might succour their posterity in a like wonderful manner; and the enthusiasm of the poet leading him to neglect all obvious ways of entering on his subject. Verses 3—7 contain a sublime description of God, when He conducted His people to the land of Canaan. The grandest circumstances are selected, and the diction is as splendid as the subjects. Abp. Newcome.

The captivity brought to mind the Exodus, or deliverance of the Israelites out of bondage: and that He who had delivered could again deliver His people. Abp. Secker.

4. — he had horns coming out of his hand: &c.] The Hebrew word signifies, both "horns," and "rays of light:" see Exod. xxxiv. 29, 30. The marginal reading here is to be preferred, "He had bright beams coming out of His side." The symbol of the Divine presence had rays of light issuing out on every side; and yet that was but an hiding or veil to the Divine Majesty, who "covereth Himself with light as with a garment," Ps. civ. 2. W. Lowth.

5. Before him went the pestilence,] To execute vengeance on His enemies; such as Pharaoh, &c. W. Lowth. See Numb. xi. 33; xiv. 37; xvi. 46. It was occasionally inflicted on the Israelites for their guilt. Abp. Newcome. See the note on Jer. xlvii. 6.

6. — the everlasting mountains were scattered, &c.] The mountains and hills are said to quake at God's presence, Nahum i. 5: so here the whole land of Canaan is said to tremble, and even the mountains themselves, the most solid and impregnable parts of it, because the hearts of the stoutest of the old inhabitants fainted and lost their courage: see Josh. ii. 24. W. Lowth.

—— his ways are everlasting.] So dreadful and glorious is God for ever, in the manifestation of Himself to His creatures. Bp. Hall.

7. I saw the tents of Cushan in affliction: &c.] I saw the neighbouring nations of the Arabians and Ethiopians in great distress; and the Midianites trembling under the expectations of His judgments, which He was ready to bring on them, in the behalf of His people. Bp. Hall.

—— the curtains of the land of Midian] The coverings of their tents. Abp. Newcome.

8. Was the Lord displeased against the rivers? &c.] When God dried up the channel of the Red sea, Exod. xiv. 22, and afterward that of the river Jordan, Josh. iii. 16, 17, it was not out of any displeasure against the waters, but for the safety of His people, for whose deliverance He appeared in as illustrious a manner, as if He had been seen riding in the clouds, and carried upon the wings of the wind, as in a chariot: compare Is. xix. 1; Ps. lxviii. 4; civ. 3; Deut. xxxiii. 26. W. Lowth.

9. Thy bow was made quite naked, according to the oaths of the tribes, even thy word.] Thou didst draw forth and bend the bow of Thy mighty power among Thine enemies, according to the oaths, which Thou swarest to the tribes of Israel, even the word of promise, which Thou gavest them to settle them in that good land. Bp. Hall. The question asked in a very bold and poetical manner, ver. 8, is here answered: that God displayed His power to deliver His people according to His faithful word. Abp. Newcome.

The Oriental bows were wont to be carried in a case, hung to the girdle: hence the phrase of making the bow naked. Sir J. Chardin.

—— Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers.] Thou didst cleave the hard rocks and the earth about them, and make the waters run down in a great stream or channel. Ps. lxxviii. 15, 16; cv. 41. W. Lowth.

The passage through the Red sea having been beautifully mentioned in an indirect manner, ver. 8, the Prophet continues his magnificent description of the Deity, ver. 10, 11, 12, and adds the reason, why such power was displayed, in the former part of the thirteenth verse. Abp. Newcome.

10. The mountains saw thee, and they trembled:] Mount Sinai, and the adjoining hills, felt the effects of Thy presence. W. Lowth.

—— the overflowing of the water passed by:] The water came out of the rock in such quantity, that it ran along like an overflowing river. Dr. Wells. Or, the overflowing streams of the Red sea and the Jordan passed backward in their channels. Bp. Hall.

11. — at the light of thine arrows they went, &c.] The instruments of destruction, which God employed, are metaphorically called His arrows and spear. Abp. Newcome.

13. — thou woundedst the head out of the house of the wicked,] The ardour of the Prophet having led him to begin in the midst of his subject, ver. 3, he here returns to what passed in Egypt before the dividing of the Red sea, the mention of which astonishing miracle he repeats, ver. 15. In this verse he refers to the destruction of the firstborn in Egypt. Abp. Newcome.

—— by discovering the foundation unto the neck.] By undermining them from bottom to top. W. Lowth. The death of the firstborn is figuratively called the utter overthrow of the Egyptian houses. Abp. Newcome.

14. Thou didst strike through with his staves the head of his villages:] The Prophet amplifies the former benefit of God, that for the preservation of His Church He destroyed the firstborn of the Egyptians, not only in the cities and towns, but also in the country: because that the inhabitants of the country, as well as those in the cities, raged against the people of God with deceit and violence, and would have delighted to devour and consume them. And in the nineteenth verse he may speak in the person of his people, who were to be restored. Abp. Newcome. See the note on Ps. xviii. 33.

19. — To the chief singer] Or, musician. This hymn was designed to be sung in the temple service, see ver. 1; and for that purpose was delivered to the chief musician, to be set to musical notes: compare the title of the fourth Psalm. The direction "to the chief singer on my stringed instruments" might probably be given by order of king Josiah. W. Lowth.

ZEPHANIAH.

INTRODUCTION.

THE Prophet Zephaniah informs us, that he was the son of Cushi; and that the word of the Lord came to him in the days of Josiah king of Judah. He is supposed to have been of the tribe of Simeon; and as he traces back his pedigree for four generations, he was doubtless of noble birth: though not of the royal family, as some have imagined from the resemblance between the names of Hekekiah and that of Hiskia, from whom the Prophet professes himself to have been a descendant; the period which intervened between king Hezekiah and the time in which Zephaniah flourished, being scarce sufficient to admit of three intermediate ancestors to the Prophet.

Zephaniah begins with denouncing God's wrath against "the remnant of Baal, and the name of the Chemarims;" against "them which worshipped the host of heaven, and swore by Malcham;" and therefore probably he addressed those idolatrous priests who were not yet extirpated by the religious zeal of Josiah; compare Zeph. i. 4, 5—9 with 2 Kings xxiii. 5, 6, 12, &c.: he foretold also the destruction of Nineveh, which happened in the year of the world 3392. And upon these considerations he may be supposed to have prophesied before the last reformation made by Josiah, in the year of the world 3381. He may be conceived also to have entered on his office towards the commencement of the reign of that monarch, who ascended the throne in the year of the world 3364, since he preceded Jeremiah, who began his prophetick ministry in the thirteenth year of Josiah's reign. Epiphanius relates, that Zephaniah was born at mount Sacabatha, or Bacatha.

Zephaniah and Jeremiah resemble each other so much in those parts where they treat of the idolatries and wickedness that prevailed in their times, that St. Isidore asserts, that Zephaniah was the abbreviator of Jeremiah: but he apparently prophesied before Jeremiah; he seems to have concurred with Josiah in his righteous design of bringing back the people to the worship and obedience of the true God.

The style of Zephaniah is poetical; but it is not distinguished by any peculiar elegance or beauty, though generally animated and impressive. Dr. Gray.

Chap. I. ver. 1. The word of the Lord which came unto Zephaniah] This prophecy contains partly threatenings, and partly comforts. Threatenings of God concerning the destruction of Jerusalem very shortly to ensue, and concerning the most grievous punishments of the Jews, both for their impiety towards God, and for their injustice towards men. Yet because the Lord allowed an interval before the accomplishment of His judgments, the Prophet exhorts the Jews to mitigate the Divine wrath by earnest repentance and amendment of life. He also comforts the Church by promises, that God will not utterly cast it away and destroy it, but will leave some seed of it, because He had determined to gather it from among the Gentiles, and to sanctify it in Christ and for Christ's sake. The book contains three discourses, which are comprised in the same number of chapters. Danæus.

3. I will consume man and beast;] A general desolation is threatened, by enumerating the particulars that shall be involved in it. See the note on Hos. iv. 3. W. Lowth. What is said in Hosea of a great drought, may be applied to this place: and what is here said, may be added to what is said there. Dr. Wells.

—— and the stumblingblocks with the wicked;] I will destroy those abominable idols, which have been stumblingblocks to their followers; together with their idolatrous worshippers. Bp. Hall. Idols are called "the stumblingblocks of iniquity," Ezek. vii. 19; xiv. 3, 4. W. Lowth.

4. — the remnant of Baal] Those that remain of the worshippers of Baal. Bp. Hall, Dr. Wells. Or, those altars or places of worship dedicated to the service of Baal, which escaped the reformation of king Josiah, 2 Kings xxiii. 6. Compare Jer. iii. 6. W. Lowth.

jealous God," and will not admit of any rival in His worship. See Hos. iv. 15; Amos v. 26; 2 Kings xvii. 33. Malchus is the same with Moloch, to whom the people of Judah continued to offer their children, as Jeremiah upbraids them, chap. vii. 31; xix. 5; notwithstanding the reformation made by Josiah, 2 Kings xxiii. 10. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

7. — for the Lord hath prepared a sacrifice, he hath bid his guests.] The slaughter of the wicked is called "a sacrifice," because it is in some sense an atonement to God's justice: compare Is. xxxiv. 6; Jer. xlvi. 10; Ezek. xxxix. 17; Rev. xix. 17. The latter part of the sentence alludes to the custom of those that offered sacrifice, which was to invite their friends to partake of the feast which accompanied it. So God will call the Chaldeans to have a share in this slaughter. W. Lowth.

8. — strange apparel.] There were peculiar vestments belonging to the worship of each idol; see 2 Kings x. 22. So in after-times there were peculiar habits belonging to the priests of Saturn, and the priestesses of Ceres. The text may likewise be explained of such men as wore women's apparel, and such women as wore that belonging to men: which was contrary to an express law, Deut. xxii. 5, and was a rite observed in the worship of some idols. W. Lowth.

9. — those that leap on the threshold.] Or rather, "leap over the threshold." The expression probably denotes some idolatrous rite, like that which was practised in the temple of Dagon, where the "priests did not tread upon the threshold," 1 Sam. v. 5. To this sense the Chaldee Paraphrast interprets it of those that walk after the laws or rites of the Philistines. Others expound it of those who enter into other men's houses, and take away their goods by violence, according to what follows: "which fill their masters' houses with violence and deceit." W. Lowth.

This leaping over the thresholds may allude to the servants of the great men, riding into people's houses, and, having gained admission by deceit, forcing from the inhabitants by violence considerable contributions. Such a practice prevails at this time among the Arabs and the Persians. Harmer, Parkhurst.

10. — the fish gate,] The gate which stood near the fish market: see 2 Chron. xxxiii. 14; Nehem. iii. 3. "The second" should rather be "the middle part of the city:" it is that part of Jerusalem mentioned 2 Kings xxii. 14; 2 Chron. xxxiv. 22. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome.

—— a great crashing from the hills.] From the mountains of Zion and Moriah, whereon the temple and the king's palace were built. See 2 Chron. iii. 1. W. Lowth.

11. — Maktesh,] A part or street of Jerusalem. The Chaldee interprets it of the inhabitants near the brook Cedron. W. Lowth. A valley in Jerusalem, which divided the upper from the lower city. This is agreeable to the etymology of the word, which signifies a hollow place. Abp. Newcome.

—— all they that bear silver] All those rich men, which had wont to drive a great trade with their silver. Bp. Hall. The rich merchants in general, or the money-changers in particular, may be meant. Abp. Newcome.

12. — with candles,] That is, thoroughly and diligently. See Luke xv. 8. Abp. Newcome. This is said to signify the exactness with which God pries into the most inward and secret parts, so that nothing can escape His search. Bp. Sanderson.

—— that are settled on their lees:] Which have hardened themselves with resolutions of wickedness, and have determinately settled themselves to live in their known sins. Bp. Hall.

14—16. The great day of the Lord] The great day of God's revenge upon Jerusalem is near at hand. Bp. Hall. The topick of approaching calamity from Jehovah is often insisted on in the Prophets; but no where probably with such a beautiful amplification as in these three verses. Abp. Newcome.

17. — like blind men,] Not knowing whither to go, or which way to take for safety. Compare Deut. xxviii. 29; Isa. lix. 10. W. Lowth.

18. — the fire of his jealousy:] God's vengeance is frequently compared to fire: see Nahum i. 6. This shall consume the land and its inhabitants for their heinous offences, and chiefly for their idolatry; because that sin peculiarly intrenches upon God's honour, which is incommunicable to others; whence He is called "a jealous God," Exod. xx. 5; xxxiv. 14. W. Lowth.

4 ¶ For Gaza shall be forsaken, and Ashkelon a desolation: they shall drive out Ashdod at the noon day, and Ekron shall be rooted up.

5 Woe unto the inhabitants of the sea coasts, the nation of the Cherethites! the word of the LORD is against you; O Canaan, the land of the Philistines, I will even destroy thee, that there shall be no inhabitant.

6 And the sea coast shall be dwellings and cottages for shepherds, and folds for flocks.

Before CHRIST about 630.

7 And the coast shall be for the remnant of the house of Judah; they shall feed thereupon: in the houses of Ashkelon shall they lie down in the evening: ‖ for the LORD their God shall visit them, and turn away their captivity.

‖ Or, when, &c.

8 ¶ I have heard the reproach of Moab, and the revilings of the children of Ammon, whereby they have reproached my people, and magnified themselves against their border.

9 Therefore as I live, saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Surely Moab shall be as Sodom, and the children of Ammon as Gomorrah, even the breeding of nettles, and saltpits, and a perpetual desolation: the residue of my people shall spoil them, and the remnant of my people shall possess them.

10 This shall they have for their pride, because they have reproached and magnified themselves against the people of the LORD of hosts.

11 The LORD will be terrible unto them: for he will † famish all the gods of the earth; and men shall worship him, every one from his place, even all the isles of the heathen.

ship; and while they remained in this state of rebellion and impiety, they still flattered themselves that they were secure from danger, and that God would bring no evil upon them. Thus God punishes the obstinate and impenitent profanation of the Divine service, especially in those to whom He has in a particular manner made Himself known. Osterwald.

Chap. II. ver. 1. Gather yourselves together,] Assemble yourselves, in order to make a publick humiliation: see Joel ii. 16. W. Lowth. This chapter contains an exhortation to earnest repentance and amendment of their former life, to the end they may escape the threatened evils. For those whom God reproves, except the fault be in themselves, He means to save. Let men change their deeds, and I, saith the Lord, will change My purpose. And this exhortation is often repeated in the present chapter, to the end that those, who remained obstinate and stubborn, might be without excuse. Dauaeus.

—— O nation not desired;] "Not desired," that is, not regarded with favour. Abp. Newcome. The Greek and the Chaldee interpret it, "O nation, that will not receive instruction," and is not to be amended but by the discipline of God's judgments. W. Lowth.

2. Before the decree bring forth, &c.] Before the command of God bring forth all this heavy judgment upon you: before the day of your captivity come upon you, which is coming on with such speed and violence, as the chaff is driven with a strong wind. Bp. Hall.

4. For Gaza shall be forsaken, &c.] The Prophet digresses to foretell the fate of some cities and nations bordering on Judea, and hostile to her: and he then enlarges on the destruction of Nineveh, a city which had carried the ten tribes into captivity, and had often struck Jerusalem with terrour, ver. 4—15. Abp. Newcome.

—— at the noon day,] Openly before your eyes. Bp. Hall.

5. — Cherethites!] The Philistines, who live upon the coasts of the Mediterranean sea; called in Ezekiel, chap. xxv. 16, as well as here, Cherethites or Cherethims. W. Lowth.

—— O Canaan, the land of the Philistines,] The Canaanites, properly so called, are the same with the Philistines, and seated in that part of Palestine: see Josh. xiii. 3. W. Lowth.

6. And the sea coast shall be dwellings &c.] A proverbial description of an utter desolation: compare ver. 14, 15; and see the notes on Isa. vii. 25; xiii. 20. W. Lowth.

7. — they shall feed thereupon: &c.] These words allude to the foregoing verse. As the cities of Gaza, Ashkelon, &c, were places for the wild Arabs, or other wandering tribes, to pitch their tents and feed their flocks; so they shall hereafter become the settled habitations of the Jews: compare Is. lxv. 10. W. Lowth.

—— in the evening:] After their captivity is past; as it were in the latter end of the day. Bp. Hall. This promise was partly fulfilled after the return of the Jews from Babylon, and may hereafter receive a further completion: see Obad. ver. 19, and the note there. W. Lowth.

9. — the residue of my people shall spoil them,] Judas Maccabeus and his brethren subdued the Ammonites, as appears from 1 Mac. v. 6. W. Lowth.

11. — he will famish all the gods of the earth;] He will deprive them of their worship and sacrifices, which the Gentiles thought to be the food of their gods: see Deut. xxxii. 38. W. Lowth. By "the earth" the Jews understood the great continent of all Asia and Africa, to which they had access by land: and by "the isles" they understood the places to which they sailed by sea, particularly all Europe. Sir Isaac Newton.

The Prophet here foretells the gradual fall of idolatry; and its deep, and at length deadly, wound by the spreading of the Gospel. Abp. Newcome.

—— every one from his place,] Or, "in his place." Men shall worship Him every where, and not only in Jerusalem: compare Mal. i. 11; John iv. 21. W. Lowth.

Before CHRIST about 630.

12 ¶ Ye Ethiopians also, ye shall be slain by my sword.

15 This is the rejoicing city that dwelt carelessly, that said in her heart, [b] I am, and there is none beside me: how is she become a desolation, a place for beasts to lie down in! every one that passeth by her shall hiss, and wag his hand.

8 ¶ Therefore wait ye upon me, saith the LORD, until the day that I rise up to the prey: for my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my [d] jealousy.

[d] Chap. 1, 18.

12. — by my sword.] By Nebuchadnezzar, who is a sword in My hand, that is, an instrument to execute My vengeance, Ps. xvii. 13. The Ethiopians seem to comprehend the Egyptians, whose confederates they were, and with whom they underwent the same fate, when Nebuchadnezzar conquered Egypt: see Jer. xlvi. 9; Ezek. xxx. 5, 9. W. Lowth.

13. — the north.] The Assyrians: so called because they used to invade Palestine through Syria from the north. For the same reason the Babylonians are spoken of as a northern enemy, Jer. i. 14; xlvi. 6, 10, 20, 24; Ezek. xxvi. 7. Abp. Newcome. See the note from Calmet on Jer. iv. 6.

—— dry like a wilderness.] Notwithstanding her many waters, (Nahum i. 4,) her situation shall become dry: the artificial channels being obstructed, and the waters of the river returning to their course. See Nahum ii. 8. Abp. Newcome.

14. — all the beasts of the nations:] The Chaldee interprets it, "the several kinds of wild beasts;" as if the Hebrew word, rendered "nations," were to be understood of the several species of wild beasts, as the word is used of several sorts of caterpillers, Joel i. 6. In like manner the ants are called "a people," Prov. xxx. 25. W. Lowth.

—— shall lodge in the upper lintels of it;] Or, according to the marginal reading, the "knops or chapiters." Sir John Chardin gives an instance of birds lodging on the capitals of forsaken temples and palaces, in his description of the magnificent pillars at Persepolis. "The storks make their nests on the tops of those columns with great boldness, and in no danger of being disturbed." Harmer.

—— he shall uncover the cedar work.] The fine carved work, or ceilings made of cedar, (see Jer. xxii. 14,) shall be exposed to the injuries of the weather, and so quickly come to ruin. W. Lowth. This reference to the former elegance of the city is finely introduced: and in the next verse the grand and affecting description of her desolate state is beautifully contrasted with her former festivity and pride. Abp. Newcome.

15. — how is she become a desolation,] See the note on Numbers iii. 19.

Chap. III. ver. 1. Woe to her &c.] The Prophet here addresses Jerusalem. Abp. Newcome.

3. — they gnaw not the bones till the morrow.] When they find a prey, they devour it at once, and stay not to gnaw upon the bones, but swallow them down hastily. Bp. Hall. Our translation of this passage is ambiguous: but probably it was intended to express, that those wolves were not employed so long as till the morrow in gnawing the bones, for that before that time they had devoured the prey, flesh, skin, bones, and all, as wolves commonly do. Parkhurst.

5. — every morning] The expression "every morning" alludes to the custom of administering justice in the morning: see Psal. ci. 8; Jer. xxi. 12. W. Lowth.

6, 7. I have cut off the nations: &c.] I have given the Jews sufficient warning by those judgments, which I have brought upon the neighbouring nations. I said of thee, O Jerusalem, Surely thou wilt be premonished by My judgments to fear Me, &c. Bp. Hall.

God is introduced speaking after the manner of men, and expecting what effect such proceedings might in reason have produced. Compare Isa. v. 4; Jer. viii. 6. W. Lowth. God had caused the Jews to see the destruction of several nations, and especially of their brethren the Israelites, that they might learn by these examples to fear Him: but because they had persevered in their rebellion, the fire of His wrath was going to consume them. Those, who see the examples of Divine justice, and the miseries which befall others, and do not improve by them, aggravate their guilt and punishment, and have reason to expect the severest effects of the Divine vengeance. Osterwald.

8. — for my determination is to gather the nations, &c.] This may perhaps be meant of the same general summons, of which Joel speaks, when the nations shall be gathered "into the valley of Jehoshaphat:" see Joel iii. 2, 12; and the notes there. W. Lowth.

Newcome.* After which I will restore peace to My people; and will so work with them, that, abandoning all false worship and idolatry, they shall, with pure hearts and lips, confess Me the Lord Christ. Bp. Hall. This is a blessing reserved for the latter ages, after the conversion of the Jews, and the coming in of the fulness of the Gentiles, when "there shall be one Lord, and His name one," Zech. xiv. 9. W. Lowth.

10. From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia &c.] The Jews, who are dispersed into the most distant countries, such as was Ethiopia, which lay beyond Egypt, shall come into the Christian Church, and there make their religious acknowledgments. W. Lowth. See the note on Isa. xviii. 1. Abp. Newcome.

"The daughter of My dispersed" is the same with My dispersed; as "the daughter of Zion" is equivalent to Zion: see the note on Jer. iv. 31. W. Lowth.

11. In that day shalt thou not be ashamed &c.] In that day thou shalt have no cause to be ashamed of all thy former offences, wherein thou hast transgressed against Me; since I have both fully forgiven them, and reformed them also; for then I will take away from thee that vain pride and confidence, which too many of My people put in the holiness of mount Zion, and the temple there; as if that alone could secure them from all evils, and procure all blessings. Bp. Hall. See the note on Isa. iv. 2.

12. I will also leave in the midst of thee &c.] Rather, In the stead of these proud boasters, I will leave in the midst of thee those meek and humble souls, which shall be vile in their own eyes, and shall place all their trust in Christ their Saviour. Bp. Hall. The blessings of the Gospel are peculiarly promised to the poor: see Isa. xi. 4; xiv. 32; lxi. 1; Zech. xi. 11. Christ and His Apostles apply these promises to those that were converted by their preaching; Matt. v. 3; xi. 5; 1 Cor. i. 26, 27; Jam. ii. 5: which texts are meant of such as are endued with a true spirit of poverty, such as consists in a lowliness of mind, contempt of the world, and a resigned will. Afflictions are very useful to produce such a temper of mind, and therefore are often the lot of true disciples: see Acts xiv. 22; Heb. xii. 7; 1 Pet. i. 7. By "afflicted" may be meant those that "come out of great tribulation." W. Lowth.

13. — they shall feed and lie down, &c.] The great Shepherd, the Messiah, shall both feed and protect them: compare Ezek. xxxiv. 28; Mic. iv. 4; v. 4; vii. 14. W. Lowth.

14. Sing, O daughter of Zion; &c.] These hymns of joy properly belong to the times of the Gospel, and especially to the triumphant state of the Church yet to come. Compare Isa. xii. 6; liv. 1; Zech. ii. 10; ix. 9. W. Lowth, Dr. Wells.

18. I will gather them that are sorrowful &c.] I will gather and comfort them that mourn after the solemn assemblies of Zion, grieving at their withholding therefrom by their forced captivity: who are a feeling part of thee, My Church; to whom the reproach of their long restraint was a burden. Bp. Hall. The humiliation and affliction of the Jews have furnished matter of reproach to their enemies. Abp. Newcome.

19. — I will save her that halteth, &c.] See the note on the passage in the margin.

The promises, which Zephaniah adds to his former threatenings, teach us, that, as God afflicts men only to chastise and purify them, He removes their afflictions when they return to Him. Osterwald.

HAGGAI.

INTRODUCTION.

HAGGAI is generally reputed to have been born in the captivity, and to have returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel, Ezra ii. 2. He is reckoned as the tenth in order among the Prophets, both in the Hebrew and Greek copies; and may be considered as the first of the three Prophets who flourished among the Jews after their return to their country. He appears to have been raised up by God to exhort Zerubbabel, Ezra v. 1, and Joshua the high priest, the son of Josedech, to resume the work of the temple; which had been interrupted near fourteen years, in consequence of the intrigues of the Samaritans, and other obstructions excited to defeat the edict of Cyrus, Ezra iv. 24. He began to prophesy in the second year of Darius Hystaspes, in the year of the world 3484, about fifteen years after the foundation of the temple had been laid, Ezra v. 1. The Prophets, after the captivity, sometimes reckon by the dates of those sovereigns to whom their country was subjected.

The style of Haggai is represented by the learned Bp. Lowth as entirely prosaick; but Abp. Newcome has given a translation of it on the supposition, that a great part of it admits of a metrical division.

Haggai was probably of the sacerdotal race; and Epiphanius relates, that he was buried among the priests at Jerusalem. Dr. Gray.

Before CHRIST about 520.

CHAP. I.

1 Haggai reproveth the people for neglecting the building of the house. 7 He inciteth them to the building. 12 He promiseth God's assistance to them being forward.

IN the second year of Darius the king, in the sixth month, in the first day of the month, came the word of the LORD † by Haggai the prophet unto Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, ‖ governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, saying, † Heb. by the hand of Haggai.

‖ Or. captain.

2 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, This people say, The time is not come, the time that the LORD's house should be built.

3 Then came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet, saying,

4 Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your cieled houses, and this house lie waste?

5 Now therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts; † Consider your ways.

Before CHRIST about 520.

† Heb. Set your heart on your ways.

6 Ye have * sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages earneth wages to put it into a bag † with holes.

* Deut. 28. 38. Mic. 6. 14, 15.
† Heb. pierced through.

7 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Consider your ways.

8 Go up to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the house; and I will take pleasure in it, and I will be glorified, saith the LORD.

9 Ye looked for much, and, lo, it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I did ‖ blow upon it. Why? saith the LORD of hosts. Because of mine house that is waste, and ye run every man unto his own house.

‖ Or, blew it away.

Chap. I. ver. 2. — This people say, The time is not come, &c.] This prophecy seems to have been delivered before Darius had granted his decree for rebuilding the temple. Compare Ezra v. 1, with vi. 1. W. Lowth.

4. Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your cieled houses, and this house lie waste?] You have found means and opportunity to build fine houses for yourselves, though ye are content to let the house of God lie in ruins. It argues a great contempt of God and religion, when men think no cost or finery too much to bestow upon themselves, and the meanest accommodation good enough for the service of God. W. Lowth.

5, 6. — Consider your ways. Ye have sown much, &c.] Consider well the courses that ye take, and the success of your affairs. God hath justly crossed you in all your hopes and endeavours. "Ye have sown much," expecting a goodly crop, but ye find little to reap, &c; and he, that earneth wages, is never the better, never the richer; his gains do not prosper in his hands. Bp. Hall.

He, that earns wages, is forced presently to lay out all he earns to supply his wants; so that his money only passes through his hands, and stays not with him to enrich him; just as if he put it into a bag with holes, through which it ran out as fast as he put it in. Dr. Wells.

8. Go up to the mountain,] The Jews had a grant from Cyrus, of cedar trees from the mountain of Lebanon, for the building of the temple. See Ezra iii. 7; vi. 3, 4. Parkhurst.

9. — I did blow upon it.] I crossed your hopes and designs in it. Bp. Hall. Or, I had blown upon it; I had blasted the fruits of the earth, while they were in the field, so that most of all that little crop came to nothing. W. Lowth, Dr. Wells.

Before CHRIST about 520.

10 Therefore [b] the heaven over you is stayed from dew, and the earth is stayed from her fruit.

[b] Deut. 28. 23.

11 And I called for a drought upon the land, and upon the mountains, and upon the corn, and upon the new wine, and upon the oil, and upon that which the ground bringeth forth, and upon men, and upon cattle, and upon all the labour of the hands.

12 ¶ Then Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the LORD their God, and the words of Haggai the prophet, as the LORD their God had sent him, and the people did fear before the LORD.

13 Then spake Haggai the LORD's messenger in the LORD's message unto the people, saying, I am with you, saith the LORD.

14 And the LORD stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; and they came and did work in the house of the LORD of hosts, their God, 15 In the four and twentieth day of the sixth month, in the second year of Darius the king.

CHAP. II.

1 He encourageth the people to the work, by promise of greater glory to the second temple than was in the first. 10 In the type of holy things and unclean he sheweth their sins hindered the work. 20 God's promise to Zerubbabel.

Before CHRIST about 520.

IN the seventh month, in the one and twentieth day of the month, came the word of the LORD † by the prophet Haggai, saying,

† Heb. by the hand of.

2 Speak now to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and to the residue of the people, saying,

3 Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory? and how do ye see it now? is it not in your eyes in comparison of it as nothing?

4 Yet now be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith the LORD; and be strong, O Joshua, son of Josedech, the high priest; and be strong, all ye people of the land, saith the LORD, and work: for I am with you, saith the LORD of hosts:

5 According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not.

6 For thus saith the LORD of hosts; [a] Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land;

[a] Hebr. 12. 26.

7 And I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come: and I will

---

12. Then Zerubbabel &c.] Compare Ezra v. 2.

Chap. II. ver. 3. Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory?] When the foundation of the house was laid in the second year of Cyrus, many of the ancient men, that had seen the first house, wept to see how much the second temple would fall short of the glory of the first, Ezra iii. 12. The second year of Cyrus was fifty-three years after the destruction of the first temple, so the oldest men among those that returned home might very well remember how glorious that was. This prophecy was uttered fifteen years after the foundations of the second temple were laid; so there might some still survive that saw the first. W. Lowth.

5. According to the word that I covenanted with you] I will fulfil those promises which I made with you, when I delivered you out of Egypt, that upon your obedience I would not "leave you nor forsake you," but guide and prosper you in all your undertakings: see Nehem. ix. 20; Is. lxiii. 11. W. Lowth.

6. For thus saith the Lord of hosts;] The occasion of this prophecy was the dejection of the Jews at the unhopeful appearance of their new temple: the comfort in the Prophet's message was suited to this circumstance, and contains a promise of some glory to be conferred on this temple to make it exceed the glory of the former. Bp. Chandler.

That it is some very great thing, which is here foretold and promised for the honour of this second temple, no man can doubt, who considers in what a solemn manner it is here expressed: this great and glorious title, "the LORD of hosts," being no less than five several times used within the compass of these four verses; the like instance to which is not perhaps in the whole Bible. So that, by the solemn manner of expressing it, we may imagine that it is some very great thing which is spoken of, and such as the like had never been before: and such was the incarnation and coming of the Messiah. Abp. Tillotson.

—— Yet once, it is a little while,] Or, "once more," as the Seventy render it, whom St. Paul follows, Heb. xii. 26. The phrase implies such an alteration as shall not give way to any farther change, as the Apostle there expounds it. The space of time from this prophecy to the coming of the Messiah may be called "a little while," in comparison of the several ages expired since the first promise of a Redeemer. W. Lowth.

—— I will shake the heavens, &c.] Once I did in great terrour deliver My law; and now, ere any long time, I will once more work a great change in My Church, by the bringing in of My Gospel; before and in the exhibiting of which, as I did formerly in the delivery of the Law, I will do wondrous things, &c. Bp. Hall.

The Hebrews have no one word, whereby to express the world, and therefore they do it by an enumeration of the principal parts of it. See Gen. i. 1; 2 Pet. iii. 12. So the Prophet here, to express the great commotions and changes, that should be in the world before the coming of the Messiah, says, that God "will shake the heavens, &c;" that is, He would cause great revolutions in the world; there should be great wars and confusions, and the empires of the world should pass from one hand to another. Abp. Tillotson.

Great commotions and changes in the world are expressed by shaking the heavens and the earth; see Ezek. xxvi. 15; xxviii. 19; Joel iii. 16. These expressions may denote here the great commotions that should be in the Roman empire, from the death of Julius Cesar, till near the birth of Christ: or it may in general signify the introduction of such a kingdom or religion, as that of which the Messiah was to be the head; which shall in the end break in pieces and destroy all the other dominions of the world. W. Lowth.

7. —— and the desire of all nations shall come: &c.] Christ, who fill this house with glory, saith the LORD of hosts.

Before CHRIST about 520.

8 The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the LORD of hosts.

9 The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the LORD of hosts: and in this place will I give peace, saith the LORD of hosts.

10 ¶ In the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet, saying,

11 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Ask now the priests concerning the law, saying,

12 If one bear holy flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any meat, shall it be holy? and the priests answered and said, No.

13 Then said Haggai, If one that is unclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean.

Before CHRIST about 520.

14 Then answered Haggai, and said, So is this people, and so is this nation before me, saith the LORD; and so is every work of their hands; and that which they offer there is unclean.

15 And now, I pray you, consider from this day and upward, from before a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of the LORD:

16 Since those days were, when one came to an heap of twenty measures, there were but ten: when one came to the pressfat for to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, there were but twenty.

is "the desire of all nations," as the Redeemer of the world, and the guide and director to mankind in the performance of their duty, shall come under the roof of this house: and though it wants the cloud of glory overshadowing the mercy seat, which was a symbol of the Divine presence peculiar to Solomon's temple, (see Ps. lxxx. 1,) yet I will honour this second temple with a much greater glory, even the presence of the Messiah, in whom shall "dwell all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," Col. ii. 9. Bp. Hall, Dr. Wells, W. Lowth.

The expectation, the hope, the desire of all nations, and of Israel in particular, was a known description of some Person, delivered from Abraham's days, Gen. xxii. 18, from one Prophet to another, and, after the captivity, fixed on the Messiah, of whom the Jews, about Christ's time, interpreted this text in Haggai: and in his time the Messiah was usually termed, "the hope," "the blessed hope," "the hope of Israel," "the hope of the promise to the twelve tribes," "the blessing of Abraham to the Gentiles;" 1 Tim. i. 1; Titus ii. 13; Acts xxviii. 20; xxvi. 7, 8; Gal. iii. 14. Bp. Chandler.

As Christ ought to be, what He is called, "the desire of all nations" in general, so ought He to be the desire of every person in particular. We must all, and every one of us, desire to have Him for our only Saviour and Redeemer, our only Mediator and Advocate: we must desire to have Him, according to all the offices which He has undertaken for us, as our Prophet, our King, and our Priest: our Prophet, to reveal His and our Father's will unto us and in us; our King, to rule and govern our hearts and affections, to keep both our souls and bodies in subjection; and our Priest, to make atonement for our sins, and so to reconcile God to us and us to Him. Bp. Beveridge.

8, 9. The silver is mine, &c.] Think not that I stand upon matter of cost or price of metals: all the silver and gold, which is hidden in the bowels of the earth, is Mine, and how easy were it for Me thus to adorn My house! But the glory of this house doth not consist in these outward things: no; the glory of this latter house, though meaner in structure, shall be greater than that of the former, saith the Lord: in that My Son, the Saviour of the world, being clothed in flesh, shall come personally and visibly under its roof; there He, who is "the Prince of Peace," shall make His appearance; and there shall His Gospel, which is the Gospel of peace, be preached and published to the world. See Is. ix. 6; Mic. v. 5; Eph. ii. 14. Bp. Hall, W. Lowth.

God wanted not the command of gold and silver, to have made the second temple equal to Solomon's in outward glory and splendour; He could easily have made it so in that respect; for "silver and gold are His," and all the riches of the world are at His command: but He chose to put a far greater honour upon it than that of silver and gold, and to make it much more glorious in another respect: "the glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former; (because) in this place I will give (the Messiah, the) peace," and happiness, and salvation of mankind, and incomparably the greatest blessing that ever was given to the world. Abp. Tillotson.

12, 13, 14. If one bear holy flesh &c.] In like manner as "holy flesh," or any part of a sacrifice, will not make any thing else, which it touches, to become holy; so neither have the sacrifices of this people, which have been all along offered since their leaving off the work of My temple, made them holy or acceptable unto God. But on the contrary, as the touch of an unclean person renders what he touches unclean also, so the very sacrifices of this people, since they have left off the building of My temple, are become unclean or unacceptable to me, by reason of that uncleanness or impurity of their minds, which has caused their neglect of My house. Dr. Wells.

15. — consider from this day and upward, from before a stone was laid &c.] From the time that a stop had been put to the building of the temple, after the first foundations of it were laid: compare Ezra vi. 3. W. Lowth. "Upward" should be "forward:" so the word is used in 1 Sam. xvi. 13, and xxx. 25; in both those places it means from such a time and afterwards. Abp. Secker.

16. — an heap of twenty measures,] That is, an heap of corn, which seemed likely to produce twenty measures; but which failed from the poverty of the ear. Abp. Newcome.

18. Consider now from this day and upward, &c.] Rather, "forward." In the fifteenth verse the Prophet exhorted them to reflect upon the calamities they had suffered from the time the building of the temple was left off. Now he bids them look forward from the day the building was renewed, and they would find a visible change in their affairs for the better. W. Lowth.

—— from the day that the foundation of the Lord's temple was laid,] The Prophet speaks of the carrying on of the building, as if it were a new foundation, because the work had been so long interrupted: compare Zech. viii. 9. W. Lowth.

19. Is the seed yet in the barn? &c.] Is the harvest already laid up in the barn? Or are any fruits of the earth gathered in? No, certainly; this is but the ninth month, (answering in part to our

Before CHRIST about 520. yet the vine, and the fig tree, and the pomegranate, and the olive tree, hath not brought forth: from this day will I bless you.

20 ¶ And again the word of the LORD came unto Haggai in the four and twentieth day of the month, saying,

21 Speak to Zerubbabel, governor of Judah, saying, I will shake the heavens and the earth;

22 And I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother.

Before CHRIST about 520. 23 In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, will I take thee, O Zerubbabel, my servant, the son of Shealtiel, saith the LORD, and will make thee as a signet: for I have chosen thee, saith the LORD of hosts.

November,) when no judgment can be made what will be the increase of the year following. Yet from this time I promise you the blessing of a fruitful year, as an encouragement to you to carry on the building. Compare Zech. viii. 12. W. Lowth.

21. — Zerubbabel, governor of Judah,] By the same title which is given him, chap. i. 1; as "governor of Judah," he was a type of the Messiah, to whom the following words belong. W. Lowth.

23. In that day, — will I take thee, O Zerubbabel, &c.] I will invest Thee with My power and authority, as the head of My Church, and judge of the world. So kings depute their viceroys by giving them their signet, Gen. xli. 42; which was particularly the custom of the Persian monarchs: see Esth. iii. 10; viii. 2: or the expression may denote one particularly near and dear to God, and always under His eye and protection; compare Jer. xxii. 24; Cant. viii. 6.

This prophecy could not be fulfilled in Zerubbabel, who did not in all likelihood live many years after the finishing of the temple, and certainly did not see the great changes here foretold: therefore the Messiah must be here described under the name of Zerubbabel, as He elsewhere is under that of David. W. Lowth.

The proper application to be made of the prophecies concerning the Messiah, especially of the celebrated one in the early part of this chapter, is the very same with that which the Apostle makes, from the consideration of the perfection and excellence of this revelation, which God hath made to the world by His Son: "See that ye refuse not Him that speaketh, &c." Heb. xii. 25—28. We have all the advantages of the Divine revelation which the world ever had; and the last and most perfect that the world ever shall have: we have not only Moses and the Prophets, but that doctrine, which the Son of God came down from heaven on purpose to declare to the world. God hath vouchsafed to us that clear and complete revelation of His will, which He denied to "many Prophets and kings, who desired to see those things which we see, but could not see them; and to hear those things which we hear, but could not hear them." There were good men in the world under those imperfect revelations, which God made to them: but we have far greater advantages, and more powerful arguments to be good than ever they had. And, as we ought thankfully to acknowledge these blessed advantages, so ought we likewise with the greatest care and diligence to improve them. Abp. Tillotson.

ZECHARIAH.

INTRODUCTION.

ZECHARIAH was one of the last in that succession of Prophets, whom God sent at sundry times with notifications of His will to mankind under the Jewish dispensation. That he was of the number of the captivity that returned from Babylon to Jerusalem in consequence of the decree of Cyrus is unquestionable; but that he was very young when he came there, appears from this, that sixteen or seventeen years afterwards, when he had begun to exercise his prophetical function, he is styled "a young man," chap. ii. 4. In his first chapter he twice styles himself Zechariah the son of Berechiah the son of Iddo; but Ezra v. 1; vi. 14, he is called simply the son of Iddo; which may be accounted for on the supposition that his father Berechiah died before his grandfather Iddo, perhaps before the return from Babylon; consequently out of the family Zechariah came to be better known and distinguished as the son of his surviving, though remote parent, in whose house he lived, and to whose inheritance he was next in succession. It was in the eighth month of the second year of the reign of Darius the son of Hystaspes, king of Persia, that is, about the year 520 before the Christian era, that he first opened his Divine commission with a serious and solemn call to repentance. In the same year he is found, together with the Prophet Haggai, employed in assisting the endeavours of Zerubbabel and Jeshua to excite and animate the people at Jerusalem to a vigorous prosecution of the work of rebuilding their temple. For this purpose he communicated the visions which are contained in the six first chapters, and which he was favoured with on the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month in the year aforesaid; all evidently calculated to inspire the strongest hopes and assurance of future prosperity through the returning favour of the Almighty; and thus to convince the people, that they were not labouring on a barren and ungrateful soil. The same design is further carried on in a subsequent revelation made to him about two years afterwards, which is the subject of chap. vii, viii.

Thus far with regard to the former part of these prophecies, the time and occasion are ascertained by the dates annexed to them, from whence the general scope of them is easily deducible. But with respect to those that follow, we are left more in the way of conjecture. It is however highly probable, from the apparent difference both of style and subject, that they came forth at a different and more advanced period of our Prophet's life. It is not at all surprising, if this writer, as he advanced in years and dignity, should have learned to express himself in a tone of more elevation and energy. At such distant periods also, as we suppose, the subject of course would be materially changed. For he would no longer have occasion to stimulate his countrymen to the building of the temple, which was already completely finished; but he was actually engaged in predicting some remarkable occurrences, that would distinguish his own and the neighbouring nations in remote periods, some of them perhaps not yet arrived; and in urging an immediate reformation of national manners. In so doing, what more natural to expect, than that he would encounter hatred and opposition from those, whose corruptions he was called upon to censure and repress? Accordingly there is sufficient ground to conclude, that all this happened to him, from what he says in the eleventh chapter, of the freedom and zeal with which he exposed and counteracted the iniquitous conduct of those who made merchandise of the flock; meaning those unprincipled guides, who assumed the direction of the people for no better purpose than to sacrifice them to the gratification of their own ambition and avarice. Several of these, by exhibiting in himself the contrast of a good shepherd, he found means at first to deprive, at least of that influence and authority which they once possessed, and had wickedly abused. The sequel may easily be conjectured; for from similar causes similar effects may naturally be expected. His enraged adversaries, after thwarting and defeating all his endeavours for the publick good, at length, no doubt by intrigue and misrepresentation, so far succeeded, as to turn the tide of popular prejudice and resentment against him; and he was barbarously murdered, as his namesake Zechariah the son of Jehoiada had been for the same cause, and in the selfsame place, between three and four hundred years before. For this we have no less authority than that of our blessed Lord Himself, who expressly calls the person of whom He speaks, Matt. xxiii. 35, "Zacharias son of Barachias," distinguishing him from the beforementioned Zechariah son of Jehoiada by his patronymick as effectually, as two men, bearing the same Christian name in our days, would be distinguished by their family names. Both were priests as well as Prophets, and therefore that both should suffer nearly on the same spot, will appear less surprising, when we recollect, that the space between the porch and the altar was the court of the priests, appropriated to them for the publick exercise of their sacred ministry. Dr. Blayney.

Zechariah, who certainly collected his own prophecies into their present form, chap. i. 9; ii. 2, is mentioned as a Prophet by Ezra, chap. v. 1; vi. 14; and is cited as an inspired writer by the sacred penmen of the New Testament, Matt. xxi. 4, 5; xxvi. 31; xxvii. 9; Mark xiv. 27; John xii. 15; xix. 37; Ephes. iv. 25; Rev. i. 7. The minute accomplishment of his own illustrious prophecies bears a signal testimony to the truth of that infallible Spirit by which he was inspired. He was so distinguished for the peculiar excellency of his predictions, as to be styled the Sun among the lesser Prophets. It is, however, the sun, sometimes clouded by obscurity. Dr. Gray.

That he is in some degree obscure and hard to be understood, is not to be questioned. And which of the ancient Prophets is not so? It is of the nature of prophecy to affect a degree of abstruseness before the accomplishment, in order not to clash with the freedom of human agency. And there is no doubt, that some of Zechariah's predictions relate to matters that are still involved in futurity. No wonder then that these fall not within the reach of our comprehension. Others there are, which we have good reason to believe have already been fulfilled, but which do not appear with such a degree of evidence, as they probably would have done if we had been better informed concerning the times and facts to which they relate. With respect to the emblems and types that are exhibited, they are most of them of easy and determinate application. And in favour of the importance of his subject matter it must be acknowledged, that, next to Isaiah, Zechariah is the most evangelical of all the Prophets, having more frequent and more clear and direct allusions to the character and coming of the Messiah and His kingdom, than any of the rest. Upon the whole, we shall find the diction remarkably pure, the construction natural and perspicuous, and the style judiciously varied according to the nature of the subject; simple and plain in the narrative and historical parts; but in those that are wholly prophetical, the latter chapters in particular, rising to a degree of elevation and grandeur, scarcely inferior to the sublimest of the inspired writings. Dr. Blayney.

The style of Zechariah is so remarkably similar to that of Jeremiah, that the Jews were accustomed to observe, that the spirit of Jeremiah had passed into him. He is generally prosaick till towards the conclusion of his work, when he becomes more elevated and poetical. The whole work is beautifully connected by easy transitions, and present and future scenes are blended with the most delicate contexture. Dr. Gray.

Chap. I. The six first verses of this chapter contain a separate and distinct revelation, but at the same time connected with the general purport of the following visions, to which it forms a suitable introduction. The Jews were dispirited with the recollection of their past sufferings, and a sense of their present weak and dependent state. The Divine wisdom thought meet to rally their courage, and animate them to the undertaking of what was necessary for the restoration of their affairs, and particularly to a vigorous prosecution of the building of the temple already in hand, by holding forth to them a prospect of better times. Accordingly they are assured, that God was now ready to restore them to favour, and accumulate His blessings upon them, provided they would turn to Him, and not provoke His judgments, as their fathers had done, by wilful disobedience. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. In the eighth month.] Corresponding with the latter part of October, and the beginning of November. The work in the house of God had been already resumed this same year, on the twenty-fourth day of the sixth month, that is, the beginning of September, in pursuance of a Divine message delivered by the Prophet Haggai, Hag. i. 14, 15. Dr. Blayney.

5, 6. Your fathers, where are they? &c.] The purport of these verses is this: Both your fathers, and the Prophets who prophesied unto them, are no more; but though the parties themselves are dead, I appeal to you who are living and well know, that the things, which the Prophets were commissioned to deliver to your fathers in My name, did actually come upon them; and that your fathers themselves, though they would not at first believe and regard, were at last convinced, and acknowledged that God had dealt with them exactly according to His declared purpose. Dr. Blayney.

"Take hold," in the margin "overtake;" as an enemy does one whom he pursues. Abp. Newcome.

7. Upon the four and twentieth day &c.] The second revelation made to Zechariah, about three months after the first, contains eight distinct visions following each other in the same night.

The first vision is of an angel in a human form, sitting on horseback in a low valley among myrtle trees, attended by others upon horses of different colours. The Prophet asks the meaning, and is informed that they were the ministers of Providence, sent to examine into the state of the whole earth, which they report to be quiet and tranquil. The angel hereupon intercedes for Judah and Jerusalem; which he represents to have suffered under the Divine indignation seventy years. He receives a consolatory answer. The Prophet is directed to proclaim, that God's wrath against Judah was at an end; that He would cause the temple and Jerusalem to be rebuilt; and would fill the country with good, as a token and consequence of His renewed favour, ver. 7—17. Dr. Blayney.

—— the month Sebat.] A Chaldee or a Syriack name. It corresponds with the latter end of January and the beginning of February. Abp. Newcome, Dr. Blayney.

8. I saw by night, and behold a man &c.] A "red horse" is an emblem of war and bloodshed: see Rev. vi. 4. The "Man" or "Angel," ver. 11, denotes the Logos, or Son of God, appearing as the "Captain of God's hosts," or armies: see Josh. v. 13, 14; and the notes on verses 12, 13, 20. W. Lowth.

—— behind him were there red horses,] With riders, who were angels, ver. 11. They had horses to shew their power and celerity; and horses of different colours, to intimate the difference of their ministries. Abp. Newcome, Dr. Blayney.

9. — the angel that talked with me] Distinct from those represented, ver. 8: he who talked with the Prophet, ver. 13. Abp. Newcome. This was another heavenly minister, sent probably to present the visions to the Prophet's imagination, as well as to explain them. Vitringa styles him, The accompanying and interpreting angel. Dr. Blayney.

10. And the man that stood among the myrtle trees answered and said, &c.] And the great Angel of the covenant, Christ Jesus, who stood among the myrtle trees, as taking the answer out of the mouth of that angel who spake to me, answered and said, These are ministering spirits, &c. Bp. Hell.

11. And they answered the angel of the Lord that stood among the myrtle trees,] They answer Him, as their superiour and commander. He is distinguished from the other "angel of the Lord," ver. 12, by the circumstance of His "standing among the myrtle trees." W. Lowth.

—— all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest.] Meaning the Persian empire, and the other nations connected with Judea, which enjoyed peace at that time. But the state of the Jews was unsettled, see ver. 15; which circumstance gives occasion to the following intercession. Abp. Newcome.

12. Then the angel of the Lord answered and said, O Lord of hosts, &c.] The angel, mentioned ver. 9, makes his supplication to the superiour Angel, ver. 8, 10, who was indeed the Logos, or Son of God, being called by the name of Jehovah here, and ver. 13, 20. Compare iii. 1, 2; xii. 8, 10. W. Lowth.

—— threescore and ten years?] See the notes on Jer. xxv. 11; xxix. 10.

13. And the Lord answered] The Lord of hosts, mentioned in the foregoing verse. W. Lowth.

15. — for I was but a little displeased, &c.] I made the Babylonians instruments of My vengeance upon the Jews, but they exceeded their commission, and acted as they were prompted by their own ambition and cruelty. Compare Is. xlvii. 6. W. Lowth.

16. — a line] That is, the architect's measuring line for laying out the building. See chap. ii. 1; Jer. xxxi. 39. Dr. Blayney.

17. — My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad;] God having determined once more to adopt the cities of Judah for His own, very aptly calls them "My cities." The prosperity of the Jews under Simon and others of the Asmonean family completely answers to this prediction. Dr. Blayney.

18. Then lifted I up mine eyes, &c.] In this second vision under the emblem of four horns is represented, that God, by such agents as He would appoint, would quell and bring down all those powers, which had risen, or should rise, to oppress His people. Horns are an usual emblem of strength and power; and because those fierce beasts, that have them, push and gore with them, and, tossing them furiously about, scatter and drive all before them, they aptly denote conquering and oppressive princes and states. See Dan. vii, viii. Dr. Blayney. The number "four" may denote that the Jews had many enemies, enemies on every side; from all the four coasts of heaven. Abp. Newcome, Bp. Hall.

20. — four carpenters.] Or smiths, according to the number of the horns. W. Lowth. To denote such as should "come to fray them," or frighten away the beasts with the horns, and to "cast out" or break to pieces "the horns of the Gentiles;" that is, to take away their power, to cause them to cease from disturbing the Jews any more in the building of the temple; (Dr. Wells;) and to repair the mischief which the horns had made. Bp. Hall, W. Lowth.

Chap. II. This chapter contains the substance of a third vision. In conformity to what was said, ch. i. 16, "a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem," a man, or an angel, appears with a measuring line in his hand, going, as he says, to take the dimensions of Jerusalem, in order to its being rebuilt according to its former extent; which was afterwards done by Nehemiah. This is accompanied with a message delivered to the Prophet, shewing the great increase of her population and wealth; her perfect security under the Divine protection; recall of her exiles from the north country, and the punishment of those that had oppressed them; the return of God's presence to dwell in her; and the conversion of many heathen nations; and lastly, the reinstatement of Judah and Jerusalem in the full possession of all their ancient privileges. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — a man] An angel in human appearance; see ver. 3. W. Lowth.

3. — the angel that talked with me] See chap. i. 9. "Another angel," in the following clause, should be rather "the other angel;" that is, the angel "with the measuring line in his hand." W. Lowth.

4. — speak to this young man,] Zechariah was probably at this time between twenty and thirty years of age. Dr. Blayney.

11 And many nations shall be joined to the LORD in that day, and shall be my people: and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and thou shalt know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto thee. 2 Cor. 6. 16.

—— Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls &c.] The inhabitants of Jerusalem will multiply so fast, that the houses within the walls will not be able to contain them, and their cattle will increase in proportion: see Jer. xxxi. 27. Under the captivity the land was made a desolation "without man and without beast," Jer. xxxiii. 12; now the contrary blessing is promised. W. Lowth.

That the prophecy was literally fulfilled, we learn from the words of Josephus: "For the city overflowing with multitudes by degrees crept beyond the walls, and joining the northern parts of the temple to the hill, they advanced no small way, so that the fourth hill, called Bezetha, was surrounded with buildings." Dr. Blayney.

5. For I, — will be unto her a wall of fire &c.] This image strongly expresses the protection of the Deity. It must have reminded the Jews of the pillar of fire, by which God directed and defended their ancestors. The promise that the Lord "will be the glory in the midst of her," is an allusion to the symbol of the Divine presence in the holy of holies, Rom. ix. 4. Vitringa refers the literal completion of this prophecy to the time of the Maccabees; but thinks that the protection and glory of the future Jerusalem may also be predicted, Rev. xx. 9. Abp. Newcome.

This promise will receive its utmost completion in that "New Jerusalem," described Rev. xxi. 10, where "the glory of God and the Lamb" are said to be "the light thereof," ver. 11, 23. Compare Is. lx. 19. W. Lowth.

6. Ho, ho, come forth, and flee from the land of the north, &c.] This beautiful apostrophe is addressed to such of the Jews as continued still to dwell in Babylon, and the adjacent country, lying north of Jerusalem, exhorting them not only to come, but to make their escape with all possible speed from a land, which God was about to make the scene of His vengeance. Dr. Blayney.

8. For thus saith the Lord of hosts;] That is, the Messiah. There is no part of Holy Scripture that more fully vindicates those confessions of our faith, which call upon us to acknowledge a plurality of Persons in the Godhead, than the very remarkable passage in this and the three next verses. On the present verse St. Jerome remarks, "The voice of the Saviour speaking is introduced, who, the Almighty God, says that He is sent by the Almighty Father." And again, citing the tenth and eleventh verses, he thus explains them, "These things saith the Lord sent by the Lord whose name is Almighty." The comment of Theodoret also is not less full and pointed: "The Prophet has given us to understand, not only that there are two Persons, but also two Persons of the same rank: 'For thus saith the Lord of hosts, After the glory hath He sent Me;' and, to shew who the Person sending is, He subjoins, 'And ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent Me:' therefore both the Person sending is the Lord of hosts, and the Person sent is the Lord of hosts, and there is no difference of dignity between them." This explanation rests on the concurrent support of all the distinguished theologians of antiquity, whose opinion on the subject can at present be ascertained. Dr. Eveleigh.

—— After the glory hath he sent me unto the nations &c.] To send a person after any thing implies the requisition of his services for that particular purpose. When therefore God is said to have sent His Angel "after the glory," He must be understood to have charged Him with the means of bringing it about. Now the mean which the Divine wisdom had devised for securing to His people "the glory" He had promised them, was by executing a severe vengeance on their oppressors, to manifest His concern for their honour and interest, and His resolution not to suffer their wrongs to pass off with impunity. In pursuance of this plan, and of the orders he had received, the Angel says, he was about to "shake" his hand over the Babylonians, by whom the Jews had lately been oppressed, and to deliver them over as "a spoil to their (former) servants." And as this is given as a reason for summoning the Jews to quit that devoted country with all possible speed, that they might not be involved in the calamities which were coming upon it; so the Angel subjoins, that when this came to pass according to His word, it would be a convincing proof that Jehovah had sent Him. Dr. Blayney.

—— he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye.] The highest expressions that language, assisted with all its helps of metaphor and resemblance, can afford, are very languid and faint, in comparison of what they strain to represent, when the goodness of God toward them, who love Him, comes to be expressed. See Ps. xxxvi. 6; ciii. 11, 18. So David strives to utter it, but with similitudes far short of the truth. If any will come near to reach it, it is that in Moses and Zechariah, where they who love God are compared to "the apple of God's eye;" that is, to the most dear and tender part, as it were, about Him. Dr. Isaac Barrow.

9. For, behold, I will shake mine hand upon them, &c.] This is the hand of Jehovah Himself, and of the Lord of hosts Himself, which is said, in one passage of Isaiah, to be "shaken over the river," Is. xi. 15; and in another, "over Egypt," Is. xix. 16: and no where else, except in the text, is the same form of expression used in holy writ. Dr. Eveleigh.

—— they shall be a spoil to their servants:] As the Babylonians became to the Medes and Persians, who had been subdued, and reduced to subjection, by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon. Abp. Newcome, Dr. Blayney.

11. And many nations shall be joined to the Lord &c.] Without excluding an allusion in these words to the coming in of the Gentiles to the Christian Church, the spiritual Sion; this prediction would be verified in earlier times, not only by the conversion of the Edomites in the time of John Hyrcanus, but by many other proselytes to Judaism from the heathen nations. Such were the religious proselytes spoken of, as no inconsiderable number, in the Acts of the Apostles, chap. ii. 10; xiii. 43: Nicolas of Antioch, the deacon, chap. vi. 5; the treasurer of Candace, queen of Ethiopia, chap. viii. 27; Cornelius the centurion, chap. x. 1; and such also perhaps were those Greeks mentioned John xii. 20. Dr. Blayney.

—— the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto thee.] It being here said, that Jehovah, being sent by Jehovah, should come and dwell in the Church, enlarged by the accession of the Gentiles, who can that be but our Lord Christ, who dwelt among us, and was by God His Father sent unto us? Dr. Isaac Barrow. A passage, which like this declares, that "the Lord of hosts" was sent by One who also Himself is "the Lord of hosts," ought not for a moment to excite astonishment in a Christian; knowing, as he must, that the second Person in the Trinity, who is so often said to "have been sent by the Father," is called in the New Testament, not only "God," but also by a name which is allowed to be equivalent to "the Lord of hosts;" namely, "the Almighty." See John i. 1; Rom. ix. 5; Rev. i. 8. Dr. Eveleigh.

Intimations of a plurality of Persons in the Godhead seem to have been given to the Jews, as in other places of Scripture, so in those texts, where mention is made of God more than once in the same text and under different capacities: as "the Lord raining fire upon Sodom from the Lord," Gen. xix. 24; God anointing, and God anointed, Ps. xlv. 6, 7; "The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou at My right hand," Ps. cx. 1; "the Lord sending and the Lord sent," in this passage; with sundry others of the like nature. Those of the last form are the more considerable, because the learned Jews have acknowledged, that, though the other names of God may be and are sometimes allowed to creatures, because derived from His works, or such excellences as are communicable, yet the name of "Jehovah" or "the Lord" is peculiar to God alone, because this denotes His eternal and necessary existence. Dean Stanhope.

13. Be silent, O all flesh, &c.] Let all men be "silent" in token of the profoundest reverence and submission, (see Hab. ii. 20,) when God comes down from heaven, (compare Mic. i. 3,) or gives visible signs of His appearance to execute judgment upon His adversaries, or to shew mercy upon His servants. Heaven is called "the habitation of God's holiness," Deut. xxvi. 15; Is. lxiii. 15. W. Lowth.

Chap. III. Vision the fourth. Zechariah sees Joshua the high priest standing before the Angel of the Lord, as it were soliciting to be admitted to the discharge of his sacred functions, and Satan, or the adversary, standing by in the act of opposing him. The adversary receives a rebuke from Jehovah, by whose special command Joshua is stripped of his filthy garments, and invested with the priestly robes of service, and a clean "mitre" or bonnet set upon his head. The Angel delivers him a solemn charge. After this follows a clear and interesting prediction of the coming of the Messiah, and the establishment of His Church, of which Joshua and his companions are ordained to be signs. Pardon and peace are held forth as the blessed effects of Christ's coming. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. And he shewed me &c.] "The angel that talked with me," chap. ii. 3, represented to me a new vision; namely, that of "Joshua the high priest standing before the Angel of the Lord," or the Logos, mentioned chap. i. 11. He is called "the LORD" in the following verse. W. Lowth.

2. And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee, &c.] The Logos, or Son of God, said unto Satan, "The Lord," even God the Father, "rebuke thee," and not suffer thy mischievous imagination against Jerusalem and the temple to prosper: He, that hath chosen that place for His especial residence. This text seems parallel with Gen. xix. 24, where it is said, "The LORD rained fire from the LORD out of heaven:" a text alleged by both ancient and modern writers, to prove that a distinction of Persons in the blessed Trinity was a doctrine delivered, though but imperfectly, in the Old Testament. W. Lowth.

—— is not this a brand plucked out of the fire?] Out of the furnace of Babylon. Bp. Hall. Is not this small remnant returned from captivity, miraculously rescued from utter destruction, like "a brand plucked out of the fire?" And can it be thought that God will not preserve them? Compare Amos iv. 11; Jude ver. 23. W. Lowth.

3. Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments,] As the rags of his captivity. Bp. Hall. What is meant by the "filthy garments" is evident from what is said by the Lord in the next verse, "Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee." It is no other than the stain of moral pollution, which is in some degree found in every man, though done away by the grace of God in Christ. And it is in this respect that it is said, Isaiah lxiv. 6, "we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags." This makes us unworthy in ourselves to appear in the presence of a God of purity, and this afforded the adversary his ground of objection against Joshua. Dr. Blayney.

4. And he answered and spake unto those that stood before him,] That is, to the angels that attended on Him, Jehovah, ready to execute His commands. Dr. Blayney.

—— And unto him he said,] That is, unto Joshua. "Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, &c;" in token of My pardoning the publick and national sins of the Jews, and that I will restore them to a more prosperous condition, I have commanded the angels, My attendants, to clothe thee with new and clean raiment, an emblem of purity, Rev. xix. 8, as well as of joyfulness and prosperity. See Eccles. ix. 8; Isa. lxi. 10. W. Lowth.

The holy garments of service are here meant, with which the priests were to be clothed, when they came into the inner court of the temple to minister before God; and these they were directed to put off, when they went into the outer court, and conversed in common with the people. Dr. Blayney.

5. And I said, Let them set &c.] "I said," that is, I, the LORD, further said and commanded. As the new garments put upon Joshua were such as belonged to the high priest, and were contrived for "glory and beauty," Exod. xxviii. 2; so the mitre was the proper ornament for his head, chap. xxix. 6. W. Lowth.

The vision imports, that the priestly office was to be resumed, and exercised with decency and splendour. Abp. Newcome.

3 And two olive trees by it, one upon the right side of the bowl, and the other upon the left side thereof.

5 Then the angel that talked with me

7. — then thou shalt also judge my house, &c.] Then shalt thou, and thy sons after thee, rule over My house as chief priest, and have the prime oversight and command of My courts; and at last I will give thee a place in everlasting glory, so that thou shalt walk gloriously in white among these blessed angels. Bp. Hall.

8. — thou, and thy fellows that sit before thee:] The Angel here directs His speech to Joshua and his assessors or assistants in council; bespeaking their attention to what follows, as matter of great importance. W. Lonth. The fellows of Joshua, that sat before him, may have been some of those called chief priests; who, though subordinate to the high priest, were entitled by their rank to assist in his councils. Dr. Blayney.

—— for they are men wondered at:] The margin reads, "men of wonder:" the original word signifies not only a wonder, but likewise "a sign," or "a type;" and so it is to be here understood. Compare Is. xx. 3; viii. 18; Ezek. xii. 6, 11, 12; xxiv. 24. They are men intended for signs or tokens, they are typical men, as Bp. Chandler very properly translates the phrase; men that foreshew something to come, according to the sense of the Latin Vulgate. They, with Joshua the high priest at the head of them, are a figure of the restoration of the Church under the government of the Messiah. W. Lonth.

—— behold, I will bring forth my servant the BRANCH.] Behold, I will exhibit unto the world Christ the Saviour, whom I have ordained to work that great business of mediation for My Church; whose visible presence shall grace that temple, which ye are now to build. Bp. Hall.

The same Person must needs be intended here, as is spoken of under the same title, Jer. xxiii. 5: nor can terms so magnificent as those used in the latter place more especially be applicable to any one of less consequence than the great Messiah Himself, through whom alone iniquity is put away, and the reign of perfect peace and righteousness is to be established. Dr. Blayney.

The title of "the Branch" is often given to the Messiah as sprouting from the stock of David: He is elsewhere called "God's servant" in an eminent sense, because He was "sanctified and sent into the world" upon a message of the highest importance. See Isaiah xlii. 1; xlix. 3; l. 10; liii. 11; Ezek. xxxiv. 23; 24. W. Lonth.

9. For behold the stone &c.] In signification of which Saviour, I have laid before Joshua a stone, to resemble Him who is the chief corner stone of His Church, whereon it shall be firmly built. Bp. Hall.

—— upon one stone shall be seven eyes:] To show My watchful providence over this and all other places devoted to My service; and withal the wisdom and other graces, which shall be eminent in the Messiah, the chief corner stone of all the mystical churches of God. The eye is the emblem of Providence; the number seven denotes perfection. Dr. Stokes.

—— I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day.] I will proclaim a free pardon of sins by the publishing of the Gospel; see Jer. xxxi. 34; or the words may relate to the pardoning of the Jews upon their general conversion; compare chap. xiii. 1; Jer. l. 20; Mic. vii. 18, 19. W. Lonth.

Or, we may understand by "one day," that on which Christ died to put away sins by the offering of Himself. Dr. Blayney.

10. — shall ye call every man his neighbour &c.] The meaning of this passage is to shew the peace and security that should prevail in those happy days. Mr. Harmer supposes an hospitable custom to be here alluded to, of people enjoying themselves in rural repasts in the open air, and inviting those that passed by to partake with them in their pleasures. Dr. Blayney.

Chap. IV. In this chapter the Prophet is called upon to contemplate a fifth vision of the most sublime and mysterious import. He sees a candlestick of pure gold, with its seven lamps communicating by seven pipes with a bowl at the top, which serves for a reservoir, and is constantly supplied with oil from two olive trees, standing one on each side of the candlestick. He inquires into the meaning, and receives an answer, which, though it may in some sort apply to the circumstances of the temple then in building, yet from the solemnity of the manner, and the terms in use, must be concluded to point to something far higher, no less than the final and complete establishment of Christ's holy Catholick Church, not by human means, but by the power of the Holy Spirit; surmounting all obstacles thrown in its way. Annexed is a special prediction, that Zerubbabel, who had begun, should have the honour of finishing the material building of the temple; the accomplishment of which is made a sign or proof of the Divine mission. The meaning of the seven lamps is then explained, and also of the two overhanging branches of the olive trees on each side of the candlestick. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. — and waked me,] It should seem as if the Prophet was plunged into a deep reverie, musing on what he had already seen, when he was roused again by the angel to give his attention to what follows. Dr. Blayney.

2. — with a bowl upon the top of it,] To supply the lamps with oil, by seven conduits issuing from it to the seven lamps ranged in its front. Abp. Newcome.

3. And two olive trees by it,] Which in a secret imperceptible manner conveyed oil for supplying the lamps: see ver. 6. W. Lonth. They probably signified the two sacred persons that had holy unction, the king and the priest; and might intimate that a prince and a priest should continue among the Jews till the time of the Messiah. Dr. Stokes. See the note on ver. 14.

CHAP. V.

1 By the flying roll is shewed the curse of thieves and swearers. 5 By a woman pressed in an ephah, the final damnation of Babylon.

---

5. — Knowest thou not what these be?] Capellus observes, that this is said, not to upbraid the dulness of the Prophet, but to excite his attention. Abp. Newcome.

6. — This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel,] The purport of the answer is, This building shall thou be able to raise and to fit for My service, not by any wealth or power of your own, for who sees not how poor and weak your nation is at this time? but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts, by the virtue and courage that I shall infuse into you all, and the means and friends that I shall raise up for you; while your own poor abilities contribute as little to the finishing of so great a work, as you do to the supply of oil for those lamps, which are fed by olive trees, raised up miraculously by Me, on purpose for that intent. Dr. Stokes.

It may be observed, that the Prophet's question, "What are these?" is answered, not by descending to an explanation of particulars, but by giving the general purport of the vision; the design being not to gratify a partial curiosity, but to comfort and encourage an almost desponding people by the assurance that God would, not by those human means, in which they were sufficiently sensible of their own deficiency, but by His own Spirit, render His Church triumphant over all opposition. Dr. Blayney.

7. Who art thou, O great mountain? &c.] Removing mountains, and levelling them into plains, are proverbial expressions to denote the overcoming of the greatest difficulties, and the removing of all obstructions. See Is. xl. 4; Matt. xxi. 21. W. Lowth.

—— and he shall bring forth the headstone thereof with shoutings, &c.] He shall put the top or finishing stone upon the walls of the temple: which action the standers-by shall accompany with their wishes and prayers, that God's grace and favour may protect that holy place, so happily finished, and with such joyful acclamations as they used at laying its foundations; see Ezra iii. 10, 11. W. Lowth.

10. For who hath despised the day of small things? &c.] Why did ye, O ye faithless Jews, look so discontentedly on the mean foundations of this temple, and weep to think of that goodly structure of Solomon's compared with this? There shall be no cause of this disparagement. Ye shall rather find reason to rejoice in this noble work, which ye see Zerubbabel in hand to finish, &c. Bp. Hall.

By "the day of small things" I suppose to be meant the time, when the resources of the Jewish nation appeared in the eyes of many, even well-wishers, so small and inadequate to the building of the temple, against a powerful opposition, that they despaired of seeing it carried into effect. Such persons would of course rejoice, when the event turned out so contrary to their expectations. Dr. Blayney.

—— the plummet] The use of the plummet is to try, after the stone is laid, whether it be in its just position. Dr. Blayney.

—— with those seven; they are the eyes of the Lord,] The Seventy translate the words to a better sense, taking them for a distinct sentence from what goes before, "These seven are the eyes of the Lord, &c." W. Lowth. Here is an answer to the question, ver. 4, "What are these?" "These seven (lamps) are the eyes, &c:" an emblem of God's infinite providence and care, which extends itself over all things, and especially over His own people. He then asks, "What are the olive trees?" Dr. Stokes.

12. — olive branches] Young olives; see ver. 3. W. Lowth. "Branches of the olive trees," bearing much fruit like an ear of corn. Abp. Newcome.

—— pipes] Or spouts, laid inclining from the olive trees to the bowl upon the top of the candlestick, so as to receive the fluid from the trees, and pour it continually into the bowl to supply the waste. Dr. Blayney.

—— the golden oil] In the original "the gold." The liquor drawn from the olive trees must be oil, here on account of its precious quality denominated gold, which is considered the most valuable of all metals, but yet of far less worth than the word of Divine truth: see Ps. xix. 10; cxix. 72. Perhaps also the term may be used to signify the resemblance between oil, and gold in a fluid state. Dr. Blayney.

14. — These are the two anointed ones, that stand by the Lord of the whole earth.] Rather, "before the Lord," and minister to Him. See Deut. x. 8; 1 Kings xvii. 1. W. Lowth. Zerubbabel and Joshua may be meant, who presided over the temporal and spiritual affairs of the Jews; were the ministers or vicegerents of Jehovah; and acted, not by their own strength, but by the Divine assistance, ver. 6. The golden candlestick is the Jewish state, both civil and religious; and the oil, with which the lamps are supplied, is the Spirit of God, contradistinguished from human efforts. Abp. Newcome.

Or, by the two olive trees are meant the two dispensations of the Law and the Gospel, under which were communicated the precious oracles of Divine truth, which illuminate the soul, and make men wise unto salvation. Dr. Blayney.

Chap. V. The visions represented in this chapter are of a very different kind from the preceding ones. Hitherto all has been consoling, and meant to cheer the hearts of the Jewish people, by holding

Before CHRIST 519. THEN I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a flying roll.

2 And he said unto me, What seest thou? And I answered, I see a flying roll; the length thereof is twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof ten cubits.

3 Then said he unto me, This is the curse that goeth forth over the face of the whole earth: for ‖ every one that stealeth shall be cut off as on this side according to it; and every one that sweareth shall be cut off as on that side according to it.

‖ Or, every one of this people that stealeth holdeth himself guiltless, as it doth.

4 I will bring it forth, saith the LORD of hosts, and it shall enter into the house of the thief, and into the house of him that sweareth falsely by my name: and it shall remain in the midst of his house, and shall consume it with the timber thereof and the stones thereof.

5 ¶ Then the angel that talked with me went forth, and said unto me, Lift up now thine eyes, and see what is this that goeth forth.

forth to them prospects of approaching prosperity. But lest they should grow presumptuous and careless of their conduct, it was thought proper to warn them of the conditions on which their happiness would depend; and to let them see, that however God was at present disposed to shew them favour, His judgments would assuredly fall upon them with still greater weight than before, if they should again provoke Him by repeated wickedness. Accordingly in the first of these visions, which was the sixth in succession, the Prophet is shewn an immense roll of a book, like that which Ezekiel describes, chap. ii. 9, 10, filled with curses, and in the act of flying, to denote the celerity and speed, as well as the certainty, with which the thief and false swearer, who might otherwise flatter themselves with hopes of impunity, would be visited to their utter destruction. The next vision presents the appearance of an ephah, or measure, in which sat a woman representing a nation, whose wickedness was arrived at such a height as required an immediate check. Accordingly a heavy cover is cast upon her, and she is carried into exile in a distant land, there to abide the full time allotted for her punishment. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 2. — a flying roll:] The roll of a book, as it is expressed Jer. xxxvi. 2; Ezek. ii. 9: the ancient way of writing being upon long scrolls of parchment. These scrolls were usually longer than they were broad; so this is represented as ten yards in length, and five in breadth. W. Lowth. The roll was very ample, to shew what a number of curses should come upon the wicked. Abp. Newcome.

3. — This is the curse that goeth forth over the face of the whole earth:] Or rather, "of the whole land," meaning the land of Judea. The roll contained the curses; that is, the judgments, denounced against the Jews, who were guilty of the sins here specified. It was written on both sides, as the roll mentioned Ezek. ii. 10. On one side were contained the judgments against stealing, on the other those against false swearing. W. Lowth.

4. — it shall enter into the house of the thief, &c.] The curse denounced in this roll shall take hold of the man and his family, and shall never leave them till they are utterly consumed. It shall be like the leprosy that infects an house, and cannot be purged, till the house itself be pulled down. See Lev. xiv. 45. W. Lowth.

By this is signified God's determinate counsel and purpose, not to suffer the thief or the false swearer to go unpunished. The roll will meet with them, the curse will light upon them one time or other, and destroy them root and branch. Bp. Bewe-ridge.

This vision may be considered as a republication of the curses contained in Deut. xxvii, xxviii. The thief and the false swearer, says Capellus, are put for every kind of transgressor. Abp. Newcome. Among the Jews, an oath was tendered to him that was suspected of theft: see Lev. vi. 2. For this reason the thief and the perjured person are here put together. Abp. Tillotson.

5. — Then the angel — went forth,] Or, "went on." W. Lowth. Or, advanced onward, to see the object which presented itself at a distance. Abp. Newcome.

— what is this that goeth forth.] That is now represented unto thee, as passing forth before thee. Bp. Hall.

6. — This is an ephah] The vessel here mentioned resembled the common ephah, which was about the size of our bushel, not in size, but in figure. Dr. Wells. The extraordinary measure of the vessel corresponds with the iniquities that prevailed in the land. Dr. Blayney.

— This is their resemblance through all the earth.] Or, "through all the land." By this you may make an estimate of their unjust dealings all the land over; compare ver. 3, 4. An ephah, being the dry measure among the Jews, denotes their unjust dealings in buying and selling. See Amos viii. 5. W. Lowth.

7. And, behold, there was lifted up a talent of lead: &c.] And, behold, there was also represented unto me a leaden weight; and withal a woman sitting in the midst of the ephah. Bp. Hall. The margin correctly gives the sense, "a weighty piece" of lead.

— and this is a woman that sitteth in the midst of the ephah.] Or, "And, behold, there was a woman sitting in the midst of the ephah." Dr. Wells. Or, these words may be the angel's explanation of the vision, What thou seest besides is a woman in the midst of, or within, the ephah. W. Lowth.

8. And he said, This is wickedness.] The woman represented the wicked Jews, of whom the angel said, These are so wicked, that they are as wickedness itself. Bp. Hall.

— And he cast it into the midst of the ephah; &c.] To signify, that when a people have filled up the measure of their iniquity, they sink under the weight of their sins, and cannot escape the judgment of God. W. Lowth.

9. — behold, there came out two women, &c.] These may probably signify the empires of Assyria and Babylon. Empires and kingdoms are sometimes described as having wings, to denote the swiftness of their conquests. See Deut. xxviii. 49; Jer. xlix. 22; Hos. viii. 1. W. Lowth. Or, these circumstances may indicate nothing more particular, than that Providence would make use of quick and forcible means to effect its purpose. The stork, like other birds of passage, is provided with strong wings. Dr. Blayney.

— and they lifted up the ephah &c.] The Assyrians carried away captive the ten tribes; and then the Babylonians took away

Before CHRIST 519.

10 Then said I to the angel that talked with me, Whither do these bear the ephah?

11 And he said unto me, To build it an house in the land of Shinar: and it shall be established, and set there upon her own base.

CHAP. VI.

1 The vision of the four chariots. 9 By the crowns of Joshua is shewed the temple and kingdom of Christ the Branch.

AND I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came four chariots out from between two mountains; and the mountains were mountains of brass.

2 In the first chariot were red horses; and in the second chariot black horses;

3 And in the third chariot white horses; and in the fourth chariot grisled and ‖ bay horses. Before CHRIST 519. ‖ Or, strong.

4 Then I answered and said unto the angel that talked with me, What are these, my lord?

5 And the angel answered and said unto me, These are the four ‖ spirits of the heavens, which go forth from standing before the LORD of all the earth. ‖ Or, winds.

6 The black horses which are therein go forth into the north country; and the white go forth after them; and the grisled go forth toward the south country.

7 And the bay went forth, and sought to go that they might walk to and fro through the remainder of the Jews, and made an entire riddance of the people of the land. W. Lowth.

11. And he said unto me, To build it an house in the land of Shinar: &c.] Or, "To build her," that is, the woman, "an house &c." The design of the vision is to instruct the Jews, that as their fathers were carried into a seventy years captivity to Babylon, so, if their posterity should not take warning by their punishment, a worse captivity should befall them; one of so long a continuance, as should make them despair of ever returning home, and resolve to settle themselves in those countries where they were dispersed. This is expressed by removing them to Babylon, which was a proverbial expression for utter ruin and desolation. W. Lowth.

The meaning of the vision seems to be, that the Babylonish captivity had happened on account of the wickedness committed by the Jews; and that a like dispersion would befall them, if they relapsed into the like crimes. Thus the whole chapter will be an awful admonition, that multiplied curses, and particularly dispersion and captivity, would be the punishment of national guilt. Abp. Newcome.

Chap. VI. The main design and purport of the eighth and last vision, contained in the former part of this chapter, was to confirm the Jews in their faith and dependence upon God, by shewing them that, weak and defenceless as they seemed to be, they had nothing to fear from the greatest earthly powers, whilst they remained under the Divine protection: since all those powers originally proceeded from the counsels of the Almighty, were the instruments of His providence, and could not subsist nor act but under His permission. Four chariots drawn by horses of different colours represent the four great empires of the world in succession, the Assyrian or Babylonian, the Persian, Grecian, and Roman, distinguishable both by their order and by their attributes. The first is only enumerated, and nothing more said of it, having already run its career. The second is characterized by going forth against the land of the north. The third by going forth against the posterity of the preceding. And the fourth, whose horses were spotted and strong, by their conquests in the south. These are also said to be ambitious, soliciting and obtaining permission to extend their dominion far and wide. The second are also said to have already executed God's judgments upon the land of the north.

After this the Prophet is favoured with another revelation respecting a kingdom different from all the preceding. By God's command, in the presence of witnesses, and for a memorial to them, he places a crown, or crowns, upon the head of Joshua the high priest, thereby constituting him a type of Christ "the BRANCH," whom he proclaims as about to come to build the spiritual temple of Jehovah, and to preside over it both as King and Priest, for the great purpose of peace. The accession of strangers to assist in building the temple is foretold, and given as a proof of the Prophet's divine mission. Dr. Blayney.

Ver. 1. —four chariots] A chariot is in itself no unfit emblem of government. But a chariot of war very aptly represents a conquering nation, rushing furiously on, and overturning all before it. Such were the four formidable empires before mentioned. Dr. Blayney.

The two brasen mountains may denote God's firm and immutable decrees, by which He governs the earth. Abp. Newcome.

2. — red horses; &c.] The "red horses" may signify the bloody cruelties of the Babylonish empire, especially towards the Jews; the "black," the sad and mournful estate of the Jews under the Persian successors of Cyrus; the "white," the victories of Alexander, (white horses being used by conquerors in days of triumph,) and his kindness towards the Jews: and the "grisled," the various forms of the Roman government. W. Lowth. Or, probably the colours of the horses design no more than the diversity of the people, of whom the four empires respectively consisted; not any characteristick quality belonging to them. Dr. Blayney.

3. — bay horses.] Or, "strong horses," as the Latin Vulgate renders the word. W. Lowth. This sense is preferable, because the Roman empire, here designed, is characterized by Daniel, chap. vii. 7, 19, 23, as more strong and powerful than any of the preceding. Dr. Blayney.

5. — These are the four spirits of the heavens, &c.] Rather, as it is in the margin, agreeably to the Greek and Latin versions, "four winds." Compare Dan. vii. 2. Like strong winds, these chariots rushed violently on, and produced great agitations and commotions in the earth, the effect of strong winds both by land and by sea. And these winds are said to go forth from attending upon the Lord of the whole earth; that is, they waited His pleasure, and went forth like ministers, "fulfilling His word," Ps. cxlviii. 8. Dr. Blayney.

6. The black horses — go forth into the north country;] Denoting the conquests of the Persians over the Babylonians, often expressed by "the north" in the Prophets. The angel says nothing of the red horses, because the Babylonian empire was at an end. W. Lowth.

—— the white go forth after them;] Alexander and his armies go forth to conquer the Persians. W. Lowth.

—— the grisled go forth toward the south country.] This probably denotes the Roman conquests in Egypt, frequently called the "south country" in Scripture. This was the last country subdued by the Romans under Augustus, whereby they became masters of the greatest part of the then known world. W. Lowth.

7. And the bay went forth, and sought to go &c.] The restless ambition of the Romans is here described, who under the Divine permission extended their conquests to every quarter of the globe. In the preceding verse it is said of "the black horses" in the present tense, that they "go forth;" whereas the past tense is used of "the white" and "the grisled," in the original; as it is here also said, that "the bay went forth." To account for this difference

Before CHRIST 519. the earth: and he said, Get you hence, walk to and fro through the earth. So they walked to and fro through the earth.

we must understand, that the former words were spoken by the angel, who explains what was passing at the instant. But the latter is the Prophet's relation of what appeared to him afterwards. Dr. Blayney.

8. — Behold, these that go toward the north country have quieted my spirit &c.] The Persians, by conquering the Babylonians, have appeased My wrath, by executing upon them that vengeance which they have deserved for their cruelty towards My people. W. Lonth.

The foregoing exposition is given according to the prevailing sense of our commentators. Poole, who recites several interpretations, appears to incline to that, which understands "the four spirits of the heavens," ver. 5, to signify angels, who have, as ministers of Divine Providence, a great share in the management of affairs both of church and state; and which considers the vision in general as a representation of these servants of the Lord, acting their part in the revolutions and changes of things, be these of what temper soever they may, till the Gospel be preached by the Messiah and His Apostles. His remark upon the whole of the vision is judicious, and well worthy of attention. "The appearance or emblem is plain enough, we can easily conceive that: but the things signified hereby are most difficultly found out, and perhaps not found when we think they are; here then, if any where, all are bound to write modestly, and all are bound to read carefully, and to judge candidly." Edit.
